Missionary Committee: Cleveland Convocation—Rev. Francis M. Hall, and Mr. D. Z. Norton; North-west Convocation—Rev. E. V. Shayler, and Mr. W. A. Hodge; Central Convocation—Rev. C. M. Roberts, and Mr. J. E. Brown; North-east Convocation—Rev. A. L. Frazer, Jr., and Mr. W. W. Sculpholm. Also chosen by the committee itself after the close of the convention, the Rev. Messrs. E. L. Kemp, C. S. Aves, Charles D. Williams, George H. McGrew, and J. H. W. Blake; Messrs. W. G. Mather, Thos. M. Sloane, Geo. K. Rose, Charles Fox, and G. C. S. Southworth.

Ecclesiastical Court: Rev. Messrs. C. S. Aves (president), Jacob Streibert, H. W. Jones, D. D., W. Rix Attwood; and Wemyss T. Smith.

Treasurer of the Diocese: Mr. John Thomas. Secretary of the diocese: Rev. E. W. Worthington.

Assistant secretary: Rev. Wm. C. Sheppard.

The convention closed, to meet in Cleveland in 1900. The whole session was notable for the largeness of attendance, about 200 delegates in all, and for the smoothness and good feeling characterizing all its work.

Wednesday evening the Bishop and Mrs. Leonard gave a delightful reception to the delegates and ladies accompanying them, at their home, 840 Euclid ave.

Iowa

Theodore Nevin Morrison, D.D., Bishop
Episcopal Visitations

JUNE

1. St. Peter's, Fairfield.
- 11-13. A. M., St. Katherine's Hall, Davenport.
14. St. Mark's, Maquoketa.
15. St. Paul's, Bellevue.
18. Council Bluffs: A. M., St. Paul's; P. M., Grace.
20. St. John's, Glenwood.
21. St. Paul's, Harlan.
22. Trinity, Atlantic.
27. St. John's, Mason City.
28. St. Thomas', Algona.
29. Trinity Emmetsburg.
30. St. Stephen's, Spencer.

JULY

1. Grace, Estherville.
2. Good Shepherd, Spirit Lake.

Virginia

Francis M. Whittle, D. D., LL. D., Bishop
Robert A. Gibson, D. D., Bishop-Coadjutor

Memorial Window to Bishop Newton

Was unveiled on Ascension Day at Monumental church, Richmond. The window is the gift of the Monumental congregation, of which he was for many years rector, and personal friends of the Bishop. It represents the Ascension, and the faces are exquisitely beautiful. It bears the inscription, "Peace, I leave with you; My peace I give unto you." It is the work of the Tiffany Company, of New York.

The 104th Annual Council

Began its sessions in St. Paul's church, Richmond, May 17th. A preliminary service was held at 7:30 A. M., and at 10 Holy Communion was celebrated, Bishop Whittle, celebrant, the council sermon being preached by the Rev. W. A. Barr. The council organized with 47 clerical and 40 lay delegates present. Routine business occupied the day. The night session was devoted to domestic missions. The Rev. Preston Nash read the report of the Diocesan Missionary Society, and addresses were made by the Rev. Messrs. J. J. Gravatt and G. W. Nelson. The second day Bishop Whittle read his annual report which gave a detailed account of his work during the past year. He expressed his gratification over the fact that none of the clergy in the diocese were taken away by death. The Bishop also expressed his thankfulness that his health had greatly improved, so that he was enabled to attend the General Convention in Washington last fall, the first time within the past nine years. During the year he made 55 visitations, and confirmed a large number. "Never within my knowledge," said Bishop Whittle, "have we had so few candidates for Holy Orders or so few young men preparing for the ministry of our Church. This is a significant fact. It certainly seems to indicate a decline of spirituality, and an increase of worldliness among our Church people."

A proposition to amend the Constitution, providing that the words, "bishop-coadjutor" be substituted for the words, "assistant bishop," wherever the latter appears in the canon, was agreed to. In the afternoon Bishop Gibson read his annual report which appealed for more men and money for the domestic missionary field. The following Standing Committee was elected: Rev. Messrs. Joseph Packard, D. D., P. P. Phillips, and Berryman Green; Mr. L. M. Blachford, Colonel Arthur Herbert, and Mr. John R. Zimmerman. At 4:30 P. M., the Sunday school discussion took place, a number of clergymen and laymen speaking. At 8 P. M. a foreign mission service was held, and strong addresses were made by the Rev. Jno. G. Meem, of the Brazilian, and the Rev. J. L. Patton of the China, Mission.

Friday, the report of the committee on parochial reports was submitted. It shows that there are 10,171 white, and 148 colored communicants. Total contributions $185,686. There had been Baptisms—adults, 147; infants, 443; Confirmations, 616; marriages, 212; burials, 487; Sunday school teachers, 1,041, scholars, 8,135; contributions, $3,120; Brotherhood of St. Andrew members, 383; Woman's Auxiliary, 1,654.

The amendment to Article V of the Constitution so as to allow lay delegates to vote for a bishop was unanimously adopted. The report of the finance committee shows the gross receipts for the year, $9,216.14, ordinary expenses for the year, $8,072.77. Mr. W. S. Campbell of the Virginia Bible Society was allowed to address the council. Some routine business was disposed of, after which the council adjourned to meet at Charlottesville next year at the usual time.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D. D., Bishop

The Bishop's Appointments

JUNE

2. Evening, Christ church, Rochdale (Leicester).
4. A. M., St. John's church, Newton (Newtonville); evening, church of the Good Shepherd, Watertown.
11. Cambridge: A. M., St. John's memorial chapel; evening, St. Philip's church.
21. A. M., Episcopal Theological School (Commencement), Cambridge.
22. Falmouth: P. M., St. Barnabas' church; evening, church of the Messiah (Wood's Holl).

The Rev. Father Osborne, of St. John the Evangelist, is conducting a Mission in St. Luke's cathedral, Halifax.

Gifts to the City Board of Missions

A legacy of $250 from the estate of Helen L. Kettell; $1,000 from the trustees of the John A. Dix estate, and the same sum from Mr. W. I. Eaton; $1,500 from Mrs. William Appleton.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew

The annual meeting of the Boston local council was held in the church of the Good Shepherd, May 13th. Evening Prayer was said at 5, followed by a reception. After supper a business meeting and conference were held. Mr. C. E. A. Winslow treated the topic, "The responsibility of the Brotherhood man." The preparation for the corporate Communion the following morning, was given by the Rev. J. M. G. Foster.

Pittsburgh

Cortlandt Whitehead, D. D., Bishop

Choir Festival

On Ascension Day, the second annual choir festival was held in St. John's church, Franklin. The united choirs, over 80 vested men and boys, of Titusville, Oil City, and Franklin, supported by the organ and an orchestra of ten pieces, rendered Evensong with much precision and beauty. The anthems, "Uplift, ye portals," Gounod, and Mozart's Gloria were sung with excellent effect. The Rev. Dr. Laurens McLure preached a strong sermon. Two festivals are held each year, the one in Oil City, the other in Franklin, and besides greatly stimulating the choirs, afford a service of unusual beauty and strength. The success of these festivals is largely due to the admirable training of Mr. W. F. Callis, of Oil City.

The Thirty-Fourth Annual Convention

Took place in St. Paul's church, Erie, on May 16-18th. The opening service on Tuesday evening took the form of a rally for the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and was held in the parish house, the Bishop presiding. Addresses were made on "The aim and object of the Brotherhood," by Mr. H. D. W. English, of Pittsburgh, and council member of the order for this diocese; "How to increase the efficiency of Church work," by Mr. Reuben Miller, of Pittsburgh, and "Import of the Brotherhood to the Brotherhood man," by the Rev. A. R. Taylor.

Wednesday morning a celebration of the Holy Communion in St. Paul's church, preceded the organization of the convention in the parish house, the Bishop officiating. The Rev. T. J. Danner was re-elected secretary, and appointed as his assistant, the Rev. W. L. H. Benton.

Among the more important business of the morning, were the adoption of a resolution increasing the Bishop's salary from $5,000 to $6,000 the election of the Rev. A. H. Judge, and Mr. Reuben Miller, of Pittsburgh, as delegates to the Missionary Council next autumn, and the adoption of a seal for the diocese. The design of the seal combines a portion of the arms of William Penn, the founder of the State, and the arms of William Pitt, for whom the see city was named, with the ecclesiastical emblem of the crozier and crossed keys, surmounted by the mitre, on the ribbons of which appears the motto Numine Benigno. The whole is surmounted by a pointed oval border, bearing the inscription, Sigillum Diocesis Pittsburgensis. At noon the Bishop delivered his annual address.

The Bishop spoke of the propriety and advantage of dividing the diocese, and making Erie the see city of the northern part. Every year the matter was delayed, he believed hindered somewhat the full development of the Church throughout the Northern Convocation. The matter simply awaits the touch of some sympathetic and generous hand. The annual report of work done was as follows: One hundred and twelve visitations; held 301 services; preached 138 times; made 163 Confirmation and other addresses; 95 Confirmation services in public, and four in private; confirmed 952; celebrated Holy Communion in public 83 times, and twice in private; baptized 19 infants and four adults; presided at meetings, 57, and at four convocations; catechized 16 Sunday schools, and officiated at seven funeral services; 11 clergymen received, three dismissed; ordained two priests and instituted one rector; now in the diocese, 75 clergy, a larger number than ever before; six candidates for Priests' Orders, one for Deacons' Orders, and seven postulants. One corner stone was laid, one church consecrated, and three churches and three parish houses opened with services of benediction; 55 lay-readers licensed, 17 of them for the Laymen's Missionary League. Much advance has been made in the acquisition of Church property, in the shape of parish houses and Sunday school rooms. The only note of discouragement is given by the fact that the treasury of the diocesan Board of Missions is constantly empty; and the Bishop asked whether some method could not be devised whereby one dollar from each communicant could be successfully collected, thereby relieving the anxiety of the Board. Or could not every man, rich or poor, give the income from one day's labor, which would soon solve all difficulties?

At 3 P. M. the convention sat as the Board of Missions. Reports were read by the general missionary, the Rev. L. F. Cole, the secretary of the executive committee, the Rev. J. R. Wightman, and the treasurer, Mr. H. L. Foster, which latter showed a deficit of $680. Pledges were received from Calvary and Ascension churches, Pittsburgh; St. John's, Franklin, and St. Thomas', Oakmont, amounting to $300, whereupon the lay delegates of St. Andrew's, Pittsburgh, generously stepped forward, and offered to take care of what remained, so that for the first time in many years the Board of Missions will enter upon its work unincumbered by debt. This wiping out of the debt was the occasion of great rejoicing, and the convention arose and sang with much fervor, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The board was authorized to expend $6,000 in missionary work in the ensuing year. Owing to the resignation of the treasurer, Mr. H. L. Foster, who had held the office for many years, Mr. B. W. Bredin, of Franklin, was chosen to fill the position.

Other elections resulted as follows: Standing Committee: Rev. Drs. R. J. Coster, Laurens McLure, and A. W. Arundel; Rev. Amos Banister; Messrs. H. W. Armstrong, E. M. Ferguson, George C. Burgwin, and W. J. Patterson.

The committee on canons presented a lengthy report, and several alterations were made, one providing for a change in the time of holding parish elections, from Easter Monday to the first Monday in May. During Thursday's session opportunity was given for the reading of a paper prepared in behalf of the Prayer Book

Society, by one of its members, and for the presentation to the convention of the claims of the Church Army, by one of its officers, Captain G. P. Hance.

On Wednesday evening, in St. Paul's church, was held the semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliaries of the diocese. A paper prepared by the president, giving a short history of the Pittsburgh branch, was read by the Bishop, followed by the secretary's report of the work done during the last year. Addresses were made on domestic missions, by the Rev. A. L. Frazer, of Youngstown, Ohio, and on foreign missions, by the Rev. G. H. McGrew, D.D., of Cleveland, who came as the accredited messenger of the General Board of Missions in New York. The evening closed with a reception accorded the Bishop, clergy, lay delegates, and their friends, at the residence of the Hon. and Mrs. C. M. Reed. In every respect the convention was one of the most pleasant, well attended, harmonious, and successful conventions held in many years.

Central Pennsylvania

Ethelbert Talbot, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Twenty-eighth Annual Convention

Held in St. Stephen's church, Wilkes Barre, May 16 and 17th. It was made the occasion for the consecration of the splendid new church, which takes the place of the old St. Stephen's, destroyed by fire Dec. 25, '97. After Evening Prayer, the Bishop read his annual address. It dealt with the prospects and possibilities of the diocese itself. Its tone was vigorous and hopeful, and the particulars of progress made showed the optimism to be well founded. The Bishop also dealt with the question of division, strongly favoring it, not on personal grounds, but should the convention deem it advisable. Mr. C. M. Clement was unanimously re-elected secretary, the Rev. Dr. Angell, assistant. On Wednesday morning, at 8 A. M., the Bishop celebrated the Holy Communion; also ordained to the priesthood the Rev. E. J. Burlingham, one of the assistants of the parish, and the Rev. J. Erwin Brodhead, of Forest City. The convention met in business session in the beautiful and convenient parish house. Total in attendance, 85 clergy and 95 lay deputies. Mr. W. R. Butler, secretary of the Diocesan Board of Missions, read a stirring report, showing offerings of $3,140, and expenditures of $9,627. This was gratifying, as for the first time, at the special request of the Bishop, the Lenten offerings of the Sunday schools were sent to the General Board instead of being used for the diocesan work, and many were apprehensive that the large consequent diminution of income, together with the increased expenditures necessitated by the employment of a general missionary, would result disastrously. For the work during the coming year, $5,408 was pledged by the parishes represented. A telegram of sympathy to the Rev. Mr. Woodle, lying ill in a Philadelphia hospital, was ordered sent. One of the most interesting reports presented was that of the deaf-mute missionary, the Rev. J. M. Koehler. It showed that the diocese contained some 1,750 of those children of silence, nearly 400 of whom were communicants; that he had baptized 25 persons, and presented for Confirmation, 53.

The report of the committee on lines of division of the diocese provoked a lively discussion. The lines recommended run east and west, dividing the diocese into two nearly equal divisions. This was the view of the majority, a minority desiring division by a line running north and south. Speeches in favor of immediate action was made by representatives of both opinions. Finally the committee's resolution was laid on the table by a vote of 78 to 70. A motion to constitute another committee to report to the next convention on at least two possible lines of division, was carried, and the Bishop appointed such committee. The Rev. Dr. Jones having taken the chair, the convention passed unanimously a resolution increasing the Bishop's salary to $4,500, together with free use of episcopal residence and traveling expenses. Mr. W. W. Montgomery addressed the convention on the advantages of the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of the Clergy, and the Rev. Dr. Anstice, on the claims upon general sympathy and support, of the General Board of Missions.

The following were elected on the Standing Committee: Rev. Messrs. M. A. Tolman, W. P. Orrick, D. D., H. L. Jones, D. D., C. M. Morison, and T. B. Angell, D. D.; Messrs. G. E. Farquhar, H. M. North, LL. D., A. D. Holland, A. N. Cleaver, and H. B. Meredith, M. D. Delegates to Missionary Council: Rev. W. Heakes and Mr. A. D. Holland. The convention, by rising vote, expressed their sense of the loss sustained by the diocese in the death of Captain George M. Franklin, of Lancaster, who had been for many years an honored and valued member of the convention.

After accepting the invitation of the Rev. Rogers Israel to hold the next convention in St. Luke's church, Scranton, the convention adjourned.

In the evening a largely-attended reception was given in the parish house, to meet Bishop Potter who had come to Wilkes Barre to preach the sermon at the consecration of the church.

Consecration of St. Stephen's, Wilkes-Barre

The new church is built of stone, the interior walls being finished in fine cream-colored brick. The chancel is apsidal, the arch being supported on two massive columns of polished gray granite; the stone altar, a memorial of a much beloved vestryman and worker, Col. C. M. Cunyngnam, stands in the chancel of the apse, the curve of the chancel walls being occupied by clergy stalls, with the bishop's chair in the centre. The pulpit, font, etc., which have been previously described in these columns, are memorials, as will also be ultimately all the windows of the church. The seating capacity is 1,200, and in dignity, impressiveness, and general beauty, the building is among the finest in the diocese. The consecration services began at 10 A. M., the long procession being headed by the vestry, followed by the vested choir, the long line of clergy, and Bishop Potter with the Bishop of the diocese. After the instrument of Donation had been read by Mr. S. L. Brown, the senior warden, the rector, the Rev. Dr. Jones, reading the Sentence of Consecration, the Bishop proceeded with the consecration service. The sermon was preached by Bishop Potter, and was a superb production and an intellectual and spiritual refreshment. With the celebration of the Holy Communion ended a noteworthy and impressive service, to the dignity of which much was added, as to all the services of the convention, by the admirable work of the large vested choir. The congratulations to the Rev. Dr. Jones on this worthy monument of his long and much blessed ministry were many and sincere.

Delaware

Leighton Coleman, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Church Club of Delaware gave its semi-annual dinner on Thursday evening, May 18th.

The church of St. Barnabas, Marshallton, the Rev. E. K. Miller, in charge, destroyed by fire on Christmas Day last, has, through the energy of the incumbent, been rebuilt, and partly furnished.

Calvary Church, Wilmington

This church, which was improved and beautified last December, is to be further adorned with stained glass memorial windows, the gifts of members of the parish. A new oak pulpit is being put in, the gift of the junior warden of the parish, Mr. R. W. Tadman. In addition to the Easter class of 19, Bishop Coleman confirmed a supplemental class of five on May 19th, presented by the rector, the Rev. H. W. Cunningham.

Day Nursery and Hospital for Babies

At the last meeting of the board of managers, the pleasing fact was announced that except for a small yearly interest, these diocesan institutions were clear of debt. Appeal is now made for systematic pledge offerings for their support in the future. Mrs. Coleman is treasurer, and, with the Bishop, has given much time and thought to their welfare and usefulness.

West Virginia

George W. Peterkin, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

New River Convocation

Met in All Saints' church, Union, April 25th. Owing to the absence, through sickness, of the dean of the convocation, and a large number of the clergy, only routine business was transacted. Religious services were held by the two clergymen present at the convocation, the Rev. Messrs. Marshall and Morley, for four days. Informal reports showed the work in the various fields to be in a healthy and flourishing condition. Large numbers of candidates have been presented to the Bishop for Confirmation, churches and rectories are being built, and two large Sunday schools are conducted in the neighborhood of White Sulphur Springs by an efficient lay reader.

Western New York

Wm. D. Walker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Sixty-Second Annual Council

Met in Geneva, May 16-17th. On Tuesday, Morning Prayer was said in St. Peter's church, followed by the celebration of the Holy Communion, the Bishop, celebrant. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Charles W. Hayes, D. D. The business sessions of the council were held in Trinity church. At 3 P. M., the council organized; present, 77 clerical delegates, and representatives from 22 parishes. The Rev. A. M. Sherman was re-elected secretary. The parishes of St. Stephen's and St. Matthew's, both in the city of Buffalo, were, by vote of the council, given representation. The Bishop's address pleaded for conformity on the part of the clergy to a jealous integrity to Prayer Book standard at a time when the religious bodies around us are borrowing so largely from us. Dealing with the action of the last General Convention, on the canon of marriage and divorce, the Bishop made mention of some astounding facts which came within his experience in Dakota, and which vividly illustrated how the re-marriage of divorced persons lowered the standard of morals. A large portion of the address was ad clerum on the so-called "Higher Criticism." Indulging in no acrimony, the Bishop expressed sorrow that an attempt should be made to take so much away, "here a doctrine, there a book," and no adequate substitute be given us by the "critics" who, each having his pet theories, could not agree among themselves. The Confirmations for the year within the diocese were 1,240, and these, with 110 for the Bishop of Albany, and 317 for the Bishop of Central New York, made a total of 1,676. The Bishop ordained four priests and two deacons, delivered 150 sermons and 148 addresses.

In the evening, a missionary meeting was held—one of the most successful in the history of the diocese—when the Archdeacons of Buffalo and Rochester made their reports of the year's work, showing most gratifying and encouraging results, which will prove a stimulus to future effort. The Rev. L. N. Caley, of Philadelphia, as special representative of the General Board of Missions, followed with a forceful address on missions in the domestic and foreign fields. A reception was held later in the evening, at the residence of Professor and Mrs. Nash, when opportunity was given to meet the Bishop and the president and faculty of Hobart College. On the second day of the council, there was a celebration of the Holy Eucharist in Trinity church, at 7:30 A. M. The following amendments to the Constitution were adopted:

Each church shall be entitled to one or more lay-delegates, not exceeding three in number, who have been duly chosen by the vestry or congregation of the church. But no lay-delegate shall be qualified for a seat in the Diocesan Council unless he be a member of the congregation he is appointed to represent, nor until the assessments upon his parish, for the support of the episcopate and for diocesan expenses, have been fully paid. Except in cases recommended by the Financial Board of the diocese, and approved by the Council.

The Bishop, clergy, and laity, in council assembled, shall deliberate as one body, the Bishop presiding. In voting, every clerical member shall be entitled to a vote, and the laity shall vote as herein provided. The lay delegates from each parish shall be collectively entitled to one vote.

The election for diocesan officers, etc., resulted as follows: Standing Committee—The Rev. Messrs. J. A. Regester, D.D., C. F. J. Wrigley, W. North, L.H.D., and R. R. Converse, D. D.; Messrs. W. H. Walker, J.E. Pound, H. R. Hopkins, M.D., and H. E. Hathaway. Deputies to the Federate Council—Messrs. Augustus De Peyster and Albert E. Jones. Delegates to the Missionary Council—The Rev. W. C. Roberts and the Hon. W. W. Killip. Treasurer of the diocese—Mr. Haywood Hawks. When the committee on the memorial to Bishop Coxe was ready to present its report, the Bishop called upon the members of the council to proceed with him to the last earthly resting place of the Bishop, in the crypt of Trinity church. Being there assembled, the council joined in singing Hymn 176. The Nicene Creed and the Lord's Prayer were then recited, after which Bishop Walker used the collect for All Saints' Day, and the third of the "Additional Prayers," in the Burial Office, closing with the benediction. On returning to the church, the report of the committee was read. It recommended that the memorial should take the form of a ball, on the campus of Hobart College, for the use of the college, to be called the Bishop Coxe Memorial Hall. The report was accepted by the council, and referred back to the committee (to which the president of Hobart College was added), with power to carry out the suggestions of the report. It is thought the hall will cost from $25,000 to $30,000. After the transaction of further routine business, Evening Prayer was said, and the council adjourned sine die.

Quincy

Alexander Burgess, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Twenty-Second Annual Convention

Held in Galesburg on May 16 and 17th, the opening service being in Grace church, and the business meetings in St. John's (Swedish) church. The luncheons were served by the ladies of both parishes in the basement of St. John's, the entertainment being most liberal and cordial, and including a large attendance of the Woman's Auxiliary. In the absence of the Bishop, the Rev. Dr. Leffingwell, rector of St. Mary's School, was elected president. Dr. E. H. Rudd was re-elected secretary, and no change was made in the various delegations and boards, except the substitution of the Rev. E. F. Gee as provisional deputy to the General Convention in place of the Rev. W. H. Benham, removed. The Bishop who has not been able to return to the diocese during the year, forwarded his annual address which was read by the secretary. He spoke with feeling of his disappointment in not being able to attend; commended the progress of the Endowment Fund; urged more liberal support of the clergy and of missions; reminded the convention of the long-continued assistance received by the diocese from the General Board of Missions; asked for hearty support of the work among the Swedes, so well begun; expressed his obligations to bishops who have aided his diocese, especially to Bishop Seymour. He also expressed the hope that he might be able to return to his diocese in October. The question of election of a coadjutor he disposed of by referring to the action of the last convention, which declared that under existing financial conditions such election would be prejudicial to the interests of the diocese. The following response was made to the Bishop's address, as recommended by a special committee:

This convention, in receiving the annual address of its beloved Diocesan, desires to express its deep sense of his unflinching devotion to his work and the welfare of the diocese; and their appreciation of his wise counsel, his timely suggestions, and his loving solicitude. It is peculiarly striking that, amid his own sorrows and anxieties, he should have the interests of the diocese so much at heart. We cannot forget that the best years of his long, useful, and busy life have been given to the diocese of Quincy, nor with what unflinching zeal and unselfish devotion he has fulfilled his episcopal duties. We desire especially to record our grief for the repeated and severe afflictions with which it has pleased an all-loving Father to visit His servant. We tender to our dear Bishop, to our Father in God, heartfelt sympathy, and express the earnest hope that it may please God to restore him to health and strength for the work he loves so well, and to this end we offer our earnest supplications to the Giver of all blessing.

The secretary was instructed to forward by wire the greetings of the convention to the Bishop.

The Rev. W. M. Pierce was elected delegate to the provincial synod in place of the Rev. W. H. Moore, resigned.

The most encouraging point of the proceedings was the announcement of the Trustees of Funds that the endowment had been increased during the year more than $2,000, amounting now to $9,000. Other financial conditions were favorably reported. The Woman's Auxiliary had a most interesting meeting, on Tuesday, in Grace church. Besides the usual reports and discussions, there were addresses by Mrs. Lyman and Mrs. Hopkins, of Chicago. The missionary meeting in the evening was attended by a large congregation, and was one long to be remembered. Mr. W. H. Boniface and the Rev. W. F. Mayoably represented the zeal of the diocese, in their addresses, and the Rev. John Henry Hopkins, of Chicago, spoke on behalf of the General Board of Managers, at whose request he was present. This address, like that of the afternoon before the convention, was powerful in statement of facts and plea for more devoted service. The Rev. W. M. Purce preached the convention sermon at the opening service. On Wednesday morning there were Celebrations at both churches. In the afternoon, after a most harmonious and busy session, the convention adjourned, having fixed the time and place of the next annual convention at St. Paul's church, Peoria.

Maryland

William Paret, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The chapel of the Prince of Peace, under the charge of the Rev. Henry T. Sharp, is out of debt and has become self-supporting. It has decided to ask the convention to constitute it a separate congregation.

On Sunday, May 14th, Bishop Paret visited Trinity church, Towson, the Rev. W. H. H. Powers, D. D., rector, and administered the rite of Confirmation to a class of 12 persons. In the afternoon he visited Sherwood church, preached, and confirmed a class.

Daughters of the King

The sixth annual convention of the Maryland council convened in St. Peter's church, Baltimore. The charge to the council, delivered by the Rev. Frederick W. Clampett, D. D., followed the Communion service, conducted by the Rev. H. H. Taylor. Papers were read during the day by Mrs. R. Heber Murphy, of M. J. Franklin chapter, Port Republic, Md., on "Difficulties of the country chapter"; by Miss Barnard, of St. Michael and All Angels' chapter, on "The Rule of Service." Mrs. G. H. Evans, secretary of the council, reported an enrollment of 14 chapters in the diocese of Maryland, 13 of which are connected with the council. The total membership of the Order in the State is 325. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Mrs. Adam Denmead, president; Mrs. Gaston Hooper, vice-president; Mrs. G. H. Evans, secretary; Miss Sadie Oliver, treasurer; Miss Brewer, Mrs. S. S. Paine, Mrs. F. W. Clampett, and Mrs. Joseph Fletcher, advisory board. Mrs. Adam Denmead was appointed to represent the Maryland council in the Central Council of the order, and Mrs. G. H. Evans was appointed delegate to the convention at Atlanta.

Bequests of Mrs. Henrietta E. Smith

The will which was probated May 16th, leaves stocks and bonds, valued at $6,000, to the State

Deposit and Trust Company, of Baltimore, in trust for her daughter, Margaret B. Smith, and requests that the legatee give the income from the securities to such charities of the Church in the United States as she may feel most interested in. At the death of Miss Smith, the trust is to cease, and $4,000 is to go to the American Church Building Fund Commission absolutely, and $2,000 to the vestry of St. Paul's parish, in Baltimore Co. The balance of the estate goes to the members of the family of the testatrix.

Maryland Churchmen's Club

The annual dinner was held recently at the Hotel Rennert, Baltimore. The guests of honor were Bishop Paret, Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, Mr. Robert L. Harrison, of New York, and the Rev. Alfred G. Mortimer, D.D., of Philadelphia. Just before dinner, the annual business meeting was held in the upstairs parlor of the hotel, President Packard presiding. The club now numbers 160 members in the State. Reports of the secretary and treasurer were heard, and the following officers elected for the ensuing year: President, Joseph Packard, Jr.; vice-presidents, Henry D. Harlan and J. Wirt Randall; secretary, Edward G. Gibson; treasurer, John Glenn, Jr.; council, Messrs. E. N. Rich, G. H. Boehm, John T. Mason, Richard C. Norris, with the officers of the club. After dinner there was a general discussion of the "Responsibilities of laymen in the Church," in which Bishop Coleman, of Delaware; the Rev. Alfred G. Mortimer, of Philadelphia; Mr. Robert L. Harrison, of New York, and Judge Harlan, the vice president of the club, took the leading part. At the dinner the laymen greatly outnumbered the clergymen, being in proportion of about three to one. There were 133 members present.

Nebraska

George Worthington, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Thirty-Second Annual Council

Convened in Trinity church, Omaha, May 17th. Only two clergymen were absent from their places, one on account of enfeebled health, the other because of civic duties which made it impossible for him to attend; 54 lay delegates, the largest number for many years, were in attendance. In his annual address the Bishop made request for the election of a coadjutor-bishop because of his own physical inability to live any longer in Nebraska, or to administer his episcopal office. He spoke of the absolute duty of maintaining the Faith of the Creeds in its integrity; of the depressing influence of religious controversy; of the missionary work of the diocesan institutions; and of his official acts in the diocese during the year. At the close of his address the Bishop celebrated the Holy Eucharist.

On Wednesday night the usual missionary meeting was held in Trinity cathedral. The Rev. Dr. Stone, of Chicago, addressed a larger congregation than has appeared in Nebraska for many years, at the annual missionary meeting. His address was eloquent and forceful.

The Standing Committee elected consists of the Very Rev. Campbell Fair, D.D., the Rev. Messrs John Williams and D.C. Pattee; Messrs. J. M. Woolworth, C. W. Lyman, and J. H. Nash.

When the hour arrived for the election of a coadjutor-bishop, the Bishop called the council to solemn prayer. A lesson from the Book of the Revelations was read by him; the Veni Spiritus Sanctus said, and then the Bishop solemnly invoked the guidance of the Holy Ghost for his kneeling clergy and laity. Directly after, the Bishop retired from the chair and called Dean Fair to preside. The council went into committee of the whole, Chancellor Woolworth in the chair. The Rev. H. B. Burgess nominated Dean Fair, of Trinity cathedral; Mr. Clement Chase, of Omaha, nominated the Rev. Frank Westcott, of Skaneateles, N. Y., but Mr. Westcott being unknown to other members of the council, it was not seconded; the Rev. A. L. Williams, of Chicago, was nominated by the Rev. A. E. Marsh. The debate continued until 6 p. m., resumed at 8 o'clock, continued until after 10 o'clock P. M., when the committee asked to be discharged. Dean Fair called the Rev. John Williams to the chair and took his own seat on the floor. The ballot was as follows: The Rev. A. L. Williams, 16; Dean Fair, 9. The roll of the laity was immediately called, the ballot resulting: Ayes, 28; nays, 23. Dean Fair resumed the chair, and in a few graceful words congratulated the council on the result of its deliberations, and ordered the singing of the Gloria in Excelsis. Mr. H. W. Gates moved that the election of Mr. Williams be made unanimous, the motion prevailing. The canonical testimonials of Mr. Williams were then signed by the clerical and lay delegates, and the council adjourned a little before midnight.

The next day the Bishop appointed a committee to notify Mr. Williams of his election, consisting of the Rev. Messrs. A. E. Marsh and H. P. Silver; Messrs. J. M. Woolworth and Clement Chase. The Standing Committee was authorized to make all necessary provision for the consecration in the event of his accepting the office of coadjutor, and of his confirmation by the Standing Committees and Bishops of the Church.

The Rev. O. H. Young was re-elected Secretary of the council, and the Rev. John Albert Williams, assistant secretary. Mr. C. W. Lyman was re-elected treasurer of the diocese.

North Dakota

Samuel C. Edsall, D.D., Bishop

The Bishop's Visit to Pembina

Bishop Edsall recently made his first visitation of the missions in the north-eastern part of the State. April 29th, he confirmed a class in Grace church, Pembina, and also officiated on Sunday, April 30th. During the week a reception was tendered the Bishop in Pembina. He found the Church progressing, under the faithful care of Mr. Watson.

The Missions under Rev. D. H. Clarkson

On Sunday, May 7th, the Bishop officiated in the church of the Redeemer, Bathgate, in the morning, and confirmed a class of six. In the afternoon he visited St. Alban's mission, Neche, and in the Presbyterian church confirmed three candidates. In the evening, accompanied by the Rev. D. H. Clarkson, he preached to a large congregation in the Baptist church, at St. Thomas. May 8th, a reception was given to the Bishop at Bathgate. Here there is a good church, and a rectory which was bought and paid for by the people last year. The Church is very strong in this town. May 9th, a reception was held at St. Thomas. Wednesday afternoon, the Bishop, assisted by the Rev. D. H. Clarkson, priest in-charge, and the Rev. Wm. Watson, of St. Vincent, Minn., laid the corner-stone of St. John's church. The service was witnessed by a large number of people, to many of whom the service was novel. A small, but faithful, band of Church people have struggled for years to obtain a church building, and have raised among themselves about $1,400. They will be able to pay for the building itself, but must look to outside help for the necessary furniture. At Neche, it is hoped to build a modest chapel this year. Wednesday, evening the Bishop officiated in St. James' church, Grafton, and on Ascension Day celebrated the Holy Communion, at which service there was a gratifying attendance.

So ended Bishop Edsall's primary visitation to these missions. Everywhere he was most cordially welcomed, and his presence quickened the life of the Church. Under him there will be notable advances made, and the Church is already taking aggressive steps forward to her rightful place in this portion of North Dakota.

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Corner Stone of Cathedral School

In consequence of heavy rain on Ascension Day, the preliminary service and addresses took place at Trinity church, instead of on the grounds. The procession was composed of 150 choristers, the clergy of the convention, and others, as invited guests, and the Bishops of Maryland and Washington. The processional was "Jerusalem the Golden," accompanied by a section of the Marine band. The Rev. Dr. Elliott began the service with the invocation and versicles; then followed a short address, suitable collects, the hymn, "All hail the power of Jesus' Name," the lesson, Creed, and special prayers. The Bishop held up to view the box to be placed in the corner stone, and exhibited the silver trowel to be used on this occasion and whenever in the future a corner stone is laid on the cathedral foundation. "The Church's one foundation" having been sung, the principal address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Douglas, who, when rector of St. John's parish, was among the first interested in the Cathedral project, and through whom Mrs. Hearst made her donation for the school. The Bishop of Maryland congratulated the Bishop of Washington on the progress made, and the bright hope for the future. The National hymn was sung with great spirit, and Bishop Paret said the closing prayers, including one for the Peace Conference, and gave the benediction. At the conclusion of the service, the Bishops, with the Standing Committee, and others, drove to the Cathedral grounds, where thousands of people had gathered, the day having cleared. The Bishop laid the corner stone, with that portion of the Office pertaining to the act itself.

Southern Virginia

Alfred M. Randolph, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

A New Church at Portsmouth

On Sunday, April 23d, All Saints' was opened for divine service by the Rev. J. B. Funsten. It succeeds St. Andrew's chapel, a mission established some years ago and maintained by Trinity church, is very beautiful in design, and has a seating capacity of about 200. The Ladies' Guild has handsomely carpeted it, and the Communion Table, with other chancel furniture, besides the organ and baptismal font, have been supplied by Trinity church. The church has been completed at a cost of $3,000.

Southern Ohio

Thomas A. Jaggard, D.D., Bishop
Boyd Vincent, D.D., Bishop Coadjutor

The Twenty-Fifth Annual Convention

Assembled in All Saints' church, Portsmouth, May 17th. The opening service was the celebration of the Holy Communion by Bishop Vincent. Bishop Tuttle read the Gospel. The Rev. John H. Ely was re-elected secretary. Bishop Vincent read his address, in which he gave a resume of the work of the diocese since he was consecrated in 1889. The figures, in many cases, were most gratifying. During the past ten years, there have been ordained 34 deacons and 30 priests. The clergy have grown in numbers from 43 to 75, with four deaconesses, two Sisters, and 25 lay readers. Then there were 48 parishes and 16 missions, now there are 50 parishes and 36 missions. Then there were 60 church buildings, now 67; three parish chapels, now nine; 11 rectories, now 17; two parish houses, now 20. The Confirmations have increased from 500 yearly, to 637, making a total of Confirmations for the ten years of 6,443. The total annual expenditures for parish support have increased from $163,000 to 180,000, and the total value of Church property, from $900,000 to $1,200,000. The annual offerings for diocesan missions have increased from $3,000 to between $8,000 and $10,000 now for several years past. Last year the offerings were $11,000. The endowments for diocesan missions, when the King legacies are paid, will amount to somewhere near $90,000. The annual offerings for objects outside the diocese have increased from $8,000 to $20,000.

A new canon on missions was passed, whereby the archdeacon and the deans of convocations were made members ex officio of the missionary committee. Mr. Edward Worthington was re-elected treasurer of the committee. The report of the Woman's Auxiliary showed the year's work to be about $8,000. This, with what the parishes have given for foreign, domestic, and diocesan missions, will make over $20,000 raised by the diocese for missions during the year. The following section the Bishop recommended to be added to Section 54 of the Canons, supporting it with a very strong argument:

No election of a rector shall be had until thirty days after his nomination by the body empowered to elect, which nomination shall at once be notified to the bishop by the officers of the parish, except that such election may follow at once upon acknowledgement by the bishop of the foregoing notification, with his consent to an immediate election. Written notice of the election, signed by the church wardens, shall be sent to the ecclesiastical authority of the diocese.

The committee on canons reported favorably on the above, and it will come up for final action at the next convention.

A very profitable meeting was held on Wednesday evening, when Bishop Tuttle made a stirring and impressive address on the subject of general missions. Mr. A. N. Whiting was re-elected treasurer. Delegates to the Missionary Council: Archdeacon Edwards and Mr. Edward Worthington. Standing Committee: The Rev. Messrs. Peter Tinsley, C. K. Benedict, and John H. Ely; Messrs. Larz Anderson, E. Morgan Wood, and Wm. M. Allen. The next convention will be held in St. Luke's church, Cincinnati.

South Carolina

Ellison Capers, D.D., Bishop

Convocational Meeting

This diocese is divided into three convocations each holding a quarterly meeting. The Charleston convocation, the Rev. A. T. Porter, D.D., archdeacon, held its session April 12th, in Prince George, Winyah, Georgetown. This convocation has this year raised $1,388.48 for the Board of Missions. The Columbia convocation, the Rev. W. B. Gordon, archdeacon, report having raised $928.07 for the Board of Missions. This session was well attended, and the advisability of dividing the diocese was discussed, but final action deferred until the next meeting of council. The Greenville convocation, the Rev. J. D. McCullough, archdeacon, by strenuous effort collected as their quota for the Board of Missions, $792.23. They also discussed the division of the diocese, but postponed action until the matter could be laid before council. All of the convocations reported activity in Church work, and chapels ready for consecration.

Work Among the Colored People

There are 16 industrial schools for girls and three for boys, 31 mission stations, in 25 of which mission schools are supported, and about 1,600 children instructed. Besides these schools, there are five institutions all doing a noble work.

Tennessee

Thomas Frank Gallor, D.D., Bishop

The Sixty-Seventh Annual Convention

Convened in St. Paul's church, Chattanooga, May 17th, prefaced by a Quiet Hour for the clerical and lay delegates on Tuesday at 9 P. M., conducted by the Bishop. This was a new departure, and proved singularly helpful to the many who gathered in St. Paul's church.

On Wednesday morning the convention was formally opened by a celebration of the Holy Eucharist. The Bishop celebrated. The sermon was preached by the Rev. George Patterson, D.D. The Rev. A. H. Noll was elected secretary, and Mr. S. D. Wilcox, of the University of the South, appointed assistant. The deans of the three convocations and the archdeacon of the colored work made their respective reports.

The Bishop delivered his annual charge on Wednesday evening. He sketched in a masterly way the work of the last General Convention, and gave a most hopeful and encouraging account of the present condition of the diocese.

Thursday morning the Bishop held an ordination, of which mention will be found elsewhere, under the usual heading. The following were re-elected as members of the Standing Committee: the Rev. Drs. George Patterson and F. P. Davenport; Rev. S. H. Green; Messrs. M. B. Trezevant, and H. J. Lynn.

Dr. Winchester having removed from the diocese during the year, Dr. George Patterson, one of the provisional deputies to the General Convention of last year, was moved up into the vacant place, and the following are now the deputies: the Rev. Drs. F. P. Davenport, S. Ringgold, and George Patterson; Rev. T. F. Martin; Messrs. G. M. Darrow, J. W. Caldwell, E. G. Richmond, and B. L. Wiggins.

The remainder of the business session was devoted to the receiving and adoption of the reports of the several committees, and the discussion of the question of diocesan assessment, which was finally referred to a committee with instructions to report to the next convention.

On Thursday evening the annual missionary meeting was held. Addresses were delivered by the Bishop, the Rev. Arthur Lloyd, of the diocese of Virginia, and several of the diocesan clergy.

The closing session of the convention on Friday morning proved full of interest. The report of the treasurer, Mr. G. M. Darrow who was re-elected for the current year, was most encouraging. The committee on the state of the Church reported favorably. It was decided to hold the next convention at Clarksville, in Trinity church. It was generally felt that the 67th convention was one of the best and most encouraging ever held in Tennessee.

Texas

George H. Kinsolving, D.D., Bishop

The Fiftieth Annual Council

Met in the city of Waco, May 10th. The opening service was held in St. Paul's church; the Bishop celebrated, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Jas. A. Duncan. The following officers were elected: Secretary: R. M. Elgin; treasurer: W. V. R. Watson; Standing Committee: The Rev. Messrs. T. B. Lee, B. A. Rogers, and C. M. Beckwith; Messrs. R. M. Elgin and W. V. R. Watson; Deputies to the Missionary Council: the Rev. J. W. Bleker, and Mr. W. C. Henderson; Diocesan Board of Missions: the Rev. Messrs. H. D. Aves, J. R. Carter, and T. B. Lee; Messrs. A. N. Leitnaker, W. C. Henderson, and John L. Brokenborough.

The Bishop, in his address, spoke of the seven years of his ministry as Bishop of Texas. The Confirmations during this period aggregated 2,700, an increase of more than one-third over any previous septenary. The communicant list had increased from 3,626 in 1891, to more than 5,000 in 1899. Old church debts of long standing, which encumbered many of the parishes at the beginning of his episcopate, had been paid off, and several new churches had been built. The Bishop deprecated the disregard for the sanctity of human life, which too often prevails; also the growing intensity of race antagonism; pointed out the duty of Church people to throw their influence on the side of Christian duty, by a stricter following of the example of the meek and lowly Master. He spoke feelingly of the deaths of the Rev. J. E. Hammond, Captain E. G. Hanrich, and Mr. R. J. Hill. Mr. Hill was chancellor of the diocese, and Captain Hanrich was deputy elect to the General Convention, at the time of their respective deaths.

On the second day of the council, Bishop Johnson, of Western Texas, addressed the council with regard to co-operation in the support of a boys' school in San Antonio. A committee was appointed to confer with a similar committee from the district of Western Texas, and report to the next council. A committee was also appointed to take steps for the revival of a diocesan paper.

On Wednesday night, the Rev. C. M. Beckwith, at the request of the council, gave a lucid and forcible address in explanation of the Sunday school system in use in Trinity church, Galveston. The course is divided into four grades: 1st, the Church catechism; 2d, the seasons of the Church Year, as illustrating the Creed and the Ten Commandments; 3d, the contents of the Book of Common Prayer; the Collects; 4th, Epistles and Gospels. The Prayer Book is the only text-book used, and the object of the course is to give the student a thorough acquaintance with that book and its teachings. A resolution was passed by the council recommending the use of this system in the various Sunday schools of the diocese.

A canon was passed creating a Diocesan Board of Missions to be "an advisory board to assist the Bishop of the diocese in the management of the missionary interests of the Church in the diocese." They are to apportion the amounts which it is expected that each parish and mission will contribute for missionary work in the diocese, collect the same, and place it in the hands of the Bishop for disbursement.

The Rev. Hudson Stuck, of Dallas, addressed the council on General Missions, under the auspices of the General Board of Missions, and was heard with close attention.

The next council is to meet in Austin, on May 9th, 1900, at which time the Bishop hopes to have All Saints' chapel, of the Church Institute for Young Ladies, ready for consecration. The Bishop has received contributions for this purpose, to the amount of $5,500, and hopes by next year to have the remaining $1,500 necessary to complete the building. It is to be a memorial of the late Bishop Gregg, first Bishop of Texas.

East Carolina

Alfred Augustin Watson, D.D., Bishop

The offerings of Christ church Sunday school, Elizabeth City, at Easter, for general missions, amounted to $88.

St. James' parish, Wilmington, has raised a sum of money sufficient to give its rector, the Rev. Dr. Strange who has for some time been in ill-health, a trip in Europe, extending over three months. The ladies of the parish presented Mrs. Strange with a very nice sum, to enable her to accompany her husband.

The Edenton Convocation

The 66th meeting took place in Grace church, Plymouth, April 26th. The sermons were preached by the Rev. Messrs. N. C. Hughes, G. M. Tolson, and R. B. Drane, D. D. An essay was given by the Rev. Francis Joyner; subject, "To what extent are mission churches justified in asking aid from the Church at large in building houses of worship?"

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The 33d Annual Convention

Held in the cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, May 16th and 17th. The attendance was unusually large, there being more than 100 clergymen, and about as many lay-delegates. The convention opened with a choral celebration of the Holy Eucharist, the Bishop, celebrant. The business session was held in the crypt of the cathedral. The Rev. James Clarence Jones and the Rev. Creighton Spencer were the secretaries. The Bishop delivered his annual address, his theme being, "God pleading His own cause," and he most ably presented the facts of God's use of His power for the advancement of His kingdom on earth, as contrasted with our use of the power which God has entrusted to us as His ministers and deputies.

The report of the treasurer of the diocese, Alexander E. Orr, showed a balance on hand of all funds. The report of the trustees of the estate belonging to the diocese was of a very interesting nature. Deeds were received from Nathaniel C. McLean, James Otis, Wm. Platt Pepper, Joseph M. Shaw, and others, to the trustees, conveying a plot of ground in Belleport, L. I., with the edifice thereon. A deed for a piece of property, with the edifice, on Laurel Hill, on which to erect a church, was also received from Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Rapelyea. Reports submitted showed every branch of the diocese to be in a flourishing condition. Some slight changes were made in the canon laws. The diocese of Long Island is surpassed only by New York in church building.

A resolution was adopted, expressing sym-thy with the Rev. Dr. J. Carpenter Smith on his inability to be present on account of infirmities. The Rev. Dr. Smith is the oldest clergyman of the diocese, and has never before missed attending a convention since the diocese was organized.

The following were appointed: Archdeacons: Rev. Dr. Samuel D. McConnell, for Northern Brooklyn; Rev. A. B. Kinsolving, for Southern Brooklyn; Rev. Henry B. Bryan, for Queens and Nassau counties, and Rev. Wm. Holden, for Suffolk.

Standing Committee: The Rev. Drs. Henry C. Swentzel, John G. Bacchus; Messrs. Alexander E. Orr, Augustus Van Wyck, Augustus Rapelyea, William H. Mehl, and William Nicoll.

Deputies to Missionary Council: Rev. W. W. Bellinger and Silas M. Gidding.

Deputies to General Convention: Rev. Drs. Reese F. Alsop, S. D. McConnell; Rev. Geo. F. Breed; Messrs. John A. King, Wm. Nicoll, and Henry E. Pierrepont.

Deputies to Federate Council: Rev. Messrs. Robert Weeks, St. Claire Hester, Samuel M. Haskins, John G. Bacchus, Samuel Cox, Henry C. Swentzel, A. B. Kinsolving; Messrs. John W. Hunter, John A. King, William Nicoll, Colonel William S. Cogswell, Lyman R. Greene, and Augustus Van Wyck.

Georgia

Cleland Kinlock Nelson, D.D., Bishop

The 77th Annual Convention

Assembled in St. Philip's pro-cathedral, Atlanta, May 17th, and continued in session three days. Morning Prayer, Holy Communion, and an address by the Bishop, constituted the opening service. The address treated of the state of the diocese, lack of efficient lay co-operation (notably among the men), educational work, and the race problem. We shall quote later from his words on the last-named topic.

The Rev. F. F. Reese was re-elected secretary, and the Rev. J. J. Perry re-appointed assistant.

The committee on division of the diocese recommended that the subject be postponed till next year; it was so ordered. The amendments to the Constitution of the General Convention were referred to the deputies elected last year, who, acting as a committee, will report to the next annual convention.

The Rev. Arthur S. Lloyd, of Virginia, representing the General Board of Missions, made a strong and helpful address on missions. By resolution, the Bishop was asked to set forth a prayer to be used during the meetings of the disarmament congress at the Hague.

The Sunday school children of the diocese of Pennsylvania having contributed over $1,000 to the work of the archdeacon of the diocese of Georgia, a resolution of grateful appreciation was adopted.

The committee on uniform Sunday school lessons reported favoring a scheme of lessons based on the Bible and the Prayer Book. Four grades are provided for, with examinations for promotion, and certificates of proficiency from the Bishop for those who have a sufficiently high standing, on the completion of the full four years' course. A committee of five was appointed to study the condition of the colored work in Georgia, and to report to the next convention a plan for further work.

The Standing Committee elected: The Rev. Messrs. F. F. Reese, C. H. Strong, C. C. Williams; Messrs. H. C. Cunningham, Z. D. Harrison, W. K. Miller.

Treasurer of the Diocese: W. R. Miller, of Augusta.

Treasurer of Diocesan Missions: R. C. DeSausure, of Atlanta.

Delegates to the Missionary Council: Rev. A. W. Knight, and W. K. Miller.

St. Paul's, Albany, May 9th, 1900, were the place and time selected for the next meeting.

The approval of the Bishop has heretofore been required before a vestry could call a rector. By action of the convention, only a conference between the Bishop and the vestry is now necessary.

Editorials and Contributions

Dr. Joseph Parker on the Church

THE Rev. Joseph Parker, D.D., of the city Temple, London, recently distinguished himself by using language in his pulpit which will hardly bear repeating in a religious paper. It was in connection with the Cromwell Tercentenary. This occasion, The Church Times says, appears to have intoxicated some of those who took part in it. Among these, Dr. Parker easily carried off the palm. The declamations from various Nonconformist pulpits frequently took the form of an attack on the Church. It is hard to pin down Dr. Parker to one set of premises with their logical conclusions. Not long ago he declared that the Prayer Book was "drenched in popery"; it was full from end to end of sacerdotalism and sacramentalism. It would seem to follow inevitably from this, that sacerdotalists and sacramentalists were most loyal to the Prayer Book. But this is not Dr. Parker's method of reasoning; on the contrary, he denounced High Churchmen who hold to these things, as traitors—men who eat Protestant bread and take Protestant pay while they talk and act "popery." The situation is puzzling. These unfortunate High Churchmen appear to be in that difficult position sometimes described as "between the devil and the deep blue sea." They have promised most solemnly to conform to the Prayer Book, and it would seem that they must subject themselves to the charge of disloyalty if they fail to do so, but Dr. Parker declares that they are traitors if they teach and practice those things with which he says the Prayer Book is "drenched." But it is easy to see that this preacher's hostility is directed, not against a party in the Church, as such, but against the Church itself, and against a party only as it lives up to the requirements of the Church.

—x—

Sociological Preaching

AT the so-called "People's Church" in Chicago, a few weeks ago, the congregation was treated to a discourse on sociology, in which it was considered that the minister was advocating some form of socialism. This, as might be expected, caused considerable excitement, and the positions of the sermon were severely criticised by many of the hearers. It is always interesting to observe the attitude of the secular press towards the various developments of the religious world. While it might be inferred from the character of the religious reports which appear in the daily newspapers, and of the sermons which are reproduced in their columns, that there was a very marked trend in favor of those movements which are least conservative or orthodox, there are occasional indications that those who preside in the editorial departments see through the sham of sensationalism, and have in their hearts a contempt for the sermons on "subjects of the day," which, nevertheless, they ordinarily spread before their readers.

MARKED evidence of the conviction which lingers in the minds of earnest men that it is in the teachings of orthodox Christianity that real force and enduring strength are to be looked for, was seen in the attention paid by certain newspapers to the work of the army chaplains during the late war. Those were commended as being most useful who devoted themselves to preaching "old-fashioned Christianity." It was even asserted as a significant and interesting fact, that it was only such preaching which was in general appreciated by the enlisted men. Another instance of the same description appears in the comments of the Chicago Times-Herald, on the sermon of Dr. Thomas, above alluded to. "There is a very marked difference," says this paper, "between the preaching of Christianity and the preaching of sociology. The transcendent features of the former are those which concern faith and the promise of a future state." It then goes on to enumerate with more or less accuracy, some of the fundamental points of the Christian religion, which it sums up in the statement that the field of religion is the revelation of the spiritual and heavenly, as distinguished from the material and earthly. It emphasizes the fact that it is these mysteries which the Christian minister is trained and appointed to expound. It is to these that he owes his special character and the peculiar veneration paid to him. When, instead of devoting himself to these points of teaching, he engages in the controversies of the hour, or to political or scientific subjects, he becomes a mere lecturer whose opinions carry no more authority, and are no more edifying, than those of any other thinking man.

WE have more than once in the past drawn attention to the illogical and temporary basis upon which those preachers stand who place themselves in this position. Some have claimed public attention by giving themselves to the treatment of scientific subjects, not as illustrating the facts of the higher and spiritual order, but as ends unto themselves. It is evident that if people are made to understand that subjects of this character are to be taken up as the ordinary topics of the pulpit, their interest in such subjects, as dealt with by the average preacher, cannot long be sustained. If they continue to support a quasi-religious place of assembly, with all its attendant expenses, they will be likely in the end to engage the service of men as lecturers in science, who are known to be experts in their respective departments. But it is still more likely that the result of such a departure from the function of the preacher, as commonly understood, will lead sooner or later to the dissolution of the religious organization in which such methods have come to prevail. It would be much more economical to attend the lectures of university or college professors, who may be prevailed upon, in consideration of a reasonable addition to their incomes, to devote some portion of Sunday to courses on scientific subjects adapted to a promiscuous audience.

THE Times-Herald is shrewd enough to see the possibility of such results. This matter, it says, has an important bearing on the subject of Church organization. "If people want to hear lectures on sociology, it is not necessary for them to keep up a Church establishment on that account. There are courses here and courses there which are delivered by experts who devote their lives to sociological work." They hold various views; some, like Dr. Thomas, consider that the solution of the problems of the present day is "some form of co-operation, some form of materialism." Some may be socialists, some may be individualists, and still others, anarchists. But as our intelligent editor says, however dogmatic any of them may be, they make no claim that there is anything divine in their mission to give their views a special authority. That is, however, precisely what they claim for the Christian ministry, and it is the only claim which explains the system by which it is sustained. People instinctively resent the attempt to give additional weight to views relating to purely secular and material affairs, by the tacit assertion of the special authority which is traditionally associated with the office of the Christian minister. These are matters about which there may be the widest difference of opinion among people who are entirely at one on subjects connected with the spiritual and heavenly sphere. If it should happen that a congregation were educated up to regarding its minister as a mere lecturer upon subjects which have nothing to do with the demands of the religious instinct, or with the divine revelation, and in which such a minister is less deeply versed than those who have made science their special field, it is likely enough that, as The Times-Herald thinks, a great disorganizing movement would set in. Indeed, it is not certain that we are not already witnessing the beginnings of such a movement, and that, in the course of time, those Protestant ministers who no longer stick to that which is understood to be their proper business, will find their occupation gone.

—x—

The Church Discipline Bill

OUR readers are aware from the reports in the daily papers, of the overwhelming defeat in the House of Commons of the Church Discipline Bill. This Bill was the most thorough-going attempt yet seen to bring the doctrine and worship of the Church entirely under the control of Parliament. One is lost in amazement at the process of reasoning which could bring intelligent men to consider such a proposition for a moment. What sort of Christian Church would that be which derived its faith, its discipline, and its ceremonial of worship, from the enactments of a body of men constituted as the English Parliament now is? To subject such matters to a body of laymen, even though they were faithful adherents of the Church, would be an unheard-of thing in the history of Christianity; but the absurdity of such a proposition reaches its climax, when it is considered that Parliament, as reformed during this century, is not restricted to Churchmen, but admits Nonconformists, and may include, and indeed has included, Jews, Hindoos, Mahomedans, and even Atheists. We should thus have the spectacle of a body of men, composed largely of those who are not only active and bitter antagonists of the Church, but who repudiate the fundamental principles of Christianity itself, undertaking to direct what shall be believed or not believed, and what shall be done or not done, in the unfortunate Church of England. A religious body which could submit to such conditions would be beneath contempt, it would be the laughing stock of the world. The surprising thing is, not that the proposition should have been lost by a heavy majority, but that over sixty men should have been found to vote in its favor.

IT was not by any means High Churchmen alone who viewed with dismay the introduction of such a bill. Thoughtful Evangelicals were equally opposed to it. Sir John Kennaway, one of the most prominent leaders on the Low Church side, expressed his feelings very frankly in a letter to one of his constituents: "This Bill," he says, "proposes to set up new courts. It creates new crimes which would make a clean sweep of Evangelicals as well as Ritualists. It ignores the old traditional form of government of the Church, and puts the bishop into the position of a county court bailiff. If the Bill were to become law, the result would be to rend the Church in sunder, to flood the country with lawsuits, and bring Disestablishment within measurable distance." He says that the result of a split in the Protestant camp would be disastrous, and that he could not imagine a greater triumph for the extremists; i. e., Ritualists. "I know," he proceeds, "that the bishops are in many cases acting vigorously, though quietly, and are receiving a large response. It is for us to show that we are ready to back them heartily. Only in this way, in my judgment, can a great disaster be averted, and the Church, in its true character of Catholic, Apostolic, Reformed, Protestant, be preserved to us." This reference to the bishops is noteworthy. There is a wide gulf between Sir John Kennaway and Mr. Kensit.

—X—

The Archbishops' Court in the Ritual Cases

THE Archbishops' Court began its sittings at Lambeth, May 8th. The cases brought before them are those of two or three London vicars, and, as we understand the matter, they are brought by the vicars themselves, in accordance with the rule of the Prayer Book touching matters of doubt. This rule is laid down in the old Reformation Preface entitled, "Concerning the Service of the Church." It reads as follows:

And forasmuch as nothing can be so plainly set forth but that doubts may arise in the use and practice of the same; to appease all such diversity (if any arise) and for the resolution of all doubts concerning the manner how to understand, do, and execute the things contained in this book; the parties that so doubt or diversely take anything, shall always resort to the bishop of the diocese, who, by his discretion, shall take order for the quieting or appeasing of the same; so that the same order be not contrary to anything contained in this book. And if the bishop of the diocese be in doubt, then he may send for the resolution thereof to the Archbishop.

The Archbishop of Canterbury having proposed to revive this tribunal, the Bishop of London seems to have decided to remit all such cases to him. It will be observed that the "parties that so doubt" are the ministers of the Church who have "to understand, do, and execute, the things contained in this book." A misapprehension appears in some of the newspapers, which labor under the impression that the vicars have been brought into court as defendants, under the charge of doing unlawful things. They have, in fact, appeared voluntarily, in order to obtain the resolution of "doubts" concerning certain usages and practices connected with the Church service. The cases are therefore test cases.

THE irrepressible Mr. Kensit furnished a feature of the proceedings which was not down in the programme. He appeared with a protest against the court and all its works and ways. He proceeded to read a lecture to the Archbishops on their own short-comings in the past. There seemed to be a reluctance, for some reason, to silence him by forcible means, and, according to the telegrams, the court was, therefore, adjourned, and he was left to address his remarks to the empty seats. If this account is true, it is certainly an instance of extraordinary forbearance on the part of the Archbishops. They must, it would seem, have power to protect themselves against unseemly interruption. Later reports state that as the case proceeds, the argument in favor of the lawfulness of the use of incense appears so strong that the anti-ritualist party, which has so long denounced the other side as law-breakers, is beginning to be apprehensive that the Archbishops will be obliged to decide in favor of its legality. In that case, threats are made of renewing the attempt to bring Parliament to interfere with matters of worship. But after the recent failure in that quarter, it hardly seems likely that the effort will be renewed. It is more likely that the Church Association, ignoring the spiritual court, may try to institute suits under the Public Worship Regulation Act, with the old result of getting clergymen committed to prison for refusing to obey the sentence of a secular court in spiritual affairs.

—X—

Father Austin and His Teachings--XX.

BY THE RT. REV. DR. McLAREN, BISHOP OF CHICAGO

(All Rights Reserved)

HE was one of the most evenly balanced of men, but there was a strain of eccentricity in his blood which accounted for the queer, unprecedented things he would occasionally do. But I always observed a certain expression on his countenance which convinced me that there was method in his madness, although I doubt whether many saw through him as I did. Bless his dear old heart, he could not be odd without making it a means of helping some one, for I think no man ever lived who tried harder to make everything that he said and did and suffered, contribute to the good of others. Whenever, as often I did, I saw this to be the underlying motive of his beautiful life, the words of George Herbert would come to my mind:

"All may of Thee partake;
Nothing can be so mean
Which hath this tincture 'for Thy sake',
Will not grow bright and clean."

A man has got on a long way in the highway to heaven, when he can lay his personal peculiarities, his eccentricities, at the foot of the Throne, and consecrate them to the glory of God. These are ordinarily the lairs of pride and conceit, as is the conscious possession of great abilities and great gifts, and it takes a long campaign and many battles to bring that kind of pride and conceit into subjection to Christ; but it can be done, and he did it.

I have an incident to record—one that made a great stir in the parish. What he did on that memorable eighth Sunday after Trinity was such a deviation from his ordinary instruction—for the people always called his sermons instructions, and with good reason—that they saw he was in a very strange, whimsical mood, and some thought he was clean daft. That was their first impression, but afterwards they caught his drift, and understood his good intention.

His text was from the Gospel for the Day—"Beware of false prophets which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits."

"I am going to speak to you as one of the false prophets," he began. "I am going to lay aside the customary tenor of my preaching and ask you to listen to a new gospel. They tell us that the old Gospel is effete, that Christianity needs reconstruction and the creeds restatement, and that the Church must conform to the new theology and the larger hope, or be submerged. Very well, let us conform. Let us brush away with one swoop all the things we have heretofore deemed to be holy. Holy? What does that mean? If it means anything, it means that nothing is sacred but what pertains to man and his life on this planet. We have no knowledge of anything else, and all the assumptions of faith, whatever that may be, will have to be consigned to the limbo, if there is a limbo, of exploded myths. We confess to the possession of the idea of God, but the idea is not God, and who dare say that the idea points beyond itself? Once I dared, but now I dare not; for a new age has fully dawned, and left the old notions in darkness beneath the eastern horizon. In the light of the new day let us look around us. We see the universal truth that all things are one, and nature is that one. Beyond the boundary line of nature, science reveals nothing, and there is nothing to reveal. It is an unthinkable, unspeakable void, a nothingness, in whose empty midnight eternal nihilism is enthroned; or, at least, we may as well say that as anything, for who knows what is eternal nihilism? The idea of supernaturalism is therefore an impossible idea. It is only an idea, and that is all. With supernaturalism we must sweep away the Church, her sacraments, and the ministry, the Virgin-Birth, the Incarnation, and the Atonement, the Resurrection, and inspiration. We must renounce all reverence for this gibbering ghost of immortality which too long has haunted the world. The miracles must go, too, and easy enough it is to explain them away by falling back on the element of imposture, or readiness to deceive, and the element of superstition, or readiness to be deceived; or one may suggest magnetism; or the tendency of religious fanaticism, to explain what it cannot account for, by assigning it to causes which do not exist. There is really no need for any religion except science, and as for morality, it is wholly based on self-interest."

By this time the congregation began to look about to be assured by their senses that they were where they thought they were, in church. Their faces seemed to put the mutual inquiry, when did he lose his wits? The wardens glanced at each other with looks of horror, and seemed to be sitting on nettles. The only undisturbed soul in the church was the soul of Aunt Jemima, and she was taking her customary nap.

This astonishing revolution in the pulpit continued. He said if it were true that the old religion had had its day, then hail to the new day! Hail, thou age of man, re-born successor of the age of God, enter upon thy reign, with nature for thy throne, and science for thy prime minister! Henceforth our golden rule shall be: Have a good time if you can, and die, if you must!

It would be difficult to describe the unconcealed consternation of the people as one after another these monstrous propositions fell from the lips of their still beloved but evidently insane pastor. He did not appear to notice their agitation, however, and calmly proceeded to applaud the tenets of materialism, tracing all psychic phenomena to physical causes. There is but one substance, and that substance is matter. Hence spirit does not exist. Neither a Great One nor lesser ones, for their existence is impossible. Spiritual religion is an absurdity, and morality is only matter on its good behavior. What men call religion is an evolution from the primitive man's fear of ghosts, and the new thought will ere long put a quietus on so unreasonable a delusion.

At this point the preacher paused and looked over the congregation, which had the appearance of the ocean when it is suddenly struck by a white squall. Then he reminded them that he had begun his remarks by announcing that he should speak as one of the false prophets; but he could no longer do violence to their feelings and his own, by assuming a part which filled him with horror, and of which, now that it was over, he doubted the wisdom. But he hoped to make good the purity of his intention. Whereupon the wardens shot glances of relief at each other. Aunt Jemima awoke, and hearing something about horror and false prophets, concluded the parson was on safe ground, and went in for another nap. The tossing waves subsided, and a great calm settled on the congregation, while their dear pastor (restored to reason, as some of them could not but feel) expressed his surprise that they should be so horror-stricken by his utterance of opinions which had not excited their minds when they read them in print, or listened to them in lectures. He did not seem to realize, as his devoted people did, that it is one thing for ravening wolves to put on sheep's clothing, and quite another for a sheep to try to assume the character of a ravening wolf. There was an incongruity about it, as though Portia were to try to imitate the snarl of Shylock.

The last portion of the good father's sermon restored the atmosphere to its normal condition, for he now began to talk like himself. The wardens were hilarious, in a certain interior sense, while Aunt Jemima, refreshed by repeated naps, listened devoutly as he proceeded to unfold and illustrate our Lord's criterion for detecting false prophets: "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

In order to form an exact opinion as to the results naturally and inevitably growing out of any idea or system of ideas held by men, we must refuse to reason from inadequate data. One swallow does not make a summer, nor does one good life prove Christianity divine, nor does one bad life suffice to condemn agnosticism or materialism; but there is underneath all questions of physics and morals a certain principle of necessity from which nothing can escape, and this principle our Lord enunciated when he said that a good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. He meant that causes will reveal their character by the general average of their product. This is as true of ideas as it is of thorns and grapes, figs and thistles. "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

"What sort of moral product then," asked the preacher, "would of necessity be the fruitage of the propositions which I enunciated just now as from the lips of a false prophet? What would have been the history of the world? What the present condition of mankind? What kind of men, women, and children would they be, had men always believed these monstrous errors? What would be the condition of this nation to-day if all that portion of it which has been, consciously or unconsciously, under the influence of the ethical teachings of Christianity, had been under the influence, instead, of the ideas which I seemed to you to be advocating just now? I put the question to yourselves, you who know what our religion did for your forefathers, and what it has done for you. Can you expect to gather the grape of the Golden-Rule variety from the thorn-tree of the outward morality of self-interest, or the figs of spiritual virtues from the thistles of materialism, which denies that there is an Infinite Spirit, that we are spirits in bodies, and that our immortality is anything more than the indestructibility of matter? How can it be practically possible to be happy in the belief that everything is matter in divers attenuations, and yet feel within that consciousness of the immaterial Ego which separates man from the substance of matter by immeasurable distances? Life's problems are numerous enough, but this one, if reduced to practice, would extinguish all hope, and every motive for virtue would vanish. Men would be unspeakably wretched if they had to believe consciousness to be untrue, and to accept the conviction that as to substance they are brethren, by nature, of the boulder, or the steam-jet, or the passing cloud—only this and nothing more."

He went on to show by a process of elimination, what would be left that would make life worth living, if every factor which has its roots in Christ were eradicated from society. The glory of civilization would have departed, and man would be plunged into barbarism. When our astronomical world learns to exist without the sun, we may expect mankind to live, prosper, and be happy without God. Then the good rector concluded with these points:

1. Credit Christ with what is due Him, and credit the tenets of the false prophets with all that is their due.

2. Ask yourselves what are the tendencies of religion; and what the tendencies of naturalism; and also, what are their effects upon man, individual and collective.

3. There is no middle ground. If either one is true, the other must be false. He that compromises with an enemy is not loyal to his leader.

One of the wardens who was formerly a Methodist, said audibly, Amen. The rest of the congregation looked it. It was three weeks before Aunt Jemima resumed her Sunday nap.

—X—

SO live with men as considering always that God sees thee; so pray to God as if every man heard thee. Do nothing which thou wouldst not have God see done. Desire nothing which may either wrong thy profession to ask or God's honor to grant.—Bishop Henshaw.

A Parochial Mission

THERE are thousands of Churchmen who have never heard of a parochial Mission, and many thousands who, having heard the name, have no idea what it means. It is the experience of nearly every missionary that his first energies in a new field are spent in overcoming the prejudice which exists against the "innovation." And it is equally true that in nine cases out of ten the persons most opposed to the Mission at its beginning are before its close most earnestly interested in its success, and often the most urgent in requesting that it should be continued beyond the time appointed.

When properly conducted, there need be no suspicion that a Mission is an unchurchly movement. Some, taking only a superficial view of its methods, fear, because there is usually a daily celebration of the Holy Communion, that it is Romish; others, looking at the brevity of its services, the increased length and earnestness of its addresses, and its direct and personal dealing with souls, are equally fearful that it is only the old Methodist revival under a new name.

In truth, however, a properly conducted Mission is only a condensed Advent, or an intense Lent. It is Churchly in its origin, Churchly in its results, and in none of its methods does it contradict that quiet dignity of devotion and reverence of worship which is the characteristic of the Church in all lands. A Mission is a call for the unconverted to turn to God; for the erring to cease to do evil and learn to do good; for the indifferent to wake from the spiritual torpor; for the idlers to work while it is day; for all Christians to re-examine their lives and re-consecrate themselves, body and soul, to God.

As the Mission progresses, requests for prayer are always sent in, and such prayers are offered either at the early Celebration, the service for communicants, or at the evening Mission service.

During the progress of the Mission an opportunity is given to the unbaptized, the unconfirmed, and the non-communicant to petition for these Christian privileges by writing their names upon a special blank distributed for that purpose, and dropping the same in the missionary's box at the church door. Everything is done quietly. The effort is to arouse the will and stir the conscience, yet to keep down all excitement. All public confession of Christ is reserved for His own appointed time and place, the sacraments and ordinances of His Church. Those who give their names to the missionary as desiring instruction for Holy Baptism or Confirmation or preparation for Holy Communion are requested not to talk about their feelings or intentions, but to dedicate themselves to God, and to pray earnestly for others out of Christ.

The class of persons most frequently reached and helped by a Mission are not those who are unfamiliar with the Church's ways and strangers to her fold, but rather those already within her Communion, "the lapsed," those who, having once stood at her font and kneeled at her altar, have fallen away from their Christian duty, and are living in selfishness and sin. In some Missions the spiritual results have been most evident and abundant, it being a frequent testimony that never before in the history of the parish have so many persons come to the Holy Communion, or never at any one time have so many come forward for Confirmation.

Not infrequently a Mission has been fruitful in most unexpected ways. Candidates have come forward and offered themselves for the ministry. New Bible classes and working guilds have been requested, money has been offered for aggressive parish work, week day services, and a more frequent Eucharist have been established and supported, while the arousing of new parochial interest and activity has in more than one instance resulted in the purchase of a new rectory or the canceling of a debt. But the Mission fruitage worked for, and prayed for, is the spiritual, and this is the usual return.—Emmanuel Church Record.

Letters to the Editor

THE BISHOP AND ORDINATIONS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

I believe I am correct in saying that throughout the whole Catholic Church, Anglican, Roman, Greek, Armenian, Syrian, and Coptic, the responsibility of ordaining a priest rests absolutely with the bishop, and I am glad to notice that you draw attention to the fact that in our American Church the Standing Committee of a diocese can recommend no one for ordination unless he presents his certificate from the bishop. Bishop Potter is a busy and overworked man, and he has unquestionably overlooked these two facts; namely, in the first instance, the practice of the Church Catholic, and, secondly, the rule of his own Church. English bishops frequently refuse to ordain men, and it is a rule for them never to assign their reasons for so doing. I know an Oxford professor who was refused ordination, and he was never able to obtain from the bishop a reason for rejecting him, although it was pretty generally understood that he failed absolutely in giving answer to the "Pastoral Paper" in the examination for Priests' Orders, which was the Bishop's speciality.

Of course at the time of Dr. Briggs' ordination, when no impediment was alleged, it was clearly the Bishop's duty to ordain.

It seems to me that the English Si quis should be restored in America, and read publicly in church before the ordination of an individual known to the congregation. This would afford opportunities for protest. It is not generally known that in England, whilst they are not made public, protests are very often sent privately to bishops after the reading of the Si quis, in church. But such communications are always regarded as private and confidential, inasmuch as they may refer to character, and not to doctrine or scholarship. CLERICUS.

SUNDAY LECTURES

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Zion's Herald, under an editorial on the relief of the sermon, asks if the modern sermon meets the need "of relief and replenishment" to the business and home careworn men and women.

It says "the majority of preachers do seek to satisfy just this demand," but goes on to add: "too many preachers conceive of the pulpit as an instructor's chair from which they must deliver a lecture, or a form for the discussion of questions of the day, in which they are to do all the talking. But this affords little relief to the well-informed business man or the busy mother. However able the discussion, there is grave doubt as to the edifying value of a sermon on the conduct of the national policy to men who have read the daily papers on the same topic all through the week. Ministers are not specialists in these matters. Busy men and women turn to the preacher for relief and inspiration as he presents the great ideals and sanctions of the Gospel of Christ."

It is to be hoped that these words may go far and wide, for aside from the unfitness of the average minister to discuss local and national politics, the egotism of reported sensational Sunday lectures is disgusting. Moreover, it is one of the principal reasons to account for neglect of Church attendance, that these same business men feel that they can stay at home and get a better report of the news than the parson can give them. With a Churchman the thing deplored by Zion's Herald ought to be forbidden as coming under "unhallowed, worldly, and common uses," not in conformity with the Consecration Prayer, "for reading Thy Holy Word, for celebrating Thy Holy Sacraments, for offering to Thy Glorious Majesty the sacrifices of prayer and thanksgiving, for blessing Thy people in Thy Name and for the performance of all other holy offices." D. B. S.

MAY I not earnestly ask of the clergy that they will painstakingly use the ipsissima verba of Holy Scripture and the Prayer Book in their conduct of public services? For us to do otherwise is to set an unbecoming example in license of self-will, and to assume grave responsibility. Yet I have heard more than once clerical lips saying in the chancel, "Let your light so shine before men, that, seeing your good works," etc.; and "shall not be ashamed to confess the faith of Christ crucified, but manfully to fight," etc.

I remark, also, that the rubrics require the minister to ask, for the first thing, concerning both infants and adults presented, "Hath any one of these been already baptized, or no?" Yet I have known clergymen to omit this altogether, thus failing to emphasize the care the Church takes against permitting the sacrilege of re-Baptism. And many a time have I observed the clergyman fail to "ask the god-fathers and god mothers the name," or say to them, "Name this child."—Bishop Tuttle.

Personal Mention

The Rev. Charles Henry Arndt, lately associate rector of Christ church, Germantown, Pa., succeeds the Rev. Dr. Falkner as rector, and begins his new duties June 1st.

The Bishop of Ohio has just returned from his visit to Europe.

The address of the Rev. Wm. C. Butler is changed from Baltimore, Md., to Snow Hill, Md., where he has become rector of All Hallows' church.

The Rev. W. B. Beach has accepted the rectorship of St. Paul's church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The address of the Rev. John Ashley Chapin is changed from Calvary House, New York city, to Christ Church House, Detroit, Mich., he being curate at that church.

The address of the Rev. Herbert M. Clarke, Ph. D., will be changed on June 1st from Indiana, Pa., to Eldred, McLean Co., Pa.

The Rev. J. H. Cloud, of St. Louis, has been invited to deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the class of '99, at the State School for the Deaf, at Fulton, on June 4th.

The Rev. F. Ward Denys requests us to state that the announcement in our last issue of his having accepted the rectorship of St. Mary's, Hampden, Md., was an error.

The Rev. S. Valerie Gilreath should be addressed at Garden City, N. Y.

The Rev. Walter A. A. Gardner has sailed for a tour abroad.

The Rev. Mark Jukes has resigned the care of St. Paul's church, New Whatcom, Wash.

The Rev. G. Mosley Murray has resigned the rectorship of St. George's church, Lee, Mass., and accepted that of the Henshaw Memorial church, Baltimore, Md.

At the commencement of Jefferson College, Philadelphia, held May 15th, the degree of doctor of divinity was conferred upon the Rev. Robert Howland Neide, rector of St. Mark's church, New Canaan, Conn.

The address of the Rev. George B. Pratt is San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Rev. Robert W. Pritchard, Pa. D., has resigned his parishes, Gethsemane church, Westmoreland, and St. James', New York Mills, N. Y., to take effect the second Sunday in June. He, his wife, and infant son sail for England on June 14th, by the "Teutonic."

The Rev. Frank Stringfellow has accepted a call to Orange Courthouse, Va., and will enter upon his new duties about the first of June.

Official

NASHOTAH HOUSE

The Commencement exercises will be held on Thursday, June 1st, at 10:30 A. M., with the usual services and celebration of the Holy Communion; preacher, the Rev. William McGarvey, of Philadelphia. The president and faculty extend a cordial invitation to all the alumni, the clergy, and those interested in the work of the House. Omnibus will meet the trains Wednesday and Thursday. Those expecting to attend are asked to notify the president that he may arrange for their entertainment.

Ordinations

In St. Paul's church, Chattanooga, Tenn., May 18th, Bishop Gallor advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Messrs. G. S. Robinson, of Grace church, Chattanooga, and Nevill Joyner, of Trinity church, Mason. The sermon was preached by the Rev. E. A. Bazett-Jones.

Advanced to the diaconate, in St. Silvanus' chapel, Nashotah Seminary, Wis., by the Bishop of Milwaukee, on Whitsunday, Messrs. Arthur Goadger, Allan Worthington Cooke, William Watson, Geo. Hirst, Wm. Donald McLean, John Conrad Jetter, and Andrew

Chalmers Wilson; all of the senior class of Nashotah House. The candidates were presented by the Rev. Messrs. Samuel Macpherson and Henry E. Chase, of Nashotah House, and the Rev. Dr. Sydney T. Smythe, of the St. John's Academy, Delafield. The Rev. Dr. W. W. Webb, president; the Rev. Professors M. A. Smith and A. W. Jenks also assisted in the ceremonies. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Francis J. Hall, of the Western Theological Seminary, of Chicago. The Rev. Allan Worthington Cooke, of the above class, proceeds to Japan in a few months, under appointment of the Foreign and Domestic Board, as a missionary in Japan.

Died

HENRY.—Entered into the rest of Paradise, at the residence of her parents at Newark, N. J., on May 7th, 1899, Emilie Caroline Henry, only child of Thomas and Caroline Headley Henry, in the 15th year of her age.

"Angels ever bright and fair,
Keep her ever in thy care."

IN MEMORIAM

'Tis vain to speak when sorrows fall,

Our eyes alone betray

The swellings of the sea of grief

That bears our hopes away.

Like tender buds that deck the spring,

And vanish in the fall,

So fragile is the race of man—

One doom o'erwhelms them all.

Sweet love is but a transient guest

But sorrow comes to stay,

And what we take to be the sun

Is but a meteor's ray.

But when the night of grief is o'er

The star of hope shall rise,

And with its bright, immortal gleam,

Still lead us to the skies.

A. W.

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

A MEMORIAL to the Rev. Father Brown, in the shape of an altar tomb, is to be erected in the church of St. Mary the Virgin, in New York city. Those who wish to aid in the erection of this memorial, may send their contributions to any member of the committee.

EDWIN S. GORHAM, Chairman,

HALEY FISKE, Treasurer, 1 Madison Ave.

DAVID E. KING IRENE H. GARRIGUES,

JOHN J. REYNOLDS, MATILDA J. CANFIELD.

Clergy House, church of St. Mary the Virgin, 145 W. 45th st., New York city.

THE Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes, New York, was incorporated in 1872 to promote the welfare of the silent people after they leave school. It holds sign-services in various places in the dioceses of New York, Long Island, Newark, and Connecticut. It ministers to the sick and poor. It finds work for the unemployed. It maintains The Gallaudet Home for Aged and Infirm Deaf-Mutes. Donations for this society may be sent to the General Manager, the Rev. THOMAS GALLAUDET, D. D., 112 West 78th st., or the treasurer, Mr. WILLIAM JEWETT, 467 Broadway, New York city.

Church and Parish

BISHOP HARE, Sioux Falls, S. Dak., is in need of priests and unmarried deacons and young unmarried men looking to the ministry, for work among the white people of South Dakota. Salaries not large but sure.

A PLEASANT home in Episcopalian family for children of parents who may wish to travel. Kind, motherly care. References. Address MRS. S. DAVIES, 7015 St. Lawrence ave., Chicago.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, May, 1899

1. SS. PHILIP AND JAMES.	Red.
7. 5th Sunday (Rogation) after Easter.	White.
8. ROGATION DAY.	Violet.
9. ROGATION DAY.	Violet.
10. ROGATION DAY.	Violet (White at Evensong).
11. ASCENSION DAY	White.
14. Sunday after Ascension.	White.
21. WHITSUNDAY.	Red.
22. WHITSUN MONDAY.	Red.
23. WHITSUN TUESDAY	Red.
24. EMBER DAY.	Red.
26. EMBER DAY.	Red.
27. EMBER DAY.	Red (White at Evensong).
28. TRINITY SUNDAY	White.

WHEN the wind is in the North,
The skillful fisher goes not forth;
When the wind is in the East,
'Tis good for neither man nor beast;
When the wind is in the South,
It blows the flies in the fish's mouth;
But when the wind is in the West,
There it is the very best.

IZAAB WALTON.

Hymn for Trinity Sunday

BY MARY ANN THOMSON

Almighty God, who art the same forever,
The Lord of Hosts whose mercy faileth never,
Vouchsafe that naught our souls from Thee may sever.

The Faith delivered to the saints confessing,
To Father, Son, and Spirit prayer addressing,
We come to Thee for pardon, grace, and blessing.

Eternal Three in One, we bow before Thee;
Cleanse us from all pollution, we implore Thee,
And make us meet with angels to adore Thee.

We bless Thee for Thy love, all souls embracing,
And for the Precious Blood, all guilt effacing,
And for the hope of joy, all sorrow chasing.

O Father, who Thy Son for us hast given;
O Son Divine, who hast our fetters riven;
O Holy Ghost, who with our souls hast striven;

God in Three Persons, throned in light supernal,
Guard us, we pray Thee, from our foes infernal;
Bring us to dwell with Thee in bliss eternal.

THE Rev. Dr. Albert St. John Chambre whose portrait appears on our cover page, was born in England, and in early life was attached to the Church; but owing to another influence, he was educated for the ministry of the Universalist body. He served therein for many years with distinction, until the growing tendencies towards radicalism weakened his interest in, and devotion to, that denomination. He found a great helper in the late Bishop Paddock, of Massachusetts, who sympathized with his difficulties, and with the Bishop's approval, he asked admission to the ministry of the Church. He was ordained a deacon in 1881, and, after receiving Priests' Orders, served as an assistant for a short time in St. Matthew's church, South Boston. He then accepted a call to the church of the Ascension, Fall River. When the Rev. Dr. Edson, the founder of St. Anne's, Lowell, Mass., died,
Dr. Chambré was elected as his successor, and has been rector of that large parish for many years. He is a member of the Standing Committee of the diocese. Dr. Chambré is a wise but fearless exponent of the Church's teachings. He has had occasion to defend these in ways which have sometimes brought him into the van of controversy.
He is one of the founders of the Massachusetts Church Union, a body of clergy and laymen who have been led and helped by his excellent wisdom and judgment. Besides holding important offices in the diocese, he is a trustee of many institutions, and his executive ability and keen insight into the management of trust funds, have resulted in placing him at the head of a savings bank in Lowell, where he is a power and influence for good in the Spindle City.

MR. HENRY OFFLEY WAKEMAN, the eminent Church historian, died at Basle, April 26th. He had been spending the winter in Egypt with his wife, to whom he was married only last August. Born in 1852, educated at Eton and at Christ church,
Oxford, in 1877, he was elected Fellow of All Souls', and in the same year became one of the tutors of Keble College. He was one of that band of junior "dons" who did so much ten years ago to raise the tone and widen the interests of young Oxford. But not only in Oxford was he a potent influence. Ever ready to take up arms on behalf of that Catholic Faith which was the deepest interest of his life, he devoted to that sacred cause his great historical and constitutional learning, and his peculiar gift of lucid and convincing exposition. He was the author of "An Introduction to the History of the Church of England," which was acknowledged to be, for its size, the most accurate and complete work on the subject. Mr.
Wakeman was also the author of several works on modern European history, which gained the approval of experts, and met the needs of the general student. In the midst of his work he has been cut off, and both learning and the Church are the poorer for his loss.

THE Japanese have adopted a new code of laws, which is formed so much in accordance with Western ideas that Europeans and Americans have no reasonable excuses for refusing to submit to Japanese courts. French and German law has chiefly been copied. The objection to the English and American system was that, as it is not codified, uniformity in the administration of justice is impossible; hence the skill of the lawyer and the caprice of a judge have often more to do with the shaping of a verdict than the terms of the law. A writer in The London Times regrets that England, by failing to establish a code, has missed a chance to influence future generations, as did the Romans, by their law, and even Napoleon, short-lived as was his empire.

TEN shining twenty-dollar gold pieces were presented the other day to ten faithful servants by the German Housewives' Society, of New York. The organization, which has a membership of about 600, is attempting to make the domestic problem a simpler one for deserving maids and mistresses. The "German" in the name, remarks Harper's Bazar, might be omitted, for there is no German clause in the requirements, and various nationalities are represented, among both the mistresses and the servants. The former pay an initiation fee of $3, and annual dues of $5.
This entitles them to the assistance of the society's intelligence bureau in securing a servant. The servant pays no fee. After four weeks of satisfactory service with a member of the society, she is entitled to medical attendance free of charge, and receives other assistance if she needs it. At the end of two years' service in one household, a servant receives a prize of $20.

THE first issue of these prizes took place last September, when sixteen girls completed their "two years' course." The ten who have just been rewarded are the second installment. There are penalties, however, as well as rewards. "An obstinate servant,
or one who willfully neglects her duties, will not be recommended by the society, and will lose all her privileges if she relapses into the same fault." As for the mistresses,
"those who treat their servants unjustly,
and do not rectify their conduct, will be expelled." For three years' continuous service in one place the prize is $30; and so on up to $100 for ten years. The success of the New York society has led to the establishment of a similar one in Philadelphia, and a plan for one in Boston.

DOBBS met his friend Turner on the train. They were both going to London, and stopped at the same hotel. Turner registered his name, "E. K. Phthol-gnyrrh."

Dobbs, noticing it, exclaimed: "Here, what are you assuming such a foreign, out-landish name for? Are you in any trouble?"

"Not a bit of it," replied Turner, "and I am not assuming any foreign name."

"What kind of a name is that?" demanded Dobbs.

"That is my identical old name," persisted Turner, "and it is English, too—pronounced plainly 'Turner.'"

"I can't see how you make 'Turner' out of those thirteen letters; besides, what is your object in spelling that way?" asked Dobbs.

"Well, you see, nobody ever noticed my name on the register when I wrote it
'Turner,' " exclaimed the latter, "but since
I commenced writing it 'Phtholagnyrrh,' I set them all guessing. They wonder what nation I am from; what my name is. I can now hear people talk about me all around.
It is, as I said before, English spelling.
'Phth,' there is the sound of 't' in 'phthisis';
'olo,' there is the 'ur' in 'colonel'; 'gn,' there is the 'n' in 'gnat'; 'yrrh,' is the sound of 'er' in 'myrrh.' Now if that doesn't spell
'Turner,' what does it spell?"

DURING the summer of 1898, over seven hundred children, selected from the most crowded and poverty-stricken sections of the city, were sent, by the Bureau of Associated Charities of Chicago, to the country for vacations varying from a week to a month. It is hoped this year that at least 2,000 children will be provided for in this manner.

A NEW line of work undertaken by the Bureau is the operation of free dental dispensaries for the poor. About fifty prominent dentists have volunteered to give their services free for the benefit of those who are unable to pay the usual prices. A charge of ten cents for extracting teeth and twenty-five cents for filling, with other prices in proportion, is made to pay for the supplies and material.

ANOTHER branch of the Bureau's work which will be enlarged during the summer, is the system of home libraries. Twenty books in a small case are placed in the home of a poor family, and the neighbors are invited to borrow the volumes and to meet weekly at the house in which the library is located, to discuss, with an agent of the Bureau, what has been read. When the books have been sufficiently read in one neighborhood, they are transferred to another. At present, about twenty of these libraries are in use, and it is hoped to more than double the number within a few weeks. A school of domestic science, in which young girls will be taught the rudiments of cooking and housekeeping, is to be opened; skilled instructors will be furnished by the Armour Institute without charge.

THE vessel on which Dr. Briggs sailed, the "Barbarossa," of the German Lloyd line, was found to be on fire when part way down the bay, and was obliged to return to the city, and delay sailing again for several days. On her return, she accidentally caused the sinking of two barges, and ran into a steamship of the French-American line, doing serious damage by the collision, and also injuring the pier. Dr. Briggs seems to have been a veritable Jonah to the Barbarossa, whether he believes in the story or not.

—X—

Book Reviews and Notices

Aylwin. By Theodore Watts-Dunton. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. Pp. 460. Price, $1.50.

This is a powerful piece of fiction. It is as fine a piece of literature as Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," without the morbidity which disfigures that work. The literary style is so pure and clear that one never thinks of it. The action of the story lies in the worlds of nature and of art, both these being brought into a wonderful harmony. Most of the characters are artists or gypsies who seem very much at home together. They are quite out of the ordinary, and are intensely original and interesting. The whole book is an unique piece of fiction. It puts into readable form the old contrast between naturalism and supernaturalism. The latter is victorious with a vengeance. The author has been for many years the leading critic of the London Athenaeum, and was the intimate friend of Browning, Tennyson, Morris, Rossetti, Swinburne, and the Pre-Raphaelite school of artists, several of whom appear, thinly disguised, amongst the characters of the book. On this account, as well as because of its own merit, Aylwin will attract widespread attention.

Fragments of an Autobiography. By Felix Moscheles. New York: Harper and Brothers. 1899. Price, $2.50.

These delightful "fragments" tell us of the whole delightful man who wrote them. The artist, in the best sense of the term, shines through every line. You feel that you know his genial heart, his love of humanity, his enthusiasm for the beautiful world, and all that is good in it. The book is a running recital of impressions of life, from early childhood, when in a stormy night, in darkness and horror, he clings to his mother in their traveling carriage in Germany; but he writes for us his later-on reminiscence of Rubinstein's marvelous playing of Schubert's Earl-King, and how, as the Earl-King of pianists pursued the doomed child, with his giant strides and unrelenting touch, alternately letting loose the elements to rage in mad-dening tumult, and drawing uncanny whispers from his weird instrument," he would live his own youthful experience all over again in his imagination—and so the happy author takes us with him through his varied life. In his pages, Mendelssohn lives again. A chapter on Mazzini has all the gloom of Italian wrongs, and the glory of a dreamed-of Italian unity. The chapter on Rossini brings before us the master of melody, and the successor of Mozart. We catch glimpses of Liszt and Wagner, and revel with our author in an atmosphere of living art.

As an illustration of the author's spirit, and an American incident, we will quote his description of how he painted Grover Cleveland. The improvised studio was in Cleveland's residence in Albany: "Talking of portrait painting," the author says, "I chanced to mention that I liked to give my sitters some characteristic name, to keep before my mind as a sort of password, whilst I proceeded with my work. By way of an illustration, I told him of a certain young lady I had been commissioned to paint. She was very pretty, had a pair of twinkling, soul-tormenting eyes, and moisture-sparkling lips. I added that such arbitrarily coined adjectives, and a good many more that suggested themselves, helped me but little towards the composition of my picture. That only came when I found my formula; and my young lady who had all along been waiting for me to name the happy day of the first sitting, was much pleased when I started with the motto, 'Don't you wish you may get it?' I painted her peeping from behind a curtain, holding a lovely red rose in her hand, which—the rose and the hand—you might or might not be destined to get." At this juncture, Cleveland asked: "Have you given me a name, too; and, if so, what is it?" Our author proceeds: "Now this was a poser, for I had given him a name, and it struck me at once that he might not like it. I admitted as much, and prefacing that he must take one of the two words used in the good sense, I said that I had labelled him 'Solid and stolid'; the 'stolid,' I explained, meaning that he was a man who wasn't going to move unless he saw good cause why. He seemed to think I wasn't far wrong there. As for the 'solid,' that needed no apology. Physically, any weighing machine would prove his substantial solidity; and intellectually, even a slight acquaintance with him would show him to be a powerful man."

Among many clever bits of criticism of our country during Mr. Moscheles's stay among us, there is one charming episode which we must also quote: He mentions among his American acquaintances, and foremost among them, Robert Morse. He meets this gentleman in Chicago, where he was spending the winter of 1887. He was busy there in his studio when a letter reached him, inviting him to transfer himself to Omaha, where several commissions awaited him. This invitation he could not accept, but suggested that at least one of his intending models might be brought to Chicago. This arrangement was made, and Robert Morse appears on the scene. "He was," says the author, "four years of age, and had a distinct objection to be thus dealt with, and out of that circumstance arose a series of difficulties. But, oh, how beautiful he was! I see him now as he was handed out of his carriage at the Hotel Richelieu, his golden curls escaping from his Phrygian cap of liberty, and cascading over his shoulders. We were in the depth of winter, and his sturdy little figure was warmly clad in the ample folds of the toboggan costume—a sort of ulster made of a deep-toned red flannel, collar and cuffs of the same material, and the cap to match. His mother led him upstairs—or I should more correctly say, speaking of this typical American child, was led upstairs by him." The charming figure of the child thus arrayed, determined the artist to paint a full length picture, toboggan costume, cap, snowscape, and all. But here trouble began. The boy would not pose. The mother was helpless, and longed for the father's arrival, who would set all straight at once. But even the father was unable to cow the will of the youngster. This is all told by the artist with delicious prolixity, until the climax of the boy's absolute refusal is reached, by the father's suggestion that Robert should accompany him into a neighboring room. The artist expected to hear from thence, wailing and gnashing of teeth, but all was silence. In due time father and son made their return. All had been arranged on amicable terms. The boy had his grievance. He did not see the use of a picture and a portrait which kept him in Chicago, away from all his playmates, and, tired to death of the place, the father admitted all this readily, but added that he did want the picture; that he would sit by him while the artist was at work; that he, Robert, should hold his toboggan and be generally portraitable, and when all was done, papa would buy a horse to go back to Omaha, and a pony for Robert also, who should ride by his side all the way. During the lengthy and long drawn out recital of this arbitration scheme, the likeness was secured. As the author says: "Robert listened intently; I painted ditto. They say in Omaha, where the portrait hangs, that it is good. So 'all's well that end's well.' Of that I am glad, and as I recall the incident, I am once more lost in admiration of the American child that, from its earliest days, is ever ready to elicit the noblest qualities of patience and forbearance in the parent it is training."

The whole delightful book scintillates with brilliancy from cover to cover.

EMMA MARSHALL whose death occurred last week, was a most prolific writer of fiction, more so probably than Charlotte M. Yonge. She began publishing in 1861, with a small juvenile story that attracted some attention, and she continued for nearly forty years to issue stories and tales. In recent years she has confined herself almost exclusively to the historical. In one of her latest books, "By the North Sea," the chief character is the granddaughter of the Protector who lived an eccentric life, well authenticated, near the town of Yarmouth, about two hundred years ago. Miss Marshall's facts were always very carefully worked up, and her romances are popular among a class of readers that preferred historical fiction to the novel of the day.

Books Received

Under this head will be announced all books received up to the week of publication. Further notice will be made of such books as the editor may select to review.

D. APPLETON & CO.

The Story of the British Race. By John Munro. 40c.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY
Nursery Ethics. By Florence Hull Winterburn. $1.
From the Child's Standpoint. By Florence H. Winterburn. $1.25.

George Mueller of Bristol. By Arthur T. Pierson. $1.50.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY

Why Men Do Not Go to Church. By Cortland Myers. 60c.

My Young Man. By the Rev. L. A. Banks, D.D. 75c.
The Nineteen Letters of Ben Uziel. By Samuel Raphael Hirsch. $1.

DOUBLEDAY & McCLEURE COMPANY

The Jamesons. By Mary E. Wilkins. $1.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO.

A Soul's Pilgrimage. By C. F. B. Miel, D.D.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

Bible Stories (New Testament). Edited by R. G. Moulton, M.A., Ph.D. 50c.

DODD, MEAD & CO.

The Fowler. By Beatrice Harraden. $1.50.

Books I Have Read. $1.25.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY

The Market Place. By Harold Frederick. $1.50.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

Dictionary of the Bible. Vol. 2.

MESSRS. RIVINGTON, London

This Church and Realm. By Rev. C. E. Brooke, M.A. 2s. 6d.

A. & C. BLACK, London

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY, New York

Thoughts on the Present Position of Protestantism. By Adolf Haroack

The Quest of Faith. By Thomas Bailey Saunders.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

The Roman Primacy. By the Rev. Luke Rivington. $2.50.

HARPER & BROS.

The Awkward Age. By Henry James. $1.50.

A Thousand Days in the Arctic. By Frederick G. Jackson. Illustrated. $6.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.

The Queen of the Swamp. By Mary Hartwell Catherwood. $1.25.

Tiverton Tales. By Alice Brown. $1.50.

Economic Aspects of the Liquor Problem. By John Koren. $1.50.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XIV.

ALAN UNDERHILL'S detention by the Board of Royal Commissioners was a matter of only two or three days' duration, for there was little difficulty in proving his innocence of any plot, and his active endeavors to aid in extinguishing the great fire. But the late occurrences were, nevertheless, provocative of results important to him in another direction. For a few days after his release came this missive to him from his father:

DEAR SON:—I have been much pained to hear that you have of late been but an Unprofitable Servant in ye work for which you were sent to New York. Nay, more than this, that you have been actively concerned in stirring up Strife and Sedition in that city. Your mother and I have scarce credited these reports at first, as when I have writ you concerning ye Disturbance at Trinity Church, and trust even now that your innocence of more than Folly may be established. Nevertheless I do command you on your Obedience as a son to return to ye Queen's Glebe, where if you cannot keep yourself from seditious broils, they will do less harm. Your studies can be pursued here where it is mine own Errour that you have not been detained. I have writ to General Howe for safe Conduct for you, reminding him of ye Loyalty of our family.

It was no new thing for Alan's views to be misunderstood, but it was the first time that his conduct had been seriously questioned, and the harshness of the letter wounded him deeply. Nevertheless, filial loyalty prompted him to make arrangements at once to obey his father. Among such preparations was a leave-taking interview with Margaret Delafield, in Greenwich village, whither her mother had gone in her failing health, probably to die.

As Alan talked, unconsciously betraying some of the bitterness which rankled in his soul, Margaret listened quietly, her hand clasping that of her mother who lay listless and unobservant on her couch. Her face was averted from him, but he could see by the rare color which mounted in her cheeks that she was deeply stirred.

"And what of your comrade, Evelyn, whom you have told me first inspired you with the desire for your sacred vocation?" she asked suddenly. "Surely she appreciates the sacrifice which you have made. Surely she believes in you."

Alan's own color rose now. Margaret had divined his chief anxiety, as by some special gift of insight. His utterance was difficult, but he answered steadily and simply: "I know not."

Margaret did not speak immediately, but when she did, it was with hope and encouragement of the fortunes of the war, and of the latest tidings from Eugene.

Alan was cheered in spite of himself. And yet his warmest Godspeed that day was in the finished sentences of the aged cavalier whose flannel-swathed legs were no hindrance to his natural elegance, and from the dear old lady who was kept by her infirmity from all the strife of tongues.

It was no simple matter at this time, even with General Howe's passports, to make a way through the British lines which encompassed New York on the north and east.

And although the patriot forces had been crossed by Washington into New Jersey, in readiness for the expected maneuvers against Philadelphia, there was a detachment under General Charles Lee, at Tarrytown, which it would be necessary to evade.

Alan's heart burned within him that he should owe his safe conduct to the British, while he skulked like a traitor through the patriot lines. But all was ready for his departure, the very day had come, and he had put foot in stirrup, when he received letters from the Queen's Glebe which completely changed his purpose. The first was from his father, Spartan-like in its brevity and sternness, and ran as follows:

Ye news of your activity in the great conflagration has reached ye Queen's Glebe. We deem it best that you should fight with Gun and Sword rather than with Fire-brands, and you have now our leave to abandon ye professed Service of ye Church, and to make war openly in ye cause of her Enemies.

Alan's face grew pale at the reading of these lines, and his eyes flashed. Savagely crumpling the letter in his hand and flinging his reins to a little negro in the road, he dashed back into the house and up to his forsaken room. He dared not open Evelyn's letter on the street. It began kindly enough, with a pathetic recounting of their old comradeship and their former unity of faith and hope. Then the present bitterness suddenly welled up. She wrote:

You have disappointed us, Alan, your father and mother and me, more than Griffith has done, for he but forsook his home and love, whilst you have forsworn Faith and Loyalty. But how can I write to one whom Captain Dalton has told me he saw with his own eyes stirring up the Traitors to their incendiary work. Your mother has bid me send her love, which she is too prostrated to write herself. As for me, I have lost faith in all men, and the Cause shall be my only solace.

If Alan had read between the lines, he might have found some comfort even in Evelyn's concluding phrases, but the blow was too stunning for that now. Margaret's question seemed to stare mockingly at him from the paper: "Surely, Evelyn trusts you?"

Aye, Margaret was the grander woman, but yet Evelyn was the woman, the little girl, that he loved. Was there ever any hair like hers that rippled and waved in such bewitching waywardness? Were there any such limpid eyes through which

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER

DR.
PRICE'S CREAM
BAKING POWDER

Awarded

Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal. Midwinter Fair

shone such a trustful, willful, childlike soul? Alan's own eyes filled and his breast heaved at the recollection of the piquant figure, the saucy tongue, the merry laugh, the perpetual enthusiasms, the pure and loving heart. His strong, silent nature held no idea, until now, how it had cherished this image, nor how its hope had grown since Griffith's defection. Evelyn was indeed avenged upon the one brother for the disloyalty of the other!

Alan sat a long time in such conflicting thoughts. He knew not how long, and the impatient pawing of his horse outside was quite unheeded. He was going through his hour of agony, and alone. If there had been but one good angel there to whisper that even now it would be best to return to the Glebe, that once there the clouds of distrust and misunderstanding would disappear, much suffering to himself and others might have been averted. But his father's harsh words had seared his heart too deeply. "Better fight with guns and swords than with fire-brands." Aye, he would fight. What was there to prevent him from making his way through the British lines and giving himself unreservedly to the patriot cause?

He lifted his head and noted that the afternoon sun was falling in level lines across his floor. At the same time he became conscious of an intermittent knocking upon the house door. He rose, and went down to find

ARMSTRONG & McKEVLY } Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAYMAN } Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS } Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK } Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR } Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN }
ATLANTIC } BRADLEY }
BROOKLYN } New York.
JEWETT }
ULSTER }
UNION }
SOUTHERN } Chicago.
SHIPMAN }
COLLIER }
MISSOURI } St. Louis.
RED SEAL }
SOUTHERN }
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO } Philadelphia.
MORLEY }
SALEM } Salem, Mass.
CORNELL } Buffalo.
KENTUCKY } Louisville.

DWELLING house in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., built one hundred years ago, has always been painted with Pure White Lead and Linseed Oil—nothing else.

There is not a crack, blister, blemish or imperfection of any kind in the paint. Makers of mixtures, beat this record if you can!

Be sure the brand is right. Those in margin are genuine, and made by "old Dutch process."

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also folder showing picture of house painted in different designs or various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 100 William St., New York.

the little imp of darkness asleep upon the doorstep, and his horse tethered to the knocker!

Alan, mounting, rode quickly northward by the Bowerie road. He had no desire, now, to meet the companions with whom he had before arranged to travel. Nightfall found him at the outskirts of the British lines. He had passed picket after picket, showing his safe-conduct, and giving the watchword as he went. For the last time, the "Halt; who goes there?" sounded in his ears, and for the last time he had answered with the countersign, but as he turned his head toward the river, the sentry called after him:

"You'll run your head into Lee's mouth if you look not sharp. Keep back from the river until well above Tarrytown!"

Alan paid no heed, but slattered on in the increasing darkness.

"By King George's crown," cried the sentry to the relief coming up, "I believe we've come nigh to catching a spy!"

"Come nigh to letting him go, you mean," returned the other in rough Scotch aspirates. "This will rest him that he hasten not, I wist."

He raised his gun as he spoke, and fired one, two, three shots at the rider and horse climbing a distant elevation.

"That last settled him a leetle, do you ken?"

"'Tis only that he's dropped below the crest of the hill. It matters little after all; he'll not tell much to Lee that the general will pass over to the commander-in-chief. Lee's stomach's too high to cater to Washington's appetite."

And now Alan, safe in body and limb, had reached the American lines. In response to the usual challenge, he halted, and replied merely: "A friend."

"Give the countersign, friend," said another deeper voice from the darkness.

"I know it not," said Underhill boldly, "but I can give you much information concerning the positions of the British troops."

"You are a deserter, then?"

"No, a fugitive from New York who desires to recruit."

"And the British most thoughtfully furnished you with passports through their lines? 'Tis a remarkable fostering of our recruiting service!"

"An you believe me not, take me to General Lee," cried Alan impatiently. "He will know a man from a spy."

"I am General Lee," replied the other, and I shall know a spy when I have searched him. Bring the light, sentry."

When the flaming torch was brought, Alan, knowing well what incriminating evidence his passports might prove, boldly produced them. He had made so sure of easy entrance into the needy patriot ranks, that he had not given a thought to the fact that his explanations might not be accepted. Now he knew his mistake. Nevertheless, he was little prepared for the look of rage in the officer's face as his eyes fell upon General Howe's signature.

"What hinders me from hanging you like a dog?" he cried. "Here are ropes and trees in plenty. Nay, I will not hear." He blew a whistle in his sword-hilt, with what little breath was left him, and in a moment three or four of his staff had hurried up from the river bank, where they had been loitering.

"Seize this fellow," said the general. "He deserves no mercy; he shall be shot tomorrow at sunrise."

In less time than it took for the newcomers to obey the order given, a vision had passed before Alan of that scene at sunrise. The machine-like platoon of soldiers with their muskets leveled, the grim figure of the officer ready to give the word, and himself standing with pinioned arms and bandaged eyes waiting to receive the deadly volley in his breast. And then a sweet, familiar voice cried out, "Alan, Alan is it you?" and Underhill knew with intense relief that one of his captors was Eugene Beaumont.

"Know you this fellow?" asked Lee, astonished.

"Aye, General, and I will answer for him with my life."

"Answer for him with your messpot, comrade," said Lee, coolly, "for he looks famished. I will presently return and hear further his story."

"'Tis, then, General Charles Lee," said Alan, looking after the stalwart figure of his would-be-executioner, "the soldier of fortune, who has so warmly espoused the cause of the colonies?"

"Aye, and he is the idol of the men, in spite of the fact that he is a Turk for temper, as you came near knowing to your cost. The Indians call him Boiling Water, and there is a whisper that he is jealous of the commander-in-chief. But why should I wait to learn what good wind has blown you hither. Stay, I'll warrant me it was—Margaret."

(To be continued.)

A Bad Habit of Speech

SOME one here in town died of pneumonia not long since, and every daily paper referring to his demise, announced that he had "taken cold at the wedding of a friend." Not a very pleasant association surely for the bride and groom to cherish, with their other memories of the day.

Without doubt there were in that particular house and at that particular time many draughts in the hall when the doors were open and shut at frequent intervals. Draughts are apt to prevail in most halls during hours of festivity. But quite as true is it that many hundreds of other guests were also exposed to those to which he alone succumbed. The presence of some latent seed of trouble in him, therefore, is to be presumed. It is equally certain also that he might have met on a street corner, in a car, or at his own table, the draught which was to develop this. Unhappily for all concerned, he was unfortunate enough to meet it at the "wedding of a friend."

We have been tempted to refer to this story in full, in order to prove how idle and how hurtful these remarks are, which tend to locate the coming of our adversities on the very door-steps, as it were, of our friends.

"I caught cold going to see you." "She has been ill ever since the Jones-Robertson's dinner." "He caught his death at Mrs. Hine's tea." "I have never been well since that day I spent on Mrs. Marvin's yacht." One hears such statements made every day of the week, and every day someone's heart is hurt by them. It is quite time we learned to say something else.—Harper's Bazar.

"He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last."

A hearty laugh indicates a degree of good health obtainable through pure blood. As but one person in ten has pure blood, the other nine should purify the blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Then they can laugh first, last and all the time, for perfect happiness comes with good health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Irritable Stomachs

make irritable people. A food that is nourishing and that does not cloy the appetite is

Somatose

Somatose is a Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative. It contains the nourishing elements of meat. Prepared for invalids and dyspeptics and those needing nourishment and a restored appetite. May be taken in water, milk, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists' in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City, selling agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

Wool Soap

is as good as any Soap selling for ten times the Wool Soap
price

No chapped or rough hands from Wool Soap using

SWIFT AND COMPANY
CHICAGO

THE
EMERSON
PATENT BINDER

A FILE
And Permanent Binding for Music, Periodicals, Photos of Goods, Samples of Fabrics, etc.

Showing the appearance of the Binder when quite full.

The Living Church

(COPYRIGHTED)

... Bind Your Copies of ...

THE LIVING CHURCH

By special arrangement we are able to supply the Emerson Binder, cloth, neatly lettered in gold, to our subscribers at the moderate cost of 75 cents. Address all orders to

The Living Church.

Paid Principal and Interest

ONE of the closest friends of Baron Rothschild, of Paris, was Carolus Duran, the artist. During the entire course of a certain large dinner party, the great financier noted, says Harper's Round Table, that the painter kept looking at him with a most intent and peculiar expression. After the coffee and cigars the Baron drew his friend aside and said: "My dear fellow, pray tell me why you have stared at me so peculiarly this evening?"

"I'll tell you with pleasure," answered Duran; "I am painting a beggar for the salon, and have looked all over Paris for a suitable head to draw from. I've finally found it. Yours is the ideal."

Rothschild laughed heartily, and promised to sit for his friend, in suitable attire, on the following day.

During the progress of the sitting, a young artist, one of Duran's pupils, came into the room. Naturally, he had not been in a position to meet people of Baron Rothschild's importance, and so did not know him; but the beggar's miserable rags, wan face, and wistful expression appealed deeply to the young man's sympathies. Waiting until his master was busy mixing colors, the pupil took a franc from his vest pocket and held it out behind his back to the model who seized it with feigned avidity.

When the sitting was over, Rothschild made inquiries of Duran concerning the philanthropist, and was informed that he was a student of great promise and attainments, but among the poorest of the inhabitants of the Latin Quarter.

Some six months after this occurrence, the young man received a note, which ran about as follows:

"Dear Sir: The franc that you gave in charity to a beggar in the studio of Mr. Duran has been invested by us, and we take pleasure in forwarding to you our check for $2,000, the principle and increment of the same.
Yours, etc.,
ROTHSCHILD & CO."

THE late Helen Hunt, writing of a perfect home, said: "The most perfect home I ever saw was a little house into the sweet incense of whose fires went no costly things. A thousand dollars served as a year's living for father, mother, and three children. But the mother was the creator of the home; her relations with the children were the most beautiful I have ever seen; every inmate of the house involuntarily looked into her face for the keynote of the day, and it always rang clear. From the rose bud, or clover leaf, which, in spite of her hard housework, she always found time to put aside our plates at breakfast, down to the story she had in hand to read in the evening, there was no intermission of her influence. She has always been and will always be my ideal of a mother, wife, and homemaker. If to her quick brain, loving heart and exquisite face had been added the appliances of wealth and enlargements of wide culture, hers would have been absolutely the ideal home. As it was, it was the best I have ever seen."

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
promotes digestion and corrects acidity of the stomach.

Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

A PHILADELPHIA girl who visited the cruiser Raleigh while at anchor in the harbor, peeped into the galley where the officers' dinner was being prepared. There were men of four nationalities—a Swede, a Frenchman, a Jap, and a Chinaman—engaged in the work. Calling the Swede to her side, she asked him for a small piece of bread or something of the sort for a souvenir. The man looked at her with surprise for a moment, and then went over and consulted with the others. Then all took a turn at glancing at the girl, and finally the Swede, with an indulgent smile, secured a large plate and heaped it full, with a big piece of steak, a generous lot of mashed potatoes and some bread, which he brought to her, with the remark in broken English to the effect that the Raleigh sailor boys would not see a beautiful American girl go hungry. The young woman was very much embarrassed at this interpretation of her request, but she ate a portion of the dinner, and after securing the bread as a souvenir, rewarded the sailor in return with a college pin, which delighted the generous Swede beyond measure.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St., New York

The Great Example.

By GEORGE HENRY SOMERSET WALPOLE, D.D., Principal of Bede College, Durham, lately Professor in the General Theological Seminary, New York. Crown 8vo. $1.25.

This is a book intended to help Candidates for Holy Orders during the days immediately preceding their Ordination. It contains addresses on the four-fold life of the ministry and outlines of meditations, together with some devotions. The passage of Scripture selected for meditation is intended to suggest the teaching that follows in the address, and the devotions to gather it up in short petitions and acts of praise.

"This singularly helpful and valuable volume is composed of eight meditations, and addresses with devotions. As devotions and instructions for candidates for Holy Orders, they are sure to supply a long-felt want. There is nothing exaggerated or unhealthy, either in their tone or language. They go to the heart of the matter in dealing with the purpose, spirit, and ideals of the priest's work and life. We cordially commend the volume."—Churchman, N. Y.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.,
91-93 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Lyrics of The Living Church

A handsomely bound volume of poems which have appeared in THE LIVING CHURCH. A few hundred volumes were secured from the publishers at a very low figure, and although retailing at $1.50, we can offer a volume for 50 cents, plus 10 cents for carriage, in connection with a renewal of subscription for one year to The Living Church. As the plates were lost in the great fire which destroyed the publishing house of A. C. McClurg & Co., no new edition can be issued. Address, THE LIVING CHURCH, 55 Dearborn st., Chicago.

A New, Revised, and Popular Edition of The Treasury of the Psalter

An aid to the better understanding of the Psalms in their use in public and private devotions, compiled by

The Revs. G. P. Huntington and H. A. Metcalf

With a Preface by

The Bishop of Central New York

12mo, Cloth, $1.00 net; by mail, $1.12

This Fourth Edition of the "Treasury of the Psalter" brings the book into conformity with the Standard Prayer Book of 1892.

E. & J. B. YOUNG & CO.,

7 and 9 West 18th Street, New York.

Educational

ILLINOIS

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address, REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1889. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

St. Alban's Academy.

Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports.

A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

Educate Your Daughters

where they will receive the best instruction, enjoy healthful surroundings and social and religious influences.

Illinois Woman's College

possesses every qualification that makes a woman's college best. New buildings this year. Apply early for room.

Joseph R. Harker, Ph. D., President,
Jacksonville, - Illinois.

MASSACHUSETTS

Bradford Academy.

Founded 1803. For the higher education of young women. Classical and Scientific course of study, also Preparatory and Optional. Year begins Sept. 20th, 1899. Miss Ida C. Allen, Principal, Bradford, Mass.

Rogers Hall School,

For Girls. Certificate admits to College. Apply to Mrs. E. P. UNDERHILL, Lowell, Mass.

The Highland Military Academy,

Worcester, Mass. 43d year. A First-Grade Preparatory School. Modern Sanitation. New Athletic Field. Generous Table. Live Teaching. Small Classes. Visitor: The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D.D. Head Master: Joseph Alden Shaw, A.M.

MICHIGAN

MICHIGAN, Ann Arbor.

University School of Music.

Albert A. Stanley, A.M., Director. Unusual Advantages from connection with the University of Michigan. For Calendar and detailed information, address the Secretary.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

St. Gabriel's School, Peekskill, N. Y.

A Boarding School for Girls.

Under the charge of the Sisters of St. Mary. On an eminence overlooking the Hudson River. Prepares for College. Twenty-seventh year will begin Sept. 28th, 1898. Address THE-SISTER-IN-CHARGE.

WISCONSIN

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes many boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address

REV. ARTHUR PIPER, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. B. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address, THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Little Ones He Blessed

I wonder if ever the children

Who were blessed by the Master of old
Forgot He had made them His treasures.

The dear little lambs of His fold.

I wonder, if angry and willful,

They wandered afar and astray,

The children whose feet had been guided

So safe and so soon in the way.

One would think that the mothers at evening,

Soft smoothing the silk-tangled hair,

And low leaning down to the murmur

Of sweet childish voices in prayer,

Of bade the small pleaders to listen,

If haply again they might hear

The words of the gentle Redeemer

Borne swift to the reverent ear.

And my heart cannot cherish the fancy

That ever those children went wrong,

And were lost from the peace and the shelter,

Shut out from the feast and the song.

To the days of gray hairs they remembered,

I think, how the hands that were riven

Were laid on their heads when He uttered,

"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

He has said it to you, little darling,

Who spell it in God's Word to-day;

You, too, may be sorry for sinning,

You also believe and obey.

And 'twill grieve the dear Saviour in heaven,

If one little child shall go wrong,

Be lost from the fold and the shelter,

Shut out from the feast and the song.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY IZOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER VII.

THE MOONLIGHT MASQUERADE

AFTER five days of steady, persistent work, the girls of St. Dorothy had sold just forty-five tickets for their entertainment, and when the sun went down Friday night there were six doubting hearts, sore with the bitterness of defeat, and full of a dread anticipation of the moonlight masquerade as a stern reality instead of Virginia's air-castle.

"The moon shone brightly, for a wonder," Mollie said, and the roomy garden grounds around the Hardy residence looked very pretty and inviting with rows upon rows of colored lanterns swung from tree to tree like a wondrous new kind of fireflies. They shone with a soft, unreal glow of rose and gold on the foliage, and cast strange, silent shadows of jet upon the smooth grass of the lawn.

Everything was in readiness by eight, and the reception committee, together with the refreshment committee, stood in an anxious group on the veranda steps around their general chairman, Virginia.

The long, cozy length of the veranda which ran along the west side of the house, had been converted into an ice cream retreat, with dangling lanterns, and dainty tete-a-tete tables here and there. This part of the affair was exclusively under the care of Alice and Laura, and they gave the crowning touch to the pretty picture in their quaint Japanese costumes. Laura had her heavy brown hair piled on top of her head Japanese, and so tightly was it drawn that it made her hazel eyes slant like any maid from the real Fanland. She wore a wonderful gown of blue with great sprawling golden birds and butterflies scattered over it, while Alice's plump little form looked comical enough in a scarlet robe whose broad, fluttering sash had become one of her cares of life.

Six gallons of ice cream had been ordered in the first flush of enthusiasm, but the amount had dwindled down to half that number under present stress of circumstances.

"Only forty-five sold, and I don't believe that twenty-five will come," Virginia was saying dolefully. She was dressed as a colonial dame of high degree, in stiff, flowered silk and brocade, with her hair combed high in powdered dignity, and a little black satin half mask in her hands ready for use.

The others were silent from sheer hopelessness of despair. Down among the trees they could see Mrs. Hardy's white hair here and there, as she moved slowly about the garden leaning on her husband's arm; but all at once, Gyp, the little spaniel, gave a warning bark as he darted from their side, and ran down the graveled path to the iron gates at the entrance.

"Here's some one coming, anyway," Mollie said, peering out at the shadowy dimness to try and distinguish the outlines of the carriage which had just stopped. "Let's go and receive them in proper style, girls," and the spangles on her gypsy dress jingled gaily as she started after Gyp, the others following.

"Why, I don't remember selling any tickets to the Hallidays," whispered Mollie a moment later to Virgine, as they recognized the arrivals, "and here they are, all five. Isn't it funny?"

"Very," responded Virginia, briefly. "It takes quite a slice out of my twenty-five limit."

The surprise deepened, when after the Hallidays had passed on, a steady influx of patronage began. As the number present passed Virginia's limit, and Mollie had carefully kept count, the wonder of the reception committee knew no bounds. People who had positively refused to take tickets from them, made their appearance fully equipped with the little admission slip, and greeting the girls with merry, quizzical faces that told no tales.

"Pinch me, Nell, pinch me hard," Mollie gasped, when the fifty mark was passed. "I want to know whether I'm asleep or awake. Did you ever in your life see such a mixed-up thing. Look at this fresh lot coming."

Up on the veranda the two little Japs were so rushed with business, that Mrs. Hardy lent them the aid of Christine and Lena, the maids, and the dimes fell with a steady, jolly chink into the tin box that Alice carried.

Everyone had made some attempt to carry out the masquerade idea, and while the older people did not mask, all of the young ones did, and a gloriously good time they had trying to discover identities. Congratulations poured in on the girls, and fresh

Picture of Health

I have used Mellin's Food for my baby boy for the last 15 months and I enclose a picture of him (now 18 months old). He is the very picture of health, weighs 35 pounds, has cut all of his teeth and never has had a sick day. Everyone says "he is an ideal Mellin's Food baby," and they will hardly believe me when I tell them he is only 18 months old. Mrs. W. H. MacIlroy, 43 East 21st Street, Paterson, N. J.

Mellin's Food

Judged by its results alone Mellin's Food must be a good food for babies. Mellin's food and good fresh milk make a combination that is like mother's milk. That is the reason why so many babies thrive on Mellin's Food.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

COX SONS & VINIG,

70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

CASSOCKS, SURPLICES, STOLCS,
CHOIR VESTMENTS,
EMBROIDERIES AND FABRICS.

SUCCESSORS TO

COX SONS, BUCKLEY & CO.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.

Church Furnishers and Decorators.

70 Fifth Avenue. New York City.

Church GLASS AND
DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN
President
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT
Vice-President

3-5-7 W 29th Street

NEW YORK

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

THE MODERN STOVE POLISH

ENAMELINE

Makes an old Stove as bright as new in a minute.

PASTE
CAKE OR LIQUID

J. L. PRESCOTT & CO. — NEW YORK —

relays of arrivals poured in at the gate, until the reception committee were completely bewildered.

Mollie had counted as high as one hundred, and then had been forced to retire, on account of her excited nerves, something that had never troubled her before.

"Try a glass of lemonade," Evelyn said to her, as she sank into a seat beside the lemonade well, of which Evelyn was guardian angel, in a dainty Swiss costume. "Isn't this splendid?"

"Yes, altogether too splendid to be true," Mollie declared, with a faint show of energy. "Those Excelsior boys are at the bottom of it in some way, and they've played some kind of a trick on us, I know they have."

"Did you ask Dave and Art," Evelyn began:

"Oh, yes, I asked Dave and Art," Mollie returned, "and they only grinned. You would have thought my two hundred tickets were the greatest joke in the world"—she paused, and turned her face aside, so that Evelyn should not see the tears that would roll down her cheeks.

The garden was full already, and it was only half-past nine. She had been to each of the girls separately, and found out to whom they had sold tickets, then compared the names given with those of most of the guests present. The result was appalling. There was certainly a trick somewhere. The name of St. Dorothy's Sisterhood was on every one's lips, and the girls were besieged with questions as to how they had managed everything so cleverly. Mollie's head was brim full of petitions for membership, and she felt as though any trouble that the morrow might bring on account of those boys would be the last straw.

All at once her train of thoughts was rudely checked by a startled exclamation of surprise from Evelyn.

"Look, Mollie," she cried. "Whatever does this mean?"

Mollie's tears were brushed aside in an instant, as she looked up, and saw the commotion at the gates.

Fifteen forms, clad in trailing, classic gowns of many-colored cheese cloth, entered the garden in solemn single file. Each face wore a white mask, and each form made a sweeping curtsy to the astonished reception committee as they passed it.

"They've all got tickets," Evelyn exclaimed, eagerly. "Do you suppose—"

"Yes, I do suppose," Mollie broke in hysterically, "I'd know Art's figure if he had wings on too. I suppose that every blessed one of those Excelsior boys have come here."

"What for?" demanded Evelyn, but Mollie had dropped on her knees beside the lemonade well, and hidden her face in her hands.

"It's all my fault," she sobbed, "every bit. Oh, what are they going to do to spoil it all?"

Evelyn stood up on a chair so that she could see better, over the heads of the people.

"Well," she said at last, "I don't know what they're going to do, but the last one's Art. Gray, sure enough, because he's so fat, and he just handed Eleanor a big envelope."

Mollie was on her feet in an instant, her face aglow with excitement.

"An envelope!" she cried, "I knew they wouldn't do anything mean. Come on, come on quick, and let's see what's in it."

She caught Evelyn's hand in hers, and they ran helter skelter across the lawn to the gates.

(To be continued.)

Animal Friendship

SOME very curious instances of animal friendships form the subject of an illustrated article in the Strand Magazine. A curious example is that of a handsome young collie and a goose with a broken wing, that were well-nigh inseparable. It is said that the dog, when a puppy, had rushed at a gosling and broken its wing; ever since it was noticed that the dog was not only cognizant of the mischief he had done, but became so repentant that from that time forward he had taken that one bird under his special protection, though his feeling toward geese in general remained unchanged, and now wherever the dog goes, there follows the goose, and vice versa.

A pretty story is told of a big tomcat, named Molly, who assumed charge of a family of young rabbits. When the rabbits were turned over to his care, everybody expected that he would eat them. But he didn't. When looked in upon later in the evening, that excellent cat was sitting up washing the rabbits! He evidently remembered his own nursery days, and was doing duty according to his lights by his strange charges. When he came to the long ears he paused, evidently mildly surprised at the innovation, but those rabbits had a thorough licking before they finally retired to rest. This sort of thing went on for a fortnight, the rabbits feeding out of Molly's saucer of bread and milk with him regularly, though it soon had to be changed for a soup-plate, and a bigger bed had to be provided. At the end of a fortnight the rabbits began to take so much exercise that it was difficult to keep them in one room, and there were so many ferocious cats in the neighborhood, that it was decided that the rabbits must be provided with a hutch of their own, and so the pretty little comedy came to an end.

Another cat with a high sense of maternal responsibility, reared a brood of neglected ducklings. Whenever they fell out of the box in which they lay with her, she picked them up tenderly in her mouth and replaced them. When they pecked at her after the manner of their kind, she gently reproached them with her paw, and seemed to try and tell them in her own language that she had never seen well-behaved kittens behave in that way before.

Another strange case cited is that of a hen that insisted upon adopting four small kittens. She had been setting for some time when she suddenly conceived the idea that the care of the kittens was more to her liking. She, therefore, promptly drove the mother cat away and took possession of the kits. The kittens offered no objection, while the feline mother thought best to keep at a safe distance.

The case was reversed exactly in the instance of a brood of chickens who found a foster mother in a good-natured cat.

Strangest incident of all is that of a collie mother that reared a brood of young foxes, actually suckling them for five or six weeks. —Philadelphia Record.

LUNG DISEASES

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED.

Consumption, Bronchitis, Chronic Pneumonia and Asthma, Nasal, Throat, and Heart Disease.

A scientific discussion of these dread diseases, their cause, treatment, and cure, by Drs. R. & E. W. Hunter, of Chicago, the fathers of inhalation, and most eminent specialists of the day. After a period extending over half a century, Drs. Hunter explain their perfected discovery of a specific remedy for these diseases, and prove its success not only scientifically, but through the grateful testimonials of their patients. The Drs. Hunter were for forty years the sole advocates of the germ theory of consumption, which is now accepted by the medical profession throughout the world as the only correct theory, establishing beyond doubt their superior knowledge of this disease. Readers of THE LIVING CHURCH can obtain their book explaining their treatment without charge, by addressing them at their office, Opera House Bldg., entrance, 112 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

THE DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTIC OF THE VOCALION IS ITS EXQUISITE TONE

THE VOCALION is remarkably well adapted for either the church or the private music-room. It is compact in form, occupying about one-third the space of a pipe-organ of equal capacity, and has a full, rich diapason tone-quality, which, together with great delicacy in the string registers, especially fits it to accompany the human voice. We give here a description of our Style 22, to which we wish to call the attention of all lovers of organ music, whose correspondence we invite.

SEND FOR CATALOG G

SPECIFICATION OF STYLE 22

Compass of Manuals CC to A, 58 Notes. Compass of Pedals CC to F, 30 Notes.

GREAT ORGAN

1. Open Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 2. Melodia, 8 ft., 58 notes. 3. Dulciana, 8 ft., 58 notes. 4. Harmonic Flute, 4 ft., 58 notes. 5. Trumpet, 8 ft., 58 notes.

SWELL ORGAN

6. Stopped Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 7. Eoline, 8 ft., 58 notes. 8. Violin Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 9. Principal, 4 ft., 58 notes.

PEDAL ORGAN

10. Double Open Diapason, 16 ft., 30 notes. 11. Diapason Dolce.

MECHANICAL ACCESSORIES

12. Swell to Great. 13. Octave Coupler Swell to Great. 14. Swell to Pedal. 15. Great to Pedal. 16. Tremulant. 17. Wind-indicator. 18. Bellows-signal.

COMBINATION PEDALS

19. Forte Great. 20. Piano Great. 21. Forte Swell. 22. Piano Swell. 23. Balanced Swell Pedal. 24-25. Great to Pedal, reversible.

The Combination Pedals are double-acting. The blow-lever may be operated from either end of the organ by hand-power or connected with a motor.

Cases in solid quartered oak. Richly finished. Illuminated-pipe front. Dimensions: 7 feet 1 inch front; 10 feet 10 inches high; 41 inches deep.

Vocalions range in price from $275 upward.

THE VOCALION ORGAN COMPANY
No. 18 West Twenty-third Street, New York City
Chicago, Ill.: Lyon & Healy, Wabash Avenue and Adams Street. Boston, Mass.: The M. Steinert & Sons Co., 762 Boylston Street.

FLEMING & CARRICK PRESS, NEW YORK

Shade Won't Work—

Because it isn't mounted on THE IMPROVED HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLER.

A perfect article. No tacks required. Notice name on roller when buying your shades.

Finance and Commerce

It is not improbable that for the time being the volume of the country's business has reached the maximum. Various factors indicate this. In the first place, the bank clearings, while still considerably in excess of last year, show some falling off from preceding months. This is no doubt partially due to a falling off in speculative operations in Wall street and elsewhere. In our foreign trade, the figures are also less attractive than heretofore. Our imports for the month of April were the same as last April, while our exports were eleven millions less. The excess of exports over imports was only 23 million dollars. Last December, the excess was 83 millions, and it has steadily decreased since. This foreshadows exportations of gold, and its probability is already a matter of almost daily conjecture in Wall street. Of course the loss of a few millions in gold won't hurt us; we can stand it, but it is in the wrong direction, and tends to contract confidence, and not to expand it.

Financial matters are running along smoothly. The payments to Spain have been financed without any disturbance at the money centres. The interest rate in New York has even been a little easier the past week, and loans have been made as low as 2½ per cent, though the going rate has generally been 3 to 4 per cent. The banks and capitalists came generously to the rescue of the stock market to protect it from the fright caused by Mr. Flower's death, and prices rallied sharply and have ruled fairly steady since. More or less depression of feeling prevails in respect of the younger stocks, on account of the poor outlook for the wheat crop, and prices are inclined to drag in consequence. In iron, the former activity continues, and prices are maintained. Copper is dull, and while prices are dull, no marked recession has taken place, although buyers are disposed to exhibit patience in buying. Cotton is fairly steady. There is more or less apprehension as to the effects of too abundant rains on the next crop, but so far it has not induced enough speculative buying to establish a bull market.

In manufactured cottons, prices are firm, and in some cases slightly higher. In wool, there is a tendency towards increased activity. Wheat scored an advance last week, and in many quarters the feeling is very strong. Day by day the lamentable condition of the winter wheat crop is being forced on the attention of an unwilling public. Sentiment is against crop failure. People want prosperity, and reject anything that operates against it. The press, the government Agricultural Department, and crop statisticians generally have reluctantly admitted any damage, and have estimated it small as possible, but have all been obliged to steadily modify their views, and increase the percentage of damage with each succeeding report. The facts should be looked squarely in the face. The facts are that the present condition in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and Kansas, the tendency of the crop towards further depreciation by flies, bugs, etc., are such that the promise is for one of the worst failures of the winter wheat crop in many years. So far there is nothing the matter with the spring wheat crop, except that in those sections where the bulk of the crop is grown, the average is 10 to 15 per cent. less than last year. Otherwise, the prospects are, on the whole, favorable.

England's Commerce

THE fact that the United States has overtaken and passed the United Kingdom as an export country, and is now leading the world as a distributor of manufactures and natural products, is discussed at considerable length in an elaborate paper by Sir Robert Giffen, K. C. B., LL.D., F. R. S., recently read before the Royal Statistical Society of England, and just received by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. The paper in question, entitled, "The Excess of Imports," occupies seventy closely printed pages of the journal of the Royal Statistical Society, and

WASHING DISHES

A mountain of dishes confronts the average housewife after all the family have dined. They are greasy dishes, too, and hard to get clean with soap and water. The best, easiest, quickest and cheapest way to wash dishes is to use a little in the dish-water. It acts like magic, cuts the grease and makes the dishes perfectly clean. In fact all cleaning is made easier by this great cleanser, and at half the cost of soap.

GOLD DUST

WASHING POWDER

For greatest economy buy our large package.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

Chicago St. Louis New York Boston

while it primarily discusses the excess of British imports over exports, incidentally gives much attention to the rapid increase in exports of the United States. Discussing this special subject, the paper says:

"There are obvious reasons why the United States should have an excess of exports. In the first place, the United States has to pay in its exports for the share of the carriage of goods in its foreign trade, which is performed by foreign ships. This is a very large figure. In recent years the proportion of the imports and exports of the United States carried in foreign ships has ranged between seventy-five and eighty per cent., so that the United States is a country which has to pay other nations for the carriage of its goods in the foreign trade. It may be mentioned, by the way, that the foreign country which does the carrying trade for the United States is mainly the United Kingdom, and in this difference between the two countries accordingly we have, pro tanto, an explanation of the excess of imports in the case of the United Kingdom, and of the excess of exports in the case of the United States. Next, the United States is a country which owes money in various ways to foreign nations. There is an annual stream of American visitors to Europe, and there is an American colony permanently residing in Europe whose expenses have to be paid for. More important still, a great deal of capital has been invested in the United States by Europeans—by English people, by Dutch people, and Belgians, as well as by French and Germans, not to speak of minor nationalities in Europe. The interest on this debt has of course to be paid in exports, unless to the extent that in any given period re-investments are made in the United States. In these various ways, then, an excess of exports from the United States can be accounted for, and it may be questioned whether in recent years, when the excess of exports was so large, any great withdrawal of capital from the United States was in progress."

Summarizing the causes of the recent changes in the foreign trade of various countries, Mr. Giffen's paper says: "The excess of imports is to be accounted for in the trade of a country like England in several ways, principally by the fact that England is a ship-owning country, and does a large business all over the world in carrying goods and passengers. This work is really in itself in the nature of an export, giving the country a credit for so much in its dealings with other countries. In addition, England is a country which earns largely commissions of different kinds in its trade with different countries as the commercial and monetary centre of the world's trade."

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe St., near Dearborn.

F. G. LOGAN

MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.

4 B'd Trade, Chicago.
Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.

R. G. GEISSLER, & Marble and Metal Work.
124 Clinton Place, bet. 5th and 6th Ave., New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

The Luetke Church Art Works,

Tract Building and 41 University Pl., New York City.

MANUFACTURERS IN ALL LINES OF
CHURCH OR MONUMENTAL WORK.

We have the latest, cheapest, and best designs in this country. Write to us.

CHURCH and CHANCEL FURNITURE OF ALL KINDS

PHOENIX FURNITURE CO., Eau Claire, Wis.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.

Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

To the founding of our
"BLUMFELT" CHURCH BELLS.
we bring many years of experience in metals and models, with the result that in them we offer at exceedingly moderate prices, instruments without a rival in their happy blending of volume and sweetness.

The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Please mention this paper.

RUBBER STAMPS.....

AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.
Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils,
Datums, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

"WE AND OUR TOUR ECONOMIC"

Is the title of a very charming and entertainingly written story which has just been issued in book form by the Passenger Department of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y. The intending summer tourist will find it not only interesting but instructive. It will be sent free to any address, on application to F. M. BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago. A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

FOR PUDDINGS, CUSTARDS, BLANC MANGE, ETC.

NO OTHER EQUALS IT IN PURITY AND DELICACY.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889,
AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.

THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS,

Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park, New York.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

Aids digestion, clears the head, and increases energy. At all druggists. 50c. and $1.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD

Chicago & Alton R.R.
PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

CHICAGO AND KANSAS CITY.
CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS.
CHICAGO AND PEORIA.
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY.

Through Pullman service between Chicago and

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., DENVER, Colo.,
TEXAS, FLORIDA, UTAH,
CALIFORNIA AND OREGON.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

JAMES CHARLTON,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

GRAVY. DO NOT SERVE IT ON THE DINNER-TABLE BEFORE YOU HAVE ADDED A TABLE-SPOONFUL OF LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

The Original and Genuine Worcestershire.

LEA & PERRINS' IS THE FAVORITE TABLE SAUCE
THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.-SEE SIGNATURE ON WRAPPER.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AGTS., NEW YORK.

Window Boxes

TO those who have not yet attempted to raise flowers in this way, the following hints may make them anxious to try their hands at it. It is certainly worth a trial, if there is a window in the house you may call your own. The expense is trifling, and the pleasure derived from the blossoms and your care of them continues through the summer.

The first thing necessary is a wooden box as long and as wide as the space permits; it should be about one inch thick and eight inches deep. Paint the outside a dark brown or a dark green. In the sides of the box, quite near the bottom, make a few little holes to allow superfluous water to escape. The box may then be fastened to the woodwork of the window with iron brackets, which can easily be made and adjusted.

A layer, about three inches deep, of large cinders, broken charcoal, or broken crockery is put in the box, which is then nearly filled with any fairly good mould—no special mixture is necessary. On top of this a somewhat richer soil is placed. Rub some stable manure into small pieces, and add one-third of this to two-thirds of the mould, with a little lime to sweeten it, and the result is an excellent top soil, easily obtained and inexpensive.

In selecting the flowers for the window garden, taste must be exercised in their combination, if the box is to be a thing of beauty. The best effects are obtained by putting but one or two kinds of plants in each box, though there is no objection to a plant or two of Virginia or Japanese creeper on either side, to run about the box, inside and out, and to climb up the sides of the window. When a variety of plants are put into one box together, it invariably happens that the strongest of the lot takes possession of the soil and smothers the weaker things.

The scarlet-flowered geraniums are very showy plants for this purpose, and combined with Virginia creeper, and the deep blue of the periwinkle, make a most attractive window box.

In caring for these plants during the summer, it is necessary that the moisture should be applied to the parts above the ground, as well as those beneath it. The roots of the plants should be watered each evening after the sun goes down, and about three times a week a sponge dipped in water and squeezed over them will help them to thrive by cleansing them from dust and opening their pores.—The American Queen.

FROM PHILADELPHIA: "I would not be without THE LIVING CHURCH for a good deal. It is a most welcome visitor at my house, and the week has something lacking when I do not get a look at it."

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"A HANDFUL OF DIRT MAY BE A HOUSEFUL OF SHAME."

Clean House with

SAPOLIO

The Ideal Resting Place

is the PENNOYER SANITARIUM, at Kenosha, Wis. Write for booklet.

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY.

We are the largest makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELLHART HARNESS & CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Gail Borden BEST INFANT FOOD. Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.
FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

Don't let your baby be pale and listless. Give him Mellin's Food, and see how healthy, happy, and bright he will be.

This Elegant Rocker..

Is made of Quarter-sawed Oak or Mahogany finished, is finely carved, and has high back. It is full spring, upholstered and box seat, covered with silk velours in all the popular shades.

This durable Rocker is exactly like cut and is the best value ever offered to the public. Regular $4.50—our price for this sale ONLY $2.50 cash with order. Write for our 120 page furniture catalogue, free.

...Established 1878...

J. STOREY FURNITURE CO.
331-33 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.

Best Line to Denver

Burlington
Route

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

The Living Church

A Weekly Record of the News, the Work, and the Thought of the Church

Children of Light

BY HENRY FAULENER DARNELL, D. D.

Within the firmament outspread above
Are worlds of light ;
So, here on earth—dear objects of His love—
God's saints beam bright.

Not with a grace and splendor of their own
They, beauteous, shine ;
They but reflect the glory of His throne,
Through grace divine.

Not in a self-directed path they move
With constant tread ;
But in the course mapped out by His dear love,
Their light is shed.

And as we watch them on their noiseless way
Serenely go,
We see stern hearts yield to their gentle sway,
And milder grow.

We see the load by feeble hands upborne,
Become more light ;
And souls despondent, loveless, and forlorn,
Grow strong and bright.

Anon, the faithless murmur of complaint
Dies on the air ;
While from the wanderer—weary still, and faint—
Comes Faith's soft prayer.

We see the board, too often scant and bare,
Blest by content ;
The forehead, still too deeply lined with care,
No longer bent ;

And drooping spirits, burdened overmuch,
Uprise and stand,
As if a "virtue" dwelt in each soft touch
Of their dear hand.

And as we view these earthly forms of light
Thus gently move,
They seem more dear to us, more purely bright
Than those above.

For, like ourselves, these once were dark and chill
As winter night ;
Until the Voice came forth each soul to thrill—
"Let there be light !"

Then rolled the dark and brooding clouds away—
Chaos was o'er ;
Order and beauty came with break of day,
To part no more.

Conflicting passions ceased ; confused desires,
Aims purposeless,
Died down. The soul came forth, as purged
The world to bless. [with fires,

* * * * *
E'en as we view those cloudless realms above—
All fair and still—
And see those messengers of His dear love
His Word fulfill ;

So here below, throughout life's changeful scene,
Each in its place,
These, His "light-bearers"—few and far be-Reflect His Face. [tween—

Avon, N. Y.

DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH.

Trinity Hall, Washington, Pa.

A SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

VISITORS:

RT. REV. CORTLANDT WHITEHEAD, D. D., Bishop of Pittsburgh.
HON. MARCUS W. ACHESON, LL. D., Judge U. S. Circuit Court, Pittsburgh.
HON. JOSEPH BUFFINGTON, LL. D., Judge U. S. District Court, Pittsburgh.

WM. W. SMITH, A.M., Rector, with a Full Corps of Instructors.

Twentieth year. Number of pupils limited.

A large corps of able teachers, selected from the best schools of this country, on account of their polished manners, as well as their success in teaching. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Choral Morning and Evening Prayer (shortened service) daily in the school chapel. Our graduates, having been trained in purity and truth, take a high place in college or in business.

Forty acres of beautiful park. Daily military and calisthenic drill. Proper attention paid to athletics, under an expert master.

All the surroundings are elevating and refining.

Rev. Dr. Allison says: "Trinity Hall is one of the best Boarding Schools in this country. In its location, buildings, sanitary arrangements, food, teachers, and course of instruction it is unsurpassed."

TERMS, $500.00.

For catalogues or further information, apply to WM. W. SMITH, Esq., Rector and Proprietor of Trinity Hall, Washington, Pennsylvania.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

It means that Ivory Soap is as pure as it is possible to make it; it means too, that if Ivory Soap is used, there are no complaints of new, or nearly new, clothing coming from the wash, "worn out."

One adulterant of poor soap is alkali. Pure soap washes out the dirt, alkali burns and eats it out and it does not stop with the dirt.

Have your laundress use only Ivory Soap, and see how much longer the clothes last.

Copyright, 1896, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

ONE PLEASED SUBSCRIBER

writes of the Prayer Book and Hymnal which we offer to anyone sending Two New Subscriptions to The Living Church:

"Many thanks for the Prayer Book and Hymnal. They are exceedingly handsome and worth double the number of new subscribers the offer calls for."
N. L. C.

These combination sets actually sell for $5 each. Send us two new subscriptions, plus 20 cents for carriage, and we will send you one.

THE LIVING CHURCH,
55 Dearborn St., Chicago.

ST. MARY'S

KNOXVILLE, ILL.

Founded 1868; Re-built 1883. (Incorporated.)

Preparatory, Special, Collegiate, and Art Courses.

ST. MARY'S is noted for the beauty of its buildings and grounds, the completeness and elegance of its equipment for its efficient discipline and accomplished instructors. Its graduates stand high among the educated women of the nation. The Music Department is under the direction of Wm. H. Sherwood, of Chicago. Physical and Social Culture receive special attention.

Rev. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, D.D.,

Rector and Founder.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

MR. H. HARRISON, BRITISH COMMERCIAL attache at Madrid, has forwarded to his government an interesting statement as to Spanish commercial conditions, showing that the industries of that country, aside from colonial trade, did not suffer as much during the war as was feared. The loss of the colonial markets on which the export trade of Spain greatly depended, has made it necessary for the government to take serious steps for finding new markets for Spanish products, and for stimulating and enlarging those already known. With this intention, several important measures have been instituted. A special sub-department in the ministry of foreign affairs has been created for the purpose of supplying commercial information and statistics to merchants and tradesmen. Morocco and the Spanish-American republics naturally offer the most promising markets for Spanish products, owing to the affinity of race, language, and customs, and to these countries the attention of the Spanish government is especially directed. Commercial attaches have been appointed for Mexico, Brazil, Uruguay, the Argentine Republic, and Chile, and all possible steps are being taken to increase Spanish interest in these countries. A general assembly of the Spanish chambers of commerce was held at Saragossa Nov. 20th, to discuss the commercial position of the country. The meeting was held under the most orderly conditions, and the efforts were treated with respect by the government and caused a good impression in the country, and a petition embodying the opinions of the chambers was duly presented to the queen regent. Although it has as yet led to no practical result, the fact that the assembly has been held at all is a proof of the general anxiety among a large and influential portion of the nation to take immediate steps for the improvement of trade.

—X—

ADVICES FROM PARIS ARE IN EFFECT that the president of the Civil Section of the Court of Cassation has reported to the President of the court, M. Mazeau, in favor of a revision of the Dreyfus trial and sending the prisoner again before a court martial. It is believed the report will be accepted by the court, and should this be the case, Dreyfus will be brought back to France for trial. The verdict of the court is expected by June 3d. A new trial, if honestly conducted, must result in the acquittal, as it has been amply demonstrated that his conviction was secured only by gross fraud. The celebrated case had its inception in September, 1894, and was based upon torn fragments of a letter sent to the German military attache. Two French officers of the general staff suggested the connection of Dreyfus with the letter, and from their suggestion grew his arrest, degradation, and imprisonment. From this suggestion also arose political intrigues that overthrown ministries, compelled the resignation of a president of the republic, drove the novelist Zola into exile, and even threatened the overthrow of the republic.

—X—

AFTER AN EXPERIMENT COVERING A period of several weeks, the Sunday editions of the London Mail and the Telegraph have been discontinued. Mere announcement of the fact that Sunday editions would be issued, raised a protest too strong to be ignored, and this wave of disapproval caused editors of both papers in question to announce withdrawal of the obnoxious editions. This does not mean that London is without Sunday papers, for there are publications issued only for that day, but there are now no Sunday editions of the great dailies. This condition is in strong contrast to that existing in our own country where daily papers are, as a rule, run strictly upon a commercial basis, and could not exist without the revenue derived from ponderous Sunday editions filled mainly with page bargain announcements. It can hardly be said that Sunday journalism, divested of its commercial features, would be self-sustaining. It is also a notable fact that the two most successful merchants in the country, John Wanamaker, of New York and Philadelphia, and Marshall Field, of Chicago, have naught to do with the advertising columns of the Sunday papers.

—X—

IT IS ANNOUNCED FROM NEW YORK that the preliminaries looking toward the formation of a gigantic trust in the manufacture and control of automobile vehicles in the United States, are well advanced, and that within a reasonable time all the auto-truck companies and sub-companies throughout the United States, will be centred in the head concern which is to have offices in this city. The new company will operate under the patents of the Hoadley-Knight system, controlled by the International Power company, and the New York Auto-Truck company, of New York. The new company will be formed by increasing the capital of the Auto Truck company, which is now $10,000,000 to $200,000,000 or more. This is doing very well, considering the fact that so far the operations of both companies involved are confined almost wholly to paper.

—X—

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE plays an important part in the development of our agricultural resources. The latest project to engage attention is the tea-growing industry. "It is only a question of time," says Secretary Wilson, "when the South produces all the tea the people in the United States want. This department proposes to push experimentation along that line. We intend to establish a tea farm in every Southern State as soon as that can be done intelligently. We propose to get the finest varieties of tea to be found in the Orient, and to have the planting done where growth can be forced through irrigation, so as to get plenty of tender shoots. The young people of the South can earn enough to clothe and board themselves during the school period by picking tea. Mr. Shepard, of Somerville, S. C., has fifty acres cultivated as a tea farm. He told his colored neighbors that he would build them a schoolhouse and provide a teacher for their children free of cost, if they would agree to let the children pick tea leaves for him twice a week, at a reasonable rate of wages for their time. That has succeeded. The children are getting their education and are earning enough to maintain themselves."

—X—

EFFORTS ARE MAKING TO ARRIVE AT an agreement which will go far toward settling differences between the Boers of the Transvaal republic and the Uitlanders, or foreign residents. Ever since the Jameson raid, and even for some time previous, it has been apparent that some sort of settlement was necessary, in order to avert serious trouble. The recent arrest of eight men, alleged at one time to have been British officers, on the charge of organizing a revolt against the Boer government, created great excitement in South Africa, but as the men had no connection with the British government, the incident did nothing more than emphasize the spirit of unrest. Foreigners in the Transvaal have just grounds for grievance, inasmuch as they are denied civil rights, prevented from carrying arms, and forced in other ways to submit to intolerable treatment. They are not permitted to hold public meetings, and, although contributing almost the entire tax of the country, have no voice in the manner of its expenditure, nor do they receive any of its privileges. The Boers have not failed in taking every precaution to restrict foreign energy and enterprise.

—X—

THE OPERATION OF THE NEW LAW governing trusts, recently enacted by the Legislature of Texas, will be awaited with considerable interest, as it is by far the most drastic put forth by the governing body of any State. The law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1900, provides that every combination of capital, or its equivalent, for the restraint of trade, whether organized under the laws of Texas, or any other State, doing business within the State, is deemed a trust or monopoly. The giving away of any article, or selling it for less than cost, for the purpose of preventing free competition in manufacture or distribution is prohibited. Refusal to buy of or sell to any person because he is not a member of a combination, is prohibited. Combinations for the regulation of insurance are prohibited. Violators of the Act are subject to a loss of their charters, or prohibited from doing business within the State, and are subject to a fine of $200 to $5,000 for each offense. Each day's business is a separate offense. Prosecutors are given one-fourth of the penalties. All court business may be set aside for the trial of a case under the act. Purchasers of articles manufactured by violators of the law, cannot be obliged to pay for them. Each corporation is required yearly to state under oath whether it is in any pool. Failure to answer, or to answer within thirty days, is considered evidence of guilt. All associations for the collection of news or its distribution which refuse to sell to all applicants, are considered guilty without extenuation.

—X—

JUDGING FROM PROCEEDINGS OF THE Peace Conference at The Hague, one probable outcome is the establishment of a permanent international tribunal, open to all nations, for the settlement of their differences. No attempt will be made to give any disputant power to bring its adversary before the court. But the latter, emanating from an international conference, will be open, thus making possible amicable settlements of disputes. A question brought up by American delegates, of the right of seizure of private property at sea, has excited the attention of the conference, and created considerable opposition, on the ground that it is a subject not covered in the circular under which the conference was called. The National Council of American Women, representing over a million persons, has sent its greetings, and in the week in which the conference met no fewer than three-score and ten meetings were held in fourteen States, for the purpose of bidding the conference Godspeed in its labors. These greetings, added to those of seventeen other nations, were collected into a memorial from the women of the world.

The News of the Church

Canada

Diocese of Huron

A large number of the clergy were present at the ordination service in St. Paul's cathedral London, May 1st. Archdeacon Davis presented the candidates, two for Deacons', and three for Priests' Orders. There was a large audience at the meeting to consider missionary work in Algoma, in new St. Paul's church, Woodstock, on the 9th. Addresses were given by Bishop Baldwin and the Bishop of Algoma. The usual May meeting of the Sunday School and Lay Workers Association, of the deanery of Middlesex, was merged in the archidiaconal conference arranged for Whitsun week, May 28d, and held at St. John's church, London township, the archdeacon of London presiding. Proceedings began with Morning Prayer and Holy Communion; at the afternoon session there was discussion of the subject, "Pastoral visiting," "Christian liberality," and "Church growth and expansion." Evensong and sermon by the Bishop concluded the day. The Bishop conducted the re-opening services of the church at Bothwell, May 7th. Reports read at the adjourned meeting of the vestry of St. John's church, Preston, were very satisfactory. Several improvements to church and grounds are to be made this summer. A very fine property has been purchased for the rectory of St. John's, West London.

Diocese of Ontario

Archbishop Lewis sailed for Canada, May 5th. Bishop Hamilton, of Ottawa, held Confirmations for him in Kingston on May 7th, at St. James', All Saints', and St. Paul's. The liberal contribution to the Diocesan Augmentation Fund from the parish in Wolfe Island amounted to $867. The building committee of St. George's cathedral, Kingston, have decided to go on with the work, although the funds are not yet sufficient. The contract for the carpenter's work was given at the committee meeting on May 1st. The church at Carleton place has been wired for lighting with incandescent lamps, which will be a great improvement. Choral Evensong was rendered for the first time in St. James', Kingston, on May 7th. This church has already given $1,500 towards the Diocesan Endowment Fund.

Diocese of Niagara

It has been decided that the synod of the diocese shall begin its next meeting June 7th, in Christ church cathedral, Hamilton. The corner stone of the new church at Campbell's Cross was to be laid by Premier Hardy on May 30th. There were a large number of delegates and clergy present at the Sunday school convention at Arthur, on May 2nd. The deanery of Halton held a Sunday school convention at Milton, on the 9th. The session opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion. Bishop Du Moulin preached.

Diocese of Quebec

The installation of the Dean of Quebec, and his induction as rector of the cathedral, were arranged to take place on May 26th, in the cathedral, at 8 o'clock in the evening. The new dean is the Rev. Lennox Williams, son of the late revered Bishop Williams, of Quebec. The induction of the Rev. F. G. Scott as rector of St. Matthew's church, Quebec, was to take place May 25th, in the evening. There would be early Celebrations in each church on the morning of the 25th and 26th. Plans for the improvement of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, have been made, and are intended to form the general memorial of the late Mr. Robert Hamilton, of Quebec, whose name and benefactions will be set forth on a memorial brass to be erected opposite the principal entrance. The Bishop of Quebec and Senator Price, of that city, have each promised $2,000 towards the memorial fund. Dr. Adams, principal of Bishop's College, has sailed for England with his family, to spend the summer holidays. The Quebec synod will meet on June 7th.

Diocese of Montreal

Bishop Bond held a Confirmation at St. Martin's church, Montreal, on the evening of Ascension Day. The continued illness of the rector, the Rev. Osborne Troop, is causing much sorrow. The Bishop also held a Confirmation on the 12th, at the Eglise du Redempteur, and afterwards presided over the closing exercises of the Sabrevois College, which adjoins the church. The annual convocation of the Montreal Theological College took place May 2nd, the Bishop presiding. Addresses were given by Principal Hackett, Dean Carmichael, and others. The Rev. E. C. Paget, M. A., lately rector of Muscatine, Iowa, preached at the church of St. John the Evangelist, Montreal, May 7th. Principal Hackett will officiate at St. Mary's church, Beaconsfield, during the summer. The first Montreal company of the Boys' Brigade was organized in 1892, and it has done good work, as the following resolution from the vestry of St. Jude's church shows:

That a hearty vote of thanks be tendered to the officers and members of the First Montreal Company of the Boys' Brigade, for their very valuable aid and assistance in the work of the Church during the past year.

The Bishop will make his usual summer visitation of the country parishes in June and July.

Theological Seminary Commencements

Western Theological Seminary

The commencement exercises were held at the cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, Chicago, on the evening of May 24th. The Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour presided, having kindly come up from Springfield for the purpose. Evening Prayer was sung by the Ven. Archdeacon Taylor and the well-trained cathedral choir. The annual sermon was delivered by the Rev. Charles P. Anderson, of Oak Park, and was a powerful and eloquent plea for the development of the teaching office of the Christian priest. The diplomas were conferred by Bishop Seymour who gave his blessing to each recipient, and addressed to the class a few stirring words of exhortation and warning in view of the vocation upon which they were about to enter. The Rev. F. W. Keator, on behalf of the alumni, announced the decision of the committee on the alumni prize. It was awarded to Mr. Selden P. Delany. The graduating class consisted of Messrs. Harold E. Addison, Frank E. Brandt, Selden P. Delany, Webster Hakes, and the Rev. Chas. J. Shutt. Of these gentlemen, two are graduates of Harvard and one of Yale. The annual meeting of the alumni was held at the seminary on Thursday morning, followed by a service in the chapel, at which the Rev. H. R. Neely was the preacher. The alumni dinner took place at the Sherman House at 1:30 P. M. Besides a good attendance of the members of the association, several of the clergy were present as guests. Speeches were made, and the pleasure of the occasion was enhanced by references to the triumphs of the past year, in the selection of two bishops from the alumni of the Western Theological Seminary. It is believed that this is a record which has not been exceeded by any theological school of the Church, when we remember that this is but the 14th year of the "Western." There is great confidence felt by their old fellow-students that the administration of the two new Bishops in North Dakota and Nebraska will, in future years, add increasing lustre to the school in which they were trained.

General Theological Seminary

The 20th annual report of the Very Rev. Eugene A. Hoffman, D. D., D. C. L., presented to the board of trustees, summarizes the results of his two decades of labor: "During these years by the blessing of God and the generous contribution of friends of theological education, the students have increased in number from 86 to 154, the professors from 6 to 10; to the old stone buildings have been added the beautiful chapel, the fire-proof library, Sherred Hall with its commodious lecture rooms, the noble refectory and gymnasium, six dormitories, the deanery and five houses for professors, at a cost of $700,000, while the endowment has grown from about $100,000, to more than a million and a quarter dollars, making the total property of the seminary considerably over $2,000,000." The report recounted some of the gifts of the past year from various sources, particularly those which have enriched the library, and referred to a portrait of the late Prof. Oliver, painted at the order of a number of his friends, and of a purple velvet pall from his family. Though not publicly announced, it is known that $40,000 toward the cost of the new Eigenbrodt Hall was given by the dean, who also gave $15,000 for the purchase of the Mazarin Bible—thus swelling his already princely beneficence to the institution. The trustees, in accepting the resignation of the Rev. Dr. Hall as professor of Hebrew, elected him professor emeritus, with a pension for life. The trustees noted the distinguished services of Dean Hoffman in the following resolutions:

In view of the completion of the twentieth year of service of the Very Rev. Eugene A. Hoffman, D. D., LL. D., D. C. L., as dean of the General Theological Seminary, and also as a recognition of the remarkable work accomplished during the last 10 years under his administration, for the cause of theological education, the trustees of the seminary, now in session, desire to put on record this expression of their appreciation of his invaluable services, and their high regard for his personal character.

The seminary, which represents the Church in the United States, has had an unparalleled development, as the increase in the number of students, professors, scholarships, fellowships, and branches of instruction, its buildings and endowments, and the increase of its library, abundantly testify.

The observer, contrasting Chelsea Square of to-day, with the two, plain gray stone buildings of twenty years ago, cannot but be filled with admiration at the extraordinary development into the spacious and dignified pile which ornaments the grounds of this historic site.

As the eye rests on deanery, halls, library, professors' houses, refectory, and the richly adorned chapel, all suggestive of the great scholastic centres of England, we realize that substantial foundations have been laid for the education of those who are to be the prophets and teachers of the twentieth century. No nobler example of loving labor and sacrifice is found in the American Church—an example which has inspired others to emulation in generosity, liberality, and devotion. And we note with special pleasure not only this material development, but also a corresponding advance in sacred learning, ministerial culture, and spiritual power.

The cordial relations between the dean and trustees during this period of twenty years, have been uninterrupted, and have grown stronger as years have passed.

We feel that God has raised up His servant as a chosen vessel to further the great work committed to this seminary, and we pray the dean may be spared to us for many years to come.

The Associate Alumni met on Tuesday. After a brief service in the chapel, conducted by the Rev. George R. Van De Water, D. D., an address was delivered by the Rev. J. Lewis Parks, D. D., on "The ethics of faith," and one on "The Higher Criticism of the Bible," by the Rev. Prof. Richey, D. D. The annual alumni banquet was held in the evening at Flouret's restaurant, many felicitous speeches being made. On Wednesday morning the commencement proper took place. The trustees, faculty, alumni, visiting clergy and students, Bishops Scarborough, of New Jersey, Potter, of New York, and Satterlee, of Washington, went in procession to the chapel. After religious services, three of the graduating class read essays, Mr. Edward Ellerbe Cobbs, of Alabama, on "Christ and Buddha"; Mr. Franklin Emerson Smith, of Western New York, on "In what sense are the truths of Christianity fixed and immovable, and in what sense are they susceptible of development?" and Mr. John Chamberlain Ward, of the same diocese, on "The contribution of the humanistic movement to the life of the Church." The 32 graduates were then presented with their diplomas by the Bishop of Washington. The Bishop of New Jersey addressed the class. The degree of bachelor of divinity awarded last year was formally conferred upon the Rev. Hugo Rodan, Ph.D., fellow of the seminary, and upon the Rev. Messrs. Francis Samuel White, Thomas Frederick Davies, Jr., Wm. Palmer Ladd, Harvey Officer, and John Kichinosuki Ochial. Award was made of the same degree to be conferred next year upon Messrs. Edward Ellerbee Cobbs, Richard Daniel Hatch, Samuel Beasley, Linnard Innes, George Freeland Peter, Albert Glenn Richards, De Barney Thorne Phillips, Edward Henry Schlueter, Louis Thibon Scofield, Franklin Emerson Smith, William Postell Witsell, Samuel Alston Wragg, and John Chamberlain Ward. At the conclusion of the exercises, the procession made its way to the site of the new Hoffman Hall, the corner stone of which was laid by the Bishop of New York. The commencement dinner followed, Dean Hoffman presiding. Addresses were made by Bishop Scarborough, the Rev. Mr. Royce, chaplain of Admiral Sampson's flagship the "New York," the Rev. Dr. C. S. Olmsted, the Rev. Charles L. Hutchins, and the Rev. Samuel M. Haskins, D.D., of Brooklyn, the oldest surviving alumnus. At night, reunions took place of the classes of '69 and '74.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

There was a supplementary Confirmation at the cathedral on the 29th ult.

The Rev. A. L. Williams, Bishop-elect to the coadjutorship of Nebraska, returned on Sunday morning from a three days' visit to Omaha, the see city, and Lincoln, the State capital. He is expected to make known his reply to the call in a few days. The official notification from the convention of Nebraska was made to him on the 23d, by the committee named for the purpose by the Bishop of that diocese.

At St. Peter's, Chicago, on Sunday evening, the Rev. Dr. Stone preached, and the choir of St. James', under Mr. Smedley, assisted that of St. Peter's, under Mr. Thomas. Appropriate sermons were preached in many of our churches on the 28th, being the Sunday preceding Decoration Day, Farragut Post attending the evening service at Grace church, when the Rev. E. M. Stires spoke feelingly of the union of the North and South effected by the late war.

The Rev. Professor Hall and the Rev. J. M. Chattin are leaving for a few months' vacation on the other side of the Atlantic.

St. Andrew's Brotherhood

On the 23rd there was an excellent meeting of the local assembly in Christ church, Woodlawn, addressed by the Rev. Dr. Lloyd, of Cleveland, from the text, "For their sakes I sanctify myself," in which personal purity was insisted upon. Light refreshments were served, and a conference on the junior brotherhood set for June 28th, in the church of the Epiphany.

Ninth Anniversary of the Rev. Mr. Matrau

On Trinity Sunday the Rev. B. F. Matrau observed the ninth anniversary of his rectorship of St. Bartholomew's, Englewood, reviewing the nine years' work there, and reading a letter from the Bishop commendatory of the same. The Rev. Joseph M. Magrath was the evening preacher.

Prosperity of Emmanuel Parish, LaGrange

At the recent parish meeting of Emmanuel, LaGrange, the total value of the property was reported as $76,000, or $86,000 over all liabilities. The year's expenditures had been $12,000; and a most excellent showing being given, the old wardens, Messrs. D. B. Lyman and P. S. Eustis, were re-elected, as were nearly all the old vestrymen.

Minute on St. Ansgarius' Parish, Chicago

The clergy of the North-Eastern Deanery of the diocese of Chicago, assembled for their spring convocation in St. Ansgarius' church, Chicago, cannot allow the day to pass over without recording the interest they felt in the Semi-Centennial Anniversary of the Founding of St. Ansgarius' parish, which has just taken place. They feel justly proud that this diocese first organized the work to provide for the Swedes desiring Church privileges, parishes where they would feel at home. Of all the efforts made in that direction, St. Ansgarius', Chicago, has been the most successful.

The assembled clergy congratulate their muchesteemed and earnest brother, the Rev. Herman Lindskog, on the prosperity and ever-increasing success of the parish he so acceptably serves, and they pray that many more may be the years of his happy rectorship.

They extend to the congregation of St. Ansgarius the assurance of the deep interest felt by all the Churchmen of Chicago in their well-being, and their fraternal wishes that this parish may be able, under its strong leadership, to do a noble work for our Lord and Master among the Swedes of Chicago and the North-West.

The committee appointed by the deanery is directed to have a copy of this minute sent to the rector, wardens, and vestry of St. Ansgarius' church, and to secure the publication of the same in THE LIVING CHURCH.

CLINTON LOCKE.
ARTHUR W. LITTLE.
ARTHUR L. WILLIAMS. } Committee.

May, 1899.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Rev. C. W. de Lyon Nichols has abandoned the Communion of the Church. Bishop Potter announced his deposition from the priesthood May 24th.

A special service was held on Trinity Sunday, at St. James' church, for the alumnae and friends of St. Catherine's Hall. The preacher was the Rev. James C. Morris.

A Retreat was conducted at St. Mary's church, Castleton, during the last three days of Whitsun week, for the candidates for Holy Orders of this diocese who were to be ordained on Trinity Sunday.

At Columbia University, the library has received $1,500 from Mr. W. C. Schermerhorn, for the purpose of increasing its collections. From another source, about 2,000 volumes have been secured.

Among the many churches in New York city that will be open during the summer months, June, July, August, and September, will be the church of the Incarnation, 35th st. and Madison ave. The services on Sundays will be at 8, 11, and 5 o'clock, under the charge of the Rev. Thos. F. Davies, Jr., during the absence of the rector.

Memorial of Rev. Thos. McKee Brown

At the church of St. Mary the Virgin, it is proposed to erect a memorial to the late rector, the Rev. Thos. McKee Brown, in the form of an altar tomb.

Improvements for St. James' Church

During the summer months, while the rector, the Rev. E. Walpole Warren, D.D., is absent in Europe, new stained glass windows will be put in the chancel, and the floors will be paved with tiling.

Church Temperance Legion

At the annual competitive drill and athletic contest held at the armory of the 71st Regiment, May 20th, the company of Grace church was successful in winning the highest number of points, and in securing the year's banner.

The 75th anniversary of All Saints

All Saints' church, the Rev. Dr. Dunnell, rector, celebrated, with appropriate exercises on Trinity Sunday, its 75th anniversary. At night, addresses were delivered. The celebration was continued on Monday.

Memorial of Stephen P. Nash

At Trinity chapel of Trinity parish, the Rev. Wm. H. Vibbert, D.D., vicar, a memorial of the late Stephen P. Nash, of Trinity vestry, was presented on Whitsunday, in the shape of a fine processional cross, for the use of the vested choir.

Anniversary of St. Andrew's, Yonkers

The fifth anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's memorial church, Yonkers, was observed by a special service on Whitsunday. On Monday, May 22d, a reception was held at the parish house, and the next day the children had a celebration.

Grace Church Summer Home

The new summer home of Grace church, located at Stamford, Conn., on the shores of Long Island Sound, held its house warming May 23d, a large number of people being present. The dedicatory services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Wm. R. Huntington who was accompanied by a number of the parishioners who have been particularly interested in this enterprise.

Church Army Temperance Work

The Church Army has decided to open a series of "bars" for the sale of tea, the first to be located in Allen st. The object is to promote temperance. Instructions as to tea-making, and the benefits of tea-drinking, will be sent free into the homes of all who wish. Tea will be supplied at a cent a glass, and families supplied in large quantities at even lower rates, only the best quality being used.

Committee on Marriage and Divorce

The special committee of the House of Deputies of the General Convention on marriage and divorce, met at Trinity chapel, May 25th. The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, president of the House of Deputies, who was appointed on the committee by special action of the House, acted as chairman. There were also present, the Rev. Drs. Fulton, of Philadelphia; Lobdell, of Buffalo; Eccleston, of Baltimore, and Hoffman, of the General Theological Seminary. Also Messrs. Francis L. Stetson, of New York; Francis A. Lewis, of Philadelphia, and Clarence H. Stanley, of Washington. Three members of the committee were absent. Although the proceedings were held with closed doors, it is understood that each member in turn was asked to state his general views on the proposed canonical action which the committee was appointed to consider, and that with slight variations of opinion, a remarkable degree of unanimity was found to exist. The committee, after transacting preliminary business, adjourned to meet again in New York, Oct. 4th.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

D. C. Walsh, M.D., one of the wardens at St. Matthew's church, Francisville, has retired after 16 years of active service.

At the opening of the new Somerton Hills Cemetery, May 25th, prayer was said by the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Jr., and the dedication conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. Ellis Stevens.

At the memorial church of the Advocate, the Rev. W. W. Silvester, D.D., rector, a very handsomely carved stone eagle, forming a desk for the stone pulpit, has just been placed in position.

Bishop Whitaker held his Trinity ordination at the memorial church of the Advocate, on Trinity Sunday morning, ordaining six to the diaconate and advancing ten deacons to the priesthood. The preacher was the Rev. Prof. Micou, D.D., of the Theological Seminary of Virginia.

Woman's Auxilliary

The annual meeting of the Woman's Auxilliary of the convocation of Chester, was held on May 25th, at St. Stephen's church, Norwood. The session began with a celebration of the Holy Eucharist. A business meeting followed.

The 78th Anniversary of a Sunday School

At Trinity church, Southwark, the Rev. H. F.

Fuller, rector, the 73th anniversary of the Sunday school was celebrated Trinity Sunday, the name day of the parish. The preacher was the Rev. Joseph N. Blanchard, D. D.

Law and Order Society

At the 17th annual meeting, held May 30th, at the parish house of the church of the Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, addresses were made by the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Mr. Robert Graham, general secretary of the Church Temperance Society, and others.

Church of the Good Samaritan, Paoli

The Rev. Geo. A. Keller has just formally opened a new south aisle, some 43 ft. in length by 11 in width, much adding to the attractiveness and seating capacity of the church. It opens into the nave by a series of arches of stone.

St. Paul's Church, West Philadelphia

The former priest-in charge has been constituted its duly elected rector, the Rev. I. Newton Stanger, D. D., and a regular vestry has been elected. The new parish, which has long existed in a primitive condition, has a fine property free of indebtedness.

New Site for St. John's, Lansdowne

Being, in the opinion of its vestry, undesirably located, the parish has decided to erect a new edifice on a new site. Towards the funds necessary to carry out this design, Mr. Henry C. Statzwell has pledged the sum of $10,000, on condition that a like sum be raised by the parishioners.

Presentation to Col. O. C. Boshyshell

The Sunday school of the church of the Saviour, the Rev. Wm. B. Bodine, D. D., rector, has presented a handsomely-bound volume, with engrossed minute of appreciation, to Col. Oliver C. Boshyshell, in recognition of his nearly 30 year's connection with the school, the superintendency of which he has felt compelled to relinquish.

Choir Anniversary

At the church of the Holy Spirit, the Rev. S. H. Boyer, rector, the sixth anniversary of the choir was celebrated Trinity Sunday. An elaborate musical programme was rendered, under the direction of Mr. Herbert M. Boyer. Addresses were made by Messrs. John E. Baird, Mr. Lewis H. Redner, and the Rev. Herman L. Duhring.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew

The Philadelphia assembly held a conference at Calvary church, Conshohocken, on May 25th. In the afternoon, the Rev. R. W. Forsyth, Mr. Mahlon H. Kline, and others, discussed the topic, "The Brotherhood chapter in the parish—helps and hindrances." Supper was served by ladies of the parish. In the evening, a special service was held, with a sermon by the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins. This is the last conference of the Brotherhood assembly until autumn.

Reception to Rev. Dr. Falkner

An informal reception was tendered to the Rev. Dr. John B. Falkner, Mrs. Falkner, and their daughter, May 25th, by parishioners of Christ church, Germantown, of which parish Dr. Falkner had been rector about 25 years, at the time of his recent resignation. The reception was held in the parish house, which was prettily decorated for the occasion. The pupils of the Sunday school presented to the retiring rector a handsome travelling clock. Dr. Falkner preached his farewell sermon on Trinity Sunday, and the next day sailed with his wife and daughter for Europe, where they will remain for an indefinite period.

Daughters of the King

At a meeting of the council, May 23d, already referred to in these columns, all but three of the chapters of the diocese were represented. Encouraging reports were received from the delegates concerning the progress of the Order, and the papers read by Miss Grace Falkner, Miss Katherine Young, and Mrs. John Moncure were listened to with great interest. Mrs. John Moncure was elected delegate to the national convention to be held at Atlanta, Ga., in November. The night meeting, at which Bishop Coleman and the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins spoke, was largely attended.

Charitable Bequests

By the will of Mrs. T. W. Robbins, widow of the late Congressman John Robbins, an estate valued at over $50,000 is charged with the payment of many charitable legacies. Among these, the sum of $400 each is bequeathed to the Hospital of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the diocese of Pennsylvania; the trustees of the real and personal property of the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society; the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children from Cruelty, and several other charitable institutions. The sum of $1,000 each is given to the Penn. Asylum for Indigent Widows and Single Women, the Home for Consumptives, and other organizations.

The Germantown Convocation

At the May meeting at Trinity church, Oxford, the Rev. Dr. Wm. Bayard Hale, the new rector of Ardmore, was the preacher at the opening Eucharistic service. Refreshments were afterwards served in the parish house. The Rev. Joseph Wood, Jr., and Mr. Orlando Crease were re-elected respectively, secretary and treasurer. Dr. Thomas Betts was chosen delegate to the Board of Missions of the diocese. There was debate on the proposed divisional line around existing parishes, assigning missionary responsibility. The findings of the convocation were referred to Bishop Whitaker for his approval. At a public missionary service in the evening, addresses were made by the Rev. J. Thompson Cole, formerly of Japan, and the Rev. H. F. Fuller, general secretary of the Church Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews.

The North-West Convocation

At the annual meeting held at the Church House, an exceptional attendance was noted. The Rev. Benjamin Watson, D. D., who has been president for several years, declined re-election by reason of advancing years. Ex-U. S. Senator George F. Edmunds offered strongly appreciative resolutions in recognition of his long and useful services, which were unanimously adopted. The convocation then nominated to the Bishop, for appointment as president, the Rev. Joseph N. Blanchard, D. D.; the Rev. Robert W. Forsyth was elected secretary, and Mr. John P. Rhoads, treasurer. Mr. Edward H. Bonsall was chosen delegate to the Diocesan Board of Missions. Word was received from the latter board of the annual assessments, and the response of the parishes by pledges showed a gratifying increase over last year. Interesting reports of work were made.

The West Philadelphia Convocation

The 42nd session was held at St. Andrew's church, the Rev. Dr. Maison, presiding. The convocation elected Dr. Maison to the presidency for the ensuing term, subject to the Bishop's appointment. Former missionaries were given the renewal of appropriations. The Rev. L. Lloyd Gilberson was chosen secretary, and Mr. W. D. Squires, treasurer. Mr. E. W. Barker was elected lay delegate to the Diocesan Board of Missions. A committee on Church extension was appointed, consisting of the Rev. Messrs. Falkner, Armstrong, and Gilberson. At night a musical service of unusual interest took place, instead of the customary meeting for addresses. Bishop Whitaker presided, and the vested choirs of West Philadelphia were fully represented, including those of this parish, St. Asaph's, St. Paul's, St. Michael's, Calvary; St. James', King'sessing; St. James', Hestonville; Holy Comforter, the Beloved Disciple, and Ascension, making a choir of more than 200, under the able direction of Mr. O'Daniel, the choir-master of St. Andrew's. The rendition of the music was surprisingly successful, making this one of the most successful musical festivals yet held in the city. The Rev. J. Thompson Cole, late general secretary of the American Church Missionary Society, gave an address on "Missions—the good they do to us."

North Carolina

Joseph Blount Cheshire, Jr., D. D., Bishop

Weekly services are held at St. George's chapel, and the Mission of the Cross, Morganton. They are under the auspices of the Brotherhood, are largely attended, and unusual interest is manifested in them by the boys of the parish.

The Eighty-Third Annual Convention

Met in Calvary church, Tarboro, May 17th. The Holy Communion was administered by Bishop Cheshire, and the sermon preached by the Rev. A. B. Hunter. Convention was organized by the election of the Rev. M. M. Marshall, D. D., as president, Rev. J. E. Ingle, secretary, and Mr. C. E. Johnson, treasurer. In the afternoon, the convocations of Raleigh, Tarboro, and Charlotte held their annual meetings for the election of officers. The convocation of Salisbury met for the same purpose on the 18th. The board of trustees of St. Mary's School for Girls at Raleigh, held a meeting on the afternoon of the 17th, and unanimously elected the Rev. Theodore D. Bratton to the rectorship of that institution. Mr. Bratton is rector of the church at Spartanburg, and holds the chair of history in Converse College for Women. He is a son of the late Gen. Jno. G. Bratton, and is thought to be pre-eminently fitted for the high position he has been chosen to fill. His election gives general satisfaction, and it is hoped that he will accept. The board of managers of the Thompson Orphanage at Charlotte, reported that institution as prosperous; 62 children are now being cared for, a larger number than for several years past.

At night Bishop Cheshire introduced Bishop Horner, of the jurisdiction of Asheville, who, as representative of the Board of Managers of Missions, made a very interesting and instructive address. He urged more extended and systematic efforts in the cause of missions, and his address was attentively heard by a large congregation.

Thursday, the Bishop read his address which showed steady growth in the Church throughout the diocese, and indicated that he had diligently performed his arduous duties throughout the past year. A standing committee of five laymen was appointed "a committee on the proper support of the clergy," charged with the duty of throwing light on the question of clerical support, and requested to report annually to the convention.

The present Standing Committee was re-elected; viz., Rev. M. M. Marshall, D. D., president; Rev. Messrs. J. E. Ingle and B. S. Bronson; Mr. R. H. Battle and Dr. P. E. Hines.

At night stirring missionary addresses were made by Bishop Horner, the Rev. Mr. Joyner, of East Carolina, and the Rev. Dr. F. J. Murdoch.

Woman's Auxiliary

The annual meeting was held Thursday, 18th, in the "old church," built in 1834. The morning hours were given to addresses on "The need the Church has for the Woman's Auxiliary," and "The personal obligation of every woman to the Woman's Auxiliary," by the Rev. Theo. D. Bratton, of South Carolina, Rev. Messrs. W. H. Meade, D. D., and W. J. Smith, and Bishop Horner. Reports from diocesan officers showed steady growth. The gifts in money and boxes from the Woman's Auxiliary and the junior department for the year amounted to $2,629.46, an increase of about $900 over last year.

Central New York

F. D. Huntington, D. D., LL. D., Bishop

Convocation of the First District

A very successful and largely attended convocation was held in Grace church, Copenhagen, May 16th and 17th. All except five of the 17 clergy of the district were present, several sermons and addresses were given on timely topics in the church.

East Carolina

Alfred Augustin Watson, D.D., Bishop

Bishop Watson, during a recent visitation, consecrated the chapel of St. Philip the Apostle, Campbellton, assisted by a number of the clergy. This chapel owes its erection to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of St. John's church, Fayetteville, who, with the assistance of several ladies of the parish, keep up its services and the Sunday school.

The Sixteenth Annual Council

Met in St. Mary's church, Kinston, N. C., Thursday, May 25th. The Bishop, 21 of the clergy, and delegates from 15 parishes were in attendance. The Rev. James Carmichael, D.D., was elected president, the Rev. F. N. Skinner, secretary. Standing Committee: The Rev. Nathaniel Harding; the Rev. Drs. James Carmichael and Robert Strange; Messrs. George H. Roberts and William L. De Rosset.

The most important business before the council was the report of the committee on Constitution and Canons, who presented various amendments for action. Noteworthy among the changes offered, was a canon conferring upon all baptized persons the right to vote in parish elections, making no distinction between male and female. After much debate, this was voted down. A canon changing the time of election of vestries from Easter Monday to the first Monday in Advent was adopted. The report of the committee on the state of the Church showed that there had been only a slight falling off in the contributions for various purposes during the year, despite the great financial depression in the agricultural sections. Five new churches have been opened for worship this year. The next council will be held in Washington, N. C. The Roanoke Memorial Association presented the council with a gavel made of white holly cut from the old fort on Roanoke Island, near where Virginia Dare was born and the first services of the Church in this land were held. Thursday night, a missionary meeting was held, with addresses from four of the mission workers.

On Friday the Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary held meetings in the parish schoolhouse; a number of delegates from the parish branches were in attendance, and the reports showed a great deal of valuable work done by the women. The offering at the early Celebration, for diocesan missions, was $86.

Virginia

Francis M. Whittle, D. D., LL. D., Bishop
Robert A. Gibson, D.D., Bishop-Coadjutor

Bishop Randolph visited St. John's church, Roanoke, on the morning of May 14th, preaching and confirming a class of 23 candidates. At night he visited Christ church, preached, and confirmed 16 persons.

Mrs. Decatur Axtell, of Richmond, has been instrumental in the erection of a chapel at Hot Springs. The first steps towards this work were taken four years ago, and on Good Friday, 1889, the first service was held in the just completed building.

Daughters of the King

The Virginia local assembly convened in All Saints' church, Richmond, May 19th. At 10:30 A. M., there was a celebration of the Holy Communion. A large number of delegates was present, and very encouraging reports were read from the various chapters. Miss Sallie Stuart and Mrs. Twing, of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions, addressed the Daughters, Mrs. Twing urging strongly their special call as missionaries and deaconesses. A night service was held in St. Paul's church. Addresses of great power were made by the Rev. C. E. Ball and the Rev. Nelson P. Dame.

The Woman's Auxiliary

The Virginia branch convened May 17th, at 4 o'clock, in annual meeting at All Saints' church, Richmond. A Quiet Hour was held by the Rev. Dr. McKim, of Washington, D. C., who gave most eloquent and forceful addresses on missionary work. The meeting opened May 18th, A. M., with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 9:30 in Monumental church, the rector, the Rev. W. A. Barr, officiating. Miss Sallie Stuart, diocesan secretary of the branch, presided over the business session; 42 delegates were present. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. A. E. Warren, president of the Monumental branch, to which Mrs. Barton, the diocesan secretary of the Junior Auxiliary, responded. An eloquent prayer for missions was said by the Rev. J. Lindsay Patton, of Japan; Miss Sybil Carter gave an interesting account of her work among the Indians, and Mrs. A. E. Twing, honorary secretary, who has recently returned from a second tour around the world, also spoke. Miss Sallie Stuart was elected president, and the tenure of office made for life. It was determined in future to meet separately from the council, and once in every three years in Richmond. The next meeting, which it was decided should be held in the fall, will be in Winchester. Luncheon was served, after which the "Missionary Loan Exhibition," given by the Monumental church, was visited. The junior branch of the auxiliary held a missionary rally at Grace church on the 19th. A great many delegates from all over Virginia were present. Reports were read, and after the business meeting was over, at which Mrs. Robert Barton, of Winchester, was re-elected secretary of the junior branch, interesting addresses were made by Miss Sallie Stuart, Miss Sybil Carter, and Mrs. M. W. Twing.

Albany

William Crosswell Doane, D. D., LL. D., Bishop
Episcopal Appointments

JUNE

6. Afternoon, Cairo; evening, Catskill.
7. A. M., Catskill.
8. A. M., St. Agnes' School graduation.
9. A. M., Whitehall; P. M., Ticonderoga.
10. A. M., Bolton; afternoon, Lake George.
11. A. M., Fort Edward; afternoon, Sandy Hill; evening, Glens Falls.

A New Parish

Another parish is soon to be added to the diocese through the separation of the congregation of St. Andrew's chapel, Albany, from St. Paul's parish. Certain obligations are to be assumed by the congregation of St. Andrew's; namely, $2,000, the amount still owing for the construction and furnishing of the chapel, which cost $10,000; and $1,500, the sum of legacies employed in the building of the chapel, but restricted by the terms of the bequest to use within the limits of St. Paul's parish. A meeting for the incorporation of the new parish, and the election of the first wardens and vestrymen, was held May 22nd. Great enthusiasm for the new work is displayed, and $1,700 per year has been pledged toward the support of St. Andrew's church. The Rev. Ralph Birdsall, now assistant minister of St. Paul's church, and minister-in-charge of St. Andrew's, will become rector of the new parish, after its legal incorporation. St. Andrew's is situated in the centre of the most rapidly growing section of Albany. That it is able to be independent of the mother Church within less than two years after the erection of the present building, is a tribute to the missionary enterprise of St. Paul's church.

Missouri

Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, D.D., Bishop

The Sixteenth Annual Convention

Assembled at Christ church cathedral, St. Louis, on Tuesday, May 23d, and after a full service, with a sermon by the Rev. W. A. Hatch, adjourned to Schuyler Memorial House, and organized by re-electing Jno. R. Triplett secretary. Upon calling the roll of lay delegates, it was found that only a bare quorum was present, although the attendance of clergy was unusually large. This was due to the fact that as many as 11 parishes were in arrears, and therefore excluded from representation, even though their delegates were in attendance. Of course, there was the usual good-natured desire to admit all such in spite of restrictions, but it was clearly shown by Mr. T. K. Skinner, to the satisfaction of every lawyer present, that the convention had no power under the constitution of the diocese to remit the payment of assessments once made, and, meanwhile, the delegates from such delinquent parishes could only be admitted by the courtesy of each, or any convention, by a two-third vote, waving proof of payment. On the next day many delegates were admitted by reason of full payment of all dues. The main feature of the afternoon session was the Bishop's address, from which we shall give extracts in another issue.

At night, the accustomed reception of the Bishop and Mrs. Tuttle was held; this year, at the rooms of the Mercantile Club, where the members of the convention, and many others, were cordially received and hospitably entertained.

On the second day, a prolonged discussion grew out of the report of the Board of Diocesan Missions, in which permission was asked to call for, and, if possible, obtain pledges to the extent of $2,500, to provide for an archdeacon for the diocese. It was contended that this amount could not be raised, or, if it were had, it would be too much to pay any one man, in view of the fact that it exceeded considerably the salary of any clergyman of the diocese, except, perhaps, two only. The result, however, was the unanimous passage of a resolution empowering the board to employ an archdeacon as soon as the funds were secured to meet the additional expense. One generous layman subsequently pledged $500 towards the full amount of $2,500 asked for.

In connection with a report from the trustees of the Parochial Trust Fund, the Rev. P. G. Robert read a statement as to the doubtful validity of the titles by which so much of the Church property in the diocese was held. This led to a resolution, unanimously carried, to appoint three gentlemen learned in the law to secure the reform of the charter, so as to give full power to receive, hold, and administer, all property which had been, or might be, conveyed to these trustees.

Reports were had from various bodies concerned in missionary work; and pledges being called for diocesan missions during the coming year, an aggregate of about $3,500 of the full sum needed to sustain the work already undertaken ($4,345) was pledged by parishes and individuals. This amount is far too little, rightly, to occupy and cultivate the vast field which the diocese affords.

The Layman's Co-operative Missionary Society, which the convention, a year ago, endeavored to revive and bring into effective operation, reported by its secretary that, although repeated efforts had been made, no meeting of the executive committee, elected last year by the convention, had been held owing to failure to secure a quorum; and recommending the election of new members on such committee and, if possible, such as would attend and aid in discharging its duties. Accordingly, a committee of two to nominate such persons for election by the convention was appointed, and the list which they subsequently submitted was duly elected.

The Woman's Auxiliary made a full and encouraging report of its year's work, showing a total amount raised in money and boxes of clothing, etc., of $5,463.

At night, a grand missionary meeting was held in the church of the Holy Communion, which was largely attended. After a short service, addresses were made by one city clergyman and two from the country, the first, detailing and advocating city missions, the others, diocesan work. These were followed by an able presentation of the general missions of the Church, by Bishop Gailor, of Tennessee, who came to represent the General Board of Managers.

The following Missionary Board was chosen: The Rev. Messrs. J. P. T. Ingraham, E. Duckworth, C. N. Moller, E. P. Little, W. R. Winchester, and L. F. Potter; Messrs. F. J. McMaster, D. F. Leavitt, Charles Sparks, E. H. Lycett, R. J.

Jordan, William Bagnell, W. C. Stith, G. M. Cadogan, and Brookes. The members of the Standing Committee of the diocese were re-elected. The Committee on Finance made its report, and declared the necessity for assessments upon the parishes, to the extent of $6,500, to meet the needs of the coming year; and the Committee on Assessments made a report of a schedule of assessments aggregating that amount, which was, without debate or objection, adopted by the convention. After sundry matters of detail, the convention adjourned sine die.

North Dakota

Samuel C. Edsall, D.D., Bishop

Bishop Edsall at Lisbon

On the 13th ult., the Bishop made his first visit to this portion of his diocese, and in the evening the Church people and those of the denominations generally, met the Bishop at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, and accorded him a hearty reception. On Sunday the Bishop in the forenoon celebrated Holy Communion and preached to a large congregation; went out in the afternoon, accompanied by the rector, to Elliott, where he baptized one person, and administered the rite of Confirmation to 10, including the person who was baptized; returning to Lisbon, service was held at 8 P. M., when the Bishop delivered an admirable sermon to an appreciative congregation. The Bishop, in the course of his visitation, visited Plymouth, Enderlin, and Sheldon. Enderlin is a progressive town on the Soo line, where a church building is urgently needed, and an endeavor is being made to secure a lot. The Bishop has generously proposed that to the extent of $800, if they will raise this sum, he will bear 25 per cent. of the whole, an offer which it is to be hoped will be realized by the erection of a suitable building in the near future. In all places the Bishop's visit has created a new interest in Church work; he has stimulated the flagging zeal of the Church members, revived their courage, and given them an impulse to do greater things in the future.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D. D., Bishop

Bishop Lawrence has given $250 towards the building fund of All Saints' church, Attleboro.

Mr. Frank Hunnewell has given $3,000 to St. Andrew's church, Wellesley, for a rectory. The ground has been broken for it upon the lot adjoining the church.

Bishop Lawrence delivered the address at the 250th anniversary of the settlement of Malden, which was observed May 21st.

Confirmation at the House of Prayer

Bishop Lawrence made an informal visitation at the House of Prayer, Lowell, on Whitsunday afternoon, and confirmed 18 candidates, presented by the rector, the Rev. Warner E. L. Ward who has been the incumbent for the past six months. This is the largest class presented in the history of this parish. The ceremonies were simple and impressive. Bishop Lawrence addressed a few brief, touching words to the class, and preached a strong sermon, containing words of welcome to the young rector.

The Archdeaconry of Boston

This body, which is merely a nominal organization, as its work is done by the City Board of Missions, held its annual meeting at the diocesan house, May 24th. Bishop Lawrence presided. The executive committee was re-elected, with the addition of the name of the Rev. J. M. G. Foster, rector of the church of the Messiah. The Rev. Dr. Lindsay was reappointed by the Bishop, archdeacon of Boston. The apportionments for the parishes to raise for diocesan missions were made the same as last year, $4,700.

Ninth Annual Festival of the Choir Guild

The first of its services was held in the church of the Advent, Boston, May 24th. The choirs participating were the church of the Advent, St. Paul's, Brookline; Christ church, Hyde Park; Christ church, Quincy; St. Chrysostom's, Wollaston; church of the Messiah, Boston; St. John's, Jamaica Plain, and St. Mary's, Dorchester. The anthems sung were: "And I saw another Angel" (C. Villiers Stanford); Stainer's "The hallowed day hath shone upon us"; "Lo, summer comes again"; "Lead, kindly light," by Sullivan, and Gounod's "Unfold, ye portals everlasting." Master Harry Helwig sang for a solo, "Lovely appear over the mountains," Gounod. The offertory anthem was "Fear not ye, O Israel" (Dudley Buck). Martin's Te Deum was used. The music was excellently rendered, and was a striking advance upon former years. Mr. S. B. Whitney was choirmaster, and Mr. Harry W. Wry, organist.

The 75th Anniversary of St. Anne's, Lowell

St. Anne's church observed its 75th anniversary with a series of services. On Whitsunday there were two celebrations of the Holy Communion. Bishop Lawrence preached the anniversary sermon. The Church services in 1824 were held in the upper room of a schoolhouse. Mr. William Appleton, a director of the Merrimac Company, became interested in the project of establishing a parish, and with the help of another stockholder of the same company, interested a young man in Deacons' Orders, who was an assistant at St. Matthew's church, So. Boston, the Rev. Theodore Edson, in this missionary field, who on March 6th, drove from Boston to Lowell and began his great work. The directors of the Merrimac Company built the church, at an outlay of $9,000. This sum was afterwards paid back to them by the parishioners. It is worthy of note that a majority of the directors in this company who authorized the building of the Episcopal church were Unitarians. On May 20th, 1824, the cornerstone was laid, and on March 16th, 1825, the edifice was consecrated. In Nov., 1825, the Rev. Theodore Edson was made rector, and remained until his death, June 25th, 1833. During his rectorship the parish grew and prospered. A Sunday school building was erected in 1830, at a cost of $600, and another building followed in 1839. These were superseded by the present stone structure, at a cost of $12,000, to which additions were made in 1873, entailing an expenditure of $5,000 more. The chime of 11 bells was given Oct. 17th, 1857. The Edson Orphanage, adjoining the church, was established in 1875. The present rector, the Rev. A. St. John Chambre, D.D., took charge May 15th, 1884, and has just preached his 15th anniversary sermon. At the morning service on Whitsunday, an eagle brass lecturn was used for the first time. It is the gift of Miss Helen Freeman, and is in memory of her parents. The Rev. Charles W. Horner, of Brooklyn, preached in the evening, upon the topic, "St. Anne's church, and the late Rev. Theodore Edson, D.D., rector for nearly 60 years." Mr. Homer was formerly a curate with Dr. Edson, and in his address quoted the resolve of this sainted clergyman, "that in all my researches after knowledge, the cultivation of higher and devout feeling shall be my ultimate object." The Rev. Alfred E. Johnson made an address in the afternoon to the children of the Sunday School. On Monday in Whitsun week the Holy Communion was celebrated at 9 A. M. Morning Prayer was said at 10:30. The Rev. Henry E. Hovey, of Portsmouth, outlined the work of Dr. Edson on charitable and philanthropic lines, and St. Anne's generous gifts in this direction for 75 years, which amount to over $100,000. The Rev. Alfred E. Johnson treated the pastoral character of the parish life, defined the nature of the work carried on by the priest in his pastoral relation, and exemplified it by a few incidents in the life of the first rector. The Girl's Friendly Society was the special feature of the evening service. The first branch of this society was organized in this parish. The address was made by the Rev. Dr. Donald, of Boston. On Tuesday morning, after the celebration of the Holy Communion, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Hutchins spoke upon the influence of Dr. Edson in Lowell, and the Rev. Dr. Lindsay, of Boston, showed the steadfastness of St. Anne's church to "The Faith once for all delivered." At choral Evening Prayer, the choir rendered "The Prodigal Son" (Sullivan), and the Rev. Dr. Chambre delivered an address upon Church music.

Lexington

Lewis W. Burton, D.D., Bishop

The Fourth Annual Council

Held at Trinity church, Danville, Ky., May 24th and 25th. The Tuesday preceding was Woman's Auxiliary Day, which was begun by a celebration of the Holy Communion, followed by the charge to the auxiliary by the Bishop. Three interesting papers were read by representative women of the diocese. Reports from the several branches showed total contributions for the year of $1,209.62, of which $400.50 was for diocesan objects, $182 for specials, $91.41 domestic, $88 for Alaska, $363 for triennial offering, and $94 for foreign missions. In the evening, the Rev. W. D. Powers, D.D., general secretary of the A. C. M. S., and the Bishop of Kentucky, representing the Board of Managers, made stirring addresses. About 100 women were in attendance from all parts of the diocese. The officers of the Woman's Auxiliary are, Miss M. E. Harrison, president Diocesan Branch; Mrs. R. S. Coupland, president Junior Auxiliary, and Mrs. L. W. Burton, president Babies' Branch.

The council convened Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock. The Holy Communion was celebrated by the Bishop of Lexington, assisted by the Bishop of Kentucky. The Rev. D. D. Chapin preached the council sermon, his subject being "The last order of the Church," a plea for a real diaconate. The Rev. R. Grattan Noland was re-elected secretary of the diocese. The Bishop's address was a thorough review of the work of the diocese, and concerned itself not at all with outside matters. It suggested a change in the canons, giving the Bishop a more real share in the selection of rectors to parishes, which was adopted. It also proposed a change in the canons whereby parishes receiving aid from the Board of Missions should become missions, and no missions become parishes until self-supporting. The Bishop also presented a design for a seal of the diocese, which was adopted.

The following officers were elected: Mr. T. B. Wood, Treasurer; the Rev. J. N. Lewis and General Fayette Hewitt, Deputies to the Missionary Council; the Rev. Messrs R. G. Noland, J. N. Lewis, and R. L. McCready; Messrs. F. H. Dudley, T. B. Wood, and Jno. T. Shelby, Standing Committee. The Board of Missions (the Bishop and two archdeacons being ex officio): The Rev. Messrs. J. S. Meredith, A. C. Hensley, and J. N. Lewis; Messrs. F. H. Dudley, J. L. Amsden, and C. C. Calhoun.

The Ashland School for Girls has, by the untiring and able efforts of Mr. H. N. Hills, rector, been removed from Ashland to Versailles, and valuable property for the school has been acquired.

A somewhat remarkable feature of the diocesan gathering at Danville was the readiness to assist, of members of other Christian bodies who entertained perhaps half of the deputies present, and in every way helped to make the meeting of the council enjoyable and successful. The next annual council will be held at St. Peter's church, Paris.

Arkansas

Henry Niles Pierce, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Wm. M. Brown, D.D., Bishop-Coadjutor

St. Paul's Church, Newport

Bishop Brown made his annual visitation to this parish, Sunday, May 7th. He was present at the Sunday school, and made a short address. Confirmation was administered at the morning service. Holy Communion was celebrated, and the newly confirmed three communed. The Bishop's sermon was on "The duty of Church membership." At 3 P. M., after Evening Prayer, he preached a special sermon to young people, on "Worship," and at 8 P. M. gave a special address before the parochial branch of the Woman's Auxiliary and a large congregation. St. Paul's branch of the Woman's Auxiliary now numbers 30 members, and has just organized a junior and baby branch. The first quarter's work will be devoted to helping the Bishop's Missionary Chapel and Rectory Fund of Arkansas. The Bishop held a parish meeting, to take counsel as to building a rectory. The plans of the rector and vestry were submitted. The Bishop gave his cordial consent, and promised another hundred dollars, provided the proposed indebtedness could be cancelled in three years.

Ohio

Wm. Andrew Leonard, D.D., Bishop

Bishop Leonard visited St. Mark's church, Cleveland, on Sunday evening, May 14th, and confirmed a class of 28 persons. The Bishop preached a strong sermon.

During a hard windstorm on May 17th, the building occupied by St. James' church, at Youngstown, a wooden structure in the outskirts of the city, was blown over.

The Woman's Auxillary

Met at St. Paul's church, Cleveland, May 23d. The Holy Communion was celebrated at 9:30, the Bishop, celebrant. At the close, the Bishop made a short address of welcome to the members of the auxillary, and the archdeacon told of the special needs of some of the mission stations he has visited. The business meeting followed in the chapel, at which the president, Mrs. Wm. A. Leonard, presided; about 350 women being in attendance. Reports were read, and pledges made for the ensuing year. The society has the past year given $200 to the educational work at Bexley Hall, Gambier; has kept up three scholarships in China, paid the insurance on the life of a home missionary, and given $500 to what is known as the Bishop's Fund. In addition to this, it pledges itself for the ensuing year to pay the salary of a woman missionary at Hankow, China. For the year, the total money gifts have been, $3,012.99; total value of boxes, $2,697.37; full total, $5,710.36, an increase over last year of $2,605.75; 19 new parish branches have been started, and 7 juniors. In the afternoon, the Rev. C. M. Roberts gave a stirring address, in which he spoke of the strength given to the missionary by being brought into touch with those in stronger and more fortunate parishes, and urged the sending out of new books and fresh magazines, anything, in short, that will bear a message of love and sympathy, as from friend to friend. The officers chosen for the ensuing year were as follows: President, Mrs. Wm. A. Leonard; vice-presidents, Mrs. Robert R. Rhodes, of the Cleveland convocation, Mrs. John T. Mack, of the Sandusky convocation, Mrs. W. W. Bowles, of the Toledo convocation; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. S. Bates; president of the Junior Auxillary, Miss Stella Hatch. Mrs. Bates' report as secretary was most encouraging. She puts great missionary zeal into the work, and in carrying it on, has written during the past year over 1,300 letters. The society adjourned to meet at St. Paul's church, Akron, on Tuesday in the week following the diocesan convention, in May, 1900.

The Church Club

Gave a dinner at the rooms of the Century Club, Cleveland, on May 22d, in honor of Bishop Leonard, and for the purpose of giving him a welcome home from his four months' absence abroad. Bishop Leonard is an honorary member of the club, which has 110 members, and is composed of laymen representing the different parishes of the city. The Bishop gave an interesting address on "American chapels in Europe." Archdeacon Abbott also spoke in a happy manner.

St. Andrew's Brotherhood

The Toledo local assembly met in Grace church parish building, May 23d, a larger number than usual attending, and Mr. J. E. Heath presiding. The city clergy were nearly all present, and took an active part. An admirable paper on Church history was read by Mr. Cowell, the organist of Grace church, and discussed. Refreshments and music followed.

St. Mark's, Cleveland

The rector, the Rev. Dr. Frederic E. J. Lloyd, has just presented 30 candidates to the Bishop for Confirmation, making a total of 53 in less than five months' work. Bishop Leonard's address was remarkable for its appropriateness and beauty. Large and very enthusiastic congregations are in constant attendance at St. Mark's, and on every hand appear evidences of the influence exerted by this parish.

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Sunday School Festival Service

The church of the Epiphany has never presented a more beautiful scene than on the afternoon of the Sunday after Ascension Day, when it was filled to overflowing with the children of the Sunday schools of the diocese. The Bishop and most of the city clergy were in the chancel, and at four o'clock, six processions of children, with banners, entered the church simultaneously. "Onward, Christian soldiers" was sung over and over before all were in their places, and when every seat in the large church had been filled, it was necessary to put some of the little ones in the choir stalls and on the chancel steps. The short service was interspersed with many hymns, heartily sung by the thousands of young voices, and the addresses by the Bishop and the Rev. Mr. Duhring, of Philadelphia, kept the children's attention with unflagging interest. The offering was for the Children's Country Home and the Salt Air Home for children.

The House of Mercy

The anniversary service took place at the pro-cathedral, May 17th. An address of great interest was delivered by the Rev. W. J. D. Thomas. The report of the Sister-in-charge showed the present number of inmates to be 23, there being only one vacancy. The secretary's report called attention to the special need for increased efforts in behalf of the House, in view of the loss of the appropriation of $1,800 which has been received from Congress for many years. The institution is now entirely dependent on subscriptions and donations for its maintenance. A circular sent out in April, when the loss became known, asking for Easter offerings of money and supplies, met with a prompt and generous response. Inmates of the House of Mercy come from all parts of the country, and are often young girls who are thus saved from falling into sin, rather than rescued from it. It is greatly desired to have a house in the country where they can live a freer and more healthy life than is now possible.

Western Michigan

George De Normandie Gillespie, D.D., Bishop

The first of a series of organ recitals was given May 10th, in St. Luke's church, Kalamazoo, for the benefit of the outing fund of the choir.

Ascension Day Pilgrimage

On the evening of Ascension Day, the Sir Knights of Battle Creek Commandery made a pilgrimage to Kalamazoo, and joining with the members of Peninsular Commandery No. 8, attended service in St. Luke's church, Kalamazoo. "Onward, Christian Soldiers," was sung as the Sir Knights filed into the church, by the splendid choir of men and boys, reinforced by a number of ladies; 122 swords were drawn to "present" at the recitation of the Creed. The rector, the Rev. R. R. Claiborne, introduced in a few, well-chosen words, the Rev. Lewis Brown, the prelate of Battle Creek commandery, who preached an eloquent sermon. As a recessional, the hymn, "We march, we march to victory," was sung.

Alabama

Richard Hooker Wilmer, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
H. Melville Jackson, D.D., Bishop-coadjutor

A Pilscher organ, costing $1,000, has just been paid for by the congregation of Marion parish.

A notable Mission was recently held at Whistler, one of the Mobile missions, by the Rev. J. J. D. Hall, priest-in-charge, at Troy, and Union Springs, Mobile, the congregations from the Methodist, Baptist, and Roman denominations attending all the services, which were held twice a day for a week.

Holy Comforter, Montgomery

This church devoted its Easter offerings, with part of that derived from the Sunday school, for diocesan missions. This is the first time that any Easter offering from this church has gone outside the parish. The rector recently instituted a "Penny Fund" towards the parish debt, which has been most successful, nearly $500 already having been raised.

Consecration of the Advent, Birmingham

Bishop Wilmer being unable to be present, a message was read from him by the rector, the Rev. John G. Murray. Bishop Jackson preached a sermon of great power. A class of 34 was confirmed, nearly all being adults. At the evening service the rector was instituted, Bishop Jackson officiating, assisted by the visiting clergy. The property of this church in buildings alone is valued at $60,000. The junior warden of the church, Mr. Robert Jemison, has been largely instrumental in bringing about its consecration.

St. Stephen's Church, Eutaw

This church is rejoicing in a vested choir, which appeared for the first time on Easter Day. The choir vestments, 25 in number, were the gift of Mrs. W. M. Franklin, of East Orange, N. J. Mrs. Franklin also presented the choir with a very handsome brass processional cross, as a memorial of a deceased relative. The Easter offerings of this church will be expended in a new roof for the building.

Minnesota

Henry B. Whipple, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
M. N. Gilbert, D.D., LL.D., Bishop-coadjutor

The parishioners of St. John's, Lake Benton, have built and paid for a commodious rectory.

May 10th, Bishop Gilbert made his annual visit to St. Luke's, Willmar, and preached an eloquent sermon; 14 young people were confirmed.

The church of the Ascension, St. Paul, was consecrated by Bishop Gilbert on Ascension Day, assisted by the Rev. Dean Andrews, the Rev. W. C. Pope, and others.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, for several years rector of St. Andrew's, Minneapolis, has been appointed city missionary of the Twin Cities by Bishop Gilbert.

Church of Messiah, St. Paul

In addition to the early Celebration on Ascension Day, a special Evensong was sung, with Bishop Gilbert as preacher. At the conclusion, a reception was held in the guild room, and the $1,200 mortgage that was wiped out at Easter was consigned to the flames. The ladies of the parish furnished refreshments. This church is nine years old, and one of the most active in the city. It was organized by its present rector, and purchased the old building of the Reformed Episcopal church, on Portland av. and Dale st. The old building was moved onto a vacant lot, and has since been enlarged four times, and $7,500 has been spent upon the property. A floating debt of about $350 still remains, which the parishioners hope to liquidate soon.

Good Condition of St. Paul's

On the 4th Sunday after Easter, Bishop Gilbert confirmed a class of 40, presented by the Rev. John Wright, rector. Among the candidates were a number brought up under sectarian and Roman influences. The rector will not go abroad before the end of July, as he desires to complete his 12 years' rectorship. He leaves the church free from debt, and a good substantial endowment behind it. St. Paul's church to-day probably is the best equipped place of worship in the diocese. Its influence is not confined to the parish only, but is felt throughout the whole city. Dr. Wright has fully demonstrated what a downtown church is capable of doing; an evidence of self-denying, faithful service, and great personal sacrifice.

Editorials and Contributions

Latitudinarianism in 1786 and in 1898

LATITUDINARIAN projects have more than once been brought forward in the American Church, as in the Church of England. The characteristic of such schemes is, of course, compromise. It is always assumed that there is a considerable field of doctrine and practice which the Church can "give up," as being subject to "human alteration," and in which the "great essentials of Christianity" are not involved. Such was the proposition of Bishop Madison in 1792, which the General Convention of that period found intolerable, and of which Bishop White treats in his "Memoirs," with as near approach to sarcasm as his gentle spirit would permit him to use. But Bishop White had been brought into relation with a notable scheme of comprehension some years before the correspondence with Dr. Coke and the Madison declaration. This was in the case of King's chapel, Boston. The proposed platform of comprehension was very definitely stated. It was to include the widest differences in doctrine, and a corresponding liberty in worship. In Church government only there was to be no such flexibility—all were to submit to episcopal ordination and jurisdiction.

THE general history of this case is better known than the private negotiations in which the latitudinarian propositions were formulated and argued. King's chapel was the oldest Episcopal church in Boston, but during the Revolutionary War, the old congregation had mostly disappeared. Its members being attached to the royal cause, had been obliged to leave Boston, and the pews were gradually let to persons who had no attachment to the Church though they were dissatisfied with the religious views which prevailed in the community. Meanwhile, the Unitarian movement swept New England and easily carried away such a congregation. At the end of the war, while the chapel remained still nominally "Episcopal," the Prayer Book was only used with radical omissions. The religious leader of the congregation was a Mr. Miller who had the status of lay-reader but was regarded by the congregation as their "minister." Mr. Miller and the King's chapel people indulged the hope that in the reorganization of the Episcopal Church, such a comprehensive platform might be adopted as would leave room for Unitarian views. But such ideas were dashed by the unanimity with which Churchmen asserted the continuity of this Church with the mother Church of England in all essential particulars, and the prospect was not mended by the appearance of the Proposed Book of 1785. The King's chapel people now used a Prayer Book, the character of which was defined by Mr. Miller in such terms as these: They have endeavored "to leave out all such expressions as wound the conscience of a Unitarian, without introducing any which should displease a Trinitarian" (!) They were of opinion that any sect might adopt such a Prayer Book, since, "like the Sacred Scriptures," it is general and indefinite, "and every sect may reason from it, as from the Sacred Scriptures, in defence of their peculiar tenets."

FINDING it beyond hope that the Church would revise the Prayer Book on such lines as these, the next attempt was to vindicate for King's chapel its liberty in this respect, on the sole condition that its minister should receive episcopal ordination. The correspondence on the subject was conducted with Dr., afterwards Bishop, White. Mr. Miller expressed his opinion that it was "not necessary that traditions, ceremonies, doctrines, and public prayers be one or utterly alike, even in different congregations of the same Church." He saw no objection to license being given to the several congregations to make such alterations in the liturgy as might best meet their views. Everything relating to the Trinity, for example, might be allowed to be used by the Trinitarian, while he, thus having his own liberty, might cheerfully permit the Unitarian to exercise his liberty by omitting everything of the kind. He considered that this would be a "truly great and liberal" plan for the Church to adopt.

DR. WHITE failed to see the force of the views thus brought to his attention. He was not at all impressed by a "great and liberal" scheme which converted fundamental articles of the Christian Faith into matters of mere individual opinion. In reference to that feature which made episcopacy of obligation, while the Faith was to be left indifferent, he said: "It would be a very singular Church, indeed, which should hold up a certain matter of order as the only part of its foundation essential to be retained"; and he does not think it necessary to prove that that "cannot be said of the Church to which we have belonged." He clinches the matter by referring to the "absurdity of supposing that it is possible to maintain that persons differing in regard to the object of prayer, may be of the same Church or Communion." It was clear to the eminently serious mind of Bishop White, that such a doctrine as that of the Divinity of Christ could not be an open question. Those who believe in His Divinity must pray to Him. The Prayer Book is full of such prayers. Not to address prayers to Him would be to dishonor God. On the other hand, those who deny His Divinity will not only not pray to Him themselves, but, if they are sincere, it must seem to them shockingly blasphemous and idolatrous for any one to do so. Thus this early scheme of comprehension met with no sympathy among the leaders of the Church, and King's chapel soon ceased to have any connection with us.

IT is true that no later scheme or movement has contemplated anything quite so radical as this. But some interesting parallels can be pointed out between the proposals of Mr. Miller in 1786, and some of those which have been brought to the attention of Churchmen in recent years. The points of likeness are such as these: Episcopacy was to be maintained, and the various differing congregations were to continue outwardly as one body, under bishops, their ministers accepting, of course, episcopal ordination. Next, it was desired that the Prayer Book be revised in such a broad and comprehensive sense that every sect might adopt it. Failing this, the final attempt was to secure for an individual congregation a dispensation from the use of the generally authorized Prayer Book, with permission to employ in its place such modifications of it, or such special methods of worship, as may be most congenial to their tastes and beliefs.

AT the present day, no one, probably,—at least on the side of the Church—would think of attempting to unite those who worship Christ as God, and those who refuse to worship Him, in one and the same body. Provision is, therefore, made in the proposals of recent years, to secure the binding obligation of the two Creeds. But with that restriction, there is a curious general resemblance between the plan of the Unitarian minister a century ago, and that of some Churchmen of the present day. The same leading importance is attributed to episcopal ordination, and outward unity under episcopal supervision; and similar views are ventilated with reference to the Prayer Book. It was first hoped that the revision of the Prayer Book would make it more comprehensive, and thus contribute toward what was called "Christian Unity." When the Standard Book of 1892 was completed, it appeared that such expectations had not been realized. The revised book is even less comprehensive than the old one. The Nicene Creed, for instance, which formerly was not necessarily said anywhere in public worship, is now obligatory in its use on certain occasions.

IT remained, therefore, to develop the idea that the Prayer Book need not be made obligatory on all congregations, but that other forms or methods of worship might be licensed for use under certain circumstances. Only it was to be provided that the two Creeds must be accepted, that Baptism must be administered by water and the usual invocation of the Trinity, and that in the Communion, bread and wine must be used together with the words of Institution. First of all, the minister of such a congregation must have had "episcopal ordination." Doubtless, a hundred years ago, no one would have thought it possible to use the Creeds without committing himself ex animo to the Catholic doctrines of the Trinity and the Divinity of our Lord. But in later days the influence of a transcendental philosophy has changed the attitude of men's minds on such questions, and it becomes very doubtful whether the Faith would not be seriously imperiled by taking the Creeds out of their environment, and allowing them to be used in connection with an atmosphere of thought which may be quite foreign to that of the Prayer Book. It does not seem to be a favorable time for such experiments. It is hardly necessary to point out that the sanctity of the two great "Sacraments of the Gospel," still less the teaching that is in them, is not secured by such a minimum requirement as that the authorized words and elements must be employed.

ENCOURAGEMENT may be gleaned from a review of the history of the Anglican Communion since the Reformation, and by observing the uniform failure of the various latitudinarian schemes which have been advocated from time to time. But the present age has its own peculiar dangers, and the situation is one which calls for the most serious thoughtfulness on the part of all Churchmen who value "the old paths," and who believe that the Church has the stewardship of a divine depositum, which cannot be sacrificed or brought into peril.

—X—

Canon Scott Holland on the English Church Crisis

IN The New York Tribune of recent date is an article by Canon Scott Holland on the present religious situation in England, which has attracted much attention. The Canon takes a decidedly hopeful view, and evidently believes that the result will be for the advantage of the Church. In giving a history of the rise and progress of the crisis, he does not disguise the fact that there were extreme developments, chiefly in the way of "additional services," which gave the agitators a certain advantage, since, as he thinks, some of these developments were indefensible from the point of view of the typical Anglican divines. This seemed likely to cause embarrassment to those who were second to none in their abhorrence of the brutal invasions of public worship by Kensit and his followers. But it appeared before long that these developments were perfectly within control, and that when the bishops undertook to use their unquestionable power to check extravagances and bring better order out of apparent confusion, they encountered nothing but reasonableness on the part of those chiefly concerned. "The result was an astonishing revelation of general coherence, of loyalty to authority, of real adherence to Prayer Book lines." Things were in a fair way to be settled within the Church, by its own constituted authorities, when Sir William Harcourt, seeing political possibilities in the agitation, and thinking that the liberal party might find here the much-needed plank for its platform, broke out in his series of letters to The Times. His appeal, in effect, was chiefly to the Dissenters and Nonconformists. In his hands, therefore, the attack assumed the form of an attack upon the Church itself. This, together with the revolting methods of the religious agitators, brought all true Churchmen together and really simplified the conflict. The subject was brought into Parliament, where, in spite of inflammatory speeches, common-sense asserted itself, and a measure which, if successful, would have precipitated Disestablishment, was lost by a heavy majority.

SO far, the Church has gained rather than lost by the agitation. The crucial question is that of authority. The discussion precipitated by Sir William Harcourt is whether Church questions—questions relating to the doctrine and worship of the Church—shall be settled by Church courts or by ecclesiastical courts. It has been made so evident that he that runs may read, that the vast majority of Churchmen will not submit to the latter. The famous Declaration of the E. C. U. has fixed attention upon this as the real issue. The history of the last thirty years has impressed the lesson upon the public mind. This same Sir William Harcourt was, twenty-five years ago, the champion of the Public Worship Regulation Act, establishing a new court for such causes. But priests refused to acknowledge this court and would not plead before it. They accepted cheerfully the spoiling of their goods and the felon's cell, rather than violate their consciences on this point. The only real result of this kind of legislation was to foster and develop what it was meant to destroy, and to increase confusion. This was a warning against Parliamentary interference with spiritual matters. A royal commission virtually acknowledged the inadequate authority of secular courts in ecclesiastical cases. Archbishop Benson took a great step in reviewing his own court in the Lincoln case, and now the present Archbishops of Canterbury and York have established a tribunal upon the basis of the directions of the Prayer Book, which had long fallen into abeyance. They will not appeal to the State to confirm their decisions, but will address themselves to the consciences of those concerned. Meanwhile, the bishops are engaged upon a Bill for the establishment of a proper ecclesiastical judiciary, which will be sifted in convocation and finally submitted to Parliament. It may take a long time to bring it to a final issue. It will probably not be until long after the present excitement has died down. But if such a Bill shall finally be carried through, establishing a system of spiritual courts which Churchmen can recognize, the Church of England will be in a better position than for many a long day, and a distinct stage of progress will have been achieved.

CANON SCOTT HOLLAND has strong words of admiration for the bishops on account of their steadfast refusal to join in the hue and cry, and their firm conviction that the mass of the clergy are faithful men, and that even objectionable excesses are often due to a zeal for souls, which ought to be respected. They have been the objects of unlimited abuse and obloquy. The Archbishop especially has shown himself wonderfully fair-minded and strong. Within the Church itself, work has gone on with steady persistence, congregations are at peace with their priests, and there are few or no collisions. Church congresses, clerical meetings, and diocesan conferences pass off without conflicts or mishaps. Even the Easter vestries, in which people may take part who seldom or never enter the doors of a church, and lend all their religious influence and energy to dissenting organizations, have been marked by singular peace, in spite of the deliberate attempt of the so-called Church Association to stir up strife. In short, the Church is going about its proper business just as it should. Nothing could more clearly prove what has for a long time been increasingly evident, that the present religious troubles in England have sprung from those without, not within, the Church, and that the object of the agitators is not the reform of abuses or extremes, but the overthrow of the Church itself.

—X—

The Church in the Great Cities

FROM THE TRIENNIAL CHARGE OF THE RT. REV. JOHN F. SPALDING, D. D., BISHOP OF COLORADO

ASK you to consider first the principles of work by which the Apostles were guided, which were acted upon by the bishops and clergy of the Primitive Church, and by which the Church in all ages has achieved her successes. The first principle was to seize and occupy the centres of population, and the second was to go forth from these strongly intrenched and fortified posts to secure and to evangelize the whole country.

It is remarkable how many of the great cities of the Roman Empire were visited by St. Paul, and because of his residence and labors in them, have ever since been intimately associated with his name. Most of them are far more famous because of his planting of the Church in them than for all their secular greatness and glories. You think at once of Antioch and Ephesus, of Corinth and Rome, and many others, where he planted the Church and organized it for perpetuity. So, too, you think of St. Mark in Alexandria, and St. John and the seven Churches in the chief cities of Asia Minor. It was the wonderful statesman-like prescience and judgment of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, together with the divine inspiration that guided him as much in action as in teaching, that led to the adoption of this policy, always and everywhere followed by the Church's loyal and successful leaders. In vain have you studied the history of the Church if you have not observed this habitual working in and from strongly established centres. The urban populations were first Christianized. The dwellers in the country were, because of this fact, called pagans. But to gain for the Church the cities were ultimately to secure the country districts, though for a long time pagan rites, customs, and superstitions might linger in the remote corners of the land into which the light of Christ did not penetrate. The apostolic sees were ever appealed to in the Ante-Nicene period for the true order and ministry of the Church, and in these, the succession of bishops preserved and handed on the books of the New Testament, and the Catholic doctrines and faith. The strength of the Church was in these great sees personally founded by Apostles and apostolic men.

It has ever been so in the history of Christianity. Your minds will suggest abundant illustrations all down the ages to the present time. The great monastic establishments of the Middle Ages, though seemingly, were not really, in conflict with the principles asserted. They were beneficent in fact, as in intention, and necessary in their times. They were each, when at their best, strong centres of learning, culture and, spiritual force, and of the aggressive missionary activities that kept alive Christianity, and propagated the Church in the regions beyond, and even into countries remote, evangelizing whole nations.

The revival of evangelical religion under Whitefield and the Wesleys, and of the broader and profounder type of piety that characterizes organic and corporate Christianity, under Keble, Pusey, and their associates, spread from the university to the cities and towns, leading to the re-establishment of sisterhoods, guilds, brotherhoods, and the manifold forms of organization by which to reach all classes of the people, and from the towns spreading to the country, and gradually pervading and working its beneficent effects throughout the whole land. If you visit England to study the condition of the Church, you will find her intensely alive and active in the great towns and cities, and even in the villages, though exceptions are to be found. * * *

In this country we failed to adopt at the beginning the see system, which, both in name and character, we are rapidly recovering. But in the main, we have followed the apostolic precedents. We are gaining possession of the cities. We see, now, that in every principal town there should be the bishop, charged as he is with the responsibility of leadership; and therein should be built up his strong parishes, his missionary agencies, his educational and charitable institutions. Everybody now sees and acknowledges that our Church is specially adapted to be, and is, or is more and more becoming, the Church of the city; and by the city, we mean the principal town. In New York, we are far in advance of all denominations, in numbers, power, and influence. In Philadelphia and nearly all of our great towns, we are, or are soon to be, in the lead of all the workers for Christ. It will be the same, in no long time, in cities of the third class, like Denver, as in those of the first and second.

The large town or city is now relatively more important than ever before. Our growth is mostly in cities. In cities should be our strength. In 1880, the number of American towns having a population of 8,000, was 286. In 1890, it had risen to 443. More than one-third of the population of this diocese is now in Denver. We have twelve clergy at work here, and about twice that number elsewhere. Is the number in Denver disproportionate? Considering the massing of the people here, and their accessibility to influence, would it not be really more fitting that the twelve should be laboring elsewhere and the twenty-four should be working in and about the see city? Could they be profitably employed? Not working in our old methods. Not by any forcing process. The increase should come only as we learn to utilize our forces. This learning, from examples at hand, we are sure to gain.

Twenty-three years ago, we had but one small church. But I saw then the great schoolhouses. I thought then, and still think, that in the neighborhood of any great school overflowing with children, a Sunday school and church might be sustained. Thus Trinity Memorial, Emmanuel, All Saints', and later, St. Mark's, and others, were established, located largely on this principle; for I had seen the evils of overcrowding of churches together, involving the weakness of some and the necessity of ultimate consolidation. Hence we have kept our churches well apart, avoiding the danger of interference. So I formed my plans very slowly and deliberately. They have matured well thus far. But more is yet to be done than has been done to complete their execution. They all contemplated Denver as a great see, with all that a see should mean. * * *

If such a city as Denver were walled in like a great mediæval town, and did not extend beyond what is known as the Congressional grant, a few church buildings of large size might suffice, for long years or for all the future. But as the conditions are, and considering the constant drift of people to the cities, and the spreading out of cities over wide areas, it cannot but be apparent that if we do not follow the population and build our churches so that they may be within easy reach of those of all ages and classes, others will surely do much of the work we shall have failed to do, and reap the advantages we might have secured. The great down-town churches will be, in process of time, surrounded by the encroaching business houses. The residence population will be further and further away from them. If we shall have been found delinquent in securing church sites and buildings as needed, our opportunities will have been lost, and we shall be compelled to fall back into relative inferiority and powerlessness for the work committed to us.

I do not suppose there is one of us who will for a moment admit that our Church must perforce take a second place in evangelistic work, or prove incapable of meeting the religious wants of the people. If there are any Church people of this sort, they are to be pitied. They need above all things to be converted. What we covet for our Church in position and power of influence we must make her. We are doing it to a certain extent, but not fully. We must be more ambitious, emulous for her growth; we must put forth more united, more zealous, energetic, and efficient efforts. We must be more imbued with the vital spirit of Christianity. The fault is not in the Church, it is wholly in us, if we fail.

— x —

Letters to the Editor

FOREIGN MISSIONS AND THE S. P. C. K. AND S. P. G.
To the Editor of The Living Church:

In a recent issue of THE LIVING CHURCH, T. P. H. tells us of the wonderful progress made by the Church Missionary Society during the past one hundred years. That society deserves great praise for its zeal and faithful work. T. P. H., however, does an injustice to two other noble societies of the Church. I read with astonishment these words:

"At the first signs of awakening in Protestant Christendom, the Society for the Promotion of the Gospel in New England was established in 1649, the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, in 1698, and the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in 1701, but none of these contemplated the conversion of the heathen;" and again: "The establishment of the Church Missionary Society, however, was the first attempt to draw out the sympathies of the Church of England towards heathen lands." T. P. H. is mistaken, as I will proceed to show.

Consider first the case of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. The original plan of the S. P. C. K. is in Sion College Library, to which, along with other MSS., it was bequeathed by Dr. Bray, one of the founders of the society. A clause in that document is as follows: "That it be in their power to propose and allot what pension they think fit to such ministers as shall most hazard their persons in attempting the conversion of the negroes or native Indians."

"In 1710 a subscription was proposed towards assisting ye Danish missionaries at Tranquebar on ye coast of Coromandel." This was the beginning of the society's missionary work in the East Indies.

The following letter of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York shows the great claims which the society has upon the gratitude of Church people: "We desire to bring to the notice of Church people the needs and claims of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. It was the first society to care for the religious education of the poor, the first to send missionaries to India, the first to circulate wholesome literature both at home and abroad, the first to undertake the translation of the Bible and Prayer Book into foreign languages. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in 1701, and the National Society, in 1811, were both offshoots from this society, when the work became too large for the one committee to manage."

I might quote many other testimonies to the early missionary zeal of the S. P. C. K.; one more will suffice.

"CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY,
SALISBURY Sq., London, E. C., Feb. 8, 1898.

"The committee of the Church Missionary Society would offer with thanks to Almighty God, their hearty congratulations to the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, upon the completion of 200 years of its vast and valued labors. They recall the fact that to the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge belongs the peculiar honor of being the first in this country to recognize the spiritual claims of India, and that it sent forth and supported for nearly a century the earliest Protestant missionaries to that country," etc. etc.

I pass on, now, to consider the case of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. The following extract is taken from the Digest of S. P. G. Records, 1701-1892:

"The charter shows that the society was incorporated for the threefold object of (1) providing a maintenance for an orthodox clergy in the plantations, colonies, and factories of Great Britain beyond the seas, for the instruction of the king's loving subjects in the Christian religion; (2) making such other provision as may be necessary for the propagation of the Gospel in those parts; and (3) receiving, managing, and disposing of the charity of His Majesty's subjects for those purposes."

I now quote the testimony of the late Bishop Lightfoot, of Durham.

Speaking at Sunderland, on Aug. 2, 1888, he said: "There are now fourteen African bishops. Not one of those dioceses existed till her Gracious Majesty had been on the throne fully ten years. There are nineteen sees in British North America, and only two of them were in existence at the commencement of this reign. There are now thirteen Australian sees, and the first of them was created just about the time Her Majesty ascended the throne. There are eight sees in New Zealand and the Pacific islands, and not one of them existed at the commencement of the reign. . . . By what agency, under God, had these results been achieved? The noble generosity of individuals has done much; the co-operation of the great Church Missionary Society has done more. There is a special association, likewise, for the establishment of colonial and missionary bishoprics. But the one society which from first to last has taken up this special work, and has carried it to these glorious results, is the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. . . . I think we may say that if there had been no Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, there could, humanly speaking, have been no Lambeth Conference."

We would heartily bid Godspeed to all efforts made by the Church Missionary Society for the spread of the Gospel.

JOHN FLETCHER.

Grand Valley, Ont.

CHRISTIAN MANLINESS AND HONESTY

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In the early part of December, 1896, I forwarded to Dean Hoffman, of the General Theological Seminary at New York, a manuscript left by Bishop White. It comprised the service prepared by him, and a brief address used at the laying of the corner-stone of "the East Building of the General Theological Seminary, July 28th, 1895." I wrote to Dean Hoffman that he could deposit it with any other relics of the institution, should the trustees desire to retain it. To this I received a hearty reply from the dean, and also a note from the late Dr. Langley, secretary, communicating the thanks of the Standing Committee, "for the interesting manuscript of the address delivered by the venerated Bishop White at the laying of the corner stone of the seminary." I sent the few sentences of the address I am about to copy, to two of our Church papers. Weeks went by, but no notice was taken of it, and I requested that the manuscript might be returned, unless held for printing. It was returned without note or comment. But two solutions occurred to me: The one was that the dose was a trifle heavy; the other was that such teaching must take rank with the Prayer of our Blessed Lord, which an old Congregational dame of Connecticut said "she could not stand—out-of-date, too old-fashioned." With the tendencies in our day in one direction to Unitarianism, not to say Agnosticism, and in the opposite, to the adoption of the teaching and practices of Rome, the supremacy of the Pope alone excepted, it may be well to be reminded that we are not lawless, but, as honest Churchmen, are bound to hold and to teach what the Prayer Book, in its integrity, exacts at our hands.

I now copy the few paragraphs of the address alluded to above.

Bishop White says: "He who addresses you rejoices in the beginning to be now made of a seat for the future lectures and other exercises of the seminary; but he would deprecate the laying of one stone upon another, and would withdraw his hand from the laying of the first stone, if he could foresee that, in the instruction to be given in the building, there would be at any future time (at present there is no danger of it) a departure from those properties of our system, in doctrine, in discipline, and in worship, which, in the 16th century, were cleared from superstition by the leaders in the English Reformation, were brought to the Colonies by the early emigrants of the Church of England, were recognized by us in the organization of our American Church, and, under the influence of the grace of God, have been preserved to us to the present day." W. WHITE BRONSON.

Personal Mention

The Rev. George Buck, rector of St. James' church, Poquetanuck, Conn., has resigned, and leaves the parish the first of June.

The Rev. William Brayshaw has accepted the unanimous call of the vestry of King and Queen parish, diocese of Washington. Mail should be sent after June 5th to Chaptico, St. Mary's Co., Maryland.

The Rev. Norman H. Burnham has accepted the charge of the church of the Good Shepherd, Santa Clara, N. Y.

The Rev. Henry E. Cooke has resigned the rectorship of Trinity church, San Francisco, Cal.

The Rev. Dr. Philander K. Cady sailed May 20th, for Rotterdam, Holland, on the Dutch line steamer, "Statendam."

The Rev. Milo H. Gates has resigned the charge of the church of Ascension, Ipswich, Mass., and will take the work at Cohasset for the summer.

The address of the Rev. Henry S. Getz, late rector of the church of the Holy Apostles, Philadelphia, commencing June 1st, and until further notice, will be 3003 Pacific avenue (Chelsea), Atlantic City, New Jersey.

The Rev. William Holden has been appointed Archdeacon of Suffolk, diocese of Long Island.

The Rev. Austin W. Mann, General Missionary to Deaf-Mutes, has been invited to deliver the sermon to the graduating class of the Ohio institution at Columbus, on the 2nd Sunday after Trinity.

The Rev. Joseph McConnell has been granted a year's leave of absence by Bishop Mott Williams, and will sail early in August for England. His address during June and July is Marquette, Mich.

The Rev. Thomas W. Nickerson, Jr., sailed for Europe on the steamship "Statendam," of the Dutch line, May 20th.

The Rev. R. L. Swope, D. D., sailed for a summer tour of Europe, on May 24th.

The Rev. C. H. Shultz, of Bloomington, Ill., has accepted a call to St. James' church, Cleveland, Ohio, and entered upon his work there on Whitsunday.

The Rev. Epiphanius Wilson sailed for Europe on the steamship "Etruria," May 13th.

The Rev. F. A. Wright has accepted the rectorship of the church of the Atonement, Westfield, Mass.

The Rev. Dr. F. C. H. Wendel, since Feb. 12th minister-in-charge of St. Paul's church, Huntington, Conn., goes into residence there on June 1st.

The Rev. C. L. Wells, of Minnesota State University, has accepted the deanship of the cathedral, at New Orleans. He will enter upon his duties in June.

Official

THE annual Retreat at Kemper Hall, for associates and other ladies, will begin with Vespers on Tuesday evening, June 20th, closing with celebration of the Holy Eucharist on Saturday, June 24th, the Rev. Fr. Huntington, Superior O. H. C., conductor. Ladies wishing to attend will please notify the Sister Superior, SISTERS OF ST. MARY, Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

At the meeting for organization of the newly elected Standing Committee of the diocese of Iowa, the Rev. Thos. E. Green, D. D., of Cedar Rapids, was elected president, and the Hon. J. J. Richardson, of Davenport, secretary. All matters for the consideration of the committee should be sent to the president at Grace church rectory, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Ordinations

In Grace church, Copenhagen, C. N. Y., May 17th, Bishop Huntington advanced to the priesthood the Rev. D. D. Waugh, minister-in-charge of the parish. The Rev. O. E. Herrick, D. D., preached the sermon.

In the church of the Saviour, Syracuse, C. N. Y., on Friday, May 19th, Bishop Huntington advanced the Rev. Messrs. R. J. Phillips, W. H. Gibbons, and W. R. Holloway, to the priesthood. The sermon was preached by the Rev. O. E. Herrick, D. D., and the presenters were the Rev. Dr. Theo. Babcock and the Rev. F. N. Westcott.

May 15th, the Rev. R. E. Boykin was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. A. M. Randolph, in St. John's church, Roanoke, Va. The Rev. Messrs. J. S. Alfriend and R. W. Patton presented the candidate. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. J. Lloyd. Mr. Boykin has accepted a call to Nelson parish, S. Va., and will take charge July 1st.

At the cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Chicago, on the morning of Trinity Sunday, the Bishop ordered to the diaconate, Messrs. Addison, Brandt, Delacy, and Hakes, of the graduating class of the Western Theological Seminary. It is understood that Mr. Addison, who has for about two years been the efficient superintendent of St. James' Sunday school, will take charge of the mission of St. John, Clybourne ave.

In Christ church, Norwich, Conn., May 16th, Bishop Brewster advanced to the priesthood seven deacons, viz., the Rev. Messrs. Frank Ernest Atkins, Clarence Archibald Bull, Frederic Huntington Mathison, George Blodgett Gilbert, Paul Hoffman, Clarence Hinman Lake, and Lawrence Sidney Shermer. The presenting presbyters were the Rev. Messrs. E. C. Acheson, Edward F. Mathison, Theo. M. Peck, J. D. Ewing, E. B. Schmitt, J. D. Atkins, and F. D. Hoskins. The sermon was preached by the last named.

At the cathedral of St. John the Divine, Bishop Potter held his spring-tide ordination on Trinity Sunday. Messrs. Samuel Henry Jobe, H. L. A. Fick, Geo. Francis Langdon, Wm. Joselyn Ehrhard, John Tilley, Jr., Robert Henry Locke, and John Henry Wilson were ordained deacons; and the Rev. Messrs. Frederick H. Sill and A. B. Judd, of New York diocese, were advanced to the priesthood. There were also ordained as priests the Rev. John Klehinoski Oshial, for the diocese of Chicago, who is about to return home to Japan as a missionary. The Rev. Archdeacon Tiffany, D. D., was the preacher, and the Bishop, celebrant at the Eucharist.

Ordained to the priesthood, by the Bishop of Milwaukee, in All Saints' cathedral, Milwaukee, on Trinity Sunday, 1899: The Rev. William Poyntell Kemper, M. A., of the cathedral; the Rev. Emil Montanus, M. A., of Saginaw, Mich.; the Rev. Samuel Ebenezer Hanger, of Monroe, Wis., and the Rev. William Aylesworth Howard, Jr., M. A., of Star Prairie, Wis. The candidates were presented by the Rev. Canon St. George and the Rev. C. B. B. Wright, Ph. D., of the cathedral. The sermon was preached by the Rev. John Belton Haslam. The Rev. George F. Burroughs also assisted in the ceremonies. The Rev. Mr. Kemper is a grandson of the late Bishop Kemper, Missionary Bishop of the Northwest.

Died

BETTS.—On Whitsunday, May 21st, 1899, at his home in Jamaica, N. Y., the Rev. Beverley Betts, in his 72nd year.

NEWTON.—Adeline Prichard, widow of the Rev. Benjamin Ball Newton, formerly assistant at Holy Trinity church, Brooklyn, May 25th, in the 82nd year of her life. Burial service on Trinity Sunday, at Grace church, Plainfield, N. J. Interment at St. Albans, Vt.

PARKMAN.—At San Gabriel, Cal., Sunday, May 7, 1899, Robert Breck Parkman, brother of the Rev. Henry C. Parkman, of the diocese of North Carolina. Service at home of his parents in Washington, D. C., Tuesday, May 16th.

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to Mr. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the Rev. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

THE Church Mission to the Deaf in twelve Trans Mississippi dioceses and Springfield, appeals for donations for expenses. Remittance should be made to the Rev. JAS. H. CLOUD, General Missionary, 2010 Obeare Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

APPEAL FOR A MISSIONARY SHIP

The Secretary of the Board of Managers, Church Missions House, New York:

MY DEAR SIR:—Returning to Monrovia from a visit to the southern part of the jurisdiction, on Tuesday before Easter, my next desire was to get to Cape Mount station for the remaining days of Passion Week and Easter. My anxiety was intensified by the fact that there is no clergyman there to administer the sacraments and perform other pastoral duties; besides, it was necessary that I should inspect the buildings that are in course of erection, one of which was started during my last visit in January. But fifty miles of ocean stood between that much-desired station and myself. Last Easter I was able to charter a boat belonging to a firm here, for the purpose, and at other times since, but it has been sold, and taken away from Liberia, and there is not another to be had. Now I have to take my chances on the English or German steamers as I can get them, with no certainty at any time as to going or returning. In the present instance, fortunately, one came here, and would also call at Cape Mount. I therefore took passage, and arrived there on Good Friday morning, in time to conduct two services that day, and several subsequently, including four on Easter Day, when both sacraments were administered. My arrival was a great relief to the teachers who feared that they would have to spend the queen of Church festivals without a clergyman.

So important is that station, where one hundred and fifty pupils are being trained by seven teachers, and where three large stone buildings are being erected at the present time, that I should be in possession of the facility of visiting there as often as may be necessary—at least once a month in the dry season—and not be left to take the chance of doing so at hap-hazard. If a small boat were furnished me, I might not only make regular visits to Cape Mount, but also use it in visiting the stations on the St. Paul's River, and even go to Bassa, if not further, occasionally.

There is a company in Germany that make "Petroleum Motor boats," which are well adapted to our use here, and are not expensive to keep up. Four thousand dollars would purchase one that would fully meet our requirements; but if it is impossible to raise so much, we shall content ourselves with one of a smaller size, say at a cost of two thousand and five hundred dollars. The latter would be quite small, and entirely open, while the other would have a little cabin to afford protection in inclement weather. When the dangers of the sea are considered, the larger boat would be found quite small enough to risk one's life or health in; but if it cannot be had, I am willing to trust God in the other as well.

Will you please make it known that the need is urgent, and solicit contributions towards it? Mercantile companies are sending boats to Africa for the use of their agents in the interest of their business. Surely Church people will be as ready to contribute towards the advancement of Christ's Kingdom in this land as the merchants are to seek worldly gain.

Yours faithfully,

S. D. FERGUSON,
Bishop of Cape Palmas and Parts Adjacent.

Monrovia, Liberia, W. C. A., April 7th, 1899.

Church and Parish

A PLEASANT home in Episcopalian family for children of parents who may wish to travel. Kind motherly care. References. Address MRS. S. DAVIES, 7015 St. Lawrence ave., Chicago.

EUCCHARISTIC WAFERS.—Priests' wafers, one cent; people's wafers, twenty cents a hundred; plain sheets, two cents. MISS A. G. BLOOMER, 229 Railroad ave., Mt. Vernon, New York.

A LADY desires work in a Home for Aged Women, or in a Babies' Home. She will work for her board and a small remuneration. For further particulars, address the SISTERS OF THE HOLY NATIVITY, Fond du Lac, Wis.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, June, 1899

4. 1st Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
11. ST. BARNABAS, Apostle. 2nd Sunday after Trinity.	Red.
18. 3d Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
24. NATIVITY ST. JOHN BAPTIST.	White.
25. 4th Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
29. ST. PETER, Apostle.	Red.

"Our vernal signs the Ram begins,
Then comes the Bull, in May the Twins;
The Crab in June; next Leo shines,
And Virgo ends the northern signs,
The Balance brings autumnal fruits,
The Scorpion stings, the Archer shoots;
December's Goat brings wintry blast,
Aquarius, rain—the Fish comes last."

Burden Bearers

BY MRS. J. D. H. BROWNE

Each one we bear our burdens, as we go
Along life's highway to the end of all;
And some beneath the heavy load stoop low,
And some with faltering steps must oftentimes fall.

And some walk firmly with uplifted head,
And scorn to tell the weariness they know,
And some, with smiling lips and lightsome tread,
Clasp close the treasure that will work them woe.

Each one we bear our burden, and the way
Grows rougher as the pilgrim onward fares
Amid the heat and turmoil of the day,
The stress of passions and of pains and cares.

Yet through it all there sounds a wondrous Voice,
Whose piercing sweetness cleaves the earthly din,
And they that hear it tremble and rejoice,
And new-born hope stirs 'neath the load of sin.

"Come unto Me," it says, "Come unto Me,
Weary and heavy laden souls of men,
For I have died to set My children free,
And lo! to give them life I live again.

"Come, lay your burdens down beneath My Cross,
And learn of Me the secret of My peace,
And I will give you heavenly gain for loss,
For earthly sorrows, joys that cannot cease."

Ah! thronging thousands, will you not give ear,
Nor pause a moment on your weary road?
The Voice is calling, but you will not hear,
Nor see the Hands outstretched to lift your load.

O Love long suffering! still in pity call,
Cease not to cry, though dull of hearing we,
So men at last at Thy dear feet shall fall
And cease from self, and Thou shalt make them free.

San Bernardino, Cal.

—X—

WE are glad to see that the clergy, in some quarters, are waking up to the importance of circulating the weekly Church papers which help to instruct and inform the people about the Church at large. We have letters nearly every day indicating this. The following is taken from one just at hand:

That so excellent a paper as THE LIVING CHURCH can be obtained at such low price is phenomenal. I will do everything in my power to assist you. I cannot send you to day the name of any one to undertake the canvass for subscribers, but if I find no one willing or capable of doing it, I will undertake it myself. I have talked "Church paper" to my parishioners for weeks, months. It amazes me to see how many people are willing to feed their minds on trash and gossip of the daily press of some of our small towns, and feel no interest in the information of a Church paper. If I knew fifty copies of THE LIVING CHURCH were going every week into the homes of my parishioners, I would not fear for the Churchmanship or the numerical strength of this parish five years from this date.

—X—

IN the course of an interview on his impressions during his visit in England,

Bishop Whipple said he had seen all the leading Churchmen, and as a result, viewed the ritualistic controversy calmly. There was certainly, he said, no necessity of panic. As showing the difference between England and America, the Bishop said he could mention the fact that never, during his episcopate of forty years, had he experienced the disobedience of a clergyman in his diocese. Bishop Whipple said that he thought it an absolute impossibility that England should ever go back to Rome, and as far as America is concerned, there is no such tendency anywhere. Conversation with the heads of the Church in England and America, however, convinced him that there is a wide-spread desire for unity. Speaking of Americanism in the Roman Catholic Church, Bishop Whipple said he believed it was a passing phase, without permanent effect. He eulogized Archbishop Ireland whose great efforts for good as a neighbor he had watched with great pleasure, and whose liberal kindness toward other Churches could not be doubted.

—X—

BISHOP LEONARD, in a speech before the diocesan convention at Cleveland, declared that polygamy was being practiced all over the country. "The good people of the United States are raising a great hue and cry," said the Bishop, "against the admission of a member of Congress who is a polygamist, when practical polygamy is being practiced all over this country. Things have come to such a pass that the flimsiest pretext is made the means of suing for a divorce. A slight quarrel or miserable lust are alike made means to this end." Bishop Leonard went on to say that he wanted the Church laws made so severe that a divorced person cannot be remarried by a Church clergyman. He admitted that the system he advocated would cause great suffering among many who are worthy and innocent of wrong intent, but the times are, in his estimation, so out of joint that the most radical measures must shortly be taken to provide against utter degeneracy.

—X—

A CORRESPONDENT says: "A twenty-five cent subscription to a parish or diocesan paper will make nine-tenths of the people ironclad against appeals to subscribe for a Church weekly. That is my experience." There are forty-five diocesan papers, and more coming!

—X—

Pen-and-Ink-lings

CONSTABLE E. JONES, a member of the Leeds (England) police force, sent in three paintings to the Royal Academy this spring, one of which was accepted. The policeman-artist is thirty years old, and first became interested in painting while stationed in the Leeds Art Gallery, but he has had little instruction. Edward Gay, the American landscape painter, was once a bartender in Albany.

Life hath two hands for those who fitly live—
With one it gives, with one it takes away;
The willing palm still finds the touch of love,
And he alone has lost the art to live
Who cannot win new friends.—Weir Mitchell.

ACCORDING to recent statistics, the total number of newspapers of all kinds published in the world is 42,800. The United States comes first, and far in advance of all countries, with 19,760 papers, and Great Britain next, with 6,050. In Greece the people still like to hear and tell new things, for that little country boasts 580 papers. Le Petit Journal, published in Paris, has the largest daily circulation in the world, averaging 1,000,000 copies; and the paper which has the smallest circulation is The Imperial Review, published for the sole benefit of the Emperor of Austria. It is made up from translations of "all the principal items in the prominent European papers, and the daily edition is three copies.

EVERYTHING is referred to a Commission nowadays, sometimes even a Joint Commission, and when we want to put special emphasis on the matter, we refer it to a High Commission. But who would have dreamed that such a private and insignificant a question as the drying of the family wash would have to be settled by commissioners! It is even so in Washington. Several years ago, Harper's Bazar tells us, the chancellor of the German Legation permitted the family clothes-line to be hung in front of his house. The chancellor's neighbors objected to the flapping view continually presented, and sought relief. Four high officials debated the matter, and finally, despite his protestations, ordered the clothes-line into the backyard. This winter, Congressman Showalter, of Pennsylvania, introduced similar decoration of his front yard on Capitol Hill. The commissioners were again called upon, and emphatically reaffirmed their decision, so the Monday morning flutter along Capitol Hill vanished, and Washington trusts there will be no further requisition for the services of a Commission on the Place for Hanging Clothes.

A SCIENTIFIC GRANDPAPA

"See, grandpapa, my flower!" she cried;
"I found it in the grasses!"
And with a kindly smile, the Sage Surveyed it through his glasses.

"Ah, yes," he said, "Involucrate,
And all the florets ligulate,
Corolla gamopetalous—
Compositæ—exogenous—
A pretty specimen it is,
Taraxacum dens-leonis!"

She took the blossom back again,
His face her wistful eye on.
"I thought," she said, with quivering lip,
"It was a dandelion!"

—St. Nicholas.

W. V. PETTIT, writing in The Atlantic, refers to the timidity and lack of courage of the native Puerto Rican, evidenced in such ordinary cases as fear of cows and mettlesome horses! "Yet," he goes on to say, "the native is not without redeeming features. He is invariably courteous, uniformly respectful. The peon regards the senores very much as the feudal serf must have regarded his neighboring gentry. Consequently, he is in a very "governable" state of mind. He is free with his money, long-suffering under oppression, but intensely excitable. He will remember a favor, but his gratitude disappears immediately upon the receipt of some real or fancied slight. He is proud, but only for applause. His self-esteem depends solely upon his neighbor's estimate of him. Horse-whip him privately, and he will forgive you. Snub him publicly, and he is your lifelong enemy."

IN these days of civilization, when machinery has so largely done away with hand-labor, it is difficult to realize that we have, living in the heart of the country, a people so primitive as the dwellers in the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee. The mountain potteries are still making flambeaux, lamps of almost classic pattern, in which grease is burned with a floating wick. In the high mountains where streams are small and mills impracticable, the whipsaw is brought into use, and two men will get out three or four hundred feet of boards from the logs in a day. Hand-mills for grinding can still be constructed by well-brought-up mountain men, and in some places they have not yet lost the tradition of the fashioning of the old English cross-bow!

AND who, says President Frost, of Berea, does not have a feeling akin to reverence in the presence of a hand-loom? When a mountain maid speaks of her "wheel," she does not refer to a bicycle, but to the spinning-wheel of our ancestors, her use of which here in our mountains calls to mind the sudden and entire disappearance of cloth-making from the list of household industries. Not a single member of the Sorosis could card, spin, dye, or weave. Their mothers, for the most part, had forgotten these arts, yet their grandmothers, and their foremothers for a hundred generations, have been spinners. Spinning, in fact, has helped to form the character of our race, and it is pleasant to find that here, in Appalachian America, it still contributes to the health and grace and skill of woman-kind

-X-

The Awakening of China

FROM The Church in China

THE past six months have altered permanently not only the international relations of America, but the very conditions of national existence in China. The change in China has been occasioned by a development of progressive tendencies in the young Emperor, Kwang Hsu, quite as unexpected as was the war which brought about the change in America. Rarely have important edicts followed each other in such quick succession, and never has a Chinese Emperor treated Western methods so favorably. Probably the most important edicts are those relating to the civil-service examinations, doing away with some of the useless, but exceedingly difficult requirements (chiefly the wen chang, a highly technical literary production, and the test of chiography), and introducing questions which touch the new learning. So radical were these edicts that many literary men felt the very bottom had fallen out of their ambitions. Four-fifths of the average scholar's library, accumulated by the toil and savings of the best years of a lifetime, were rendered useless by the one decree abolishing the wen chang; and booksellers were most seriously embarrassed by the altered values of their stock. Even men who had some acquaintance with foreign affairs felt that the change was too rapid, and events have proved that the preparation had been inadequate.

At the present moment the Emperor's progress is stopped by a violent reaction, and the government is in the hands of a typically cruel and conservative Oriental tyrant, the Emperor's aunt.

But the steps already taken cannot be retraced. The old style of examinations may be reinstated for a time, but the minds of many Chinese students have been stirred too deeply for the worn-out learning of the past ever to assert again its former undisputed and deadening sway. And since the educational system is the great factor in holding together the fabric of Chinese civilization, that civilization must prepare for a radical change. If the reform party is not strong and wise enough to gain control again, it seems likely that the government will soon go to pieces, and China be divided among the great Powers of Europe. In any case, the outward changes proposed by the Emperor's recent edicts, are but the expression of a profound inward movement which cannot be withstood.

The political breakdown of the old regime is causing many men to feel keenly what heretofore they have only feared—the bankruptcy of the old philosophies on which the old regime was based. Add to this the fact that civil and military, as well as commercial, advancement, will hereafter depend on proficiency in at least some part of "Western learning," and it is safe to foretell a greatly altered relation between the missionary and the hitherto proud and scornful, as well as ignorant, Chinese gentleman.

There is sure to be an increasingly great demand for the material elements of Western civilization; but just as we find our work in Cuba only begun when the Spaniard is expelled, so we shall find that the most serious need of China is not what first appears. Grant the Chinese people moral uprightness, which can be based only on true religion, and they may well be left to take care of themselves. So far as the old religions of China are concerned, they are not living faiths in anything like the measure we usually anticipate before coming to China. Mohammedanism and Judaism have a certain amount of vitality; but Confucianism and Buddhism in China are dead, and their hold on the people is that of the dead man's strangling grip. The real need of China is something to avert the materialism which is only too natural to the Chinese, and to nourish real moral and spiritual life.

As China begins to wake up to her poverty and need, it is a cause of sanguine hope to see that our America begins also to realize her responsibility to people outside her own domain. We may trust the new sense of world-wide duties and opportunities to bring Americans face to face with the great commercial openings in China. Shall we not also expect the New America to respond equally to the religious and educational opportunities in the new China?

-X-

Christian Science Absurdities

MRS. EDDY seems to have been originally something of a homeopathist; at least she made some use of the system, and her adopted son graduated at a homeopathic college in Philadelphia. She affirms that she derived valuable hints from that system; for instance, she says that she "made a very high homeopathic attenuation of natrium muriaticum, or common table salt, and with one drop of that attenuation in a goblet of water, and a teaspoonful of the water administered at intervals of three hours," she had cured a patient sinking in the last stages of typhoid fever. The highest attenuation of homeopathy, and the most potent, steps out of matter into mind. She brings in the everlasting contradictions, of course. The non-existent matter, common salt, made into a high homeopathic attenuation which does not exist, in a goblet of water which did not exist, and administered every three hours in a non-existent teaspoon, "steps out of matter into mind," and cures a patient of a typhoid fever which he never had.

In surgery Christian Scientists claim to have done some striking exploits. They say they have set dislocated bones without touching them, so that the bones have returned with an audible snap to their sockets. Mrs. Eddy says: "Bones have only the substantiality of the thought which formed them." It must be very interesting to see a non-existent bone, having only the substantiality of thought, which had been dislocated from a socket which never existed, going back without being touched into that imaginary socket with a thump audible to all the bystanders. Still, these healers realize that bone surgery is not very easy, and Mrs. Eddy herself says, "until the advancing age admits the efficacy and supremacy of mind, it is better to leave the adjustment of broken bones and dislocations to the fingers of a surgeon, while you confine yourself to mental reconstruction and the prevention of inflammation."—Edmund Andrews, A. M., M. D., LL. D., in Medical Journal.

-X-

The Secularization of the Religious Press

D. R. S. STORRS, in his reminiscences of the early years of The Independent, published in the fiftieth anniversary number of that journal, expresses regret that its first editors, of whom he was one, did not minister more to the spiritual life of its readers, and repeats a remark made at the time that "The Independent was certainly a strong paper, and might some time become a useful one, if it should ever get religion." But if The Independent was too secular and not religious enough then, what is to be said of it now? It has gone over more and more into the secular field, so as to prompt the remark that it has lost what little religion it had. The Outlook has gone still further in the same direction, and has practically ceased to be a religious journal. These journals are doing a useful work, and are of a high order of excellence, but they are political and literary, rather than religious journals, though still religious in spirit.

These are extreme instances of a change that has come over almost all religious papers. Formerly they were occupied exclusively with religious topics, and only glanced occasionally and incidentally into the secular field. Now they generally have departments reporting and reviewing the secular world, and this work is better done in several respects by some religious journals than by the secular press; for the news that pours forth from the daily press in a confused mass, in the weekly press is sifted and systematized and set forth in the light of general explanation. It has thus come to pass that many busy professional men, as well as general readers, depend more on their religious journal for their bird's-eye view of the world than on the secular papers. The religious journals also deal with leading secular events on their editorial pages, viewing them in the light of moral and religious principles. Simultaneously with this change in the religious press, there has been a parallel change in the secular press. The secular press has, to a considerable extent, come over upon the religious field, both in its news columns and in its editorial pages. It reports religious meetings and important ecclesiastical events, publishes sermons and expositions of the Sunday school lessons, and gives intelligent and able editorial consideration to religious affairs. Thus the religious press has become more secular, and the secular press has become more religious.

These changes are not for the worse, but for the better on both sides. It is a distinct gain to religion that the secular press has recognized its importance even as news, and given it a place in its pages. As for the religious press, it is bound to look at the world in all its fields and phases, or it will lose touch with the practical world, and float in the air as a ghostly abstraction, having no real field and force. The chasm between the secular and the religious is not so broad and deep as it once was; in a sense it has been filled up, and these two fields have been merged into one. "The field is the world." Religion is not a science or an art that can be shut up within local boundaries, but is a universal spirit that must find and force a way into every corner and crevice of human thought and action. Every secular event becomes religious when it is viewed from a religious standpoint. The religious journal looks at the secular field from this religious point of view, and beneath and above the kingdoms of this world sees the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is its distinctive difference and characteristic, as compared with the secular press, and it will always have this field and function.

The religious journal, therefore, is not going to be driven from the field by its secular co-worker. Religious journalism is a vastly wider and deeper force to-day than it ever was in the past. It touches our many-sided life at every point with helpful illumination and inspiration; and its influence is growing and not waning. This change has only brought it into closer and more vital adjustment to its environment, and thereby made it more useful. The process of natural selection, and of the survival of the fittest, is improving the religious journal, as it is all things else. But the religious journal must not go too far in this direction, and lose its religious color by toning itself down to a secular shade; rather, it should magnify its characteristic office, and intensify its religious point of view, focusing the affairs of this world so as to show their relation to the kingdom of God, and reflecting upon them the light and power of the world to come. The secularized religious press may thus be more broadly and deeply religious and be more influential in promoting the cause of truth and righteousness. The religionized secular press is also improved in its sphere, and these two, instead of being rivals, may be harmonious co-workers.—The Presbyterian Banner.

Book Reviews and Notices

The Thirty-Nine Articles, their History and Explanation. By B. J. Kidd, B. D., Keble College. Vol. I. Articles I-VIII. New York: James Pott & Co. Price, 30cts.

This book belongs to a series of "Oxford Church Text Books," under the general editorship of the Rev. Leighton Pullan, which, judging by the names of the scholars employed upon them, on the one hand, and their exceedingly low price on the other, are likely to be extremely useful to theological students and others. Mr. Kidd is favorably known for his valuable treatise on the "Latin Mediæval Doctrine of the Eucharistic Sacrifice," published by the S. P. C. K. In the volume before us, sixty-two pages are devoted to the history of the Thirty-nine Articles, and the remainder to the explanation of the first eight. There are 116 pages in all, printed in small but very clear type. The history is given under four heads. There is first a general treatment of the growth of new doctrinal formularies, in which some good distinctions are made between the Creeds and Articles, with some slight account of the continental documents of the Reformation period, such as the Augsburg Confession and the Formula of Concord, on the one hand, and the canons and decrees of the Council of Trent, on the other. The second chapter gives a succinct history of the doctrinal formularies of Henry VIII. Chapter III. is on the Forty-two Articles of the reign of Edward VI. Finally, chapter IV., which is the longest, gives the history of the formation and adoption of the Thirty-Nine Articles, from which the author passes on to the history of subscription, and of the attempts made after 1571 to amend the Articles or substitute others for them. The author completes this division of his book with a reference to the saying of Pitt, that the Church of England has a popish Liturgy and a Calvinistic set of Articles. Their history shows that this dictum is fallacious, and that that interpretation of them to which Laud and his friends first recalled attention is the one vindicated as historically correct. In the second part, the Articles dealt with, namely, the first eight, belong to a group by themselves, on the Catholic Faith, dealing with the contents of the Faith, including the doctrines of the Trinity, the Incarnate Son, and the Holy Ghost, and the rule of faith; namely, Holy Scripture and the Creeds. These are the most systematic of the Articles, and in the explanation of them, the author exhibits the learning and accuracy of a thorough theologian. We shall look with interest for the second volume, which will include the Articles about which most controversy has arisen.

The Battles of Peace. By George Hodges, Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. New York: Thomas Whittaker. Cloth, pp. 273. Price, $1.

These four-and-twenty sermons were all preached by Dean Hodges in the memorial chapel of the school. They are full-ripe with virile counsel and instructiveness. From the preface we learn that one of the number, on "Sanctification and Service," has been repeated many times; it is most worthy of repetition. A passing extract from it will serve to show its spirit and the genius of the whole collection:

"There is a general desire to-day to be of use in the world. . . . It sends us out on errands into neglected places. It is the most conspicuous fact in our modern life. Unhappily, there is beside it another fact, almost equally conspicuous, the fact of neglect of the institutions of religion. People are a great deal more interested than they were in doing good to others, but they are not nearly so interested in going to church. The idea of service is emphasized, but the idea of sanctification is many times lost out of sight. Man is best served by those who in serving their fellow-men, serve God, and who go about their work in the Name and in the Spirit of Jesus Christ. No other social work is of abiding value. No other philanthropy can avail to help the needy. Society needs social workers, but it needs Christian workers a great deal more. It needs men and women who love their fellowmen with the love of Jesus Christ, and who daily bring to Him their perplexities, their problems, their failures and successes, that He may help them to help others. This is the mission of the Church in the community; this is what the services and the sacraments mean; this is why the doors stand open and the bells ring. The mission of the Church is to help us to be good that we may do good. It is to sanctify us for the sake of service."

The Messages of the Earlier Prophets. By Frank Knight Saunders, Ph. D., Yale University, and Charles Foster Kent, Ph. D., Brown University. Philadelphia: John D. Wattles & Co.

It is quite true, as the authors of this volume say, that, although we have the Bible in the English language, a language supposed to be as a matter of course, "understandable of the people," there are, in fact, considerable portions, especially of the Prophets, which convey no intelligible idea to many readers. The object of this work is, by a chronological arrangement and interpretation through a paraphrase, to give the earnest reader of the Bible and the general student, the means of arriving at a better knowledge of the meaning and force of the earlier Prophets. The writers do not concern themselves with questions of criticism, except so far as critical studies constitute an aid to arriving at probable conclusions on matters of chronology. They do not even pronounce dogmatically upon the question of two Isaiahs. There is a brief introduction on the beginnings of Hebrew prophecy. The authors speak of the period of the Prophets as "an era of constructive thought hardly to be surpassed in the world's history. To explain it as the mere achievement of logical and earnest minds is impossible. The only satisfactory explanation is that God was leading and teaching mankind through His chosen messengers." The earlier Prophets here expounded are Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah, Nahum, Zephaniah, Jeremiah, and Habakkuk. Each of these is prefaced by a brief historical resumé. The work seems to be well adapted to the purposes for which it is intended. There is, perhaps, no better aid in the elucidation of the obscurities of Holy Scripture than a careful paraphrase. While it is true that a paraphrase is necessarily an interpretation, and may often exhibit one out of several possible renderings, this is no objection to the method, but rather an advantage, provided it is understood that the decision in any particular case is not final. The meaning selected will probably be that which has commended itself to the best interpreters, and will thus afford a good starting point for the student who wishes to push his investigations further. It only remains to say that the work has been carefully done, and cannot fail to be profitable to those who use it in the manner recommended by the authors.

Letters to a Mother on the Philosophy of Froebel. By Susan E. Blow. The International Education Series No. 45. Edited by W. T. Harris, LL.D. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Price, $1.50.

This new volume from Miss Blow's pen will be welcomed by all who have read her previous studies on the philosophy of Froebel. It will be especially valuable to mothers, as giving in a clear and readable form, for the general public, the truths underlying a certain number of the "Mother-Plays," with applications to the training of child life. The pleasing, yet earnest, manner in which Miss Blow writes these letters to one mother in regard to one child, makes these applications all the more interesting. Some readers will perhaps feel that this devoted follower of Froebel sees deeper, higher, and more widely than did Froebel himself in considering these mother-plays. However this may be, the truths developed are full of practical suggestion. Kindergartners will gain fresh insight, and find much food for thought, in Miss Blow's exposition of the theory and practice of the kindergarten, with her hints as to methods which, from her point of view, are in opposition to those of the kindergarten.

Contemporary French Novelists. By René Doumic. Authorized Translation by Mary D. Frost. New York and Boston: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. Price, $2.

What first impresses an observer and possible non-admirer of Frenchmen, in looking at the portrait of the author, which forms the frontispiece of this volume, is the total absence of self-consciousness. M. Doumic has not "posed" for his picture, nor does he pose in his book. His strength, simplicity, directness of style, his sincerity, are remarkable. He wastes no time in preliminaries; there is not a word of preface, comment, explanation, or dedication. Apparently he does not regard himself or his performance with emotion, if not with admiration, as is too often the wont of his countrymen. He confronts the reader with a paper on Octave Feuillet whom he asserts to be, although the friend and advocate of romance, one who knew and did not conceal its dangers. Feuillet's work he believes to be "the most perfect example of the idealist novel in our generation." In the next paper, on the brothers Goncourt, we have a powerful arraignment of those French writers who "have narrowed, confined, and impoverished the subject matter of literature." M. Doumic denounces the work of those dainty and fastidious artists who "have made the most persevering, conscientious, and laborious effort to empty literature of its contents," by concentrating their entire interest on questions of form. Any intelligent reader will find himself interested in the account of the life and achievements of Zola, Daudet, Bourget, Guy de Maupassant, and Pierre Loti; but, without original interest in, or knowledge of, the eight subjects treated of in the other chapters, it is not possible for a lover of literature to remain indifferent to the power and charm of M. Doumic's thought and style, no matter what one's individual taste or line of reading may be. It is good to learn, by inference, of the writer's sturdy belief in the truth that "literature is not constrained by a species of fatality to develop in defiance of all notions of right living and of all counsels of good taste." There is hope for French letters when a critic like this denounces the realism which "offers to humanity the most degraded image of herself," and who advocates a literary system which shall be based upon the love of human kind. The translator has also done her work well, and the book is well printed, with wide margins, and plain, fair type, and is substantially bound, so that there is no barrier to one's enjoyment of its four hundred pages. Excellent portraits of the authors discussed are included.

Missionary Expansion Since the Reformation. By the Rev. J. A. Graham, M. A., Missionary of the Church of Scotland Young Men's Guild, at Kalimpong, India; 145 illustrations and eight maps. New York, Chicago, and Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Co. 1899. Price, $1.

This volume gives, in short compass, a general view of the principles, history, and present position of the missions of the Reformed Churches. Most of the chapters have been submitted to acknowledged authorities on the respective subjects. The development of missionary work in heathen lands is sketched from the beginning of such efforts to the present time, without regard to denominational limitations, the author's plan being to show what has been done by all Churches and societies. He has certainly succeeded in giving an interesting account along the lines indicated, and a comprehensive picture.

Jesus Christ and His Surroundings. By the Rev. Norman L. Walker, D.D. New York, Chicago, Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Company.

It was the author's intention, we are informed, not to add another to the many "Lives of Christ," but simply to describe our Lord's environment, the various agencies and influences with which he was brought in contact. As a result of these reverent and beautiful studies in the Gospels, we do get a series of views of the earthly life of our Lord of a most instructive and suggestive character. Sometimes the author's expressions are not just such as we think a sound theology would permit him to use. For instance, we would not say that "The natural world . . . oftentimes helped to the birth great thoughts of His heart which before were helplessly struggling to be born" (italics ours), but there are not many such blemishes in the book. What pleases and instructs us most is the author's fidelity to the Gospel story, and it is refreshing to find a writer on this subject over whom the second death of a doubting criticism has had no power. We very heartily commend this volume to our readers.

A NOTABLE "Catalogue of Authors" has been published by the Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Company, Boston. It is a handsome bound volume of over 200 pages, comprising works published by this company, with a sketch of the firm, and some account of the origin and character of the periodicals and various editions of noted works issued by this house. There are few who have any idea of the extent and value of the work of these publishers. The catalogue is a surprise and a delight to all book lovers. It is full of valuable and interesting information about books, many of which have entered into the literary life of the world. Biographical sketches are given of every author, and these appear in alphabetical order. The frontispiece gives very fine vignettes of six of the most noted American authors. An index of fifteen finely printed pages gives some idea of the extent of the contents. The catalogue will be sent to any address for twenty-five cents, which scarcely covers expense of postage and mailing.

Books Received

Under this head will be announced all books received up to the week of publication. Further notice will be made of such books as the editor may select to review.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

Rights of the Church of England under the Reformation Settlement. By Viscount Halifax. 50c.
True Limits of Ritual in the Church. By the Rev. Dr. Linklater. $1.50.
Instructions on the Revelation of St. John the Divine. By the Rev. Cresswell Strange. $2.
Constitutional Authority of Bishops in the Catholic Church. By Dr. A. Theodore Wirgman. $2.
The Roman Primacy. By the Rev. Luke Rivington. $2.50.

HARPER & BROS.

The Break-Up of China. By Lord Charles Beresford. Portraits and Maps. $3.

Pamphlets Received

Catalogue of Cornell University, College of Law.
The Peace Cross Book. R. W. Russell, New York.
Recueil des Instructions. By the Bishop of Haiti.
Blasphemy; A Heinous Sin. By Rev. M. M. Moore, Los Angeles, Cal.
Human Vivisection. The American Humane Association, Chicago.
St. Mark's Church in the Bowery. One Hundredth Anniversary Consecration Commemoration.
In Memoriam Rev. John Livingston Reese, D.D.
Is There any Room in the Ministry? By S. D. McConnell, D.D., D.C.L.
Work Among the Outcast.
The Church Mendicant. By Geo. H. McKnight, D.D., Elmira, N. Y.
Features of our Faith, Position, and Practices. By J. C. Davidson, M. A.
Catalogue of Grafton Hall, Fond du Lac, Wis.
Report of the Twelfth Annual Convention of the Church Students' Missionary Association.
Forty-third Annual Report of the Mission to Seamen.
Apostolic Origin and Succession of the Anglican Church. By the Rev. F. L. Smith.
An American Response to Expressions of English Sympathy.

Periodicals

The topic treated by Cecilia Waern in Scribner's Magazine for June, is an infrequent one, for it describes, under the title, "The Modern Group of Scandinavian Painters," the advance in art made by Thaulow, Larsson, Zorn, and others, reproductions of whose work are given in excellent engravings. Governor Roosevelt's articles are concluded in this number; also "A Poet's Musical Impressions, from the Letters of Sidney Lanier." Henry James has a short character story, and Joel Chandler Harris, another about "Aunt Minerva Aan."

Good Housekeeping for June has an illustrated article on Mary Lyon, the founder of Mt. Holyoke College, the first of a series on "Women Who Have Made the World Better." Another series, "Fashions and Fabrics," beginning in this number, is by Margaret Bisland, and relates largely to home dressmaking. "Seasonable Menus," are prepared by Margaret Burroughs; Christine Terhune Herrick writes of "Domestic Appliances as Personally Observed in Foreign Lands." "Traveling with Children" is considered by Amelia H. Botsford; William Orr, Jr., writes of "Governmental Maps," and their use in the vacation season. There is a pleasing story, minor articles, good verses, and excellent departments, including a prize anagram. [George D. Chamberlain, publisher, Springfield, Mass. $1 a year.]

There is much of interest and instruction in Harper's Magazine for June. "The Rescue of the Whalers," a sled journey of sixteen hundred miles in the Arctic regions by Lieut. Ellsworth P. Bertholf, U. S. R. C. S., is illustrated from the author's photographs. "The Century's Progress in Scientific Medicine," by Henry Smith Williams, M. D., is likewise illustrated from photographs and portraits, and puts the reader in possession of some important items of information. "Korean Inventions" surprises one by its title, as we should hardly expect that little nation to distinguish itself in such manner. W. D. Howells continues "Their Silver Wedding Journey," Mary Hartwell Catherwood has a short story, "The Mothers of Honore," and the romance, "The Princess Xenia," is still on hand. Richard Harding Davis has also a short story in this issue.

Opinions of the Press

The Evangelical Churchman

THE CHURCH AND THE FRAGMENTS.—One of the most noteworthy features of the work of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, is the way they "gather up the fragments." In looking over the work of their archdeacons or traveling evangelists, it is noticeable that services are often maintained in places with but two or three communicants. The Church Messenger, of California, records "a little Sunday school at Carpinteria, with an average of twelve pupils, which made the liberal Easter offering of $10 for missions." In the days gone by, these were the scraps and fragments the Church of England ignored and the Methodists took care of. The results we are reaping to-day. But a change is slowly taking place. We are now looking after the corners and waste places, and God will certainly bless us in the harvest gathering of future years.

The Standard (Baptist)

THE CURSE OF PUBLICITY.—The trouble in this world would be about halved if people could be prevented from telling things that they have no business to tell. Particularly is this true of the trouble caused by those useful, but sometimes extremely disagreeable persons, newspaper reporters. In altogether too many cases, what the reporter is expected by his chief to bring in is not necessarily the most significant news, but the news which will make a "good story." It does not matter that it may concern the private affairs of respected citizens, and may have been obtained by underhanded means; nor is it in the least a reason for silence that the publication would cause pain to sensitive persons concerned, or would hinder the arrest of criminals, or would injure the professional reputation of men whose loss cannot be repaired by a later correction of the untrue statement. There is a frank and most disgusting commercialism about the news department of nearly all large newspapers, to the exclusion of all considerations of ethics and good taste.

The Advance (Congregational)

THE PRICE OF OPINION.—In this vast universe man establishes himself on a little claim which has been surveyed by the chain of knowledge. He is so sure of some things that he can say of them: "I know." He is no longer thinking his way towards them or around them, but he confidently thinks from them, as a surveyor measures from some corner stake or stone, the location of which is beyond dispute. But beyond this homestead of knowledge, which is all the time being enlarged, there is a much larger area which is claimed by the sovereignty of opinion. Opinion represents the results of our thinking about something when we cannot say that we stand on ground of positive knowledge. The Latin word from which it is derived means to think, and it represents various degrees of conviction from tentative reasoning to settled judgment. Men are often more positive in stating and defending their opinions, whether well or ill formed, than they are in defending well-established truths. The reason is mainly this: truth is impersonal, and like air and sunlight, no man can claim that any truth belongs to him exclusively; but his opinions are his own, they take on certain forms in his own mind, even when the mental pollen which fructified them came from some more virile mind; he takes a certain pride in them as his own property, and stands ready to exhibit and defend them. Now, every man has a right to his opinions, but if he states them by tongue, pen, types, or otherwise—and the privilege of expression is very dear to the average mortal—if he tries to induce other people to cast aside their opinions and accept his, then he will have to pay the price of having opinions, which is sometimes very heavy. Still, it pays in the long run to have opinions and to stand manfully by them, cost what it may. Opinion sways the world. Advancement comes from the struggle for existence all the while going on between opinions. The fit, or true, survive; the false perish.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XV.

SPRING came as usual to the Mohawk Valley that year of 1777, but it brought with it still darker clouds of fear and disaster.

On a certain warm morning when earth and sky seemed to breathe naught but benediction, Evelyn had just finished her morning superintendence of the household when Mrs. Underhill came in from the linen room. The good lady's health had failed somewhat during the past year, and many of the home duties now devolved upon others, but the regular inspection of the family linen was still her pride. "I think, Evelyn," she said, "'tis time my dear husband had returned from his early journey to Schenectady. I cannot be forgetful of the stealing away of Griffith, and now that poor Sir John is in banishment, we are without protection."

"Uncle is made of sterner stuff than Griffith," returned Evelyn, resting her cheek, which had grown much paler and thinner lately, on her hand.

"Aye, and the arm of the Lord is with him," said the wife with a trustful smile, which beautified her somewhat inanimate face. "The Lord is the refuge of the oppressed, even a refuge in times of trouble," she finished softly, as she smoothed out Mr. Underhill's bands which she was mending.

"Ah! dear lady," cried Evelyn with her old impulsiveness, "you are a saint! and yet I know that your eyes are dim with weeping for your lads, and that you lie awake o' nights thinking of Alan in the trenches by the Delaware."

Mrs. Underhill wiped her eyes on her needlework, and never knew that she had done the sacreligious act.

"It is true, Evelyn," she said, "and I sometimes think Alan has been done much injustice; especially do I think it since we have heard later accounts from New York. His father does not trust Captain Dalton overmuch, and I am glad he has left with Guy Johnson for Albany, if, indeed, he have not gone to Canada."

Evelyn was silent. Captain Dalton's news had once proved true in Griffith's case, and was he to be completely discredited now? Just then the tread of Mr. Underhill's horse was heard without, and Evelyn, jumping from her chair, ran to meet him. "Oh sir!" she cried aghast, as she perceived that the clergyman's dress was bespattered and disordered, and that blood trickled from under his hat. "What has befallen you?"

"Be still, my child, and help me, an you will, to wash this wound in the spring-house, and remove some of the mud from my garments. My wife hath been much overtaxed of late, and I would not have her see me thus."

"But," questioned Evelyn as he walked beside her, leading his horse, "how happened it? You have had a fall?"

"No, my embodied interrogation point," smiled Mr. Underhill. "I will tell you in confidence 'twas done by a stone from the sling of a youthful David by the roadside."

"The silly wretch!" cried Evelyn; "and your bespattered garments, how came they so?"

"Well, daughter, there was more than one David to stone him who is accounted a Phillistine."

"You have not been stoned, sir?" cried the girl in horror."

"Aye, child, yet 'twas but by road urchins who called after me 'Pope,' and 'Tory,' and not like that of the blessed Stephen, unto death."

"How can they thus turn against you?" cried Evelyn hotly, "you who have only tried to do them good?"

"'Tis a time when men stop not to discriminate. The valley people are in abject terror over the report of threatened havoc by the Tories."

"Cowards," exclaimed Evelyn. "No wonder that General Schuyler leaves them to await their own destruction."

"He does not quite do that. He is arranging even now to treat with the Indians at Johnstown. I have heard it in Schenectady, and as I passed Dirck Myndert's place, Katrina has come running after me, with petticoats close-reefed, and blowing like a grampus, to beg me to be present at the council. 'Ah, good sir,' she said, 'if you be not there we shall all be scalped and tomahawked, and driven back across the sea, which when I came over worked in me such a mighty misery as I shall never forget.' I tried to tell her that if the two former evils befell, the last could wreak her little harm, but old Neptune himself could scarce have dashed more salt spray from his eyes than she mopped up with her kerchief."

Evelyn laughed, then suddenly looked grave. "You are gay to keep up my spirits, but I know your heart is troubled."

"Yea, Evelyn, 'tis even so, but though I am accounted a stern man, there is a maladroitness in me which a mere straw does often tickle. Nevertheless, I must do what I can to restrain the worst passions of our red friends."

Evelyn pressed her lips to his forehead above the discoloring bruise; "you are to me the bravest and best of men, and I would that one of your sons had been like you."

Mr. Underhill rose, and in his turn laid a hand of blessing on the young girl's head, but he made no answer to her words, and as they entered the house the luminous smile was gone from his face.

The gathering of Tories and their savage

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER

DR.
PRICE'S CREAM
BAKING POWDER

Awarded
Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal. Midwinter Fair

allies at Oswego soon took place, though the proposed council at Johnstown was still deferred. The people of Tryon county sent recruits to fight, and many of them to die in the terrible battle at Oriskany. Then the trembling needle of war, which had seemed to point to an alliance between Burgoyne and St. Leger, to the destruction of the valley, was turned aside by the relief of Fort Schuyler, and the district drew breath again.

Meanwhile, Mr. Underhill grew more and more unpopular, and many ill threats were made against him. About this time, George, now a stout, strong-limbed lad, whose boyish curiosity caused him to poke his somewhat upturned nose into whatever was going on, came in with tidings which were in such a hurry to leave his tongue, that he burst into the room with small ceremony.

"Father," he cried, "Oh, Father, there be sad mischief afoot now, and the broth is all in the fire, as Letty, the maid, would say."

"George," replied his father repressingly, "turn out the dogs that follow at your heels, and tell your tale in a manner less startling to your mother."

The boy, obeying the order, stood before his parents in good old-time fashion, and told his story: "It was at Dirck Myndert's I heard it," he said. "Katrina called me in as I was on my way to the mill below Guy Park. She wanted me to try her butter-milk beer, she said, and I was but drinking

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY
Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR
Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN

ATLANTIC
BRADLEY
BROOKLYN
JEWETT
ULSTER
UNION
SOUTHERN
SHIPMAN
COLLIER
MISSOURI
RED SEAL
SOUTHERN
New York.
Chicago.
St. Louis.

JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY
Cleveland.
SALEM
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY
Louisville.

He gains wisdom in a happy way who gains it by the experience of others. In painting why not avail yourself of the advice of those who have had the greatest experience — the painters.

Competent, practical painters everywhere use Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil. They know they cannot afford to use anything else.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also folder showing picture of house painted in different designs or various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 100 William St., New York.

the first tankard when I heard voices on the stoop. Methought they were those of Dirck and Cairnewas. Katrina was making such a clatter with the pots that she noticed naught. One voice said: 'Have you heard that a packet of papers has been found by a squaw on the valley road, dropped by some who were escaping to join the enemy at Niagara?' 'I have not heard it,' said the other, 'what of the packet?' 'Dutch Karl has got it on some pretext from the squaw,' answered the first, 'and he has given them to those who knew where to send them, and they are now in the hands of the Colonial Congress. Many names in this vicinity are implicated in Tory plots,' and then they whispered, but oh, Father, I caught our own name! Then I dropped the tankard, and Dirck has seen me through the window, and springing in has boxed my ears for a listening knave. I should have struck him with the tankard, but that Katrina came between us with yards of skirts outspread. I tell you I like not buttermilk beer with such sweets as Dirck adds!"

The first consequence of this adventure told by George was the immediate dismissal of the Dutch Karl whom Evelyn had for a long time suspected of playing a double part, but to whom, as having been bound-boy and catechuman of his own, Mr. Underhill had shown much leniency.

Nothing more was heard of the packet, and the whole country was occupied in watching the movements of the British commander in the north, who had come "to sweep the Hudson clear," that he might join forces with his friends in New York. The series of notable battles on the borders of New York and Vermont followed, and when on the 17th of October, Burgoyne surrendered his whole army at Saratoga, the joy of the patriots knew no bounds. The event was hailed as the breaking up of British power in the north, and the few Tory families in Tryon county and elsewhere began to shake in the possession of their homes. Mr. Underhill's little congregation at the Schoharie fort dwindled almost to his own household, and his endeavors to minister to such of his red people as had not scattered from the Lower Castle, were regarded with the greatest suspicion. It seemed, indeed, to the loyal priest as though the cause of the Church were crushed with that of the king.

And what of Alan? How had he fared since the autumn night when he had joined the command of the imperious, yet ever-gallant Lee.

It had chanced that the General who prided himself on his knowledge of human nature and its capacities, had taken a liking to him whom he had so roughly received, and had given him an appointment on his own staff. Alan, for the first time in many months, was almost happy, in spite of toilsome military discipline and maneuvers. He was at last serving his country, and enjoying the novel experience of being thoroughly in sympathy with those about him.

It was only when Lee had been taken prisoner on his dilatory retreat, and the command, under Prescott, fell back step by step to join Washington at the Delaware, that Underhill and Beaumont learned much of the actual hardships of war. On that strange Christmas midnight when the silent and half-frozen troops recrossed the ice-bound Delaware, and in the bloody battles subsequent, they learned more of its horrors as well as its triumphs. It was during this time that Alan's veneration for the commander-in-chief culminated, and it was at beleaguered Philadelphia in September that he first saw the ardent Lafayette, his own junior in age.

"Ah, Alan," cried Eugene after this meeting, "this is indeed a hero! Do you know at what infinite cost of pains and money he has escaped to this country? Did you mark how his eye kindled when he spake of liberty? and how willing he is to serve, even in the lowest place?"

But Alan, already disappointed in his first hero, Lee, answered more soberly.

Then came the fateful eleventh of September, when the British, advancing from the head of Chesapeake bay, met Washington's army at the Brandywine, and what had seemed success to the patriot arms, was turned to grave disaster. Sullivan, outflanked and out-generaled by Cornwallis and Howe, was put to rout. His men, flying fast in all directions, were pursued by overwhelming forces, and certain to be cut to pieces.

Then it was that the stripling of France rushed to the rescue. Throwing himself from his horse, Lafayette fought hand to hand in the ranks, striving to stem the torrent of flight. Again and again he rallied the scattered columns, and turned them back, nobly seconded by a few of Sullivan's brigade, among whom were now Eugene and Alan. Again and again the broken lines were shattered upon some deadly wave of British foemen. As well might they have tried with ropes of sand to stem the sea! Backward they fell again, but this time not

Some New Books.

THE TEACHERS' PRAYER BOOK

Adapted to the use of the Church in the United States. By the RT. REV. ALFRED BARRY, D.D., D.C.L., Canon of Windsor and Assistant Bishop of London. With an Introduction by the RT. REV. HENRY C. POTTER, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L., Bishop of New York. 18mo, cloth, red edges. Price, $1.00 net; by mail, $1.10.

A New, Revised, and Popular Edition of

THE TREASURY OF THE PSALTER

An Aid to the better understanding of the Psalms in their use in public and private devotions, compiled by the REVS. G. P. HUNTINGTON and H. A. METCALF. With a Preface by the BISHOP OF CENTRAL NEW YORK. 12mo, cloth, $1.00 net; by mail, $1.12.

EIGHTEEN CENTURIES OF THE ORTHODOX GREEK CHURCH

By the REV. A. H. HORE, M.A., Trinity College, Oxford, author of "Eighteen Centuries of the Church in England," "History of the Church Catholic," etc. 8vo, cloth, $6.00.

BANNERS OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH

Sermons by the RT. REV. A. F. W. INGRAM, D.D., Bishop of Stepney. 16o, cloth, $1.25.

May be obtained from any Bookseller, or from

E. & J. B. YOUNG & CO.,
7 and 9 West 18th St., New York.

THE ROVER

An Illustrated Magazine for Boys.

Monthly, $1.00 a year. Specimen copy for the asking. E. & M. HUTCHINSON, Publishers, 107 Dearborn St., Chicago.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St., New York

Educational

CONNECTICUT, Hartford.

Woodside Seminary for Girls.

Re-opens September 27.

Address for circular.

MISS SARA J. SMITH, Principal.

ILLINOIS

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 13th, 1889. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Send for Illustrated catalogue to Joseph R. Harker, Ph. D., Pres., Jacksonville, Ill.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington.

Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

St. Gabriel's School, Peekskill, N. Y.

A Boarding School for Girls.

Under the charge of the Sisters of St. Mary. On an eminence overlooking the Hudson River. Prepares for College. Twenty-seventh year will begin Sept. 25th, 1898. Address THE-SISTER-IN-CHARGE.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

The Castle, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. Advantages of N. Y. City. All departments. Graduates students. Prepares for college. Miss C. E. Mason, LL.M., Prin

OHIO

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

Pennsylvania College for Women.

A situation and home of rare beauty, instruction unsurpassed for thoroughness, complete and modern equipment, and the intellectual opportunities of one of the centers of art and culture of the country. Academic and college departments. Schools of art and music. Moderate terms.

Mrs. R. J. DeVORE, President, Pittsburgh, Pa.

WISCONSIN

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes manly boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address

REV. ARTHUR PIPER, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1889. References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. G. eo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address, THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

FATIGUE

and lassitude so common in mid-summer are promptly relieved by

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

in disorderly flight, Washington himself taking charge of the retreat.

Eugene, very close in these last hours to his young hero, Lafayette, saw that the latter's boot was welling with blood. "Mon-sieur," he cried in the French, which was his mother-tongue, "you are wounded!" and even as he spoke he caught the reeling man in his arms. It was just then that a fresh volley was poured into the retreating ranks of the patriots by some more ardent pursuers, and Eugene, covering the body of Lafayette, himself sank down mortally wounded.

Toward morning in the hospital tent, Alan watched beside his dying friend. Eugene had just opened his eyes. "Where are you, Alan?" he said. "I do not see, it is so dark. Alan, did I stand by him, the Marquis, to the last?"

"Yes, Eugene," replied Alan, in a broken voice. "You did all your duty and more. He has but a slight leg-wound, while you—Oh, comrade, how can I let you go?" He could not say more.

"Alan, tell Margaret that I died for liberty; and oh, Alan, she will soon be left alone. Promise me, you will love and cherish her. I know what it will be to her."

Alan's voice shook almost uncontrollably, but he answered clearly, "I promise that Eugene."

Baumont fell back, and with a smile of supreme content, the young soul took its flight.

When Alan raised his head from his first outbreak of grief, he saw in the tent door a crippled and bandaged figure, standing with his face bowed in sympathetic sorrow. It was the young Marquis de Lafayette.

(To be continued.)

Temperance Work of Church Women

THE Woman's Auxiliary to the Church Temperance Society of New York city has gone about its task in a most systematic way. It has, in its own language, "divided New York city into arbitrary parochial areas, with the view of obtaining information which would obviate the duplication of parochial visits, and yet guarantee that no one should be beyond the reach of definite spiritual guidance when they desired or needed it." Their labors lie in what is called the German quarter, consisting of fifteen blocks lying between the Bowery and Avenue A., Fifth street and East Houston; the Italian quarter, which is located between Houston and Canal streets, Broadway and the Bowery, and their work among the Irish and the Jews is of large proportions. They have made the very moderate estimate that the liquor saloons in the German quarter number 147, in the Jewish quarter 237, in the Italian quarter 179, making a total of 563 saloons in this limited area. In addition, they state that the drink bill of the United States is at the lowest estimate $900,000,000, and the number of saloons 225,000.

Now, the Church Temperance Society has for a number of years, established counter-acting influences. The Squirrel Inn exists at this moment only upon paper, but before many months have passed, the society hopes to have it an accomplished fact. Mrs. Bradford, owner of the premises No. 131 Bowery, has given the property to the society, rent and tax free, for five years, on condition that it raises as a free gift $15,000 requisite for its equipment as a coffee-house and restaurant. The building is in the most crowded part of the Bowery, twenty-five feet front, eighty feet deep, with a liquor saloon on either side; and low theatres, concert halls, and pawn shops, crowd about it.

If the funds can be raised to equip it, the society proposes to establish a commodious kitchen in the basement, a restaurant seating 120 people on the first floor, a reading-room and lecture hall on the second floor, twenty-five sleeping-rooms on the third floor, and one hundred beds on the fourth and fifth floors. The restaurant will furnish a cup of coffee and a sandwich at a very low rate, and it is hoped that many of these inns can be established, to counteract the attractions of the free-lunch counter of the liquor saloons.

The first all-night lunch-wagon was established by the Woman's Auxiliary in 1893, and its object was the providing of good and cheap refreshments to men employed on night work. The success of this enterprise was so great that five more wagons have been added, and are stationed as follows: The Owl, Twenty-third street and Lexington avenue; the Wayside Inn, Herald square; Good Cheer, Union square; the Cable, Sixth avenue and Forty-second street; the Magnet, Astor place; the Beacon, Jefferson Market. The cost of one of these wagons is $1,000, and two men are employed on each; they are never closed except on Sundays. Everything is sold at five cents except chicken sandwiches. During the year 1897, 214,256 ten-cent meals were purchased.

The free ice-water fountains are a blessing to the suffering poor during the hot summer months. The Woman's Auxiliary has established ten of them in the most crowded tenement districts.

Then there are coffee-vans, which are intended to furnish hot coffee and sandwiches to coachmen and hackmen at entertainments during the winter months. The association only expects to cover expenses, and to this end sells ten-cent tickets, one of which will entitle the holder to a cup of hot coffee and a sandwich. These wagons are open day and night; and from January 1st to September 30th of last year, supplied 152,800 ten-cent meals. The association owns six of these vans, and they are stationed at the Pennsylvania ferry, at Herald square, at Union square, at Sixth avenue and Forty-second street, at Astor place, and at Jefferson market. The van is so arranged that the conductor of it can hand the cup of coffee or sandwich to the coach-driver without his descending from his seat.—M. E. J. in N. Y. Evening Post.

"Keep to Your Place and Your Place will Keep You."

Without good health we cannot keep situations or enjoy life. Most troubles originate in impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood rich and healthy, and will help you "keep your place."

Built Up— "Was tired out, had no appetite until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It built me right up and I can eat heartily." ETTA M. HAGER, Athol, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS,

Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park, New York.

RUBBER STAMPS.....

AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.

Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils, Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889, AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.

THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

Lea & Perrins' Sauce

The Original and Genuine Worcestershire. Known the world over. Take no substitute.

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.

FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

The Most Refreshing Morning Laxative

A palatable, reliable remedy for disordered stomach, sick headache and constipation.

Acting gently on all the excretory organs, it expels waste matters, removes gouty and rheumatic poisons from the blood, and keeps the stomach and bowels clean and healthy.

"Effervescent"

50c. & $1.00, at Druggists

No. 212—Canopy-Top Surrey, with double fenders. Price, complete, with curtains all around, grom apron, sunshade, lamps and pole or shafts, $68. Just as good as sells for $100.

style and the largest selection in the land.

ELKHART CARRIAGE & HARNESS MANFG. CO., W. B. Pratt, Secy, ELKHART, INDIANA.

PROFIT FOR MAKER ONLY.

We manufacture 170 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness and sell them to you direct from our factory at wholesale prices. In fact we are the largest manufacturers of vehicles and harness in the world selling to the consumer exclusively. When you buy on this plan you pay only the profit of the manufacturer.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,

preferring to deal with you direct. No matter where you live, we can reach you and save you money. We ship our vehicles and harness anywhere for examination and guarantee safe arrival. We manufacture everything we sell, and we can assure you of good quality from beginning to end; good woodwork, good iron and steel, good paint and varnish, good finish, good trimmings, fine Large illustrated catalogue FREE.

No. 180—Double buggy harness, with nickel trimmings. Complete with collars and hitch straps, $20. As good as sells for $30.

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY ISOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER VIII.

THE COMPLIMENTS OF THE EXCELSIORS

"WITH the compliments of the Excelsiors."

So ran the legend on the envelope, in Jerry's best handwriting, with many an elaborate twirl and effective dash. For a moment Eleanor stood undecided what course to pursue. The white clad forms had passed on, and were mingling with the throng. Only Virginia and herself were there, so the thought flashed across her that it would be best to wait until all was over and all the girls together, before the seal was broken and the contents revealed.

"But we want to know whether it's a joke or not," Mollie exclaimed, when she and Evelyn came running up to unravel the mystery; but the president remained inexorable, and the remainder of the evening seemed to drag with leaden feet to Mollie at least.

There was no doubt about the Excelsior having a right royal time. They patronized the lemonade well; they invaded the little ice-cream retreat, and dropped more dimes into Alice's tin box; they laughed, and made every one else laugh, too; in fact, they did everything except that which the girls were afraid they would do—play some cruel joke, or make the sisterhood look ridiculous in some way, in order to feed their revenge.

"The Tabbies look a trifle anxious, don't they?" chuckled Jerry to Dave.

"The envelope is in Nell's pocket, and they don't know," was all the senator said, but he nodded his head sagely, and Jerry smiled, a sweetly contented smile.

At last the moment came when the last good night had been said, and once more the girls of St. Dorothy met on the veranda, this time in the deserted ice-cream corner, to take their share of the spoils.

Alice and Laura were busy counting their gains at one of the little tables, bending eagerly over the gleaming piles of dimes and quarters, like a couple of little oriental misers, and the girls waited until they had finished the happy task.

"Twenty-two dollars and forty cents," announced Alice finally, with a triumphant wave of her hand.

"Twenty-two, forty!" echoed Virginia in astonishment; "why, we only had three gallons, and that would mean—how much? Where's our lightning calculator, Mollie?"

"Sold two hundred and twenty-four dishes at ten cents per dish," said Mollie, counting up on her fingers. "Thirty dishes to the gallon—three times thirty—ninety dishes. Ninety from two hundred and twenty-four—one hundred and thirty-four. Say, young ladies, where did you get one hundred and thirty-four extra dishes of ice cream?"

Laura began to laugh, but Alice was perfectly serious.

"There were five extra gallons sent up with the compliments of the Excelsiors," she answered

"The idea!" cried Evelyn, and Mollie added:

"Pretty soon I'll begin to think that the whole moonlight masquerade was given for the sisterhood with the compliments of the Excelsiors."

"I guess that you are about right," and at the sound of Eleanor's calm, quiet voice, all faces turned to look at her. There was a queer smile on her lips, as she held an open sheet of paper in one hand and two bills in the other.

"Listen to this," she said, and amid perfect silence, she read:

"To the members of the S. D. S.

"Enclosed please find twenty dollars, which amount represents two hundred tickets sold by the undersigned for the benefit of the S. D. S. moonlight masquerade.

"THE EXCELSIOR CLUB."

No one spoke a word. Nell fingered the two ten dollar bills for a minute, and then tossed them over Alice's shoulder into the tin cash box. It was Virginia who broke the stillness.

"It was a grand revenge," she said slowly.

"They have clipped our wings. I move that a vote of thanks to the members of the Excelsior Club be passed, here and now, for the great assistance which they have rendered us."

There was a momentary hesitation, and the generous impulse won the day, and the vote was passed unanimously. It was on the morrow that the real struggle with their pride came, for there were the boys to face and thank, and besides, when the Daily Sentinel appeared with an elaborate account of the moonlight masquerade in its columns, there was an item added which was as gall and wormwood to the pride of the S. D. S., but they accepted the inevitable with silent sorrow. There was no doubt but that the item owed its origin to the fertile brain of Mr. Jerry Edsall. There was no mistaking his style. It said:

"We understand that, while the charming presence and graceful services of the young ladies formed the greatest attraction of the evening, it was to the perseverance and untiring energy of the well-known and popular Excelsior Club that the entertainment owed its remarkable financial success."

Mollie read the notice aloud to the girls the morning after the affair, and there was a gloom over the assembly which seemed immovable.

"Well, they earned it," Eleanor said, with a weary sigh. "I suppose we must send them our vote of thanks some way. Mollie, don't you think you could take it better than any of the rest of us. It's your barn, you know, and—goodness knows what you have to climb to get to their club room. I think you had better go."

"All right," Mollie said, cheerfully. She

Tried It

I have been using Mellin's Food for some time and I cannot get along without it, after using nearly all other brands of food and milk, all of them disagreeing with my baby. It is the best food for children I have ever tried. My baby has not been sick a day since I began using Mellin's Food a year ago. When I began using it the baby was sick all the time and did not look as if he could live, but he began to improve at once on Mellin's Food. Now he is the healthiest, strongest baby in town. Mrs. R. H. Folmar, Luverne, Ala.

Mellin's Food

and FRESH MILK; not dried milk, weeks, months or years old; nor condensed milk that has been in a tin for nobody knows how long; but good FRESH milk; this is the proper thing to give a baby. Mellin's Food modifies the milk and makes it like mother's milk. Babies grow strong and rosy on Mellin's Food and FRESH milk.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1887.
THE E. W. YANDUZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES and PEALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826. BELLS
HAVE FURNISHED 35,000
CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER. PUREST BEST.
MENEELY & CO., GENUINE
WEST-TROY, N. Y. BELL-METAL
CHIMES, ETC. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.

Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

CHURCH BELLS CHIMES
Best quality on earth. Get our price.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

Health and Rest,

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE, and BATHS, at The Pennoyer, Kenosha, Wis. Booklet free.

"Appetite

comes with eating." And the hankering for Pearline comes from trying it. If you're sceptical about Pearline's washing, try it on coarse clothes, etc., first—things that you can't hurt much, and see how it saves work. Having seen Pearline's superior work you'll be ready to use it for fine, delicate, cobwebby things.

Millions NOW USE Pearline

was the only one of the girls who thoroughly enjoyed the joke, and how could she help it, when it was such a splendid thing to do, and just like Dave and Art., who never, never did anything mean.

So the envoy of peace wended her way to the Rookery after all was done at the Hardy's, and when she reached the barn she did not wait for any invitation or instructions as to climbing, but simply scaled the ladder in the most approved form, and walked the beam like a veteran Excelsior.

"Wonder what they'll do next?" Bobbie was saying reflectively, as he lay at full length on the carpenter's bench, and looked at Dave, Art., and Jerry.

"Get hopping mad, and never speak to us again," Jerry said, with a grin of content. "Nell says they're going to give the money to St. Luke's for something or other."

"Mollie told us all about it," Arthur said confidentially. "It's for a new font—a handsome one—all hand carved and marble lined."

"With S. D. S. engraved on it in big letters," concluded Jerry. "There's the vain pomp and vanity of this wicked world for you. Isn't that like girls all over, though? Had to give something that would stand for a monument to their greatness, instead of giving it to poor people, or something like that."

"Pshaw," Dave said, "I think the font's splendid. Mollie said Virginia suggested it. Mollie isn't a bit mad at us. She's tickled to death. She wanted us in all the time."

"The other girls will be dropping her from the S. D. S., if she don't look out."

At this point a figure appeared on the beam, and an instant later Mollie herself stood among them.

"Well, I give up," was all Arthur could say at the sudden apparition, but Mollie only smiled in a friendly way all round, and proceeded to deliver her message of peace and thankfulness, and good will.

When she had finished, Jerry poked Arthur in the ribs and whispered:

"Make a speech."

So the honored president arose and said, slowly and impressively, while he bowed low to the emissary:

"Please return our best wishes to the S. D. S., and say that any time when they will honor us with a visit, we shall be only too happy to extend to them the compliments of the Excelsior Club."

(To be continued.)

How Bessie Won the Basket

O SUCH a careless, thoughtless, and, I am very sorry to say, such a disobedient little girl as Bessie often was. Very often she really did forget; but sometimes when she did not forget, she would not take the trouble to put her things away.

If you had lived in the house with her, these are a few of the questions which you would have heard her ask every day:

"Who knows where my hat is? Has anybody seen my pencil? Fanny, where is my slate? Can't you tell me where my rake is?"

"Where are you going, Fanny?" she asked, one morning, as her sister who had been teaching her her lessons, got up and was leaving the room, with a basket and a pair of scissors in her hand.

"To cut the flowers," Fanny replied.

"I think you might wait for me; and, Fanny, you said you would get me a little basket like yours; when will you give it to me?"

"I cannot wait for you; you have only wasted your time. When you have finished adding up those figures you may come to the garden; but remember, Bessie, you are not to come until your books and slate are put neatly away, exactly where they belong, on the shelf. And as for the basket, you shall have that as soon"—But Fanny went out of the room without finishing.

Bessie looked after her, with her pencil on her lips. What did she mean by not finishing what she was saying? But there was one thing sure, the longer she sat doing nothing, the longer it would be before she could go into the garden; for Fanny would send her right back if she came before the example was finished.

"Three and two are five, and five are ten," and so on till it was finished and proved correct. Then down went slate and pencil, and over to the open window bounded Bessie.

But just as she stood with one foot on the piazza, the memory of Fanny's words came back to her, and she stopped. She almost wished she had forgotten, she was in such a hurry! Perhaps the flowers would be all cut. O, dear! what a bother!

"I just believe I'll wait till I come back, to pick it up; Fanny'll never know, and it won't make a mite of difference."

But after saying these naughty words, Bessie felt ashamed.

"You're just going to act a story, Bessie Gray; and that's as bad as telling one with your tongue!" she said to herself. And going back into the room, she picked up the slate, gathered the books from the table, and ran off with them to the library closet, to the particular corner of the shelf where they belonged.

But that corner was already occupied, for in the very spot where she had been going to lay the books, stood the loveliest little basket, in the bottom of which lay a slip of paper, on which was printed quite plainly: "For the little girl who remembered to put away her slate and books—and, remembering, did it."—Annie L. Hannah, in Christian Observer.

WILL KEEP IT.

Healthy Enough to Eat or Drink What he Likes.

While I have an excellent constitution, and think nothing easily affects me, I propose to keep it if possible.

I have observed for years the great number of people who complain of the bad effect of coffee, and while I can drink coffee or almost anything I want, without trouble, it is nevertheless true that we do not use ordinary coffee at our house, but for many months have been using Postum Food Coffee. We find it in every way preferable to imported coffee.

We make it strictly according to direction, for we found out early that it could be made to taste very flat when underboiled, but as we make it now, to use a slang phrase, "It hits the spot." I drink it three times a day.

I enclose a list of friends who are regular users of the Postum Food Coffee.

In our family we believe that good health can be used to advantage in doing business or prosecuting professional work, and we propose to keep all the good health we have, if such a thing is possible, and we think one of the most important measures is the abandonment of coffee and the use of Postum. F.W. Bland, 705 Collinsville Ave., E. St. Louis, Ill.

You are sure that Swift's

Silver Leaf Lard is purity perfection, and all lard.

Premium Hams make a breakfast fit for royalty, and Americans.

Premium Breakfast Bacon, an appetizer which makes everything else taste good.

Beef Extract, as good as the best—the concentrated strength of the best beef, with a flavor all its own.

Jersey Butterine, you couldn't tell it from the best butter,—healthy, wholesome, clean.

Cotosuet—the perfect vegetable shortening—digestible and healthy.

Swift and Company, Chicago

Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, St. Joseph, St. Paul

Trial Package Free!

If any reader, suffering from rheumatism, will write to me, I will send them free of cost a trial Package of a simple and harmless remedy which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 40 years' standing. This is an honest remedy that you can test before you part with your money. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 208 Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;

After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whitaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Dammell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lycett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Subscribers should name not only the new address, but also the old.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

FOREIGN.—To subscribers in the Postal Union, the price is 12 shillings; to the clergy, 10 shillings.

EXCHANGE.—When payment is made by check, except on the banks in the great cities, ten cents must be added for exchange.

RECEIPTS.—No written receipt is needed; if desired, stamp must be sent. Change of label should indicate within two weeks the receipt of remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—A subscriber desiring to discontinue the paper, must remit the amount due for the time it has been sent.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marriages, Notices, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

Finance and Commerce

THE rockets and roman candles that have illuminated the business situation the past year, have burned themselves out, and conditions have settled down to the activities of supply and demand. Measured by the volume of these activities business was never better, and there are as yet no signs of diminution. With the output increased in most branches of production, in some cases very greatly increased, there is yet scarcely a sign of accumulating stocks anywhere, and in most cases prices are firm. In iron the consumption for the first quarter of the year is given at about 45 per cent. larger than last year, and it is estimated that the percentage of increase will be nearly as large for the whole year. In some cases prices have been again advanced, and nowhere is a tendency toward lower prices reported. The iron products must be immensely prosperous. Ore has advanced very little compared with the increased price for their product.

Cotton is steady with very little change in price. In the manufactured fabrics demand is good, prices are tending upward, and in some lines wants are not easily filled. The strike of the grain handlers at Buffalo has been settled, and work resumed. No other labor disturbances appear at the moment.

The only change to note in the money market is a tendency towards easiness in the interest rate. The New York bank statement last week was generally regarded as favorable, inasmuch as it showed an increase in legal reserves, and stocks rallied in Wall street. We do not see the encouragement in such a bank statement. The reserves increased it is true, but there is no uncertainty about the sound condition of the New York banks, and has been none, and the reserves were large enough before. The significant part of the bank statements is that with reserves ample, and money tending easier, yet loans and deposits decrease largely. This all simply reflects the falling off in bull speculation on the stock exchange. All last autumn and winter when stocks were strong and advancing, reserves in the New York banks decreased, and loans and deposits increased, just the reverse of the present situation. The only menace to the business situation still is as pointed out last week, the poor outlook for the wheat crop. The press and public are at last beginning to admit what we have before claimed, that the condition of the winter wheat crop is deplorable. Many still claim the result will be 250 to 275 millions, or enough for bread and seed. They are at least 50 millions too high, and the yield is as likely to be under 200 millions as over that amount. The average of spring wheat is less than last year, probably 10 per cent. less, possibly 15 per cent. less. Much of it was seeded late and under unfavorable conditions. Dislike the outlook as we may, it promises no surplus wheat for export, and what is exported will come largely from reserves now in farmer's hands. When Europe wakes up to these conditions they will not be so apathetic. Corn planting is not all done and conditions have not been uniformly good. It is too early yet to indicate them.

Russian Development

RUSSIA, the Trans-Siberian Railway, and their relation to the trade of the Orient in competition with the United States, are elaborately discussed in the current number of Summary of Commerce and Finance, just prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. The fact that the Trans-Siberian road, which will bring the products of Russia's fields, forests, and facories to the doors of China, is nearing completion, and that Russia is also pushing for a combined rail and water route to the Orient through Persia and the Indian Ocean, seems to justify a study of the rapidly developing industries of that great nation whose contiguous area exceeds that of any other country in the world, and whose population is only exceeded by that of a single nation, China.

Discussing the question of Russia's trade relations to the vast oriental market in which the people of the United States now feel especial interest, the report calls attention to the fact that Russia, like the United States, has such variety of soil, climate, and minerals, that she is able to produce within her own borders a large proportion of the necessities and comforts of life. Corn, wheat, barley, and rye furnish an ample supply of breadstuffs; vast stock-growing areas produce cattle, horses, hogs, sheep, wool, hides, and provisions in abundance; beet sugar is produced in great quantities; hemp and other fiber plants flourish in certain provinces; cotton is successfully grown in the extreme south; virgin forests promise an enormous lumber supply; coal, iron, and other minerals required for manufactures are believed to be abundant, and her mineral oil is so plentiful and cheap that it is freely used as fuel, and is also becoming a serious competitor with our own in the markets of Europe and Asia.

With these natural supplies of all materials required for manufacturing, she is strengthening her industrial system, following closely the lines marked out by the United States, and now manufactures of cottons and woolsens, iron and steel and their products, machinery, lumber, and other of the requirements of her people are being established and increased. Foreign capital is encouraged to contribute to this activity, and with her 125,000,000 of industrious, frugal people, she seems likely to increase her ability to supply her own markets, and in certain lines may also increase her export. When to these developments in the producing lines are added the new transportation routes by which supplies may be sent to the markets of Asia and Europe and, indeed, of the world, putting rail in competition with water, and water again in competition with railway lines controlled and owned by the government, and all these combining to bring undeveloped areas and resources into development, their importance to the commercial world and to the commerce of the United States, seems worthy of consideration.

Some Splendid Summer Servings

Libby's Fire-saving Luncheons

Troubleless meals—all you have to do is to serve—the very top of quality.

Veal Loaf—a pleasing change for lunch.
Ox Tongue (whole)—Unsurpassed—an ideal lunch.

Compressed Corned Beef—Incomparable—must be eaten to be appreciated.
Peerless Water-Sliced Smoked Beef—An appetizer of unequalled merit.

Pork and Beans—cooked with care—couldn't be better—with or without tomato sauce.
Deviled Ham, Potted Ham, Beef and Tongue make excellent sandwiches—everybody likes 'em.

Put up in convenient size key-opening cans.

"How to Make Good Things to Eat," gives complete list of our Luncheon Specialties, and how to prepare them. Yours for a postal.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

... Bind Your Copies of ...

THE LIVING CHURCH

By special arrangement we are able to supply the Emerson Binder, cloth, neatly lettered in gold, to our subscribers at the moderate cost of 75 cents. Address all orders to

The Living Church.

Wholesome Advice

For People Whose Stomachs are Weak and Digestion Poor.

Dr. Harlandson, whose opinion in diseases is worthy of attention, says when a man or woman comes to me complaining of indigestion, loss of appetite, sour stomach, belching, sour, watery risings, headaches, sleeplessness, lack of ambition, and a general run-down nervous condition, I advise them to take after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, allowing the tablet to dissolve in the mouth, and thus mingle with the food eaten. The result is that the food is speedily digested before it has time to sour and ferment. These tablets will digest food any way, whether the stomach wants to or not, because they contain harmless digestive principles, vegetable essences, pepsin, and Golden Seal, which supply just what the weak stomach lacks.

I have advised the tablets with great success, both in curing indigestion and to build up the tissues, increase flesh in thin, nervous patients, whose real trouble was dyspepsia, and as soon as the stomach was put to rights they did not know what sickness was.

A fifty-cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be bought at any drug-store, and as they are not a secret patent medicine, they can be used as often as desired with full assurance that they contain nothing harmful in the slightest degree; on the contrary, anyone whose stomach is at all deranged, will find great benefit from the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will cure any form of stomach weakness or disease, except cancer of the stomach. Full-sized package at druggists, 50 cents. Send to F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., for little book on stomach troubles, mailed free.

Teething time with Mellin's Food babies is not a period of discomfort. Supplied with the phosphatic salt for building up the teeth and bones, and with material that gives vitality and strength, Mellin's Food babies cut their teeth painlessly.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD
Chicago & Alton R.R.
PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

CHICAGO AND KANSAS CITY,
CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS,
CHICAGO AND PEORIA,
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY

Through Pullman service between Chicago and

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., DENVER, Colo.,
TEXAS, FLORIDA, UTAH,
CALIFORNIA AND OREGON.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

JAMES CHARLTON,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.
F. G. LOGAN
MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.
4 B'd Trade, Chicago.
Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

"WE AND OUR TOUR ECONOMIC"

Is the title of a very charming and entertainingly written story which has just been issued in book form by the Passenger Department of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y. The intending summer tourist will find it not only interesting but instructive. It will be sent free to any address, on application to F. M. BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago. A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up to date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

TOURIST CARS TO PORTLAND, ORE.

Leave Chicago at 6:30 P.M. on "The Overland Limited," via the Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line, arriving at Portland at 6:45 P.M. the third day. The only daily line through without change between Chicago and Portland. Personally conducted party leaves Chicago every Thursday. Chicago & North-Western R'y City Ticket Office, 193 Clark St.; Passenger Station, Wells and Kinzie S. S.

KINGSFORD'S
OSWEGO
SILVER GLOSS
STARCH
For The Laundry

Best Line
to
Denver

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

Somatose A perfect food for the invalid, the dyspeptic, or the baby. Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City.

Enameline THE MODERN STOVE POLISH Paste, Cake or Liquid

ILLINOIS  CENTRAL
Runs Two Solid Vestibuled Trains Daily

DIAMOND SPECIAL
NIGHT TRAIN
DAYLIGHT SPECIAL
DAY TRAIN

between Chicago and St. Louis.
Free Reclining Chair Cars, Parlor-Café Cars, Pullman Buffet Open and Compartment Sleeping Cars. See that your ticket between Chicago and St. Louis Reads via Illinois Central Railroad.
It can be obtained of your local ticket agent.
A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., Ill. Cent. R. R., Chicago, Ill.

GAIL BORDEN

EAGLE BRAND

CONDENSED MILK.

NEW YORK CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

FOR NURSING AND GENERAL
COOKING.

SEND FOR "BABIES"
A BOOK FOR MOTHERS.

Washing and Starching Summer Gowns

To send an originally cheap gingham gown to the cleaner, and have it come back with a bill equalling or surpassing the cost of the material when it was new, is not an experience to encourage a taste for "cheap" gingham. To have it washed by the laundress and sent up with a faded back and starch spots throughout, is even more depressing. Most of us learn to compromise by choosing colors with a view to the wash-tub, rather than to our own taste and complexions; but, after all, there is a way of cutting this Gordian knot, of having our own choice of colors, and keeping them in defiance of time, wash-tubs, and starch. "The man who is master of himself has a good servant," and the woman who knows what happens in her kitchen and laundry, knows how it happens, and, more over, takes good care that it happen in her way, may save her wash gowns from destruction and herself from much vexation of spirit.

Colored prints, gingham, cretonnes, and p'ques of colored patterns, or of solid colors somewhat doubtful and difficult to preserve, should be washed in bran-water without any soap whatever. Put the bran in a muslin bag and pour hot water on this; when the water is lukewarm, take out the bran-bag and wash your pieces quickly, rinsing them afterwards in clear cold water, also quickly. To avoid all chance of fading, hang them to dry in a room without fire or sunshine, and before they are absolutely dry, iron them with moderate irons. The great point to bear in mind is to wash, rinse—and starch, if necessary—very quickly, never allowing the pieces to lie in the water.

Rice-water is the only safe starch for dark linens and muslins, and muslins of doubtful color may be washed in rice-water without soap, rinsing them out in clear rice-water to keep the starched quality. Gum-arabic water is also used to take the place of starch, but is rather better suited for lace and nets, and rice-water will probably be found the more satisfactory of the two.

When no soap is used in washing, yolk of egg may be rubbed into grease spots, or places where the material is soiled by contact with the skin. Rub the yolk into the material and wash exactly as if it were soap.

An additional word apropos of shrinking: Wash materials made up into shirt-waists, children's frocks, or anything expected to be laundered often, should, without exception, be laundered and shrunk in the material before being cut and made up. If this be done, it will not shrink later on. All the best shirt-waist makers do this, which is one reason why shirt waists made to order look better and keep their shape long after cheap shop made ones have shrunk and stretched all out of shape.—Harper's Bazar

FURNITURE
Of All Kinds
FOR
CHURCH AND CHANCEL.
Write for our new catalogue.
Special designs and prices made on application.
Correspondence solicited.
PHOENIX FURNITURE CO.,
Eau Claire, Wis.

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN President 3-5-7 W 29th Street
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice-President NEW YORK

COX SONS & VINING,
70 Fifth Avenue, New York.
CASSOCKS, SURPLICES, STOLES,
CHOIR VESTMENTS,
EMBROIDERIES AND FABRICS.
SUCCESSORS TO
COX SONS, BUCKLEY & CO.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.
Church Furnishers and Decorators.
70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.
R. G. GEISSLER, Marble and Metal Work.
124 Clinton Place, bet. 5th and 6th Ave., New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

The Luetke Church Art Works,
Tract Building and 41 University Pl., New York City.
MANUFACTURERS IN ALL LINES OF
CHURCH OR MONUMENTAL WORK.
We have the latest, cheapest, and best designs in this country. Write to us.

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"DON'T BORROW TROUBLE."
Buy

SAPOLIO

'TIS CHEAPER
IN THE END."

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.

The Living Church

A Weekly Record of the News, the Work, and the Thought of the Church

My Part

BY IDA BALLHEIM

The Chief Musician did the chords invent ;
The Chief Musician shaped the instrument ;
He set me in my place before the score,
I heard the one word, "Play !" He said no more.

He did the air to other hands consign ;
I may not even hint the full design.
There is no meaning in the notes I play,
Which I must still rehearse from day to day.

And some who tire of their monotonous tone,
Would have me change to music of my own,
Full-chorded discord would it better be ?
Let others play it, it is not for me.

But I will strive to render perfect still My unmelodious part with patient will —
So in that concert, grand, remote, and far,
The harmony divine I shall not mar.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.
$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;
After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Damrell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lyceet's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Subscribers should name not only the new address, but also the old.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

FOREIGN.—To subscribers in the Postal Union, the price is 12 shillings; to the clergy, 10 shillings.

EXCHANGE.—When payment is made by check, except on the banks in the great cities, ten cents must be added for exchange.

RECEIPTS.—No written receipt is needed; if desired, stamp must be sent. Change of label should indicate within two weeks the receipt of remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—A subscriber desiring to discontinue the paper, must remit the amount due for the time it has been sent.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marriages, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN President
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice-President
3-5-7 W 29th Street
NEW YORK

COX SONS & VINING,
70 Fifth Avenue, New York.
CASSOCKS, SURPLICES, STOLES,
CHOIR VESTMENTS,
EMBROIDERIES AND FABRICS.
SUCCESSORS TO
COX SONS, BUCKLEY & CO.

Trinity Church Embroidery School

CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes, maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.

MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT,
Trinity Parish House, 101 26th st.

If milk does not agree with your baby, add Mellin's Food, and see what an improvement perfect nutrition will make in his condition.

Educational

ILLINOIS

St. Alban's Academy, Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports.
A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill. Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address,
REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 15th, 1889. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

The Health Record

of a school is a most important matter. The patrons of the Illinois Woman's College
are satisfied on this point. Healthful recreation and thorough instruction are combined with careful Social and Religious influences. Engage room early.
JOS. R. HARKER, Ph.D., President,
Jacksonville, - Illinois.

MASSACHUSETTS

Bradford Academy.

Founded 1803. For the higher education of young women. Classical and Scientific course of study, also Preparatory and Optional. Year begins Sept. 20th, 1899.
MISS IDA C. ALLEN, Principal, Bradford, Mass.

Rogers Hall School,

For Girls. Certificate admits to College. Apply to
MRS. E. P. UNDERHILL, Lowell, Mass.

MICHIGAN

MICHIGAN, Ann Arbor.

University School of Music.

Albert A. Stanley, A.M., Director. Unusual Advantages from connection with the University of Michigan. For Calendar and detailed information, address the Secretary.

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIPPLE, Rector. MISS CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address
ST. MARY'S HALL, Fairbault.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to MRS. MARY J. JACKSON.

St. Gabriel's School, Peekskill, N. Y. A Boarding School for Girls.

Under the charge of the Sisters of St. Mary. On an eminence overlooking the Hudson River. Prepares for College. Twenty-seventh year will begin Sept. 28th, 1899. Address
THE SISTER-IN-CHARGE.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

The Castle, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. Advantages of N. Y. City. All departments. Graduate students. Prepares for college. MISS C. E. MASON, LL.M., Prin.

OHIO

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

Trinity Hall, Washington, Pa.

A School for Boys. With high aims, standards, and requirements. Equips boys for college or business; large corps of able instructors; personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Refined, elevating surroundings. Term, $500.
WM. W. SMITH, Rector.

WISCONSIN

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes manly boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address
REV. ARTHUR PIPER, Warden, Racine, Wis.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Calumet St., New York

A Correctly Hanging Surplice

is a source of constant pleasure to the wearer. Ours are cut to fit, and they do. No continual adjusting after once put on.

Plain Linen.....$4 00
Fine Linen.....5 00
Semi-Full.....7 50

State length desired.....Amount enclosed.....
DELIVERED FREE ON RECEIPT OF PRICE.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We sent out recently letters so full of information that some few went off before we discovered they were just heavy enough to be overweight. Any of our friends who were compelled to pay the additional 2c. will be cheerfully reimbursed if they will notify us.

E. O. THOMPSON'S SONS, Vestment Makers,

908 Walnut Street, Philadelphia,
also 245 Broadway New York.

An American Edition Now Ready.

The Teachers' Prayer Book

Adapted to the use of the Church in the United States.

By the Rt. Rev. ALFRED BARRY, D.D., D.C.L.,
Canon of Windsor, and Assistant Bishop of London.

With an Introduction by

The Rt. Rev. HENRY C. POTTER, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L.,
Bishop of New York.

18mo. Cloth, Red Edges, Price, $1.00
Net, by Mail, $1.10.

E. & J. B. Young & Co., 7 & 9 W. 18th St., N. Y.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.

Church Furnishers and Decorators.

70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.

R. G. GEISSLER, & Marble and Metal Work.
124 Clinton Place, bet. 5th and 6th Ave., New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO. STAINED GLASS

27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

Educational

WISCONSIN—Continued.

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address,
THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

WHEN TROUBLE IN CUBA WAS at its height, it was popularly supposed the insurgent forces were a good-sized army, but it now develops that its size and strength was largely a matter of popular supposition. Such would seem to be the case from the fact that the authorities are having a hard time rounding up soldiers to accept the three million dollars kindly provided for those who surrendered their arms and retired to peaceful pursuits. At the time the Cuban Assembly refused to surrender the army rolls, that they might be used in facilitating the disbursement of good money, the Cuban force was estimated at 40,000 officers and men. According to the rolls, there awaits each man who bore arms, the sum of $75, but it develops that these rolls are padded after a manner creditable to a boodle municipal alderman. It is, of course, probable that many hold back because of agitation against the plan of settlement, but taking Cuban character into consideration, it is extremely likely that if the real strength of the Cuban army was equal to the estimate, more than a few hundreds would have presented themselves at headquarters and claimed their money. Romance and imagination have been large factors of Cuban strength.

—X—

HERO WORSHIP WILL FIND VENT IN the return of Admiral Dewey. The Admiral has left his station, and will return leisurely by the Suez route. Already plans are making for his reception, which will pale to insignificance previous events of somewhat similar character. New York city plans a demonstration to cost $150,000, and the bunting market bids fair to be exhausted. Already popular contributions are being solicited to provide the hero of Manila Bay with a magnificent residence in Washington, while many cities propose to extend honors by building "Dewey" parks. Admiral Dewey is not an ostentatious man, and while he cannot but be grateful at the marks of appreciation for his distinguished services, has so far declined to make engagements for any affair in which he is to be the conspicuous figure.

—X—

AT THE OPENING OF THE CORTEZ, JUNE 2d, the Queen Regent announced the conclusion of arrangements for the cession to Germany of the Carolines, Marianas, and Palaos, the remaining Pacific Spanish possessions. It develops that the proposal was made known to the United States and England, and can therefore occasion no political disturbance, particularly as Spain is the owner of the islands, and can dispose of them as she pleases. By the relinquishment of Cuba, the cession of Porto Rico, the Philippine and Sulu Islands, and Guam, the largest of the Ladrone islands, as a result of the recent Spanish-American war, the colonial possessions of Spain have been reduced to an area of about 245,097 square miles, of which 244,487 square miles are in Africa. The Pacific possessions about to be ceded to Germany include the Caroline islands and Palaos, with 560 square miles, and 36,000 population, and the Mariana, or Ladrone islands (except Guam) with fifty square miles and 1,000 population. Spain's principal colony in Africa is Rio de Oro and Adrar, with 243,000 square miles and 100,000 population, which are under the governorship of the Canary Islands, with a sub-governor resident at Rio de Oro. The negotiations for the sale of the Caroline islands, Palaos, and Ladrone, to Germany, have been in progress for some time.

THE INSULAR COMMISSION APPOINTED by the War Department to investigate affairs in Puerto Rico, and to report upon all matters relating to currency, laws, taxation, judiciary, public improvements, education, and civil affairs generally, has made a unanimous report to the Secretary of War. The commissioners say that all classes and conditions of the Puerto Rican population are ready and willing to accept American institutions, and to be content with them. The report discusses the financial condition of the country. The currency amounts to about $11,600,000, a larger sum than was in circulation prior to American occupancy. The report recommends that the Spanish bank bills be redeemed, and that the bank be no longer permitted to issue currency. It also recommends that, as soon as possible, the Puerto Rican money which is now in circulation, be supplanted by United States currency. The Commission considers at some length the question of concessions and franchises, and recommends such a generous settlement of this question as will give to Puerto Rico every opportunity for advancement and improvement, and encourage the investment of moneys in the way of building railroads and other public improvements of all kinds. The report recommends the establishment in the island of the public school system of the United States. Recommendation is made that there shall be a complete separation of Church and State and all property, and for a thorough reform of the judicial system of the island along American lines.

—X—

MISS CLARA BARTON, PRESIDENT OF the American National Red Cross, under date of Havana, May 24th, has written to General Brooke, thanking him warmly for his cooperation in the work of relieving the distress among the reconcentrados, and giving an account of the work the Red Cross was doing in Cuba. In this letter Miss Barton tells how she and her coworkers of the Red Cross have worked to give homes and work for helpless widows, and good surroundings for orphans who were found living in squalor, wretchedness, and misery, and half starved. A house of some kind is found in each town, and the children gathered up and taken into this home, washed, and cared for, their filthy and dangerous rags burned until no clothing is left, when, if no other made garments are at hand, they are put into bed till the ladies of the town, who flock joyfully with their needles and sewing machines, can make the necessary one garment for each child. The second day always finds them all up, dressed, fed, clean and happy. Sometimes there are not over thirty children, in other places seventy-five or eighty. Miss Barton adds: "Then a school is opened. The sight that is seen through tears is these little waifs of misfortune sitting on their rude benches, all animation, pointing out to each other the big letters in the little primer, trying to pronounce them correctly and plainly."

—X—

IF THE SUPREME COURT DECIDES THAT the law allowing the city of Detroit to engage in the street railway business is valid, that city will demonstrate the success or failure of municipal ownership. This project has for some time been under consideration, being the outgrowth of an unsuccessful effort to compel the reduction of street railway fares. Under the law, the validity of which is being tested, a commission was appointed to negotiate with the street railway companies, and it is announced an agreement has been reached, whereby the price of the properties involved is fixed at $16,800,000. In case of public purchase, it is figured the city could borrow money at three and one-half per cent interest, making the annual obligation something less than $600,000. The net earnings of the street railway company in 1897 was $727,000, and in 1898 about $775,000. This would leave a good margin out of which to meet the temporary loss caused by reduced fares, with something left over for a sinking fund. In the event of the court holding the law to be invalid, it is proposed that a private corporation be formed to operate the railway for the city.

—X—

ARRANGEMENTS ARE BEING MADE AT the Postoffice department to extend the rural free delivery service at the beginning of the fiscal year. July 1st, an appropriation of $300,000 becomes available, and with this fund the department will be enabled to give a large number of farmers almost as good mail service as suburbanites now have. This appropriation will be divided among the States in proportion to their rural population, and the desire of the people themselves for the service. As a preliminary to the establishment of the service it is required that the citizens of a district should forward a petition through their representative in Congress, setting forth the nature of the country, whether it is thickly or sparsely populated, the leading avocations of the people, character of the roads, and the distance the petitioners have to travel to receive their mail. If the petition is endorsed by the member representing the district, the Postoffice department sends a special agent to look over the ground, map out a route, select carriers for appointment, and recommend the establishment of the service, if in his judgment it can be successfully and economically carried out.

—X—

FOLLOWING UP ANTI-TRUST LEGISLATION of his State, Governor Sayres, of Texas, has issued a call for an anti-trust convention, to be held in St. Louis, Sept. 20. Personal letters extending invitations to the meeting have been addressed to governors and attorneys—general of all Southern, Northern, and Eastern States. The object of the meeting will be to thoroughly discuss the trust question, with a view to securing uniform legislation to govern trusts. Governor Sayres is extremely radical, as evidenced by the law enacted by the Texas legislature, and while it is not probable these views will be widely endorsed, the Governor believes, if he can secure the co-operation of fifteen or twenty states, he will have done much toward trust suppression.

—X—

REPORTS AS TO THE OUTCOME OF THE Dreyfus revision proceedings have been fully confirmed, and the prisoner is being brought back to France for a new trial, which virtually means acquittal. Zola has returned to his home, and all patriotic Frenchmen rejoice that justice has triumphed over intrigue. The indications are that those officers who were responsible for, or parties to, the conspiracy, will meet deserved punishment. The mercurial French public has unexpectedly maintained a calm attitude, and refused to be led into the belief that a crisis could result if justice pursued its course. As the case now stands, Dreyfus occupies his former position in the army, and has had restored to him his cross of the Legion of Honor.

The News of the Church

The Two-Hundredth Anniversary of the Old Swedes' Church, Wilmington, Del.

The re-opening after restoration and renovation, took place on Trinity Sunday exactly 200 years from the day on which the present edifice was consecrated, which in that year, 1699, fell on June 4th.

Rehearsed in outline, the history of this ancient landmark of Delaware is as follows: 1638, arrival of the first Swedish colony in America, on the western bank of the Delaware, landing at "the Rocks" in the Christiana Creek, which feeds the Delaware river. Regular religious services were instituted by Peter Miniquit at the fort built near the Creek. He was accompanied by several Swedish clergy of whom the Rev. Reorus Tarkillus is the best known. 1667, a wooden church was built near the mouth of the Christiana. The number of Swedish immigrants kept steadily increasing, so that an appeal was sent to the mother country for more clergy. In response there were sent over three pastors with supplies of all things necessary for the conduct of divine worship and spiritual instruction of the people. Of these three, Ericus Tobias Biorck became the founder and first Swedish pastor of the present church. Its cornerstone was laid on May 28th, 1698, and on June 4th, of the following year, the consecration took place. The building when completed consisted of the four walls and roof, without porches, gallery or tower. 1774, erection of the gallery with outside stairs leading thereto. 1802, the tower and belfry were added. From 1830 to 1842 there was a discontinuance of the services, the congregation having erected a church within the city, but in the latter year the church was re-opened, the pews removed, and a wooden floor laid over the old bricks. 1899, a thorough restoration. The belfry has been rebuilt and a new roof put on, pews in accord with the original design and arrangement, and brick aisles have been restored; pulpit has been placed in its first position, and a new marble altar erected enclosing the original one. This altar is in memory of the ten Swedish clergy, the last of whom, Master Lawrence Girelius, was in charge, 1768-1791. After that date, with the permission of the ecclesiastical authority in Sweden, the building passed into the possession of the American Church, the charter receiving the necessary amendment from the Delaware legislature, and in 1792 the Rev. Joseph Clarkson became its first English speaking pastor.

The Rev. H. Ashton Henry is the present rector of Trinity parish, the vicar of Holy Trinity, (Old Swedes') being the Rev. M. B. Dunlap. He took charge of the parish in 1887, and through his energy the present beautiful Trinity church was erected in 1891. The vicars date from 1847, after the second church was built. This second church has been desecrated, and is now used as a stone cutter's show room. Mr. Biorck was recalled by Charles XII in 1714, and appointed pastor of the Copperburg church, Fahlun, Sweden. From that place there was sent in 1718 a beautiful chalice and paten of silver, given by the mining company of that city, as a remembrance of Biorck's first charge in this new land. The same mining company also sent out this year a copy of a portrait of Biorck, which they asked might be placed within the restored church.

The service of benediction began with the recital of Psalm lxxxiv and cxlii, as the procession moved from the parish house to the church. In the procession were the Bishop of the diocese, Rt. Rev. Dr. Leighton Coleman, the rector and vicar of the parish, Rev. Messrs. J. L. McKim and F. M. Munson, clergy of the diocese, T. G. Littell of New York, and Richard H. Nelson, of Philadelphia, the choir and vestrymen. Arriving at the chancel Psalm xxiv was recited, it having been recited by the founder of the church at its consecration 200 years ago. The request for benediction was read by the senior warden, Mr. John S. Grohe. The Bishop recited collects for the benediction of the church, the altar, and episcopal chair (made from wood of the old building, and in memory of a former rector), and after signing and sealing the instrument it was read by the rector, the Rev. H. Ashton Henry. The Te Deum was sung, after which the Holy Eucharist was celebrated, the rector officiating. The preacher was the Rev. Richard H. Nelson.

The following societies were represented at the morning service: Church Club, Historical Society of Delaware, Society of Colonial Wars in State of Delaware, Daughters of American Revolution, Delaware Society of National Colonial Dames, the Colonial Dames of America. The State bench was also represented. The mayor of Wilmington and many of the chief citizens attended.

Bishop Coleman was the preacher at the afternoon service, and his text was the same as that chosen by Master Biorck at his opening service, Ps. cxvi: 3, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." How glad the Swedish pastor would have been to have been allowed to see with prophetic eye that day, how glad to have known that the same truths would have been preached through all the years, especially the truth proclaimed on Trinity Sunday. A class of 17 was confirmed and the vicar baptized 12. The preacher at the evening service was the Rev. F. W. Tomkins, of Philadelphia. On Wednesday evening, May 31st, the preacher was the Rev. S. B. Simes, of Gloria Dei, (Old Swedes'), Philadelphia. On the first Sunday after Trinity the preachers were the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, of Baltimore, at 10:30, and the Rev. C. S. Olmsted, of Bala, Pa., at 7:45.

Canada

Diocese of Rupert's Land

An ordination took place in St. George's church, Winnipeg, on Whitsunday, at which seven candidates were made deacons and seven deacons ordered priests, 14 in all. They were presented by Dean O'Meara to His Grace, the Archbishop of Rupert's Land, who was assisted in the service by the Rev. Messrs. J. F. Pritchard, of Montana, and T. H. Pritchard, of Lac Seul, Ontario, brothers of one of the deacons, the Rev. E. C. Pritchard.

Diocese of Toronto

The Bishop held a Confirmation in All Saints' church, Toronto, on Ascension Day when a class of 71 candidates was presented, and on Whitsun Monday, at Christ church. A legacy of $8,000 has been left to the Toronto synod by the will of Mary Anne Kennedy, of Stouffville. Over $1,000 has been promised towards the Bishop Sullivan Memorial Sustentation Fund for Algoma, by 51 pew-holders of St. James' cathedral, Toronto, the time for payment of this sum to extend over three years. This was the result of an appeal made by Bishop Thornloe, of Algoma, in the cathedral lately. The spring Church parade was arranged to be held on Whitsunday for the Toronto volunteer regiments. St. John's church, Atherley, has been almost entirely renewed during the past year. The Bishop has arranged to hold a Confirmation at Shanty Bay, June 1st.

Diocese of Fredericton

The usual united service of the city church Sunday schools was held on the evening of Ascension Day, in Trinity church, St. John. A very large number of children were present, and many of the clergy. Bishop Kingdon held a Confirmation in St. Mary's church on the 7th. A beautiful cross is to be presented to the church, by the ladies' Bible class of Trinity, in memory of the late Archdeacon Brigstocke.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

The Rev. Fr. Huntington will preach in St. James', on Sunday, the 18th.

The Rev. B. F. Matrau, of St. Bartholomew's, Englewood, leaves for Newton, Mass., with his family, on the 21st, being advised by his physician to take at least two or three months more of rest. The Rev. G. D. Wright will be his locum tenens till the autumn.

Bishop McLaren's Appointments

JUNE

2. Closing of Sisters' School at cathedral.
- 5-6. Closing of Waterman Hall, Sycamore, and meeting of trustees.
9. Trinity, Belvidere.
14. Closing of Kemper Hall, Kenosha.
18. Baccalaureate sermon at Kenyon College, Ohio.
20. Trustee meeting of Kenyon College.

JULY

2. Holy Trinity, Chicago; St. John, Lockport.
9. Christ church, S reator.
16. A. M., Douglas Park; All Saints', Western Springs.

AUGUST

6. Christ, Harvard.
20. St. Joseph, (West Pullman), Chicago; Incarnation, (Fernwood), Chicago.

Enlargement of Work at Trinity

Trinity church, the Rev. Wm. C. Richardson, rector, has been observing its name day and the week following, by special services and society reunions. Its work has taken another development. An embroidery school under the charge of a skilled graduate of the Kensington Art School, of London, Eng., has been established with a competent corps of workers, and is advertised to furnish Church vestments of every kind, and even of the most elaborate degree of excellence. A portion of its income will be given to the missionary cause. Much of Trinity's work is to be kept going through the summer. Means have been offered to support another settlement similar to the Rouse memorial settlement on Wallace st., which has grown so extensively during the past winter, and the rector intends to open this settlement this month on Cottage Grove ave., where he already has an established Sunday school to put into it at the start.

Woman's Auxiliary

The 15th annual meeting of the Chicago branch was held in St. Peter's, Lakeview, June 1st, at 10:30 A. M. The rector, the Rev. Frank duMoulin, was celebrant, assisted by the Rev. J. H. Hopkins, the Bishop reading the Gospel, pronouncing the Absolution, and giving the Benediction. An impressive sermon was preached by the Rev. W. C. Richardson, from the text: "We do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God," Acts ii: 2. The music of the service was efficiently rendered by St. Peter's choir. The attendance was large, and the generous offering went to the Auxiliary's general fund. At 1 P. M. an excellent and well served luncheon was supplied by the ladies of the congregation in the commodious parish house. At 2:30 P. M. the Auxiliary convened for business in the church, the president, Mrs. D. B. Lyman, in the chair. After prayers by the Bishop, the Auxiliary was welcomed to St. Peter's in an address by the rector. On roll-call 49 branches were found to be represented by the 400 women present. The report of the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Clergymen was read by Mrs. W. R. Stirling, of Grace church branch; that of the Comfort Club, by Mrs. Henry A. Blair, of Trinity branch; the annual reports of the secretary and treasurer, by the corresponding secretary. The number of branches reporting is 103, with an aggregate membership of about 2,670. It was found that 406 missionary boxes, valued at $3,184.07, were sent out last year. Money to the amount of $3,061.25 was reported to the secretary; the treasurer's receipts were $9,406.51, and the total disbursements of the secretary and treasurer were $21,026.97, of which $8,486.27 was devoted to diocesan missions, and $12,410.38 to domestic, foreign, Indian, and colored missions. Mrs. Charles B. Bramson, president of the Minnesota diocesan branch, made an excellent impression when speaking in behalf of Miss Carter's lace schools among Indian women and girls. These schools are the only industry in the country for the Indian females. Offerings were taken for mission work in China. Then followed what is always so lovingly listened to, the annual address of her who has for four years so charmingly filled the position of chief executive officer. Here is an epitome: Reference to the home for children in charge of the Sisters of St. Mary at the cathedral, and the need of a new building; the city missionary pledges are all paid, but as more money is needed, these pledges should be increased a little. The climax in this beautifully worded address was reached, and a sensation produced, when the president announced the receipt that day of a letter from a lady in this city, who will give her jewels, valued at $8,000, to St. Mary's Home. With a few more devoted ones following such a splendid example, showing that the great god, Self, does not entirely dominate the world, the Home will get its new building. Pledges for the support of the assistant city missionary were called for, and a response given to the amount of nearly $900. The president requested the Bishop to take the chair while several changes in the constitution were proposed and carefully read: First, obliterating all reference to deanery limits; second, increasing the number of vice-presidents from three to five; third, making provision for an auditing committee. These changes were accepted by a rising vote. The chairman spoke feelingly for the president and of her heavy labors in the auxiliary work, which called for more assistance, and definite help. On nomination, and being put to a vote by the Bishop, the following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing diocesan year: President, Mrs. D. B. Lyman, of Emmanuel church, La Grange; vice-presidents: Miss K. D. Arnold of St. James' church; Mrs. V. B. Fullerton, of Christ church, Ottawa; Miss A. B. Stahl, of Grace church, Galena; Mrs. W. D. C. Street, of St. Chrysostom's; Mrs. J. H. Hopkins, of Epiphany; treasurer, Mrs. James T. Hoyne, of Trinity, Chicago; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. O. Meacham, of Grace, Chicago; recording secretary, Mrs. George A. Coe, of St. Paul's, Kenwood. Mrs. Monroe, late recording secretary, having withdrawn from the board in consequence of leaving to take up residence in the East, the Bishop eulogized her excellent work, and characterized her removal as a real loss to the diocese. He then paid a tribute to the city missionary work, with special reference to that of Miss Prophet, of Trinity. A fine paper had been read from the pen of Sister Margaret Clare. The singing of the Doxology and pronouncing of the Benediction brought to a close a meeting that yields to none of its predecessors in the interest and enthusiasm manifested by those participating in the proceedings.

The Death of Mr. C. R. Larrabee

This event, on the evening of the 3d, removes one more landmark of Chicago, and an eminent Churchman. Born at Ticonderoga, N. Y., Feb. 17th, 1825, he came to Chicago at the age of 19, and was a resident of the city for 55 years. He had passed a prolonged business life, and was, up to a short time ago, treasurer of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. But it was as treasurer of the diocese, in the 70's and early 80's, that he was best known to Churchmen, and as a vestryman, for many years, of St. James. Four months ago he had an attack of La Grippe, which superinduced heart trouble and nervous prostration. Two months of acute suffering terminated in death, at midnight, on Saturday. Many of the clergy and prominent citizens of Chicago attended the funeral at 2 P.M., Tuesday, in the church of the Ascension, of which the son, the Rev. E. A. Larrabee, has, for over a decade, been rector. All of the family of the deceased survive him, and were at his bed side when the end came. His daughters are Mrs. John DeKoven, Mrs. John Tilton, Mrs. Charles Street, Misses Eleanor L., Mary C., and Caroline.

Wreck of Church in South Waukegan

The Rev. W. E. Toll, of Christ church, Waukegan, on returning to his home from the convention, on Wednesday night of last week, found that the very neat and quite new church in South Waukegan, which was bought from the Campbellites a year ago, had been blown, with terrific force, entirely from its foundation, and, such is the nature of the wreck, that it is very doubtful whether it will pay to put it in place again, and repair. The lower part of the building is crashed to splinters, the floor damaged, plaster on the walls and ceiling shivered to a thousand pieces; the chimney is also blown down. It is a great loss and misfortune to the mission of All Saints', in which, on the afternoon of each Sunday for a year past, a goodly number of people have been gathered together for worship and instruction.

The Sixty-Second Annual Convention

Held in the cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Chicago, May 30th. At the Communion service the Bishop was celebrant. The sermon was by the Rev. T. A. Snively, being a strong plea for rubrical following of the Book of Common Prayer, and for retaining in their general integrity the books of the Bible, as given us by the canonical authority of the Church, the pillar and ground of the truth. The service was full choral. The convention was called to order by the Bishop; about 80 of the clergy responded to roll-call, and 55 parishes and missions were represented. Luncheon was served by ladies of the cathedral, in the spacious guild rooms.

At the afternoon session the Bishop, in his annual address, reviewed the quarter century's work of his episcopate; picturing in this deeply interesting bit of historical reminiscence his anxiety on coming to a diocese comprising the whole State, and then torn by internal dissension. That this condition had passed was evidenced by the marvelous growth of the Church in 24 years; from 8,100 communicants in the old undivided diocese to 28,999; while in this northern of the present three dioceses, the increase has been five-fold: i. e., from 2,588 in 1874, to 13,972 in 1898. There had in the same period been 22,046 confirmed, of whom 1,286 were last year in 69 classes; in 26 of the latter he had been relieved by the Bishops of Springfield and Indiana. In connection with the cathedral, the debt on which had not been paid till 1878, the Bishop indicated as among the needs of this essential centre of city mission work, on the plant of which $65,000 had been spent, a Christian lodging house, a school, and a refuge for women and girls. In reviewing the steps taken in recent years towards securing endowment for the diocese, the Bishop referred to the agitation for a coadjutor, as "a practical question which should be considered, without discussing matters which have not yet been presented to us."

The Rev. Luther Pardee was re-elected secretary of the convention, and he named as his assistants the Rev. A. L. Williams, and J. M. Ericsson; the Bishop appointed the Rev. E. J. Randall as his convention secretary. Mr. F. F. Ainsworth was re-elected treasurer and financial agent of the diocese.

The mission board presented a very gratifying report, the receipts for diocesan missions having been $9,247. Pledges to a similar amount were made for the ensuing year. Reports were read from the trustees of funds for Aged and Infirm Clergy, for the Widows and Orphans of Clergymen, for the Church Home for Aged Persons, and from the trustees of the diocese of Illinois. The very complete historical report presented by the special committee for increasing the endowment fund of the diocese, showed that $26,200 obtained by private solicitation, had been paid to the trustees of the endowment fund, incorporated on the authority of the convention of 1887. The present convention confirmed the election of the committee of representative laymen appointed January 23d last.

On the proposition from the Mutual Life Insurance Company of Detroit, "for providing an endowment fund of $250,000, under a ten-year endowment plan"—it being proposed to obtain insurance on 500 lives for an average policy of $500 each, costing an average premium of less than $48, but with $100 as a minimum policy,—"the progress made is entirely satisfactory, both to the company and the committee." The advantages of this plan, which was sanctioned by the convention, are an average immediate annual income accruing to the endowment fund, of $3,500, on account of commissions and mortality, and in ten years an endowment fund from this source alone of about $285,000. Of the $250,000, face value of policies, it is known that nearly $100,000 is already taken up. The committee confidently anticipates that, at the convention of 1900 the full amount of insurance will be made.

The Rev. W. B. Walker moved to change the date of convention, to avoid its falling on Decoration Day, and the convention will hereafter meet on the fourth Tuesday in May, instead of on the last as at present. The parishes of the Atonement, Edgewater, and of the Holy Communion, Maywood, were admitted to the convention.

The following were elected as the Standing Committee: Prof. F. J. Hall, Drs. D. S. Phillips and J. S. Stone, with Messrs. D. B. Lyman, G. S. McReynolds, and Edwin Walker. On resolution, the Rev. Drs. Clinton Locke and D. S. Phillips, with Mr. W. A. Ryerson, were appointed a committee to express in writing the regret of the convention at the serious illness of Mr. C. R. Larrabee, who was for many years diocesan treasurer, and who, three days later, passed away. The 35th annual report from St. Luke's Hospital showed that, of the 1,761 cases treated in the year, one-half were free patients, while the dispensary visits numbered no less than 11,743. The munificent bequest of Mrs. Stickney had afforded opportunity for the enlarging and remodeling the buildings of this noble Church charity. And as the president, Mr. Arthur Ryerson, reported a debt of $20,000, a special committee was appointed to consider the propriety of having one Sunday in the year set apart for offerings to all the charitable institutions of the Church, and to report next year. A special committee to report next year was named, to consider the question of continuing the office of chancellor. The report of the Church extension committee spoke highly and encouragingly of the diocesan missions, and notably of the city missionary work, and commended to the consideration of Churchmen that portion of the Bishop's address relating to the requirements of the cathedral as the centre of city mission work.

The Bishop gave notice of his acceptance of the position of trustee of Kenyon college, Gambier, and the Rev. P. C. Wolcott was elected co-trustee from the diocese. The Rev. E. M. Stires and Mr. E. P. Bailey were elected delegates to the missionary council at St. Louis in October next. The following constitute the new Board of Missions: The Rev. Messrs. C. P. Anderson, C. H. Hixby, W. C. DeWitt, J. H. Edwards, H. J. Hopkins, E. A. Larrabee, A. W. Little, W. C. Richardson, Jos. Rushton, C. Scadding, T. A. Snively, E. M. Stires, J. S. Stone, W. W. Wilson, and P. C. Wolcott; Messrs. F. F. Ainsworth, G. F. Arvedson, E. P. Bailey, J. M. Banks, Dr. D. R. Brower, W. H. Chadwick, S. W. Childs, P. Dickenson, G. E. Goode, F. D. Hoag, J. W. D. Kelley, F. J. Le Moyné, D. B. Lyman, G. S. McReynolds, T. S. Rattle, C. L. Raymond, and A. Ryerson. After routine business, prayers, and the Bishop's benediction, there was adjournment sine die.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The church of the Holy Communion, the Rev. Henry Mottet, D.D., rector, has just given $300 to the "Tribune Fresh-Air Fund."

At the cathedral of St. John the Divine, in the afternoon, of Sunday, June 3d, the graduating class of Columbia University assembled in the cathedral, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel D. McConnell preached the baccalaureate sermon.

Confirmation at Tarrytown

Bishop Potter made a visitation of Christ church, May 30th, and administered Confirmation to a class presented by the rector, the Rev. J. Selden Spencer, D.D.

Commencement at the Castle, Tarrytown

The commencement exercises of the class of '99, of Miss Mason's school, were held May 31st. The diplomas were presented to the graduates by the principal, Miss C. E. Mason, after which Bishop Potter delivered an address. There were five graduates.

Gift of Prayer Book to the Church Club

A folio copy in fac-simile of the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England, in manuscript, as set forth in 1661, and with the Act of Uniformity of 1662, has been added by gift to the library of the Church Club, through the benevolence of the late Mr. E. A. Brewster, of Newburgh, N. Y.

Work on the Cathedral

The trustees of the cathedral of St. John the Divine held an adjourned meeting at the house of Bishop Potter, May 29th. Besides the Bishop there were present the Rev. Drs. Hoffman, Dix, Rainsford, and Huntington, and the secretary, Mr. Geo. Macculloch Miller. It was decided that the work of construction should be started at once on the large piers at the west end of the choir, and it is expected these will be completed by autumn. When this stage is reached, work on the interior can be pushed much more rapidly than heretofore has been possible.

Reception to Retiring Curates

At St. Agnes' chapel, of Trinity parish, the Rev. Chas. T. Olmsted, D.D., vicar, the two former curates, the Rev. T. Manley Scharp, and the Rev. Chas. A. Hamilton, were given a reception in the parish house, May 29th, their terms of appointment having expired. Illuminated addresses were presented, expressive of the appreciation in which their work has been held. Both will receive a vacation of two months, during which they will draw full salary, and in addition, the Rev. Mr. Hamilton will receive $1,000 in recognition of special services he has rendered. During the summer, the Rev. J. Neilson Barry, of Spokane, Wash., will temporarily act as curate.

For the Defence of the Faith

A considerable number of the city clergy lunched together at the Hotel St. Denis, May 29th, and informally discussed the situation seemingly brought about by the recent ordination of the Rev. Dr. Briggs to the priesthood, despite many and earnest protests against his attitude toward the Holy Scriptures. Great seriousness was shown by those present, and it was made evident that a widespread dissatisfaction exists among the laity of all shades of Churchmanship over the outcome of the event. A full discussion took place, suggestive of measures which may promote defensive activity in the interest of the Faith of the Church, and a committee was appointed to consider and report upon a feasible plan or plans looking in this direction.

New Missions Conducted by Laymen

The Lay Helpers of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, organized to aid in mission work under the Ven. Archdeacon Tiffany, D.D., is caring for the Sunday school of St. Margaret in an old residence on the water's edge at 156th st. A former carriage house at Melrose has been fitted up as a chapel, and two of the lay helpers there conduct the mission of St. Simeon with services and Sunday school. A work just started in the same manner at Tremont in the upper end of the archdeaconry, has been named the mission of the Advocate. The work is all preparatory to the eventual foundation of parishes under the clergy. Of the Lay Helpers organization, Mr. Eugene M. Camp, is president; Mr. Julian G. Roberts, secretary, and Mr. A. M. Gober, treasurer.

The Russo-Greek Bishop

Bishop Tikon, of the Aleutian Islands and Alaska, the Russo-Greek ecclesiastic whose residence is in San Francisco, is making a visitation in New York, and staying with the Russian priest, the Rev. Alexander Katoritzky. On June 2nd, he celebrated the pontifical liturgy at the Syro-Arabian Mission, and Sunday, performed a like service at the Russo-Greek church. At Bridgeport, Conn., he consecrated a chime of bells, presented by the Czar. Having been consecrated about two years he has not yet succeeded in visiting the Aleutian Islands, but expects to do so next year, starting early enough to go to the furthest outlying mission. He will proceed this summer as far as Sitka, and other lower Alaskan points.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D. Bishop

At the meeting of the Clerical Brotherhood June 5th, Mr. Gustavus Cohen gave an address on "Jewish family life."

The rector of the church of St. Sauveur, the Rev. Dr. Miel, has largely recovered from his illness, but is still unable to take his full official duties.

On Sunday, June 3d, Bishop Whitaker administered the rite of Confirmation at St. George's chapel, All Saints' church, Moyamensing, and St. Matthew's church, Philadelphia.

Christ Church, Philadelphia

Services will be maintained throughout the summer. During the absence of the rector, the Rev. Dr. C. Ellis Stevens, at his summer place, "Edgemere," Lake George, the services and parochial work will be in the care of the Rev. E. Gaines Nock.

Marriage of Rev. S. F. Hotchkiss

The Rev. Samuel Fitch Hotchkiss, rector of the church of St. Luke, the Beloved Physician, Bustleton, and registrar of the diocese, was married, May 31st, to Helen Nicholson Roberts, daughter of the late Rev. Edmund Roberts, a former rector of St. Luke's, Bustleton.

Resignation of Rev. Dr. Appleton

At St. Paul's church, Cheltenham, the rector, the Rev. E. W. Appleton, D.D., who has been for some time in poor health, has resigned, after a continuous service of about 32 years. The resignation takes effect at the end of September, when he will become rector emeritus, with a salary of $1,000 per annum. Meanwhile, he is allowed vacation, and the associate rector, the Rev. J. Thompson Cole, enters upon the care of the parish.

199th Anniversary of Gloria Dei Church

On Trinity Sunday, the rector, the Rev. Snyder B. Simes, preached a sermon of historical character in the morning, taking for his theme, "The old churchyard." In the afternoon, the Rev. Wilber F. Paddock, D.D., was the preacher. An earnest effort is making to secure the full sum of $25,000 for the parochial endowment by the time of celebration of the 200th anniversary of the parish next year. This fund, which has been gradually accumulating for a score of years, now reaches $32,925 89. The sum contributed this year amounted to $1,733.72.

An Historic Wedding

In Old Christ church, June 1st, the Rev. Geo. Woolsey Hodge united in marriage Mr. Frederick Strong Moseley, of Boston, Mass., and Helen Dalton Carpenter, daughter of Major J. Edward Carpenter. On her father's side the bride's family has been connected with this venerable parish for over 200 years, and on her mother's side is granddaughter of the late Rev. Benjamin Dorr, D.D., who was for 32 years rector of the church. Her original ancestor in this country purchased for the congregation in 1695 the ground upon which the present sacred edifice stands.

Corner-Stone Laid of St. Paul's, Chester

The corner-stone was laid, June 1st, by Bishop Whitaker, in the presence of a large assemblage. Addresses were delivered by the Bishop and the Rev. Geo. A. Keller, dean of the convocation. The corner-stone itself is an interesting object, having been brought from Mars Hill, Athens, on the steamship "St. Louis." It is of massive dimensions. The new church will be in early English Gothic, 120 ft long by 60 ft. wide. Granite, with Indiana limestone finish, will be used in construction. In the interior the columns upholding the clerestory will be of Indiana limestone. The side walls will be wainscoted in oak, and the roof will be of paneled oak with open timbers. There will be a seating capacity for 750 persons. A parish building will adjoin the church, providing guild and assembly rooms, kitchen, and gymnasium. The estimated cost of the church is $45,000.

The South-East Convocation

The annual meeting was held June 1st, at Trinity church, Southwark. The dean, the Rev. Herman L. Duhring, presided. A communication was received from the Diocesan Board of Missions announcing that $1,970 had been apportioned to be raised by this convocation, and that the amount appropriated for the year to be expended for missionary work within the bounds of the convocation was $2,500. Officers for the ensuing were elected as follows: Secretary, the Rev. John Moncreux; treasurer, Mr. Chas. M. Paterson; delegate to the Diocesan Board of Missions, Mr. Lucius S. Landreth. The Rev. S. H. Boyer reported that the new church of the Holy Spirit had been completed. The Rev. Henry L. Phillips gave an account of what has been accomplished by the League for Church Work Among Colored People. Appropriations were made as follows: the church of the Holy Spirit, $1,000; St. Emmanuelle, Italian church, $600; church of the Crucifixion, for colored people, $300; to Mr. Phillips for special work, $100; and for Jewish mission work, $500. At night a missionary service was held, at which addresses were made by the Rev. Llewellyn N. Caley and a Christian Hebrew, Mr. Gustavus Cohen.

Los Angeles

Joseph Horsfall Johnson, D.D., Bishop

The Fourth Annual Convention

Met in St. Paul's pro-cathedral, Los Angeles, May 17th, and was opened with the Holy Eucharist, the Bishop, celebrant. The preacher was the Rev. H. B. Restarick, and his sermon gave a strong presentation of the relation between the authority of the Church, and her endowment with the power of the Holy Spirit. The attendance at the convention was larger than at any previous meeting, there being about 40 clergy present, and delegates from more than 40 congregations. The Rev. M. C. Dotten was re-elected secretary, and re-appointed the Rev. Alfred Fletcher as his assistant. The business sessions were held in St. Paul's hall, but at four o'clock the convention moved into the church, and the Bishop read his address. It opened with a reference to the so-called "crisis" in the English Church, and pointed out that the difficulties in the case arise from uncertainty as to the law. In the American Church the law is more easily defined, and the Bishop urged upon all the practice of a law-abiding spirit. For the Good Samaritan Hospital, the Bishop asked the warmest interest and many gifts, in order that its efficiency and usefulness might be largely developed. The trustees have just made a contract for the erection of an additional wing, one ward of which will be devoted entirely to free patients. The Bishop also drew attention to the fact that since the last convention peculiar relations had been entered into between himself and the parish in whose buildings they were meeting. The vestry had proposed to him that he should accept the charge of the parish, and the nature of the agreement entered into was indicated by the designation now given to St. Paul's church; viz., the pro-cathedral. The Bishop suggested that a committee should be appointed to report next year a definite scheme of cathedral organization. The committee on canons reported, through its chairman, the Rev. A. G. L. Trew, D.D., against the adoption of an addition to the canons, declaring that no person should be considered a communicant of any parish or mission if he has not communicated within the preceding twelve months. The proposer of the canon, the Rev. B. W. R. Tayler, moved that the committee's report be rejected; but after an earnest discussion, the committee was sustained. The convention no longer elects its treasurer, but, under the canons, the treasurer of the trustees of the diocese becomes ex-officio the treasurer of the diocese. In order, therefore, to avoid possible confusions arising from ambiguities, the committee on canons reported several amendments, which were adopted, placing the several invested or endowment funds under the control of the board of trustees, and leaving in the charge of the treasurer only their revenues and current funds. Two new canons were adopted, the first, sanctioning and recognizing as a canonical institution of the diocese the Sunday school institute, which had been organized two days before by the Sunday school convention; and the second, providing for the division of the diocese into four convocations, or archdeacons, the limits of which were defined. The canon is permissive only, and the actual organization will depend in each case upon the action of the clergy and Church people of the several districts.

The Bishop appointed as the Committee on Cathedral Organization, the Rev. A. G. L. Trew, D. D., the Rev. M. M. Moore, and Messrs. Henry T. Lee, Daniel Cleveland, and A. W. Morgan.

The Rev. W. B. Burrows, secretary of the Mission Board, presented a very satisfactory report, showing a marked increase in the amounts received and expended for missions during the year. This is particularly gratifying, in view of the financial depression consequent on two successive years of drought.

The elections resulted as follows:

Standing Committee: The Rev. Drs. A. G. L. Trew and J. D. Easter; the Rev. Messrs. H. B. Restarick and B. W. R. Tayler; Messrs. T. L. Winder, Jas. F. Towell, J. A. Anderson, and D. Cleveland.

Board of Missions: The Rev. Messrs. J. D. H. Browne, Henderson Judd, W. B. Burrows, and M. C. Dotten; Messrs. C. T. Hinde, J. Bake-well Phillips, J. E. Cowles, and George Parsons. The Standing Committee have since organized by the re-election of Dr. Trew and Mr. Taylor, as president and secretary respectively.

Maine

Henry Adams Neely, D.D., Bishop

The 80th Annual Convention

Held in St. Luke's cathedral, Portland, on May 17th; all but three of the clergy actually resident in the diocese were present; the lay delegates numbered 23. Dean Sills was unanimously re-elected secretary, and Mr. W. G. Ellis treasurer of the diocese. The Standing Committee was elected as follows: The Rev. Dean Sills, the Rev. Messrs. J. W. Sparks, and Chas. F. Lee; Messrs. John Marshall Brown, Wm. G. Ellis, and R. H. Gardiner. The Rev. C. T. Ogden was, on the Bishop's nomination, re-elected to the position of honorary canon of the cathedral; and the Rev. R. W. Plant was chosen to the same position to fill the vacancy in the cathedral chapter caused by the removal from the diocese of the Rev. Canon Foster.

At 11 o'clock the Holy Communion was celebrated. The preacher was the Rev. Dr. Lindsay, of Boston, who came as the representative of the Board of General Missions. Dr. Lindsay took for his text the words, "Thy kingdom come," and made urgent appeal for greater interest and enthusiasm in the missionary work of the Church.

The Bishop read the report of his official acts during the year. Owing to ill health, he had not been able to visit all the parishes and missions, and in consequence the number of Confirmations was somewhat smaller than usual. Six priests had been received since the last convention, replacing an equal number removed. In answer to appeals at the summer chapels a considerable addition to the funds of the missionary board had been made. The Bishop commended to the care and support of the diocese, St. Catharine's Hall, Augusta, and the House of the Good Shepherd, Rockland. St. Catharine's had been re-opened last year in October, and had passed its first year successfully. The House of the Good Shepherd had passed into the hands of a corporation, of which the Bishop is chairman. Its work is the care of orphan and destitute children. In addition to the income from endowment and other sources, it requires about $200 a month to meet its expenses, a considerable part of which is contributed by summer visitors. Encouraging reports from both these institutions were afterward presented by the Rev. G. F. Degen, who has successfully managed St. Catharine's Hall during the past year; and from the Rev. Mr. Norwood, the secretary of the House of the Good Shepherd.

The Rev. Messrs. C. F. Lee and W. C. Stewart, and Mr. John B. Coleman were elected members of the Missionary Council.

The Bishop closed the session of the convention with a brief address, referring to the impaired condition of his health, and his constant interest in everything concerning the welfare of the Church in Maine.

Woman's Auxiliary

The diocesan branch held its 21st annual meeting May 16th. Miss Jarvis, of Connecticut, and Miss Paddock, of New York, made addresses. The Rev. Dr. Lindsay, of Boston, spoke on education in the mission work of the Church. The former officers were re-elected. Reports were made of the work of the Junior Auxiliary, and of the Babies' Branch. Boxes and cash had been contributed to the amount of $1,271.13 during the year.

Michigan City

John Hazen White, D. D., Bishop

St. Paul's Church, Hammond

The Rev. T. G. McGonigle, at Bishop White's solicitation, and the earnest request of the vestry, has undertaken this work. The prospects are good, but demand untiring energy and zeal. The parish at present is unique, being the youngest parish in the youngest diocese in the world. As a mission, it passed through many difficulties. On Easter Day, at Matins, the Knights Templar attended in a body. The service was fully choral. The money offering exceeded by 120 per cent. anything taken up previously. On May 16th, Mr. Hanson, director, and Mr. Russell, musical conductor, the sacred cantata, "Queen Esther," was given. It was a great success. The church is the richer by nearly $200. On the 24th, a reception was tendered the Rev. T. G. and Mrs. McGonigle, at the residence of the senior warden, Mr. F. R. Mott. It was a brilliant and pleasant affair. The members of the Ladies' Guild undertook the management, and to the perfection of their arrangements the result, most satisfactory in every way, is mainly due.

The Bishop's Visitations

A month has passed since the organization of the diocese. It has been a very busy month for the Bishop. Sunday, May 7th, he visited St. Paul's, LaPorte. This being the first Sunday following the departure of the rector, the Bishop conducted service alone, and preached on the future of parish work; after dinner, drove to Michigan City, and in the evening, at Trinity cathedral confirmed the first class in the new diocese (20), prepared and presented by the Rev. Dr. Cole, who since the first of January has been most faithfully caring for Trinity parish. The week following, the Bishop spent in New York, in attendance upon the triennial meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati. Sunday, May 14th, was spent with the Rev. H. D. B. McNeil, at St. Paul's, Mishawaka, in the morning, with an interesting service in one of the oldest churches in the diocese; and in the evening, with the Rev. F. M. Banfil, at the beautiful new St. James', South Bend. Large congregations were present at both services. There were five confirmed at Mishawaka, and 15 at South Bend. May 19th, by invitation of the Standing Committee of Indiana, Bishop White visited St. Luke's, Frankfort, preached and confirmed three, presented by the faithful priest-in-charge, the Rev. W. H. Xanders. The Feast of Whitsunday was happily spent at the cathedral in Michigan City, with two Celebrations, and sermons at mid-day and evening, and an afternoon service and address at the school house at Riskyville. Tuesday in Whitsun week the Bishop held an ordination in St. Mark's, Lima, and advanced to the priesthood the Rev. James Eleazer Craig. May 25th, visited at St. James', Goshen, preached and confirmed two presented by the rector. The Standing Committee of the diocese held its first meeting at Lima, May 22nd. The Bishop has appointed the Rev. W. W. Raymond as delegate from this diocese to the missionary council.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D. D., Bishop

The Guild of St. Barnabas held a meeting in St. Stephen's church, Boston, May 31st. Much interest in the work was expressed.

The Choir Guild

The second session rendered music in St. Paul's church, Boston, May 31st. The following choirs took part: St. Paul's church, Boston; St. Paul's, Brockton; Christ, Cambridge; St. Paul's, Malden; Grace, Newton; Emmanuel, Somerville. Mr. Warren A. Locke acted as choir-master, and Mr. Edgar H. Barrell as organist.

The Girl's Friendly Society

The annual council was held in Trinity parish rooms, Boston, May 31st. Miss McIntosh presided. A number of reports were submitted. Mrs. Roberts, president of the National Girls' Friendly Society, gave a description of the work through the country. According to the diocesan secretary's report, there are now 75 branches in Massachusetts, 1,007 working associates; 2,204 members, 934 probationers, and 78 married branch helpers. After the election of officers, Miss Paddock gave an interesting account of her work as deputation secretary. The annual tea was served in Mechanics' Building, and a social time followed. The service in the evening was attended by 1,200 members, who marched in the procession. The Rev. Edward Osborne, S. S. J. E., preached the sermon. Bishop Lawrence was present, with 30 of the clergy.

Maryland

William Paret, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The 116th Diocesan Convention

Convened in Emmanuel church, Baltimore, May 31st. The session opened with services conducted by the Bishop and the administration of the Holy Communion. Mr. John T. Mason was elected secretary, and Mr. John T. Glenn, Jr., assistant.

Mr. Joseph Packard, Jr., offered a motion bringing about a radical change in the method of election of bishops in Maryland by substituting a majority for the two-third rule, which heretofore prevailed. After several hours of speaking and various amendments, it was adopted by a vote of 86 to 59, and reads as follows:

The election of a bishop of this Church shall be made by a concurrent vote of the orders voting by ballot separately, and when all the votes shall have been deposited, the tellers of the clergy and laity shall proceed to count the vote, and if among those voted for, one shall receive a majority of those entitled to seats in both orders, he shall be duly elected.

The Rev. Robert H. Paine reported on behalf of the library committee that it had determined to retain the present episcopal residence and the building adjoining, and to make certain necessary changes at a small cost, to fit up the building for use as a library. The committee expects to do this at a cost of not over $2,000 of the sum appropriated.

Mr. Skipwith Wilmer, of the committee on donations, reported that the Rev. Arthur J.

Rich, late principal of the Hannah More Academy, had directed in his will that $1,500 be given to the convention for the fund for infirm and disabled clergymen.

In delivering his annual address, Bishop Paret dwelt strongly on two points—both of vital interest to the Church—one, the falling off in the number of young men who desired to enter the ministry; the other, the disobedience of the Church laws in regard to Baptism. "In preparing the official list of the clergy of the diocese, I find," said he, "an unusual condition; that while at our convention of 1898, we numbered 186, I have to report, now, only 122, and it seems a backward step; 15 names have gone from our roll, and only six have been added." Only one name had been added to the clergy list by ordination; the diocese has at this time only three candidates for Holy Orders. Not one candidate had been received since the last convention, and he asked what were the causes for this. He knew some of them, and one was the rapid change going on in the character and tone of life and living in this country. The Bishop said he had found there had been increase in number of communicants, but a decrease in the number of Baptisms. He said he had three years ago called attention to some very grave and harmful irregularities in the administration of Baptism. In some churches he found no fonts at all. In many others, he said the font was shabby, unattractive, and uncared for, and probably left out of sight in a corner. He said that there were churches in Baltimore where the congregation had not beheld the Baptism of an infant for years, and the excuse was that it would weary the people. The Bishop spoke of this sacrament as almost a lost act of worship, and asked that parents demand from their rectors their rights to have a public Baptism. During the year, the Bishop reported that he had, with three or four exceptions, visited all the parishes and churches of the diocese. He had made 108 official visitations, confirmed (on 97 occasions) 1,221 persons, preached 110 times, given 840 addresses, administered Holy Communion 42 times, baptized 39 children and 4 adults, officiated at four marriages and at three burials. He held three ordinations, admitting five to the priesthood. There are three candidates now for Holy Orders, and four deacons preparing for Priests' Orders.

The evening session was devoted almost entirely to the discussion of diocesan missions and the report of the committee on missions. Addresses on the subject were made by the Rev. Messrs. James F. Plummer, Douglass Hooff, Robert B. Nelson, and Wm. B. McPherson. The Bishop read extracts from the reports of the archdeacons of the diocese, and himself reported some encouraging statistics concerning weaker parishes. The report of the treasurer of the committee on missions showed that there is a considerable balance on hand after all demands had been met. A resolution offered by the Rev. Mr. Niver was adopted, providing that the committee on missions be authorized to apportion and appropriate in bulk to the several archdeacons the sum of $9,000 for carrying on diocesan work during the ensuing year.

The question of the location of the Episcopal library came before the convention and was definitely settled, after a full and free discussion. The settlement was to the effect that the work of the committee is approved by the convention, and that they be discharged after they have closed their accounts; that the $23,000 in their hands, which is the balance of the entire appropriation of $37,000 made last year, be returned to the trustees of the Keel fund, and that finally, the sum of $4,000 be appropriated by the convention to be used for the purpose of carrying out the plans sketched in the report of the committee as above reported.

Mr. Joseph Packard, Jr., of the Ways and Means Committee, reported a deficit of $1,000 from parishes represented in the convention. The chapel of the Prince of Peace, at Walbrook, was granted permission to organize as an independent congregation. The Rev. Henry T. Sharp is the rector. The church was established by Emmanuel church, and for some years has been self-supporting. The reports from the diocesan schools, Hannah More Academy, and Warfield College, showed both to be in a flourishing condition. The Rev. Luther C. Swentzel, representative of the General Board of Missions, made an address.

The Standing Committee was elected as follows: The Rev. Messrs. William M. Dame, J. Houston Eccleston, D. D., Frederick Gibson, J. S. B. Hodges, S. T. D., William H. H. Powers, Geo. C. Stokes, and Osborne Ingle.

It was decided to hold the next convention again in Emmanuel church, Baltimore.

Central New York

F. D. Huntington, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The third annual festival of the Church Sunday School Institute of Syracuse, was held in St. Paul's church, the Rev. Dr. Lockwood, rector, on the afternoon of Trinity Sunday. An address was delivered by the Rev. Karl Schwartz.

The Bishop's Birthday

The beloved Diocesan celebrated the 80th anniversary of his birth on Trinity Sunday. He was born May 28th, 1819, at Hadley, Mass., in the old farmhouse, which remains to this day his summer home. He was the youngest of 11 children, and sprang from sturdy New England stock. He completed 30 years of his episcopate (and wise and fruitful as it been), April 8th, and the esteem and love of his flock was shown by many birthday tokens and messages.

The Bishop's Appointments for June

8. Syracuse.
9. Ordination of deacons, church of the Saviour, Syracuse.
- 12-14. Diocesan convention, Oswego.
15. Keble school, Syracuse.
18. Calvary, Syracuse.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew

At the State convention, held in Syracuse, May 18th and 14th, the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Frank L. Lyman, Syracuse; vice-presidents, Chas. E. Allen, Troy, Mark H. Lewis, Buffalo, Henry Valk, Richmond Hill, L. I.; recording secretary, Percy J. Knapp, New York; corresponding secretary, George H. Plummer, Rochester; 150 delegates were in attendance.

Western New York

Wm. D. Walker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

75th Anniversary of St. Luke's, Rochester

The celebration of the jubilee began May 10th, when the Church Club convened in St. Luke's parish house with special reference to the event. The Rev. Dr. Henry Anstice, a former rector, spoke of "The relation of St. Luke's to the growth of the city." Ten out of the 13 churches organized in the city since the founding of St. Luke's, owe their beginning to it in more or less degree. The Rev. Dr. Nelson Millard, pastor of the 1st Presbyterian church, spoke on "St. Luke's nearest neighbor," and Mr. Selden H. Brown, of Scottsville, on "The progress of the American Church." The Rev. R. R. McG. Converse, D.D., rector of St. Luke's, and the Rev. Dr. D'Orville Doty also made remarks. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Eugene C. Denton; vice-presidents, William W. Mumford, Frank J. Amsden, Fred E. Drake, John Morris, Albert C. Walker, James W. Whitney, Wm. C. Walker and William C. Edwards; secretary and treasurer, George H. Plummer.

The anniversary celebration was continued the next day by the Eucharistic service at 8 A. M., Morning Prayer at 10:30, administration of Confirmation by Bishop Walker, and a second celebration of the Holy Communion. Evening Prayer was said at 5 o'clock. At 8 P. M., the jubilee services were held. Addresses were made by Bishop Walker, the Rev. Dr. Anstice, of Philadelphia, the Rev. Murray A. Bartlett, of St. Paul's, the Rev. Warren C. Hubbard of Trinity, the Rev. Dr. William D'Orville Doty, of Christ church, and the Rev. Amos Skeele of the church of the Epiphany. At the close of the service a reception was held in the parish house.

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

St. Monica's League

At St. John's church, May 9th, the closing service was held. The Holy Communion was celebrated, and an address delivered by the Rev. Mr. Paddock. At the business meeting, the Rev. Mr. Bratenahl read a report of the work among the colored people at Port Reno, in St. Alban's parish. This work has been begun and maintained by St. Monica's League during the past winter, and is in charge of a colored deacon. The secretary of the league read her annual report, showing that more than $1,100 has been expended for salaries of teachers and equipments of industrial schools, for scholarships in King Hall, Lawrenceville, Va., and Charleston, W. Va., and for vestments, altar linen, etc. The range of work is from the diocese of Washington, through all the Southern States to Florida. St. Monica's League was organized in 1898, to work in connection with, and under the direction of, the Church Commission for the Colored People. All Churchwomen can become members by payment of one dollar annually. □

Missouri

Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, D.D., Bishop

Brotherhood of St. Andrew

The State convention met at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of May 25th, in the Boffinger chapel of the cathedral, where a Quiet Hour was conducted by the Rev. Frank Du Moulin; after which the Rt. Rev. George F. Seymour delivered a most stirring charge to the Brotherhood, one which ought to ring in the ears of all who heard it and inspire them with heroic purposes and courageous efforts in pressing forward in the noble work which the Brotherhood is doing. An adjournment was then made to the guild room in Schuyler Memorial House, where matters of business were transacted; while the night session was occupied with discussions upon various questions of interest and instruction. "The elements of a successful chapter meeting" were treated by Jas. A. Waterworth, the Rev. J. D. Ritchey, William H. Owen, Jr., and the Rev. Robert E. Lee Craig. "The Brotherhood, its object and how to accomplish it," was discussed by J. L. Houghteling, of Chicago. "Personal work" was spoken of by Bishop Tuttle, the Rev. Dr. W. R. Winchester, Frank S. Tousey, and the Rev. G. Tuckerman. "Chapter work" was presented by the Rev. Messrs. Frank Du Moulin, Allen K. Smith, and L. F. Potter.

West Missouri

Edward R. Atwell, D.D., Bishop

The Tenth Annual Council

Held in Grace church, Kansas City, May 16th and 17th. The opening services were held in the church, with sermon by the Rev. H. A. Duboc. The Bishop administered the Holy Communion. The business sessions were held in Grace Guild Hall, the beautiful parish building adjoining the church; 25 clergymen and 37 lay delegates were in attendance. The Rev. John F. Dunn was re-elected secretary and Mr. W. B. Clarke, treasurer. The Bishop delivered his address Tuesday afternoon. Services have been increased and more missionary work done during the past year than for sometime. There is need, however, of more extended work still, as of the 60 counties in the diocese, 23, with a population of 350,000, are entirely without Church services. Of the 54 parishes and organized missions in the diocese, only nine are wholly self-supporting. The missionary character of the field is thus very evident. The Bishop spoke with pleasure of the large reduction of church indebtedness in the past few years. In 1892 it was $136,921, while in 1899 it will be only about $37,000.

On Tuesday evening a missionary meeting was held in the guild hall, at which reports of the work were presented, and stirring addresses made, by the Rev. Messrs. J. Stewart-Smith, G. Heathcote Hills, W. S. Allen, and others. Pledges were taken for diocesan missions amounting to $2,500, a decided increase over last year. One of the most interesting features of the evening was the report of Archdeacon J. S. Moody of his first year's work: Miles traveled, 15,475; services and instructions, 674; sermons, 220; candidates prepared for Confirmation, 17; Woman's Auxiliaries organized, 8; new churches under way, 2, etc.

Wednesday evening a united musical service was held by the vested choirs of the city in Grace church—the first service of the kind in Kansas City. It was under the management of Mr. E. C. Marsh, organist of Grace church.

Thursday, May 18th, was devoted to the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. The sermon was by the Rev. G. Heathcote Hills. The country parishes and missions were better represented than ever before. Fifteen new parish branches have been added during the year.

Newark

Thomas Alfred Starkey, D.D., Bishop

Annual Diocesan Convention

Held in Grace church, Orange, May 16th and 17th. The Holy Communion was celebrated by the Bishop. After the service, the Bishop read his annual address. On the state of the diocese in general, he spoke a few words of encouragement and exhortation. He felt that a subject for consideration was found in the fact that in the larger towns and cities, where manufactures are the leading form of industry, the majority of our congregations are composed of working people. He could remember the days when the Episcopal Church was the Church of the wealthy and aristocratic classes; and the contrast to-day reconciled him, in a measure, to the difficulties which arise from the small means of so many of our city congregations. The Bishop commented with satisfaction on the prosperous condition of the hospitals and other institutions of the diocese, and especially commended to the clergy the Arthur Home, the only Church orphanage in the State, as needing their effectual support in these first days of its career.

The statistics for the year are as follows: Ordinations—priests, 2; deacons, 3. Clergy canonically connected with the diocese—bishop, 1; priests, 112; deacons, 4; deposed, priest, 1. Candidates for Holy Orders—priests, 8; deacons, 1. Clergy licensed temporarily, 4; lay-readers licensed, 28; new church opened, 1; notices of deposition received, 17; sermons and addresses, 75; Confirmations, 1,245.

The Rev. W. R. Jenvey, archdeacon of Jersey City, reported great improvement in the financial condition of the missions under his supervision, especially in the paying off of debts, and acquirement of new lands and buildings. Calvary church, Bayonne, is now entirely self-supporting. The missions at Fort Lee and Hillsdale are out of debt, and the latter has spent $1,625 in improvements during the past year. The mission at Hasbrouck Heights has reduced its indebtedness from $2,250 to $1,350, and Trinity mission, Centerville, is soon to have a new building, for which $1,300 is in hand.

The Rev. Alexander Mann, archdeacon of Newark, reported great earnestness and zeal on the part of the missionaries in his archdeaconry, and particularly commended the work at Essex Fells and Little Falls, at Arlington, Butler, and Pompton.

The reports of the Board of Missions, Arthur Home, and the two hospitals, were full of encouragement. At St. Barnabas' Hospital, the endowment fund has been increased by $12,000, and now amounts to $43,000. An endowment of $3,000 is to be made shortly by the Girls' Friendly Society of Trinity church, Newark, as a memorial of the late Major Hulfish, former sexton of that parish. At Christ Hospital, a new wing is to be opened at an early date, containing new operating rooms, with all modern conveniences. The treasurers of the diocese, of the Episcopal Fund, and of the Aged and Infirm Clergy Fund, each reported a considerable balance on hand.

The greater part of both afternoons was taken up in the discussion of the report of the joint committee of the dioceses of New Jersey and Newark, on civil legislation. This committee submitted a proposed "Supplement to the Religious Societies Act," the object of which is the condensing, harmonizing, and arranging, of the existing statute laws of the State relating to Church government. After a prolonged and exhaustive discussion of each section, the whole supplement, with amendments and suggestions by the convention, was referred back to the joint committee, to report at the next convention.

The elections resulted as follows: Standing Committee: The Rev. Messrs. W. W. Holley, D.D., Wm. R. Jenvey, N. Barrows, D. D., and Frank B. Reazor; Messrs. Henry Hayes, Alfred Mills, D. Smith Wood, and E. A. S. Lewis. Board of Missions: The Rev. Messrs. George S. Bennett, F. B. Carter, Walker Gwynne, Wm. M. Hughes, D. D., George F. Flichtner, and Wm. W. Davis; Messrs. George G. Frelinghuysen, Wm. M. Franklin, Richard F. Stevens, Wm. J. Holmes, James Hodge, and J. L. Truslow, Jr. Delegates to the Missionary Council: The Rev. F. B. Carter and Mr. Henry Hayes. Secretary, the Rev. John Keller; treasurer, Mr. Henry Hayes.

Milwaukee

Isaac Lea Nicholson, D. D., Bishop

The Rev. Rudolph Stahley, curate of Trinity church, Prairie du Chien, has succeeded in building a new rectory on the lot adjoining the church building.

Founders' Day at Kemper Hall

May 24th was an ideal Founders' Day at Kemper Hall. The grounds looked their loveliest, with gay tulip beds and fresh spring foliage. The morning trains brought the visiting clergy and a large number of guests from Chicago, Milwaukee, Racine, and elsewhere. At 10:30, High Celebration was sung in the chapel. The acting chaplain of the school, the Rev. Colin C. Tate, was celebrant, and the Rev. J. H. Hopkins, of Chicago, was the preacher. The Bishop of Milwaukee gave the absolution and the blessing. After the service, the guests gathered in Bishops' Hall, where the school girls sang the Founders' Day hymn, and garlanded with flowers the pictures of departed bishops and priests once connected with the school. The Bishop and other guests, followed by the school still singing, then marched to Armitage Hall, where the picture of Bishop Armitage was decorated, after which luncheon was served.

Nashotah Theological Seminary

The annual commencement exercises were held on June 1st. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Rev. Wm. McGarvey, of Philadelphia. The following degrees were conferred: D. D., (Honoris Causa), the Rev. John Jacob Faude, ('76), rector of Gethsemane church, Minneapolis, Minn. B. D., (In course), the Rev. Messrs. Gustave Ambrose Chas. Lehman, ('96), of Holy Trinity, Pueblo, Colo., and Samuel Macpherson, ('98), of St. Mary the Virgin's, New York. Diplomas were granted to the following members of the graduating class: The Rev. Messrs. Allan Worthington Cooke, Arthur Goodyer, Wm. Donald McLean, and William Watson. The annual meeting of the convocation of the alumni was held in the afternoon, when the officers of last year were unanimously re-elected.

Albany

William Crosswell Doane, D. D., LL. D., Bishop

St. Ann's Church, Amsterdam

On Sunday, May 21st, the rector, the Rev. E. T. Carroll, celebrated the 5th anniversary of his work here; the Rev. David Sprague, a former rector, preached the sermon. The Rev. Mr. Carroll has accomplished wonders in this parish. A member of the vestry has issued an anniversary pamphlet giving a brief resume of the work, the substance of which is, a working and loved rector followed and supported by a loyal people, bringing prosperity out of dangerous conditions.

The Church of the Cross, Ticonderoga

This historic parish, the Rev. C. L. Sleight, rector, celebrated the 60th anniversary of its organization, May 14th. It is in a flourishing condition, and the rector's sermon on the anniversary made the people proud to acknowledge their membership.

All Saints', Hoosac

On Whitsunday, the congregations from the two outlying missions—St. Paul's, Raymer-town, and Holy Name, Boyntonville—under the Rev. A. A. Cairnes, united with the parish in a grand missionary service. Holy Communion was celebrated at 7:30 a.m. At 10:30, there was a High Celebration, at which the Rev. J. N. Marvin preached the sermon, on Diocesan Missions. After Evensong, the clergy and lay people assembled in the refectory of the school. The rector, the Rev. Canon Tibbits, presided. The Boys' Missionary Committee made most interesting reports. Then all listened with evident pleasure to an address by the Rev. Dr. Hare, on Work in an East London parish, and to Mr. Paul Shimman, on missionary work in Persia. The choir of the church is made up from the boys attending the school, and the faculty. They are very proficient, and render the most difficult music.

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Rev. Ralph L. Brydges, rector of St. Mark's church, East Islip, who has been ill for some time, has recovered, and officiates at all services. The Woman's Sewing Class, before disbanding for the season, sent $23 to St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, being proceeds from work done in the society.

St. Catherine's Hall, Brooklyn

The commencement exercises of the diocesan school were held May 31st, in the chapel of the school. The principal address was made by Dr. Hamilton W. Mabie who also conferred the diploma. Professor Franklin W. Hooper, of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, made the introductory address, and there was vocal and instrumental music of a fine order.

Consecration of St. Paul's, Glen Cove

On Tuesday, May 23d, St. Paul's church, the Rev. John William Gammack, rector, was consecrated by Bishop Littlejohn, it having recently been freed from debt. A large number of clergy from Long Island and Manhattan were present. A collation was served by the women of the parish, in the parish hall. In the afternoon, the Bishop administered the rite of Confirmation to a class of nine.

Trained Christian Helpers

The graduating exercises of the senior class took place May 27th, at the home of the Helpers, 52 Madison st., Brooklyn. This order was organized more than two years ago, under the auspices of the Rev. Dr. J. H. Darlington, to fill a long-felt want of trained volunteer help for the sick poor, and those unable to pay a trained nurse; and its success is proving its value. The spiritual directors are the Rev. Drs. James H. Darlington and John J. Bacchus, and the medical director is Dr. Arnold W. Catlin, well known for his interest in philanthropic enterprises. Dr. Darlington being unable to be present, owing to illness, his place was taken by the Rev. Dr. Bacchus who made the opening address. Dr. Arnold read a letter of regret from the Bishop, in which he expressed his hearty approval of the work. The diplomas were awarded by Dr. Catlin who prefaced the presentation with an address. Addresses were also made by Drs. Alfred Bell and W. W. Lang, of the Medical Hall. Several trained nurses who have cooperated with the order in their work among the poor, were presented by the directress, Sister Augusta Winder, with the badge of the order, a dark blue ribbon stamped with silver. Music and an informal reception closed the exercises.

Editorials and Contributions

THE Presbyterian General Assembly has just been holding its session, and had the cheering report that the debt of the Home Missions Board, nearly $150,000, is all paid off. Bishop Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal Church (The Interior spells it with a small "c") bore the greetings of that body, and, according to the report of our contemporary, explained that "his church stands as a protest against movements in the Episcopal fold which would lead to the spread of cunningly devised fables, and imposing the commands of men for the commands of God." That would suit "the Briggs' case" very well, even if the English of it is a little broken! It seemed to please the Presbyterian brethren immensely; at least, the effect of the Reformed Episcopalian speech was to set the assembly to singing "Blest be the tie that binds!" As Sam Weller would say, it would take a glass of "hextra" magnifying power to find the "tie." Dr. Fallows "recognized the full equality of the Presbyterian Church," which was "a little more than kin and less than kind."

ONE matter of moment, which will interest many who are not Presbyterians, was the action taken in "the McGiffert case." It seems that "one woe doth tread upon another's heels," in the Presbyterian ranks. After the fitful fever of trial and expulsion, Briggs sleeps well; but here is another trouble in the camp! McGiffert looms up, with twenty thousand gashes on his theological head, and spoils the feast. "What shall we do with him?" was the question which the assembled wisdom of the assembly found it hard to answer. It was finally decided to turn him over to his own New York Presbytery to be dealt with. We congratulate the alleged heretic on the prospect of finding a soft spot to drop on when he is pitched out.

—x—

Catholicity

RECENT events in the Episcopal Church have given occasion for those who think they know our affairs better, perhaps, than we ourselves, to administer to the Church and its pastors a considerable amount of advice, useful or otherwise. On the one hand, many of the secular papers, taking a plain, common-sense view of things, have seen very clearly that it is an anomalous and doubtful position for a man to place himself where he is pledged to certain formulas of faith and doctrine, but considers himself at liberty to teach and preach the opposite. On the other hand, according to The Outlook, the Episcopal Church has recently been on its trial in the matter of true Catholicity. The definition of Catholicity, from this point of view, appears to be the capacity of including every sort of teaching, however inconsistent with itself or even self-destructive it may be. A Church which has not this capacity, is, it seems, a sect, and not a Church. Since, however, up to the present time, there has been no religious organization, whether called Catholic or Protestant, which does not start from some fixed principles and lay down more or less definite limitations binding upon those who become its authorized exponents, the Catholic Church of which The Outlook fondly dreams, has not yet come into existence. Even the admission of Dr. Briggs, which this paper regards as a turning point, does not determine the matter in favor of the Episcopal Church if Dr. Briggs' own declarations are to be accepted. It is to be observed that Dr. Briggs himself does not claim that his ordination, by which he has been admitted to the ministry of the Church, adds a new element to the Church's character, or in any respect broadens its Catholicity; on the contrary, he has shown himself extremely anxious, as for instance in his letter to the Presiding Bishop, to vindicate his orthodoxy and to claim for himself perfect loyalty to the Church and her standards just as they are.

IT is this attitude on the part of Dr. Briggs and others, which forms the greatest difficulty. If they said distinctly: "Our views are not those of the Episcopal Church, but they are views which we insist that she must adopt, on pain of being something less than Catholic," we should then know much better where we stand. But in reality they one and all insist that their views are already within the limits set by the standards of the Church. The Outlook evidently does not accept the professions of these gentlemen as presenting the true state of the case, but considers that their reception into the Church, or their remaining in it without molestation, involves an actual extension of the field of belief and teaching. We should be inclined to agree with The Outlook thus far, if we were convinced that the present drift, encouraged by the action of certain of our ecclesiastical authorities, were destined to go on unchecked. This, however, is far from being our conviction. Taking courage from the history of the Church at other times, we confidently believe that the hour will come when the Church will rise in her might and slough off these excrescences. But it is true that in a Church governed as ours is in America, this is necessarily a work of time. Discussion must go on until the principles at stake become clearly evident to the great majority. When it is once seen that the controversy at the bottom centres about the question of the supernatural or the non-supernatural, the result cannot be long doubtful.

CATHOLICITY at present is an expression which is being much misused; as in the case of the word "liberty," crimes are committed in its name. In the popular point of view, Catholic means "Roman Catholic," and its use arouses all the intensity of old Protestant prejudice against everything which is called by that name. On the other hand, by a species of clever word jugglery, consisting in an appeal to etymology, and a rejection of history, the word is being made to signify everything or nothing. As the word in its etymology signifies "universal," it is being claimed that a Catholic or universal Church must be one which tolerates all views and teachings which so-called Christian scholars may choose to promulgate, without any question of the premises from which they start, or the pre-assumptions which govern their investigations and shape their conclusions. Whether these pre-assumptions include a belief in the supernatural and its miraculous manifestations, or whether they deny the supernatural, all alike must be allowed their place in such a Catholic Church.

THE truth is, the ideal thus presented to us is not that of the Church, or a Church, but of the world. The theory which is being exploited at present with great zeal in certain quarters, is that the antithesis with which readers of the New Testament are familiar, between the Church and the world, is a false antithesis, or at least that it has ceased to have any practical significance. The Church and the world are one, and the duty of the Church is to bring herself as rapidly as possible into harmony with the zeitgeist, the spirit and genius of the time. Thus only can she become Catholic in the sense of The Outlook and its friends. But it ought to be clearly understood to what conclusion this conducts us. Church organization becomes unnecessary. The zeitgeist can take care of itself, and is impeded rather than aided by the existence of organizations which inevitably find it necessary to set forth some kind of standard or formula affecting belief or teaching. It may be a matter only of shreds and patches, or more or less vague traditions of old orthodoxy; nevertheless, whatever there is still remaining in any case of traditional religion, involving more or less the admission of the supernatural, will necessarily have the character of limitation. There is a point at which it is said: "Thus far and no further." All this is simply a hindrance to the free development of the zeitgeist, or enlightened world-spirit. When the Church and the world become one, the mission of the Church is gone, she becomes an anachronism, and must, sooner or later, cease to exist. It is really a new dispensation to which The Outlook invites us. It makes the former dispensation obsolete. "Now that which is growing obsolete and decrepit, is necessarily near to vanishing away."

—x—

Presbyterian Liturgies

COMPLAINT is sometimes made of the great variations in the services of the Church, as seen in different parishes, and of the perplexity or discomfort which this causes to persons coming from one parish to another, and expecting to find the same order of things to which they have been accustomed. But although the same service may not be found in all churches at the same hour, the Holy Communion being sometimes celebrated in one church at the time when Morning Prayer is being said in another; and though some services which are more or less optional, are used constantly in some places and more rarely in others; and again, some churches prefer a larger element of music and ceremonial, while their neighbors are content with a minimum of these adjuncts—at least the services employed are, with some unimportant exceptions, those of the Prayer Book, and therefore will be familiar to all Churchmen. Our difficulties in this respect are but small when compared with those of our brethren of other denominations who have of late years been affected by the general movement in favor of some kind of settled form of public worship, as opposed to the old extemporary method. At least, this is what we gather from a recent editorial in The Evangelist, a Presbyterian newspaper, published in New York city. "The present condition," says this paper, "must be distressing to all who have a regard for order in Church worship and to the last degree perplexing to members of other communions. For that matter, perplexity must be equally the lot of Presbyterians themselves whose hap it may be to attend a church other than their own, so intricate and minute are the diversities in the forms even of neighboring churches."

AN association of the Presbyterian Church, called "The Church Service Society," has been formed for the purpose of promoting the use of liturgical forms in the worship of that denomination. This society recently sent a circular letter of inquiry to the pastors of all churches reporting at least two hundred and fifty communicants, in the New England States, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. The purpose of this letter was to ascertain the character of the services at present in use. It is apparently regarded as desirable that there should be some approach to uniformity. The answers received were certainly not encouraging in this respect, so far as the present condition of things is concerned. Out of three hundred and sixteen Presbyterian churches, two hundred and thirteen use a doxology at the beginning of morning worship, and fourteen in some other part of the services. The Gloria Patri is used in one hundred and two congregations, but with no uniformity as to the places of its insertion. Thirteen use the Gloria in Excelsis at one of two different points. Anthems are used by two hundred and thirty-three, at eleven different points. Versicles and responses are used by forty-nine, and the same number employ chanting; but we gather that there is no uniformity either in the material employed in these features, or the order in which they occur. As regards the prayers, there seems to be fourteen different systems in use.

IT does not appear that these experiments in the liturgical method of worship are very heartily appreciated by the rank and file of the congregations concerned, and The Evangelist remarks that, on the whole, the report indicates a disheartening degree of indifference, apparently on the part both of pastor and people. It is true, however, that "many place special emphasis upon the dignity and importance of the worship, apart from the sermon," and a wide desire is expressed for a fuller participation by the people in the acts of worship. The Society finds that, notwithstanding the present confused state of things, a large proportion of the ministers who replied to their letter are in sympathy with the aims of the Society. These aims, we take to include, not only the advancement of a liturgical method of service, but also the attainment of something like uniformity in the method adopted.

WE cannot but view with interest and sympathy a movement of this kind in a large and important Christian community such as the Presbyterian Church, even though, as has been frankly avowed by some persons of standing, the desire to prevent the younger members of the denomination from throwing in their lot with the Episcopal Church, is no unimportant element in this newly-awakened desire for responsive services and the use of forms in public service, instead of merely extemporary devotions. For though this motive is undoubtedly present, it is quite certain that it is only one element in the matter. It can hardly be denied that there is a general weariness and an increasing impatience of the old methods. People of cultivated tastes are no longer willing to remain at the mercy of the minister who may occupy their pulpit or platform, and whose personal characteristics of thought and expression are never more obtrusively, and perhaps offensively, evident than in the prayers with which he endeavors to lead the devotions of the congregation. It is seen as never before that if public worship is to be also common worship, and not simply the expression of an individual's devotional strivings and aspirations in the presence of an audience, forms of prayer are absolutely essential. It is a sign of the times when an influential religious body, long opposed to all such forms, and especially to those of the Anglican Prayer Book, begins to seek after that which it once rejected, and to appropriate, even though it be by shreds and patches, the ancient Catholic forms of liturgical worship.

IT is also a hopeful sign, in this connection, that many pastors desire to emphasize public worship as compared with the sermon. This was not so with their forefathers. It will be interesting to observe whether this "Church Service Society," or the movement which it represents, shall meet with any satisfactory measure of success. Will it be able to furnish, in answer to a widespread, but somewhat vague, demand, a service which will commend itself to the majority of Presbyterian churches? We find it difficult to believe that anything having the character of finality can be attained unless it is based upon true principles of worship. It will be found, in reality, that these aspirations after something higher and something more substantial than the usages of the past have afforded, reach much further than a simple desire to afford the people a larger participation in the utterances of public worship, or the greater life and heartiness imparted to the service by arrangements of versicles and responses, or alternate readings from the Psalms and Canticles. The true goal of this widespread tendency towards some better ideal, which is seen, not among Presbyterians only, but in other denominations, can only find its permanent satisfaction in the ancient system of Catholic worship.

NO doubt for a time the appropriation of elements from the Prayer Book and the imitations of the methods of the Church, may be successful in holding back the discontented element, but it does not seem probable that these methods will be of permanent efficacy. Mere eclectic services bear too much the character of Hamlet with Hamlet left out. The central principles which give life and unity to the service and impart to it its true significance, must be felt in the long run to be lacking. Not only each service, but the entire liturgical system of the Church, possesses a unity of thought and intention which is the real source of its strength and the guarantee of its permanence. But it is impossible for our Presbyterian brethren to accept this system entire without becoming other than they are. We may, therefore, well view such a movement as this, not only with equanimity, but with hopeful sympathy, believing, as we do, that it can only find its true realization in unity with the ancient Church.

Letters to the Editor

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

To the Editor of The Living Church:

We are rapidly approaching one of those periodic crises in the history of the Church, in which there must be a searching of the hearts of men. We need not fear the charge of pessimism if in facing evil we strive to estimate its true nature, so long as we do not despair of conquering it.

What do we see as we look at the Church today? We see a condition of indifference and apathy toward growing evils, which is nothing short of criminal. On all sides men are shirking responsibility and letting things drift, excusing themselves from protest and open opposition to error, fearing the frown of popular opinion which tolerates looseness in all great moral questions. Well may we ask, whether is the Church drifting? The facts are these: With no love for the use of party names, yet for the sake of being definite, it may be said that we have reached a point where the issue is not as between High Church and Low Church; we are face to face with Broad Church and no Church. The Broad Church party has long been crying for peace, charity, tolerance, liberality, as a blind by which to gain time and opportunity to sow seeds of error unhindered. Jealousy for truth has been scouted as narrowness and bigotry; those who would preserve the Faith in its ancient purity, have been stigmatized as "troubleshooters of Israel"; timid and half-hearted souls have been cajoled or frightened into making a peace which is fatal in its results. It is time, then, for us to rouse up and search for Achan and the Babylonian garment.

We need not go back further than the last General Convention to catch the drift of things. There we see the leaven of laxity and lawlessness working out. It is not possible to exaggerate the significance of the fact of this Church, through her House of Bishops, refusing to guard the sanctity of the marriage bond and crush the monster of divorce which is ravaging society. And why? Through fear of antagonizing the spirit of the age, the hostility of worldliness and secularity which is rampant inside the Church as well as outside of it. From all over this land to-day the cry is going up to heaven against the licensing of concubinage and the wreck of home and family life, and yet as a Church we stand dumb, and our bishops hesitate lest they lay upon human nature a burden too heavy to be borne!

Equally significant was the practical rejection of the Book of Common Prayer as any longer a standard of faith and doctrine. For this is the true inwardness of the plan of Christian Unity in the famous amendment to Article X. of the Constitution. This provides for "the temporary use of forms and directories of worship by congregations not in union with this Church who are willing to accept the spiritual oversight of the bishop of the diocese or missionary district." The scheme gets rid of the Prayer Book as a standard of doctrine. What congregation would ever afterward surrender its directory of worship if it were not willing to do so when it consented to accept episcopal oversight? The plea of a "temporary" provision is all nonsense. The truth is, we should by this scheme annex permanently congregations who never mean to accept the doctrine of this Church. The lex orandi is the lex credendi. The Church has committed herself to a shrewd invention to get rid of Prayer Book doctrine; nothing less.

Look now at the situation in New York. The scandal to the Church of the Briggs ordination is, pooh-poohed and laughed at, and his defenders shelter themselves under the plea that the Church has plenty more like him! It is openly proclaimed that the "whole Broad Church party" is in sympathy with Dr. Briggs. Plainly, then, here is an assertion that we have a revolutionary party within the Church which means to defy her laws. The case of Dr. Briggs is, we must remember, not that of disciplining a teacher who has departed from the Faith; it is actually commissioning and authorizing one to teach who is on record against the teachings of the Church. Let us not be intimidated by the cry of those who say, "truth is being stifled and scholarship denounced." It is not so. The question at issue is whether the Church shall offer any man the opportunity to use her authority to teach his own opinions, rather than "the Faith as she hath received the same." Can she, and will she, tolerate that presumption and conceit which claims for itself the witness of the Holy Ghost to its own individual opinion, as against the Faith of the body corporate to whom the Spirit of Truth was promised rather than to any individual?

Dr. Briggs' opinions may be true, or they may not be true; no one questions his right to hold any opinions he pleases. What is questioned is his right to a commission to teach what the Church has not accepted. Is the Church ready to abdicate her position as a teacher of truth in favor of an individual who claims to know better? Is she willing to surrender her office as a witness, to an exploiter of literary theories?

But it is not only Dr. Briggs' case that is serious. The authorities permit to go unrebuked an avowed Unitarian who openly proclaims his unchanged opinions, and asserts as his reason for entering the Church that "he fancies her liturgical service." Now in both these cases the distressing thing is the moral obliquity condoned. The vows of the ordinal are taken, and then played fast and loose with. What we ask is: shall the Church, for the sake of avoiding conflict, and to enjoy a peace of indolence and indifference to truth, suffer the flood of lawlessness to flow on without let or hindrance? Better dispense with all law and pretence of discipline, than to suffer defiance as she is doing. Who will help lift this pall of apathy and insensibility that hangs over the Church? Where is the indignant repudiation there ought to be of the attempt to prove Holy Scripture a patch work of myth and legend? What is the blight which has struck the hearts of bishops and priests who have taken solemn vows to banish and drive away strange doctrine, that they play at battle-dore and shuttle-cock with their responsibility "earnestly to contend for the Faith once delivered to the saints"? How long are we to witness the policy of do-nothing and drift which is fast making the Church a target for the taunts and sneers of infidelity and worldiness? It is not disturbance of the peace of the Church which is to be feared; rather is it the fatal lethargy of cowardly inactivity. While we pray, "Let Thy continual pity cleanse and defend Thy Church," shall we hug to our lazy souls the delusion that the evil will right itself?

ALBAN RICHEY.

New York, June 1, 1899.

CLERGYMEN'S RETIRING FUND SOCIETY

To the Editor of The Living Church:

If another letter on the subject of the C. R. F. S. is in order, I should like to have a word to say.

I have been a member of the society for about twenty years, and have been loyal to the principle on which it was organized. But I am beginning to have a change of mind, and to concur with the thought that it would be well if the society could enable some of its present members who have reached the required age, to retire, if they needed to do so. At present it seems to me that I am working to enable my brother who will live towards the end of the twentieth century to "retire." A noble object; but one has to consider a little one's own necessities. I have been, as I say, a member for twenty years. My retiring pension is under $40 a year. One cannot retire on that except into the grave. I know it is a large return on my investment. But I was not investing my money, but was endeavoring to provide for a retiring pension for myself, as well as for my twentieth century brother. I wish I could get it. But I cannot get it out of the present slowly accumulating principal of the society.

I think the clergy ought to take more interest in the society, and ought to join it in larger numbers, and thus help to increase the principal fund. But the clergyman who joins it to-day still has to look to the fact that when he reaches the retiring age, it is not likely that the fund will even then have reached a sufficient sum to enable him to retire on his share of the dividend of the interest of it. That is not encouraging for him, and he does not join. Perhaps he would if he thought he was going to help himself, as well as his brother in the third and fourth generation—whom of course he heartily desires to help. Something has been said about the help the laity would give, under other conditions than those which now prevail in the administration of the C. R. F. S. Perhaps they would. It is much to be desired. Most of the clergy have not much with which to help themselves. And there comes a time when some of the laity who are "emulous of change," thrust them out onto the "cold charities of the Church." We have laymen in the Church who could raise the fund of the society to a point which would enable those who have "sown unto them spiritual things," but whose sowing they no longer desire, to "reap their worldly things" at a time of life when they most need it. That would be only fair, and it would be in accordance with the spirit of our brotherhood in Christ. These rich laymen have many calls on them. But they have received much from God out of which to respond to them. Is not the C. R. F. S. and its purpose, something which should be a strong claim on their means for doing good? A relief from anxiety for the future on the part of those who have broken for them the bread of life, might well claim some consideration on the part of those to whom God has given "all things so richly to enjoy."

A MEMBER OF THE C. R. F. S.

ASTONISHING EXEGESIS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

I see by one of our large dailies that in the Presbyterian Assembly (South) recently, the following report of the Committee on Overtures was docketed: "The General Assembly, in response to the overture from the presbytery of Athens, touching the observance of Christmas and Easter as religious days, would make the following deliverance: that there is no warrant in the Scriptures for the observance of these days as holy days; but, on the contrary (see Gal. iv: 9, and Colossians ii: 21), that such observance is contrary to the principles of the reformed faith, conducive to will-worship, and not in harmony with the simplicity of the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

This remarkable deliverance, from what is considered the most learned of our Christian denominations, declares that the whole early Church, from Apostolic times on up through the centuries, in her observance of Easter Day, acted contrary to the principles of Christ's religion.

Polycarp, Bishop of the Church at Smyrna, and disciple of St. John, visited Anicetus, Bishop of Rome, for the purpose of bringing the whole Church, East and West, to the observance of Easter on the same day. The whole Church did undoubtedly, under the eyes of St. John, observe Easter Day with St. John's approval. Really does the Presbyterian Church (South) mean to say that the whole Church of Christ, at that early time, under the very eyes of an inspired Apostle, fell into a practice on a par with the Judaism and the heretical sophistries condemned by St. Paul in the passages above referred to?

Weatherford, Texas.

F. MOORE.

QUALIFICATIONS OF DELEGATES

To the Editor of The Living Church:

I should feel myself under great obligation to you if you would kindly give me the space in which to ask a few questions. I ask this in the hope that some of our reverend brethren of the clergy who have had some of the same propositions to deal with, will be good enough to give me the benefit of their experience.

1. Could a priest of the American Church, in all respects in regular standing, be deprived of his right to a seat and a vote in a diocesan convention, on account of the failure of his parish or mission to raise the full amount of its diocesan assessment?

2. Does not the priesthood carry with it, inherently, the right to vote in a diocesan council, provided always that such has been recognized and utilized by the bishop of the diocese?

3. Under what canon are deacons, in regular standing, and baptized persons (as yet unconfirmed and non-communicant, or confirmed and non-communicant), entitled to vote in diocesan councils or synods?

4. Strictly and canonically speaking, do not such canons as apply to the qualifications of delegates to the General Convention, apply also to delegates to our diocesan councils?

This set of questions is agitating more than one diocese at the present time, and a little light on the subject, from such as have had any experience in dealing with the issue involved, would be very welcome.

RUSTICUS.

Trinity Church, Atchison, Kas., May 22d, '99.

BISHOP POTTER AND DR. BRIGGS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Admitting that it is as improper to criticize the actions of a bishop as those of a judge, yet as we find some bishops to be not infallible and to make some mistakes, there can surely be no impropriety in pointing out those mistakes when they may lead to important results.

The Bishop of Pittsburgh has, in a recent number of your contemporary, shown that Bishop Potter made a great mistake when he urged the mandatory character of the canons as leaving him no discretion in ordaining Dr. Briggs to the priesthood, if certain testimonials were presented and formalities observed.

The Bishop of New York was also unfortunate in quoting the testimonials given to Dr. Briggs by certain Roman Catholic teachers; because the Bishop must know that in the estimation of a loyal Roman Catholic, the authority of any interpretation of the Bible is as nothing when placed beside the teaching of the living Church.

Bishop Potter also made a great mistake in saying, in his letter to a layman, that the "outcry" against the author of the "Introduction" betrays a "lamentable ignorance of the progress of sound learning and the judgment of the best Christian scholars," for two reasons: The particular instance to which the Bishop refers—and indeed most of the outcry—has nothing to do with sound learning or scholarship; and also because, if the conclusions of the best learning and scholarship are such as the Bishop contends for, then wretchedly poor must be the best.

Moreover, I have never heard of Dean Plumptre's exhibiting any remarkable scholarship except that of coming out from Oxford as a "double first."

To a great extent the scholarship Bishop Potter contends for is employed in support of foregone conclusions. And for this purpose the character of the Hebrew language has been tossed from one theorist to another in order to support certain theories previously formed. Gesenius, for instance, was a giant in Hebrew philology, but he had his theories. And the verdict of more recent scholars is that he was "far from grasping the genius" of that language; and some of the cleverest of these scholars are still partly on the wrong track. And why? Merely from inattention to some of the simplest and most obvious principles of language, and from not calling in the aid of the cognate languages, especially Arabic, the grammar of which has been more philosophically treated than that of the others. This would correct some of the crudities with which many Hebrew grammarians favor us. Koenig claims to have advanced several steps in the evolution of the genius of Hebrew, and in time it is to be hoped that we shall have something more satisfactory. Although in this respect, the Old Testament revisers do not seem to have advanced much beyond the Septuagint translators who, as the writer in Smith's dictionary truly says, were imperfectly acquainted with Hebrew.

The defenders of Dr. Briggs are forced to admit that he teaches "that most of the biblical writers habitually make untrue statements of fact." And yet they seem to think that all this is balanced by his encomiums on the Scriptures, as to their inspiration, etc. But they forget that language still more laudatory has been bestowed by some modern critics on the Iliad, without its being supposed that Homer had a direct commission from heaven for the infallible guidance of all future ages. And they keep out of sight the fact that a certain school would admit of no inspiration except that offered to all Christians, and would triumphantly refer, as Maurice did, to the collect at the beginning of our Eucharistic Office; while the extremists of that school would allow no inspiration beyond such as that displayed by Homer, Michael Angelo, Beethoven, or Shakespeare, whereas the New Testament doctrine of inspiration is that "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

It is puzzling to most minds to understand how it can be as Dr. Briggs says, in his letter to the Presiding Bishop: "I am assured by my pupils that I make the Bible to them more real, more powerful, more divine," that is, by telling them how untruthful a great part of it is!

And so in reference to the ordination one cannot help remarking: What a mockery to ask such a man the question, "Are you determined out of the said Scriptures to instruct the people committed to your charge," etc? Surely the Bishop should have added words like these: "It being now discovered that large portions of most parts of the said Scriptures are absolutely false." WM. GRANT.

Personal Mention

The Rev. F. E. Atkins, formerly curate of Trinity church, Lenox, Mass., has been made rector of St. George's church, Lee, Mass.

Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, arrived home from England, May 20th.

The Rev. Chas. W. Du Bois has entered upon the rectorship of Grace church, Lapeer, Mich.

The address of the Rev. H. G. Batterson, D. D., will be care of J. S. Morgan & Co., 22 Old Broad st., London, England, until Oct. 1st.

Archdeacon Caswall's present address is Highland Park, Chattanooga, Tenn., instead of Harriman.

The Rev. C. W. M. Cully has resigned charge of Trinity mission, Winooski, Vt., and his address for the present is 404 Pearl st., Burlington, Vt.

The Rev. W. A. Dennis, of Evansville, Ind., has taken charge at Menomonie, Wis., diocese of Milwaukee.

The Rev. P. R. Fish is to take charge of St. Barnabas' church, Brooklyn, Greater New York, during the absence of the rector.

The Rev. Francis Gilliat, S.T.D., has resigned Trinity church, Canaseraga, N. Y., and accepted the temporary charge of St. John's church, Ellicottville, N. Y., in connection with missionary appointments at Springville, N. Y. Address Ellicottville, N. Y.

The address of the Rev. J. Belton Haslam has been changed to 732 First st., Milwaukee, Wis.

The Rev. Geo. W. Lincoln will seek recovery of health by a stay of several months off the New Jersey coast, near Atlantic City.

The Rev. F. North-Tummon should be addressed at Elk Point, S. D.

The Rev. J. H. Parsons has been appointed priest-in-charge of St. Ann's mission, 1131 Kimball ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Rev. C. Edward Roberts, of Pittsfield, Ill., has become curate at Grace church, Madison, Wis.

The Rev. Edward Riggs sailed with his family May 31st. on the Bremen steamship, Frederich der Grosse. He will spend the summer at Shanklin, in the Isle of Wight, and the winter in Florence, Italy. He expects to live abroad indefinitely.

The Rev. Dr. Chas. J. Roper sailed for Holland, May 20th.

The Rev. Wm. James Robertson has resigned the curacy of the church of St. Simeon, and enters upon his new duties as curate at the church of the Messiah, Philadelphia, the first Sunday in June.

The Rev. W. Brown-Serman is to spend the summer season in England.

The Rev. C. B. Bergin Wright, Ph.D., of Milwaukee, has recently been appointed Secretary-General for America, of the Association for the Promotion of the Unity of Christendom, in succession to the Rev. A. J. Arnold, of Media, Pa.

The address of the Ven. Archdeacon E. P. Wright,

D. D., is changed from P. O. box 380 to 580, Milwaukee, owing to the recent removal of the P. O. department to its new buildings.

To Correspondents

ADMIRER.—(1) It is as incorrect liturgically to say the General Thanksgiving in unison as to use that method in other cases, the "Prayer for All Conditions of Men," for instance, where there is no direction to warrant it. Nevertheless, as a matter of minor importance, a bishop would probably not forbid it where it had become customary, and a congregation had become attached to it. (2). Dr. Briggs might, we suppose, be brought to trial, but probably will not be. (3). We have heard nothing of the American Church Defence League for some time, and cannot say where information concerning it can be obtained.

Ordinations

On Tuesday in Whitsun week, the Rt. Rev. John Hazen White, D.D., advanced to the priesthood the Rev. James Eleazer Craig, in St. Mark's church, Lima. The Rev. Walter Scott preached the sermon, and the Rev. J. H. McKenzie presented the candidate.

On Trinity Sunday, in All Saints' church, North Denver, the Rev. Messrs. Thomas A. Schofield, of Emmanuel church, and Edward L. Eustis, of St. Stephen's, Longmont, were advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Spalding. The Rev. Dr. Kramer presented the candidates, and the Rev. W. Oakes preached the sermon.

On May 25th, Bishop Coleman admitted Mr. E. Arthur Dodd, Ph.D., to the order of deacons, in St. Andrew's church, Wilmington, Del. The Rev. Dr. Batten presented the candidate, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Elwood Worcester, S.T.D., of Philadelphia. Dr. Dodd is to be assistant at St. Andrew's. On the following day the Rev. W. B. Harrison was advanced to the priesthood in the chapel of the Good Shepherd, Bishopstead. The candidate was presented by Archdeacon Evans, of Pennsylvania, and the sermon preached by the Rev. Augustus Prime, of Boston.

On Trinity Sunday, in the cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, L. I., Bishop Littlejohn advanced to the priesthood, the Rev. Messrs. Chas. W. Shields, of Princeton University; Arthur W. Shaw, Henry L. Gilbert, John H. Sattig, and James D. Elliott. The following were ordered to the diaconate: Robert Philip Kreidler, Daniel D. Quimby, William A. Eardley-Thomas, Archibald M. Judd, T. T. Olton, and Daniel W. Steele. The sermon was preached by the Rev. A. B. Baker, D. D., president of the Standing Committee of the diocese of New Jersey. The Bishop also made an interesting address. After the service, the newly ordained clergymen dined with the Bishop at the See House.

Wednesday in Whitsun week (May 24th), at old St. Peter's church, Freehold, N. J., there were advanced to the priesthood, the Rev. Frederick Augustus Heisley, and the Rev. Arthur Mason Sherman. Morning Prayer was said at 10:30 A. M., by the Rev. Thos. J. Taylor, a former rector of the parish, and the Rev. T. A. Conover. The Holy Eucharist had already been off red with intention for the candidates at four different hours, 6, 7, 8, and 9 A. M. The ordination sermon was preached by the rector of the parish, the Rev. W. E. Wright. In the celebration of the Holy Eucharist, the Rev. H. L. Phillips, the Rev. H. H. Oberly, and the Rev. H. H. P. Roene, assisted. No less than 12 other clergy joined with the Bishop in the "laying on of hands." After the service, the Bishop, visiting clergy, and friends, all went to the Monmouth House, where dinner had been generously provided for them by the parish. The Rev. Mr. Heisley will continue to work in the associate mission at Trenton. The Rev. Mr. Sherman will shortly go to China, to work under the Bishop of Shanghai.

On Trinity Sunday, at the Pro-cathedral, the Bishop of Washington ordained to the diaconate, Mr. J. Armistead Wellbourne who expects in September to go as a missionary to Japan. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Edwin B. Nevin. The Bishop also advanced to the priesthood, the Rev. C. R. Stetson, in charge of the chapel of the Good Shepherd, St. Mark's parish, presented by the Rev. J. McBride Sterrett; the Rev. Millard F. Minnick, for some years rector of St. Mary's parish, St. Mary's county, presented by the Rev. J. B. Craighill; the Rev. E. M. Thompson, and the Rev. E. D. Johnson, presented by the Rev. Dr. Devries. The former will become assistant of St. Paul's parish, where, during the past winter, he has given part of his time, most acceptably, to that work; the latter is to be rector of Grace church, Georgetown. The Rev. Dr. C. C. Mapp, in charge of the colored mission of Emmanuel parish, Anacostia, was presented by the Rev. C. H. Hayes. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander.

On Trinity Sunday, at the church of the Advocate, Philadelphia, the following were ordained deacons by Bishop Whitaker; Granville Micou, presented by his father, the Rev. Professor R. M. Micou, of the Alexandria Theological Seminary; Richard H. Morris, of Philadelphia, presented by the Rev. Alfred G. Mortimer, D.D.; Freeman Daughters, of Spokane, Wash., presented by the Rev. H. F. Argo; Harry Martyn Medary, of Cynwyd, presented by the Rev. H. A. F. Hoyt; Robert Long, of Philadelphia, presented by the Rev. O. S. Michael, and De Witt Dowling, of Germantown, presented by the Rev. J. Thompson Carpenter. The following deacons were advanced to the order of priests: The Rev. Rudolph E. Brestell, curate of the parish, presented by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Silvester; the Rev. Walter A. Matos, of Trinity church, Swarthmore, presented by the Rev. Dean Bartlett, and the Rev. H. Cressan McHenry, one of the chaplains of the Eastern Penitentiary, presented by the Rev. L. W. Robinson. At a previous special ordination at the chapel of the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children, Bishop Whitaker ordained to the diaconate Mr. Stephen Innes, the preacher being the Rev. Wm. B. Bodine.

Died

HARE.—Entered into the life everlasting, on May 30, 1899, at his home in Chicago, Robert Warner Hare, formerly of Philadelphia.

"The God of Abraham praise.

At Whose supreme command,

From earth I rise, to seek the joys

At His right hand."

LOVE.—On Friday, May 26th, at Sylva, N. C., Miss Sallie M. Love, daughter of Capt. Wm. Love. She was a faithful and devoted communicant of the Church, and will be greatly missed by the little band of this struggling mission.

MITCHAM.—Clement Stokes, infant son of the Rev. W. M. Mitcham and Mary Helen Stokes Mitcham. Born Easter morning, died Wednesday in Whitsun week.

"Suffer little children."

SYMONDS.—At the Homeopathic Hospital, Wilmington, Del., Tuesday, June 30th, of acute pneumonia, the Rev. Stanley F. W. Symonds, rector of St. Michael's church, Wilmington.

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses; missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

A MISSIONARY who for the past ten years has kept two horses for his work, and covered considerable ground for Sunday services and calls, is in sore need of a new buggy. He now holds four missions which, with requisite visiting, give him at least twenty square miles to cover without railway facilities. The vehicle he now uses, second-hand when he bought it three years ago, is completely used up. His income from all sources is $490 a year. Will some few Church people help him to raise $70 to supply this need. Address the Rev. C. B. FOSBROKE, Box 349, River Falls, Wis., or the BISHOP OF MILWAUKEE, 216 Martin st., Milwaukee, Wis., who well knows of this case, and who will commend this appeal to any who are interested.

Church and Parish

A PLEASANT home in Episcopalian family for children of parents who may wish to travel. Kind motherly care. References. Address MRS. S. DAVIES, 7015 St. Lawrence ave., Chicago.

A LADY desires work in a Home for Aged Women, or in a Babies' Home. She will work for her board and a small remuneration. For further particulars, address the SISTERS OF THE HOLY NATIVITY, Fond du Lac, Wis.

EXPERIENCED priest wants sole charge, or curacy city church. Age 38. Musical, good preacher. Visitor. Address CLERICUS, care THE LIVING CHURCH.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, June, 1899

4. 1st Sunday after Trinity.
11. ST. BARNABAS, Apostle. 2nd Sunday after Trinity.
18. 3d Sunday after Trinity.
24. NATIVITY ST. JOHN BAPTIST.
25. 4th Sunday after Trinity.
29. ST. PETER, Apostle.

Green.
Red.
Green.
White.
Green.
Red.

A rainbow in the morning
Gives the shepherd warning.
A rainbow at night
Is the shepherd's delight.
Evening red and next morning gray
Are certain signs of a beautiful day.
When the glow-worm lights her lamp
The air is always damp.
If the cock goes crowing to bed,
He'll certainly rise with watery head.
If the moon shows like a silver shield,
Be not afraid to reap your field;
But if she rises haloed around,
Soon we'll tread on deluged ground.

What is Life?

BY C. N. HALL

What is life? A flash of light,
Seen, then lost in endless night
In that lifeless, dread abyss
Set 'twixt other worlds and this.

What is life? A thing of dread,
Chance bestow'd and demon led
To a goal of doubt and fear;
Helpless, hopeless, sinister.

Life is this, to that blind soul
Whom no heaven-lighted goal
Beckons onward, but despair,
Earth his all, and death so near.

But to him whose vision (set Ever higher, higher yet)
Sees beyond the veil of time,
Vistas, infinite, sublime,

Of the perfect life and pure,
Free from stain of earth, secure
In eternal permanence.
Rich in God's own affluence—

Life, to such a soul, is bright,
Full of hope and faith and light;
Sweet with minor melodies
From angelic symphonies.

Life, for such, is truth and right
Guided toward the Infinite;
Life, for such, the blessed road,
Death, the final step to God.

New Milford, Conn.

—X—

A SPECIAL interest attached to the ordination which we record in another column, of the Rev. Dr. Shields, the Princeton professor, who is seventy-four years old, and who, until November, 1897, was a minister of the Presbyterian body. At that time he withdrew in consequence of adverse criticism following the placing of his signature to a petition to grant a liquor license to the Princeton Inn. Dr. Shields is the author of a treatise, "Philosophia Ultima," which was published in 1861, and which at that time caused his orthodoxy to be questioned. His views so nearly represented the advanced thought of the time, that it won for him a professorship in Princeton—a professorship created for him, that of the Harmony of Science and Revealed Religion. He has been an earnest advocate of the restoration of the Presbyterian Prayer Book for the optional use of ministers and congregations that desire a liturgy, and looks forward to the union of the Congregational and Presbyterian bodies with the Church, to be known as the American Catholic Church. Dr. Shields and Bishop Littlejohn have been friends from boyhood, having attended college together.

—X—

THE editor has been much entertained by the following letter. Perhaps it may interest his readers:

"Your terms are liberal; much more so than Church people have any reason to expect. But our people don't care about the price of an article they desire to have. Candidly, they do not want a Church paper. They have never been taught that the Church is anything more than a local society, of local value only (and not a very high local value). When I ask a person to subscribe, he, or she, regards it as a request to make a donation to one of the many impetuous Church institutions. I doubt if a Church paper has ever been subscribed for in this parish. They have no conception of why a Church paper should be published, 'any how.' If they consent to subscribe, it would mean: 'We will allow your paper to be put into our P. O. Box, as a weekly acknowledgment of our charity.' The above is not exaggerated; it is taken from facts. Nor do I blame the people. They have been most sadly untaught. Still, I am going to work to get subscribers for 'THE LIVING CHURCH Charity Fund' No doubt the people will know better, when they learn better. No use in finding fault with the people. But I do believe that some of our clergy ought to go to some other phase of 'herding sheep,' or relapse into the goat industry."

—X—

Pen-and-Ink-lings

A NOVEL idea in insurance is about to be put to a practical test in San Francisco. It is against unavoidable loss of employment, the policy holder to be paid three-quarters of the amount of his salary for a month, should that time be required in which to find a new position. In case he should be offered one on trial at a less amount than his former salary, the difference will be made up by the company. The company has the authorization of the State Insurance Commissioner to do business in California.

A CURIOSITY of vegetation exists in the shape of a good-sized pine tree growing on a ledge of a facade of the ancient cathedral church of Fenieux (Charente Inferieure), France. This is paralleled by the tree which grows out of the round tower at the church of St. Benedict, Norwich, and many other instances in the United Kingdom. In the old church of Ross, at Herefordshire, two thriving elms are growing, one on each side of a passage between the pews. They are said to have sprung up from the pavement beside the pew once occupied by John Kyle who, at considerable expense, planted elms about his native town.

A BUDDHIST Temple, the only one of its kind in America, and the best equipped of any outside those countries professing Buddhism as their faith, has been opened in the new Museum Building at the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Maxwell Sommerville has spent nearly six years in collecting material for the temple. The formal public opening will take place in September, when the entire Museums of Archaeology and Paleontology will be dedicated. It has been installed at the University of Pennsylvania that all may form an idea of such a place of worship, while through its completeness Mongolians and Buddhists generally will recognize a shrine where they may perform their accustomed acts of devotion.

M. VASIL VERESTCHAGIN is considered the greatest military painter of the nineteenth century. As a matter of fact, less than half his pictures have anything to do with war. He says himself:

I am not a military painter at all. I paint war scenes because they are very interesting. War is the loss of all human sense; under its influence men become animals entirely. The artist looks always for passion, and passion is seen at its height on the battle-field. That is why war attracts me, as it must always attract artists, and authors, too. Every hour war brings something new, something never seen before, something outside the range of ordinary human life; it is the reversal of Christianity, and for the artist, the author, and the philosopher, it must always have a supreme interest. But what a foolish game it is! Here, men are being shot down like cattle; there, Sisters of Mercy are picking them up and trying to heal their wounds. A man no sooner falls than he is taken into the hospital where men with broken limbs lie in hundreds or thousands; and while gentle women are tenderly caring for them, assuaging their agony, and lessening, as much as they can, their almost unbearable pain, men are falling like rain not far away. What nonsense! How stupid to wound a man to heal his wound again! The savages are the only logical warriors I know. They kill their enemies and eat them.

VERESTCHAGIN'S love for truth is said to be the secret of his success as a painter. He says:

My great desire as an artist and a man is to paint things as they are. As a child, when I saw anything great and noble, I was anxious to give others the same impression of it as it made upon me. And now, as a man, that desire still prevails. If you ask me, as a man, if I like war, I say no; but, as an artist, I want to give other people the same impression of war as I had when I took part in it.

My only purpose in painting a picture is to show you what I saw myself. I try to show you the truth; what you will see in that truth is your business, not mine. I am not making war against war. I show you war as it is, and leave you to draw your own conclusions. You see what meaning you like in the pictures. I have put no hidden meaning there. It is simply a great fact, from which you make what deduction you please. If you are a military man, you will say, on looking at my pictures, "Ah! that is charming; what a glorious time they had!" If you are a civilian, you will say, perhaps, "How dreadful it is! Why do men kill men like swine?" But what you say has nothing to do with me. I am satisfied to represent the truth.

THE German Emperor is quoted as saying that "pictures like Verestchagin's are our best guaranties against war." The Czar was very angry with the artist for painting war in such frightful colors. He thought the people ought not to know anything of the worst side of fighting. Moltke was delighted with the pictures, but he would not allow the soldiers to view them—he gave strict orders to that effect.

ON the oft-discussed question, "Has America a National Literature?" Mr. Wm. Archer, an English critic, has said that "If it be implied that American literature feebly imitates English literature, and fails to present an original and adequate interpretation of American life, no reproach could well be more flagrantly unjust."

PROFESSOR PASCHAL, St. of Bonaventure's College, writing on the same theme, has this to say:

At most, then, we may allow that English and American literature are "two main arms of one majestic trunk." Whether or not the American branch of this tree will eventually detach itself from the trunk to live its own life is another question. Strictly speaking, no such separation can take place so long as the linguistic unity of the two nations is preserved, since a literature is named, not from the soil on which it thrives, but from the tongue in which it is written. During the Revolutionary era, it was quite a probability that a new American language might have developed. That nothing of the kind happened, is due mainly to the unwillingness of our forefathers to renounce their literary heritage. That literary heritage belongs to us as much as it belonged to them, and we have an equal pride in this glorious possession. . . . It seems likely that, with increasing facilities of intercourse between England and America, the "little picturesque differences" now existing in the phraseology of the two countries will become fewer and fewer.

— X — A Dream

BY THE REV. W. WOODSON WALKER

"YES, old man, it will not be long before you will give up these childish and horrible superstitions of Christianity, throwing them overboard like the man of independent intelligence that you are, and living thereafter in the light and strength of free thought." This from Jack Conner, the college free-thinker and would-be atheist, to me, Joseph Kilgore, a communicant of the Church, who, up to this baleful moment, had never had a doubt.

Jack loved to argue for atheism, and, with shame be it confessed, he reasoned far more powerfully for that insane negation than I could for the sublime verities of the Christian Faith. And on this particular evening, as he sat and talked in my room, he was so startlingly strong in some of his points, and so persuasive withal, that I was staggered. I found myself not only dumb before him (a not uncommon occurrence of late), but growing uncertain as to many things hitherto believed in as implicitly as my own existence. I seemed to be drifting away from the convictions of a lifetime, and I was troubled.

He was not slow to see the impression he had made, and hence the confident prediction with which he had left me at a late hour, to turn in for the night.

After Jack left, I took up my neglected lessons, trying to forget his burning words and ringing sentences in the concentration of hard study; but my efforts were far from successful, and when I retired my mind was still troubled, and was much more taken up with Jack's arguments than with the lessons for the next day.

Long hours I lay awake reviewing my past life. With a tender grace came to my mind the days of my boyhood, in the quiet trustfulness of my country home. Nearly five years before (how well I remembered the day) I had received the solemn "laying on of hands" by the aged white-haired bishop. I thought of the solemn confidence with which I then accepted the Christian Faith, and, in the torment of my doubts, it seemed a dream of Paradise from which I had been rudely awakened. Then, with a feverish desperation, I assured myself that Jack was only a plausible talker, that he did not himself believe half the things he said, that of course Christianity was true; had not Paley, Butler, and many others, with more sense in a minute than Jack had in a month, proved it beyond a reasonable doubt? And then some hateful little doubt would dart through my mind, and the giants of Christian evidences would vanish in a vague mist, powerless to help in the least.

At last, tired nature asserted her rights, and I sank into a troubled sleep. I found myself walking sadly towards the east over a vast plain. Behind me were great mountains, their peaks aflame with the crimson glory of the sinking sun, their foot-hills deeply purple with the oncoming night. Before me, dimly visible at this hour, was the sea, the long, thunderous boom of whose breakers was distinctly audible, though many miles distant.

Beside this there was no other sound. Night had come, and only the restless sea shook its white mane and lifted up its voice to the sentinel stars. Stillness profound and vast reigned everywhere and weighed upon me. Oppressed by this stillness, I hurried on, hoping to hear some cry of animal, some song of belated shepherd boy, some call of bird to his mate, any sound of living creature, to break the appalling silence. Then I heard a footfall, and the thing I longed for startled me greatly, for I perceived I was not alone. Looking around, I saw not one or two, but many thousands, a countless host of men and women, walking with a sad, expectant look towards the booming sea. As far as the eye could reach on either side of me was a moving mass of humanity, but never a sound from any one of them.

Now at this I greatly marveled, and mustered courage to ask what it meant. My companion, a man of kingly presence, answered: "Wait a little and you will understand."

Ere long we came to a large cup-shaped depression in the plain. In the bottom of the cup lay an immense black marble slab, guarded on every side from too near an approach by armed soldiers. On the slab, in great bejeweled letters, blazed the single word "RESURGAM."

Without a word or a sign, the vast multitude gathered around the cup, dividing to the right and left of the line made by the marble slab. I noticed that no one commanded their movements, but each person silently decided for himself. Evidently, in deciding which side to take they were not influenced by their affections, for it often happened that a wife would go the right and her husband to the left. So also brother and sister, lover and betrothed, would separate and stand on either side. For myself, I felt impelled to choose, but could not. My heart drew me to one side, my mind drew me to the other; to join those on the right, I felt unworthy, and the hard, scornful, unbelieving countenances of those upon the left repelled me. I stood, therefore, in wretched vacillation upon the line, and waited, with what patience I could muster, to see what would be done.

I had not long to wait, for as soon as all had taken their positions, a soldier blew a mighty blast upon a trumpet; and, when the echoes died away, the kingly man, of whom I had asked the meaning of these things, commanded the soldiers: "Roll back the slab, and God shall give a sign to His people according to their faith. If there be no sign, and the tomb remain as dark and silent as heretofore, then there is no Christ, and our faith is a delusion."

At this the long silence was broken, and there was a mighty roar of contending voices. On the right were confident cries: "Christ lives and reigns, Christ is God, we know Him in whom we have believed"; and on the left, amid blasphemies that made me shudder, were hoarse taunts: "It is all folly and superstition, as you will soon see." Nevertheless, I perceived that their faces blanched with fear. Again the trumpet sounded for silence, and with intensest interest, every one of us gazed at the slowly upturned slab. With an eagerness that beggars description, men and women clung to the very verge of the cup and fiercely strove for every inch of advantage in position.

Now it was at last rolled back. The soldiers slowly opened their ranks and stood apart. We looked, we waited, and there was nothing, no sign, no resurrection, nothing!

For a moment the vast multitude stood, while their faces said unutterable things. Then came the awful, despairing cry on the right, echoed in triumph on the left: "There is no Christ, there is no Christ in all the universe!"

And now a wonderful thing came to pass. First, the moon disappeared, and then one by one over the whole expanse of the heavens, the stars paled and glimmered and went out. Yet the heavens were not dark, but seemed bathed in a subdued, purple light, as if a day were about to dawn, unlike any day that ever called man forth to labor and to sorrow.

In the profound silence which this new wonder produced, I heard a song far above me in the heavens, but the singers I could not see. Only the song floated down as a melodious anthem from the solemn arches of heaven's infinite cathedral. At first we could not distinguish the words, but ere long the refrain became distinctly audible:

"Look not to the earth,
O sons of men!
Look not to the cold, dead earth
For a sign of the Son of God!"

Then looking up, I saw in the east a far-off cluster of stars hanging like a blazing dagger, point downward, in the sky. It drew nearer and nearer, until we seemed now to be looking upon a cross of pure white flame. And the song of the unseen singers was now grown louder than the deep-toned voice of the sea, yet inexpressibly sweet, and the refrain came as a divine rebuke:

"Look not to the cold, dead earth
For a sign of the Son of God!"

The cross continued to draw nearer, and now we saw that it was in very deed the Son of Man who is the Son of God, coming down with arms outstretched, coming with the visible marks of His atonement upon Him, coming in overwhelming majesty and glory to claim his own, and to judge his enemies.

Once more there was a cry of joyful triumph, but this time from those upon the right, re-echoed in horror by those upon the left: "Christ reigns! Christ reigns! the Mighty Lord of heaven and earth." At this I awoke; and behold it was a dream.

* * *

"Say, Joe, what makes you look so happy and exalted this morning?"

"Ah, Jack, when you are in the right frame to understand it, I will tell you," and passing on I said to myself: "Last night, like Jacob of old, I lay down with a troubled mind, in a lonely place, but God gave me in my sleep a vision of the imperishable ladder that unites heaven and earth, with the angels of God ascending and descending upon it."

—X—

The Great Race Problem

FROM CONVENTION ADDRESS OF THE RT.
REV. CLELAND K. NELSON, D. D.

Clearly paramount to all other questions of the State or the Nation, is the disposition of the heritage bequeathed to us by England, the Dutch, and the New England States, before they abandoned the iniquitous trade in human lives. . . .

Here they are, and here are we. We are learning every day that "we must raise the negro or he will drag us down." Are we raising him up? This is no political query to be avoided in the pulpits. It is a practical, religious, and educational matter which we have no right to avoid, nay, cannot afford to avoid. Men are so tired and disgusted with the present condition of affairs that they say: "We cannot stand it. We will go to some other part of the country where the race issue is unknown." You cannot, I say. It is the nation's problem—not yours, not mine, nor ours only. Had the nation, had the Church, set at once about fitting these people for their place, we should be solving the problem instead. The immediate necessity is for the prompt and thorough exercise of justice—justice, and consideration in business relations of every sort, thus educating character and emphasizing conscience as God's monitor in man. But justice as well, speedy, impartial, unerring in the punishment of criminals of every sort. We may rest assured that a large measure of responsibility for every outrage of black or white is upon those who administer what is called justice. Once implant the seed of distrust in this department of government, and the growth is rank, the fruitage exuberant. The haggling over technicalities, the postponement under various pretexts, the ready acceptance of the plea of insanity, the exasperating delays and notable perversions which are too familiar to the people of our State, are not only a provocation, but are encouragement, to the people to form mobs.

Debased law is ever the hotbed of violence, and misrule, and anarchy, bloodshed and savagery the natural offspring of degraded and belated justice.

Lastly, and which exposes the greatest and most criminal neglect, is the increasing demand, not upon the South alone, but upon the whole nation and every body of Christians (among whom the Church is most blameworthy) to supply facilities for imparting, in combination, religious training and technical knowledge suited to the conditions and environments of the hordes of illiterate and unoccupied boys and girls who pepper our fair land with sores of vice in coarse natures, uncontrolled by reason and fed by idleness and ignorance.

My brethren, the blaze of indignation, fanned by the latest horrors of barbaric gluttony in crime, may prove a blessing if it burns out some of the selfishness which withholds the means to prosecute the work of Christian civilization in the school and the home, rather than in the pulpit. I exhort you, men and women, clerical and lay, to study these methods, with a view of adding your quota of influence to provide the remedy, and that you may leave to your descendants of the next generation not a world but a State and communities better than you found them—better because you have lived and realized your opportunities.

—X—

The Vital Touch in Literature

STYLE, in the sense in which I am here using the term, implies that vital, intimate, personal relation of the man to his language, by which he makes the words his own, fills them with his own quality, and gives the reader that lively sense of being in direct communication with a living, breathing, mental and spiritual force. . . .

There are as many styles as there are moods and tempers in men. Every work of genius has its own physiognomy—sad, cheerful, frowning, yearning, determined, meditative. This book has the face of a saint; that, of a scholar or a seer. Here is the feminine, there, the masculine face. One has the clerical face, one the judicial. Each appeals to us according to our temperament and mental predilections. Who shall say which style is the best? What can be better than the style of Huxley for his purpose—sentences level and straight like a hurled lance; or than Emerson's for his purpose—electric sparks, the sudden, unexpected epithet or tense audacious phrase that gives the mind a wholesome shock; or than Gibbon's for his purpose—a style like solid masonry, every sentence cut four square, and his work, as Carlyle said to Emerson, a splendid bridge, connecting the ancient world with the modern; or than De Quincey's for his purpose—a discursive, roundabout style, herding his thoughts as a collie dog herds sheep; or than Arnold's for his academic spirit—a style like cut-glass; or than Whitman's for his continental spirit—the processional, panoramic style that gives the sense of mass and multitude?

Certain things we may demand of every man's style—that it shall do its work, that it shall touch the quick. To be colorless like Arnold is good, and to have color like Ruskin is good; to be lofty and austere like the old Latin and Greek authors is good, and to be playful and discursive like Dr. Holmes is good; to be condensed and epigrammatic like Bacon pleases, and to be flowing and copious like Macaulay pleases. Within certain limits, the manner that is native to the man, the style that is a part of himself, is what wears best.—John Burroughs in The Atlantic.

—X—

Book Reviews and Notices

Fur and Feather Tales. By Hamblen Sears. Illustrations by Frost, Tavernier, and Jaccaci. New York and London: Harper Brothers. Price, $1.75.

This unique title stands at the head of several very interesting sketches out of the ordinary line of hunting stories. They consist of five graphic descriptions of the pursuit of game birds and big game in several countries. The spirit of out-door life and adventure blows through the book like a refreshing breeze, and one almost feels the atmosphere of the woods and mountains. "The Marquis' Meat" is a unique sketch, giving an account of the methods of keeping and managing packs of hounds for stag hunting in France. The illustrations are of a high order, and the book is typographically very satisfactory.

The Mormon Prophet. By Lily Dougall. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Price, $1.50.

This is an historical novel, and about a very curious piece of history, the rise of Mormonism. The "Prophet" in question is not Brigham Young, but Joseph Smith, two very different men, with very different creeds. Polygamy, which we think the main doctrine of Mormonism, found no place in Smith's teachings. The author does not believe that Smith consciously invented his creed, and her reason for not doing so is a very good one, and one we constantly use in apologetics; namely, that deliberate hypocrisy never would have been strong enough to carry him through the terrible persecutions which he had to endure. He was self-deluded, and added to self-delusion an hysterical and only half-conscious fraud. In his day, you were either the agent of the devil or of heaven. He decided that he was the latter. He and his early followers are an interesting psychological study, and the author has worked it up very cleverly. The book makes no pretence of fine writing, but is thoroughly interesting.

A Little Colonial Dame. By Agnes Carr Sage. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company. Pp. 197. Price, $1.50.

Altogether a delightful book; charmingly bound, printed, and illustrated, and written in a quaint and highly finished literary style. It is a story of old Manhattan Island, in which many of the scenes and characters are drawn from life. The children whose history it tells had many exciting experiences in the new colony, and in captivity amongst the Indians. The picture which is given us of those simple, early times is a true one, and must be very fascinating to the children of these later days. We envy them the pure delight of reading it. Happy are the children who have such books in their homes, and whose minds are formed upon such perfect models of good literature.

Spiritual Letters of Edward Bouverie Pusey. Edited by the Rev. J. O. Johnston and the Rev. W. C. E. Newbolt. New York: Longmans, Green & Co. Pp. 344. Price, 74.

When the editors completed their monumental life of Dr. Pusey, they announced to the public that they had reserved a large part of his correspondence for future publication in a volume by itself. This volume we now have before us, in the same form as the Life. It is a most important addition to the previous volumes, and makes us familiar with a characteristic side of Dr. Pusey's life and work. He was, before and above all other things, a guide of souls. The weary and heavy-laden, the perplexed, the sorrowful, the sinners, turned to him in great numbers to find help. During all the later years of his life he carried on a vast correspondence, which made it necessary for him often to work far into the night—sometimes through the whole night. This was one of the most laborious and effective parts of his ministry. The permanent results of it here gathered together and preserved are of unique interest and value. They fall naturally into three groups: Letters of counsel and sympathy, letters on intellectual difficulties, letters on theological and ecclesiastical subjects, and fragments of conversations and letters. Under these headings is stored up a great wealth of practical wisdom and spiritual counsel. We are profoundly impressed with the penetrating insight, the wide and active sympathy, and the sound judgment which these letters reveal. They show Dr. Pusey to have been one of the greatest masters of the spiritual life whom the Christian Church has ever produced, and they form an almost inexhaustible treasury, from which we may draw in time of need, to meet the difficulties of the present day, or to answer the sophistries of Rome. This volume deserves to stand beside Dr. Liddon's Life of Pusey, and to be widely read by all who would learn the secrets of the spiritual life. It will be one of the devotional classics of the future.

Lenten Meditations. By the Rev. V. S. S. Coles, M. A., Principal of the Pusey House, Oxford. New York: Longmans, Green & Co. Pp. 205. Price, $1.

We regret very much that this book did not reach us in time to receive notice before the beginning of Lent. We should have taken the greatest pleasure in recommending it to the clergy and the devout laity. Its tone is so manly and sound and sensible, and its contents are so nourishing to the inner life, that we should like to see it widely used. With its help, and with a little earnest effort, any intelligent person may successfully make a meditation. The meditations which it contains are drawn from Holy Scripture, and are very wisely framed. They avoid the perilous extremes of over-elaboration and stiffness, and are full of wholesome food for the soul. This book need by no means be reserved for Lent, but may be profitably used at any season of the year. We recommend our readers to get it at once.

Studies in the Book of the Acts of the Apostles [Gloriosissima Civitas Dei]. By the late John Williams, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of Connecticut. Second edition. New York: Thomas Whittaker. Cloth, octavo, pp. 178. Price, $1.50.

The publisher has well done by issuing at this time a work which long since we reviewed with veneration favor on its appearance in first edition from the Berkeley Divinity School, in '88. This volume of our late Primus takes the Studies only as far as the twelfth chapter and fourth division of the Book, and had not, therefore, reached the last and largest portion, the Mission to the Gentiles. It is a worthy memorial of Bishop Williams' scholarship.

General Sherman. By Gen. Manning F. Force. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1899.

This volume of the "Great Commanders" series will appeal to a large circle of readers, including not only those veterans who followed their brilliant leader "from Atlanta to the sea," or who in the Army of the Potomac were waiting daily for tidings of that famous march, but also those of a younger generation who have not forgotten the glorious deeds of their fathers. The story of General Sherman's campaigns is graphically told in this small volume, and besides, the character of the man, his decision and force, energy and clearness of vision, his wide grasp of affairs and superior ability in overcoming adverse circumstances, is well portrayed. That he was deeply loved and respected by his soldiers is not surprising. They trusted him, for they had proved him as he had proved them. He was every inch a soldier, and altogether one of the finest and strongest characters developed by the great conflict of the Civil War.

The United States of Europe. By W. T. Stead. New York: Doubleday & McClure Company. Price, $2.

A striking book by a well-known writer who has done and said many foolish things in his life, but has also spoken many true and noble words. The "Tsar's Peace Rescript" set him off on a race all over Europe to find out what the clever people and the managing people everywhere thought about it, and what was likely to come of it. The title of the book is rather a "counting your chickens before they are hatched" one. Mr. Stead sees in our own land the spectacle of a large number of independent and sovereign States living together in harmony, and hoping that a similar state of affairs may come about in Europe, he flings to the breeze the catching title, "The United States of Europe." We fear that the author, like another celebrated personage, will "lie a moldering in his grave" before that "consummation devoutly to be wished for" takes place. However, he is doing in the book honest and good work to try to help it on, and starting out with a great desire to have it so, he thinks the signs are propitious that it will be so, "some time, some how." The book is filled with excellent portraits of well-known people, and the recital of what Brown, Jones, and Robinson said to Stead, and what he said to them, is couched in brilliant language. Much of the book is a rehash of printed letters and articles of the author, but it cannot fail to interest the general reader.

Between Caesar and Jesus. By George D. Herron. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.

These lectures are a violent and intemperate arraignment of modern society and the Church, or, rather, Christianity, from an advanced socialist point of view. It is questionable whether much good can be accomplished by exaggeration of some of our social troubles, so far as the description of them is concerned, followed by heated denunciation of everybody concerned, and of others who are doing their best to mitigate and abolish those evils, even though it be not in the manner advocated by the author.

The Taming of the Jungle. By Dr. C. W. Doyle. Philadelphia and London: J. B. Lippincott Company.

The similarity of name is not the only mark of resemblance between this writer and the popular Conan Doyle whose stories are everywhere known and read. Dr. C. W. Doyle dates his work at Santa Cruz, California. He has given in these sketches a view of the life and scenery of a part of the world known to few white men, and seldom brought into the range of history or fiction. It is a wild, weird, unique experience which the author leads us into, in which we are at times thrilled and fascinated, and from which we can scarcely escape until we have finished the volume. There is much originality and power in this small collection of stories.

The Development of the Thrift Habit. By Mary Willcox Brown. New York: The Macmillan Company. Price, $1.

This is a capital book for distribution among the working classes. It deals with all the means employed for saving money and laying by for a rainy day. The author has gone carefully into the whole subject, and has succeeded in presenting to her readers a compact and concise statement of the various aids to thrift, and its importance.

Facing the Twentieth Century. By James N. King, Secretary National League for the Protection of American Institutions.

A big, well printed book, filled with portraits of well-known statesmen and soldiers, and with a good deal of useful information in it about American institutions. Its great object, however, is the echo of that rather thin out worn war cry: "The menace to American Institutions from politico-ecclesiastical Romanism." This is quite a "bogey man" to many people, but we really do not think there is much in it. There is just as much danger in some other religious bodies, and much more danger in the growing infidelity. We do not believe this publication will much interest our readers.

Periodicals

Men are not yet willing to give up the idea of being able to fly through the air. Many experiments are being made, and these are illustrated and described very effectively in The Cosmopolitan for June. "How to Secure Expression in Photography" is a problem of interest to amateur photographers, and is beautifully illustrated. "The Shadow of a Clever Pair of Hands," is suggestive and fascinating. Two articles will have special interest for women readers, one by Prof. Harry Thurston Peck, on "The Woman of To-day and To-morrow," the other, "The Ideal and Practical Organization of a Home."

Very varied are the topics occupying the pages of The Atlantic for June. Miss Johnston, the author of "Prisoners of Hope," begins her new historical romance, the scene being laid, likewise, in early colonial Virginia. The salient features of Japanese character and policy are analyzed by Arthur May Knapp, and Frank Gaylord Cook has something to say on "Politics and the Judiciary." "The Tenement House Blight," by Jacob Riis who so well understands his subject, is a foil to Robinson's paper on "Æsthetic Progress in American Cities." "The Outlook in Cuba," "Notes on Glass Decoration," "Prince Kropotkins' Autobiography," "Letters between Two Poets"—Bayard Taylor and Sidney Lanier—and Harriet W. Preston's account of the love-life of the Brownings, with two or three poems, certainly offer wherewithal to suit almost any literary appetite.

The June Century is an Out-of-Doors number, abounding with full-page illustrations, including a frontispiece by Albert Sterner, representing Izaak Walton seated reading under a tree—and, of course, fishing as he reads. This is apropos of the opening article—a discursive essay on "Fisherman's Luck," by that redoubtable angler, the Rev. Henry van Dyke, printed with decorative page-borders. Dr. van Dyke's essay is followed by a descriptive study of Niagara Falls, by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, based on an unusual familiarity with this great natural wonder, and showing a keen appreciation of its "little lovelinesses," as well as of its grander aspects. Mrs. Van Rensselaer's text is supplemented by a number of full-page and smaller pictures by Castaigne. Other outdoor papers in this number are Capt. J. C. Ayres' "After Big Game with Packs," an illustrated account of a hunting expedition in which pack-mules played an important part; "Out of Doors in Texas," by E. S. Nadal, author of the delightful "Notes of a Professional Exile," and "Out of Doors in Colorado," by H. P. Ufford. The continuation of Gen. Sherman's diary of his European tour of 1872, and Prof. Wheeler's "Alexander the Great," and Mr. Crawford's "Via Crucis" supply a varied quota of enjoyment.

Opinions of the Press

The Guardian

THE ENGLISH ARCHBISHOPS' COURT.—It is on many grounds a thing to be thankful for. It establishes the position that it is the Prayer Book, not the rulings of individual bishops, that the clergy are bound to obey. . . . It shows how much there is to be said in defence of the legality of ceremonies which, in the first instance, the bishops condemned without inquiry. It gives us the first suggestion, or nucleus, or whatever else we like to call it, of a really spiritual court of appeal before which the High Church clergy can conscientiously plead. It shakes us free from the bondage—not, it may be conceded, a very heavy one in practice—of decisions of civil courts, necessarily framed on inadequate examinations of evidence. These are gains which are altogether independent of the result of the hearing. They are due to the courage of the Archbishops in passing over an episcopal decision to which they had themselves been parties, and embarking upon a new policy which, as we hope, will grow in extent and importance.

The Outlook

THE ENGLISH CHURCH QUESTION.—In the spirit in which the best men in the Church are dealing with this question, the two Archbishops, in harmony with the direction of the Prayer Book, are sitting as a self-constituted tribunal for the trial of two test cases involving the ceremonial use of incense and lights; and the further question of the Reserved Sacrament for the sick is likely to be brought before them. The decisions of the Archbishops in these cases cannot be enforced by law; but it is believed that they will be regarded as binding on the conscience of the clergy, interpreted by their ordination vows. The advanced Churchmen, under the leadership of Lord Halifax, will, Canon Scott-Holland declares, accept the decision. They only insist that the decision shall come from a spiritual, and not from a secular authority. The Church Discipline Bill has been voted down in the House of Commons, on the promise of the government to check lawlessness in the Church. The Church must find some form of self-government; when that form is found, the tie with the State will be cut by a remorseless logic; and there can be little doubt that the sooner the Church becomes independent of the State, the richer will be its spiritual life.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XVI.

THROUGH the gloomy winter of 1777-1778, when the patriot cause seemed at the lowest ebb, there was but one really bright spot for Alan Underhill, and that was in the friendship of the gallant young Marquis de Lafayette. Grieving deeply, as Allan was for his lost friend, cut off from intercourse and sympathy with his own people, and sharing in all the sufferings and privations of Valley Forge, he would often have been completely disheartened, but for the high-spirited Frenchman. Lafayette now had a division of his own, and had asked with that grace which none could refuse, to have Underhill transferred to his own staff.

At the battle of Germantown, Alan received a wound in his thigh, which, though seemingly slight, gave him some trouble afterward as the result of exposure and insufficient diet. And in the spring of 1778 there came to him a new cause of anxiety. For he heard that Eugene's father had succumbed to an attack of his old enemy, the gout, and that his gentle wife, weakened by her sorrows, had shortly followed him. Thus was Margaret Delafield, already orphaned, left alone, for her time-serving stepfather now refused intercourse with his wife's people.

Margaret alone in a city of enemies! The tidings brought Alan fresh responsibility and perplexity. Had he not promised to cherish and protect her? What had that promise meant to his dead friend? He seemed to see as if in a flash of revelation, the meaning which Eugene had given it. In his grief and amazement he had made the pledge which implied so much. How far was he bound to the dead and how far to the living?

Perhaps it was providential that just at this time he received the kindest of letters from the Glebe farm, expressing his parents' loving anxiety for his safety in every line. Alan replied immediately to his father in the same spirit, asking that he obtain passports for Margaret to retire to Albany. He then wrote to Margaret herself, beseeching her to accept the protection of the surgeon, Aberdeen who, with his usual prudence, was now settled in Albany. Her reply was prompt and characteristic. "Sorrows have been multiplied upon me," she wrote, "but what is one life, or that of one family, to the good of our country? Since I cannot fight for liberty, I am willing to go when and where you choose. Have I not said that I trust you?"

It was in the late winter that General Lafayette was ordered by Congress to proceed to Albany, there to await a Canadian expedition which had been planned as a sort of protest to the inaction or non-success of Washington in the South. The young marquis was inclined to refuse such invidious offers, which reflected on his chief, but Washington himself bade him put away his scruples, and he accordingly consented to muster a force in Albany, and to inspect the defences of the Mohawk Valley.

It was then in February that a slight young officer of noble look, accompanied by a taller, more stalwart youth, rode up the valley highway toward the mouth of the Schoharie creek. The two were followed at some distance by a mounted guard. As they approached the ford of the creek, the larger man spoke: "Yonder, my General," he said, "lies the glebe of the good Queen Anne, and up and down these shores were scattered my father's flock whom he yearns to see reunited in one faith and one hope."

He had scarcely spoken when a mounted figure was seen to emerge from the bushes on the farther shore, urge his horse into the snow-swollen river, and make his painfully buffeted way across.

"A gallant rider!" exclaimed the general, and at the same moment Alan Underhill cried: "My father, himself!" and flung himself from his horse. The son had scarce received his father's blessing, when it was incumbent on him to present the Marquis de Lafayette, the nobleman who, born a Papist and a royalist, now stood as the defender of republican principles.

When the general and his suite had passed on, Alan whose wound, freshly opened, had procured him brief furlough, asked the question which trembled on his lips. "Father, what of Margaret Delafield? I sought her in Albany, and Aberdeen told me she was under your protection. Where have you then bestowed her?"

"You will find her at the Glebe," began Mr. Underhill, but his son for once interrupted with an exclamation of surprise. "She has been ill," explained the clergyman. "Methought the peace of the country would sooner restore her. Your mother and Evelyn have cared for her with all tenderness."

"And you, they, have done this for my sake!"

"Aye, Alan. I have done you injustice, lad, but I could not steel my heart against one whom you are bound to cherish, and for whom even now your first thought has been. Mayhap we have learned of late that all the wrong is not on one side. It is the Church which has suffered most between the upper and nether millstones of her friends and foes."

The weeks passed, and spring budded again in the valley. The hills sloughed off their tarnished mantles, the earth drank greedily the early rain, and the rejuvenated river grew boisterous in its bounds. All was as of old, and each wild violet that studded the brown bank of the creek, or pink-nosed

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER

DR.
PRICE'S CREAM
BAKING POWDER

Awarded
Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal. Midwinter Fair

lambkin that tried his fledgling legs, was but the counterpart of others past. Yet in those two beings on whom Alan's thoughts chiefly centred there was a change.

Evelyn was still bonnie, winsome, womanly, with the eyes and tresses of which he had dreamed at Trenton and Valley Forge; but something was gone from the gaiety of her demeanor, something from the warm affection of her glance. Margaret, too, had altered. She looked extremely fragile, and there was that in her quiet self-repression which seemed to set him back to the beginning of his intercourse with her, when the cause of freedom had been their only bond.

The alarm of the valley on account of threatened Indian invasions, was now so great, that General Schuyler's proposed council with the Six Nations was held in March. The Senecas alone refused to come; expressing surprise that they were asked to do so while tomahawks were still sticking in their heads, their wounds bleeding, and their eyes streaming with tears for the loss of their friends. The address of Congress, flattering some, upbraiding others, worked little good. The Mohawks hung their heads, and would have naught to say, but it was evident that the important tribes were brooding over their wrongs, and planning vengeance in their hearts.

Nor did Mr. Underhill's intercessions avail more. It was plain that his efforts did not free him from suspicion in the mind of

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY
Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN
Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS
Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK
Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR
Cincinnati.
ECKSTEIN
}
ATLANTIC
}
BRADLEY
}
BROOKLYN
New York.
JEWETT
}
ULSTER
}
UNION
}
SOUTHERN
Chicago.
SHIPMAN
}
COLLIER
}
MISSOURI
St. Louis.
RED SEAL
}
SOUTHERN
}
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO
Philadelphia.
MORLEY
Cleveland.
HALEM
Salem, Mass.
CORNELL
Buffalo.
KENTUCKY
Louisville.

UGAR is not improved by the addition of sand; neither is White Lead improved by the addition of Zinc and Barytes, yet there are hundreds of such mixtures branded and sold as "White Lead," "Pure White Lead," etc.

You can avoid these by making sure that the brand is right. Those named in the margin are genuine.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also folder showing picture of house painted in different designs or various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 100 William St., New York.

even the Marquis Lafayette, he at whom Margaret had looked with brimming eyes. Indeed the murmurs against the clergyman grew louder as the summer advanced. It was rumored that one of the papers in the tell-tale packet was in his writing, and that he was in constant correspondence with the Tory leaders. It made little difference that these accusations could be proven untrue. They were still all-sufficient to inflame popular opinion.

Early in the autumn a party of Tories rendezvoused at Fort Hunter, and escaped to Canada, taking prisoners and burning buildings as they went. The inefficiency of the Tryon militia precipitated bitter measures on the part of the county committee. The first step taken against the privileges of the English Church was the inhibition of Mr. Underhill from holding services in the Fort Hunter chapel. But more galling was the permission given to the Nonconformists of the neighborhood to use the abandoned place of worship. Mr. Underhill's blood boiled within him at the news, for the days were past when the English chapel was still regarded as the home of her dissenting children. "The house of God shall not be desecrated by these ungodly strife-mongers," he said, "and I shall yet gather about me the few sheep which remain. If Antiochus profane the temple, I will be the Maccabeus who shall withstand him to the face."

And on the next Sunday, Mr. Underhill indeed invited the fulfillment of his own prophecy. For on that day as Alan, at home on brief leave before rejoining the army at Valley Forge, approached the demoralized enclosure of the fort, he saw a much larger concourse than usual directed toward the stone chapel. Among these were Juvrouw Myndert and Dame Cairnewas, as well as many others who had forsaken the Dutch meeting-house at Caughnawaga, or the Presbyterian chapel at Schenectady. A strange flutter of triumph, too, seemed to pervade the Sunday attire of these good women, from the small caps or gigantic bonnets which crowned their high-combed hair, to the glistening buckles on their square-toed shoes.

Within the building was a more motley assemblage than perhaps had ever gathered in the Queen's chapel. Dutch settlers from Caughnawaga to Guy Park, nearer neighbors from the Schoharie creek, Scotch families of doubted loyalty, and a few Indians who still lingered in the vicinity of their castle, were now added to the more usual worshippers.

But strangest of all, the pulpit at the west end of the church was occupied by the Presbyterian minister in Genevan gown and bands! His arm rested on the very cushion sent over by Queen Anne, and beneath his eyes hung the embroidered cloth, bearing "superstitious" emblems.

Alan took his place on one of the backless benches below the elevated pews of the gentry, and awaited developments with some trepidation. Evelyn was at the organ, the veritable organ which was the first one in all the wilderness west of Albany, and though he could not see her face, Alan noted the agitation in her touch. Then Mr. Underhill in his Holland-made surplice, entered, and began the service at his desk. At the same moment the unbidden guest, offering first a brief prayer, launched forth into his sermon.

It was perhaps as strange a scene as was ever witnessed in the house of God, the champion of the Church, denying the right of any other in his Father's temple, and the equally determined Calvinist preaching to his own flock of their duty to their country, and bidding them beware of Papacy and the scarlet woman, while the people of diverse faiths listened to the curious clashing of words, deriving what edification they might. No violence of any kind was attempted, and all appeared content that the disputed ground should be equally shared by the two contestants.

The domine's sermon was obliged to spin itself out into a hydra-headed monster, which he slew by piece-meal, only stopping now and then to quaff a goblet of water, or to wipe the beads of heated discourse from his brow. Mr. Underhill, for his part, finished the entire service, and even instructed his hearers on the lesson for the day. When he finally closed, it was with the transient satisfaction of having vindicated the rights of God's heritage.

On the return to the Glebe, Evelyn encountered Alan alone. "Do not detain me," she said, passionately. "You have to-day glutted your eyes on the sight of the Faith profaned and desecrated. I can brook no fair words. Deeds! 'Tis a time for deeds. Sure, 'tis a cold allegiance and a craven loyalty—"her voice choked with her excitement and tears welled to her eyes.

Alan for once was unrelenting. "Tell me," he said, laying his hand on her shoulder to turn her toward him, "how have I broken my faith? Did I give up my studies but at my father's express command? Answer me. Did I take service in the army until taunted, goaded, to such action, though my heartstrings were long torn for my country? You can not say it! Did I break any pledge to you? God willing, I shall still work for our valley people, if not in league with one so distrustful. Has not my father, more humble than you, owned that he misjudged me? while you—" he broke off.

Evelyn could not answer. She drew a startled breath and looked at him with something like admiration shining in her eyes. Then Alan released her, and his whole face changed, growing tender with his rare, sweet smile, while he murmured: "Evelyn, my darling, my heart's desire!" but with a started, protesting cry, Evelyn fled from further speech.

(To be continued.)

Cost of Little Things

IN a recent lecture before the Purdue University railway course, by Dr. Charles B. Dudley, chief chemist of the Pennsylvania Railroad, it is shown how the costs of the distinctly little things mount up in the offices of a large railway system. For instance, he shows that it costs the Pennsylvania Railroad each year about $1,000 for pins, $5,000 for rubber bands, $5,000 for ink, $7,000 for lead pencils, etc. The fact that it costs nearly as much for stationary with which to carry on the business of the Pennsylvania Railroad as it does for iron, as Dr. Dudley asserts, is indeed startling. A large amount of money undoubtedly leaks out in the way of careless use of little things. Some roads have realized the extent of waste in such directions, and have, among other measures, ordered that a large part of the communications between their various officials shall be written on pads of manilla paper, instead of on regular letter heads.

CARMEL Keeps the Skin Soft and Smooth

SOAP

FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

A mission society at Haifa, Mt. Carmel, Palestine, make for their support and send to this country, CARMEL SOAP. It is made of the sweet olive oil so plentiful in that country and is an absolutely safe soap for toilet and nursery, at moderate price. Sold by druggists and grocers. Imported by A. Klipstein & Co., 122 Pearl St., N. Y.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

THE DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTIC OF THE VOCALION IS ITS EXQUISITE TONE

THE VOCALION is remarkably well adapted for either the church or the private music-room. It is compact in form, occupying about one-third the space of a pipe-organ of equal capacity, and has a full, rich diapason tone-quality, which, together with great delicacy in the string registers, especially fits it to accompany the human voice.

We give here a description of our Style 22, to which we wish to call the attention of all lovers of organ music, whose correspondence we invite.

SEND FOR CATALOG G

SPECIFICATION OF STYLE 22

Compass of Manuals CC to A, 58 Notes. Compass of Pedals CC to F, 30 Notes.

GREAT ORGAN

1. Open Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 2. Melodia, 8 ft., 58 notes. 3. Dulciana, 8 ft., 58 notes. 4. Harmonic Flute, 4 ft., 58 notes. 5. Trumpet, 8 ft., 58 notes.

SWELL ORGAN

6. Stopped Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 7. Aeoline, 8 ft., 58 notes. 8. Violin Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 9. Principal, 4 ft., 30 notes.

PEDAL ORGAN

10. Double Open Diapason, 16 ft., 30 notes. 11. Diapason Dolce.

MECHANICAL ACCESSORIES

12. Swell to Great. 13. Octave Coupler Swell to Great. 14. Swell to Pedal. 15. Great to Pedal. 16. Tremulant. 17. Wind-indicator. 18. Bellows-signal.

COMBINATION PEDALS

19. Forte Great. 20. Piano Great. 21. Forte Swell. 22. Piano Swell. 23. Balanced Swell Pedal. 24-25. Great to Pedal, reversible.

The Combination Pedals are double-acting. The blow-lever may be operated from either end of the organ by hand-power or connected with a motor.

Cases in solid quartered oak. Richly finished. Illuminated-pipe front. Dimensions: 7 feet 1 inch front; 10 feet 10 inches high; 41 inches deep.

Vocalions range in price from $275 upward.

THE VOCALION ORGAN COMPANY
No. 18 West Twenty-third Street, New York City
Chicago, Ill.: Lyon & Healy, Wabash Avenue and Adams Street. Boston, Mass.: The M. Steinert & Sons Co., 162 Boylston Street

FLEMING & CARRICK PRESS, NEW YORK

"The Lady With the Lamp"

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE was the daughter of a wealthy English household, but born in Florence, and taking her name from that city. In St. Thomas' Hospital, London, stands her statue. She wears the dress of a nurse, and carries in her hand a nurse's night-lamp. The figure is tall and slender, not to say fragile; the face is refined, with a look of reserve upon it—"a veiled and silent woman" she has been called. The living face, however, would kindle with a strange luminousness in conversation, and the dark and steady eyes took what a keen observer has described as a "star-like brightness." That Florence Nightingale was a woman of fine intellect, clear judgment, and heroic quality of will cannot be doubted. Dean Stanley, indeed, not given to cheap praise, has called her "a woman of commanding genius," and her accomplishments tell how swift and penetrating was her intelligence. She spoke French, German, Italian, was a good classic, and had all the social gifts of her order. But all her genius ran in womanly channels. She proved herself, in the Crimea, it is true, to have great powers of administration. Her intelligence, again, had a crystalline quality, which, within a certain range, made questions that puzzled statesmen easy to her. She hated shallowness and pretence.

Florence Nightingale practiced what she preached. Born to the ease and luxury of a rich woman's life, she yet turned aside and spent ten years studying nursing as an art, first, at the great Moravian hospital at Kaiserswerth, next with the sisters of St. Vincent de Paul, in Paris. Then she organized a home for sick governesses in London. Then came the opportunity of her life in the call to the East.

On October 21st, 1854, she sailed with a band of thirty-eight nurses—of whom ten were Roman Catholic Sisters of Mercy, and fourteen members of an Anglican sisterhood—for Scutari. "I am naturally a very shy person," she says. Certainly she had a keen horror of parade, and she started with her gallant band without public notice or farewell. At Boulogne, however, it became known that this company of ladies, with their uniform dark dress, were nurses on their way to the Crimea, and the white-capped fisherwomen of the place thronged around them, and carried their luggage to the railway station, scornfully refusing to let a man so much as touch an article. The band of heroines reached Scutari on Nov. 5th, the very day of Inkermann. The great barrack hospital there was a huge quadrangle, a quarter of a mile on each face; its corridors rising story above story had a linear extent of four miles. The hospital when the nurses landed held 2,300 patients; no less than two miles, that is, of sick-beds—foul with every kind of vileness. The mattresses were strewn two deep in the corridors, the wards were rank with fever and cholera, and the odor of undressed wounds. And to this great army of the sick and dying, the wounded from Inkermann in a few hours were added, bringing the number up to 5,000. Into what Russell calls "the hell" of this great temple of pain and foulness, moved the slight and delicate form of this English lady, with her band of nurses.

Clumsy male devices were dismissed, almost with a gesture, into space. Dirt became a crime, fresh air and clean linen, sweet food, and soft hands a piety. A great kitchen was organized which provided well-cooked food for a thousand men. Washing was a lost art in the hospital; but this band of women created, as with a breath, a great laundry, and a strange cleanliness crept along the walls and beds of the hospital. In their warfare with disease and pain, these women showed a resolution as high as the men of their race showed against the gray-coated battalions of Inkermann, or in the frozen trenches before Sebastopol. Muddle-headed male routine was swept ruthlessly aside. If the commissariat failed to supply requisites, Florence Nightingale, who had great funds at her disposal, instantly provided them herself, and the heavy-footed officials found the swift feet of these women outrunning them in every path of help and pity. Only one flash of anger is reported to have broken the serene calm which served as a mask for the steel-like and resolute will of Florence Nightingale. Some stores had arrived from England; sick men were languishing for them. But routine required that they should be "inspected" by a board before being issued, and the board moving with heavy-footed slowness, had not completed its work when night fell. The stores, were, therefore, with official phlegm, locked up, and their use denied to the sick. Between the needs of hundreds of sick men, that is, and the comforts they required was the locked door, the symbol of red tape. Florence Nightingale called a couple of orderlies, walked to the door, and quietly ordered them to burst it open and the stores to be distributed!

Kinglake says that the part played by the male officials and by Florence Nightingale's band of nurses in the hospitals of the Crimea, constituted an interesting trial of both brain power and speed between the two sexes; and he is inclined to pronounce, with emphasis, that in this duel of wits the feminine brain came out best. Women supplied exactly that "agile brain-power, that organizing or governing faculty" which the state needed, but which its male officials at the moment failed to supply. "The males at that time in England," he says, "suffered from a curious lameness in the use of brain-power." They had lost the faculty of initiative, and were slaves to custom.—Cornhill Magazine.

A SECOND DISH.

Proved Too Much for Actual Need and Showed the Value of Condensed Food.

"When the new food was first placed in my store I took a package home to try. The name, 'Grape-Nuts,' had attracted my attention, and the statement that it was partly composed of grape-sugar excited my interest, as we all know that grape-sugar, made by certain methods of treating the cereals, is one of the most nourishing and digestible articles that can be eaten.

I rather expected to like the food, but was not expecting that the children would take so kindly to it. Each one of the little folks, however, passed up the saucer for a second supply, and so did I.

It is a delicious novelty, and very grateful to the palate. I found, about midway in my second dish, that I had sufficient for a meal, and realized for the first time that I was eating a condensed food that supplies one's wants with a few spoonfuls, and does not require anything like the volume to furnish the amount of food required, as when any of the ordinary forms of cereals are served. Grape-Nuts are an elegant food, and the Postum Cereal Co., Lim., are to be congratulated upon the discovery," said M. C. Goossen, the well-known fancy grocer of Grand Rapids.

"Think of Ease But Work On."

If your blood is impure you may "work on" but you cannot even "think of ease." The blood is the greatest sustainer of the body and when you make it pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla you have the perfect health in which even hard work becomes ease.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard" and heard with constantly recurring delight. The tells with a far-reaching, sonorous sweetness, of its matchless powers, whenever and wherever it is tolled.

"BLYMYER" BELL

The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Please mention this paper.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1887.
THE E. W. VANDUZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES AND PHALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826. BELLS.
HAVE FURNISHED 35,000
CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER
MENEELY & CO. PUREST, BEST,
WEST-TROY, N.Y. GENUINE
CHIMES, ETC. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.
Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

CHURCH and CHANCEL FURNITURE
OF ALL KINDS
PHENIX FURNITURE CO., Eau Claire, Wis.

A COMBINATION SET
OF THE Prayer Book
AND Hymnal

Valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent to anyone sending Two New Paid-in-Advance Subscriptions to The Living Church, plus 20 cents for carriage.

FREE

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY IZOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XIX.

MOLLIE'S MISSION

SO ended the feud between the two clubs, and during the long, beautiful fall days which followed, a mutual interchange of compliments took place. There were candy pulls and picnics given by the Sisterhood for the Excelsiors, and row-boat excursions and tennis parties given by the Excelsiors for the Sisterhood, in graceful reciprocity.

The great gala day, though, was when, by special invitation, the girls were escorted to the old white barn, up the ladder, across the beam, and into the sacred precincts of the assembly room.

"They'll turn everything topsy turvy," Dave had prophesied gloomily to Art. and Mollie, and the latter had retorted: That's right. Croak, old crow. As if us girls didn't know more of law and order in a minute than you boys do in a year. You ought to see our assembly room," with a mysterious nod.

Dave laughed teasingly.

"Guess it's in your mind's eye, sis. The only assembly room I ever saw you have was either Nell Edsall's veranda or library, or else up in your den."

"Just so," said Mollie, smiling in conscious superiority. "Just so, sir. And of course you never heard of Miss Hardy's residence on the bluff?"

"Say, Dave," interrupted Art., "did you ever notice that Miss Hardy dwells in a 'residence'? We common folks live in plain houses. Mollie, you are no good since you played second fiddle to her ladyship."

"I am, too," cried Mollie, "Virgine is not a bit like you boys think she is. She's just as nice and kind and lovable as she can be. Isn't she, Dave?"

Dave ignored the appeal in her eyes as she turned eagerly to him.

"No, she isn't," he answered shortly. "At least, I don't think so. I think she's stuck up, and I'll tell you why. You know Tony Ferrall?"

"That new boy you have in the club? The one with the curly hair?"

"Yes, that's Tony," Dave rejoined, stopping his whistling to plead his case. "Well, his folks have just moved into the little old, green house down by the long railroad bridge, and they're poor. Tony told us his father was a brakeman, and got killed last spring in a smash-up, and now all they have to live on is what Tony earns and the little that the railroad company allows Mrs. Ferrall."

"How many are there in the family? I didn't know that anyone lived down there," Mollie was deeply interested, and had forgotten all about Virginia or the assembly rooms, or anything else.

"Of course you didn't," retorted Dave. "You girls are so deep into your socials and parties and meetings, that you never bother your heads over hunting up the work you say you organized for, the way us boys do."

"What work?" demanded Mollie.

"Oh, looking out for people to help. I don't mean with charity, but helping them to get acquainted, and go to church, and be square, and true blue, and all that. Now, we boys liked Tony, and took him right into the club without stopping to ask whether he lived in a house or a residence, or was rich or poor; but he made some money cutting grass on the lawn up at the Hardy's, and exercising your Virgine's old ponies, and do you think that her ladyship would speak to him on the street now? No, sirree, not since she found out he's poor. She cuts him."

"Oh, I don't believe Virgine knows every boy who happens to do a little odd work like that around the house," began Mollie; "you know she has been brought up different than us, and if the boy does a servant's work, you know—"

"Mollie, upon my word, if you talk like that I'll disown you, sure as shooting," and Dave stood up with a look in his quiet gray eyes that was seldom seen there. "Tony's just as good as I am, and I call such ways plain silly stuck-uppishness. If we had a boy in the Excelsiors who was mean enough to snub a fellow because he was poor, we'd throw him out."

Arthur nodded his head in vigorous approval of these sentiments, and Mollie was silent, but thinking hard.

"Well," she asked at length, "What do you want me to do?"

"Do as you please, and as her ladyship pleases," returned Dave. "Only I'll tell you this much, there's Tony, and he's got the nicest little mother and sister you'd want to see, and I guess you Sisterhood girls could do a pile of good work down there if you wanted to."

There was a long pause, and then Mollie said with her old heartiness:

"Of course we want to. I'll go down and see them this very day."

"No charity, mind, sis," warned Dave. "They've got all that—the food and living part; but just be nice to them, and give the little girl a good time with the rest of you girls."

"How old is she?"

"Oh, I don't know. I only saw her one day washing dishes in the kitchen; but she's little, most as little as Alice Jardine, and her name's Madge."

"Madge, Madge Ferrall," Mollie repeated the name over and over to herself as she strolled away from the boys over to where her wheel stood against the side of the house. The name was pretty, anyway, she concluded; and if the girl was nice, why, there was really no reason why she should not join the Sisterhood. As she wheeled down the street in the direction leading to the railroad bridge, she mentally ran over the names of the girls who had been induced to wear the S. D. S. badge since the

Nourishment or Food

Are you sure that your baby is getting enough nourishment? We do not say food because a baby may get lots of food but get little nourishment. Mellin's Food is nourishment. It contains the elements of nutrition that a baby needs in order to satisfy his hunger and make him grow and attain that complete development, which is so much desired by every mother. Mellin's Food babies are healthy babies, and well developed babies.

Mellin's Food

Our little boy, George Frederick Wilham Critchley, was such a frail and sickly baby that we despaired of his life. Nothing seemed to nourish him and he did not grow or thrive at all. We commenced feeding him with Mellin's Food and his improvement was immediate and continuous. At 6 months he weighed 24 pounds and is as healthy a child now as need be. Mrs. Wilham Critchley, Pittsford, N.Y.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

BUFFALO AND RETURN One Fare for the Round Trip

From Chicago via Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y. Tickets on sale June 11th, 12th, and 13th. Return limit may be extended to July 2nd. A portion of the trip optional boat or rail. Stop at Chautauqua if desired. Full particulars on application to F. M. BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago; A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland.

THE ROVER

An Illustrated Magazine for Boys.

Monthly. $1.00 a year. Specimen copy for the asking. E. & M. HUTCHINSON, Publishers, 107 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Gail Borden BEST INFANT FOOD. Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

THE MODERN

STOVE  POLISH

ENAMELINE

PASTE, CAKE OR LIQUID.

A Brilliant Polish without Labor Dust or Odor.

J. L. PRESCOTT & CO., NEW YORK.

club was started. There were ten members all told, now, and every one of the girls belonged to the best families in Ottawa, those who had lived there year in, year out, farther back than the girls themselves could remember. There had been no question at all as to their admission into the Sisterhood. Everyone of the new members lent the additional strength of her name and services to the club, and there had never been a single black ball cast in any election. Mollie could not believe that because a girl was poor she would be snubbed. Of course, she thought, she could understand how Virginia would not speak to the boy who did odd jobs around her home. Dave had made altogether too much fuss over that, she decided complacently, but it would be very different with his sister, especially if she were nice.

There was a small river which emptied into the bay at the far end of the town; the land on either shore sloped steeply, and, as it neared the river brink, was low and marshy. From either side a long railroad bridge stretched across the marsh and water.

The little old green house was built down in the shadow of the embankment, on the town side; a queer, plain house, with nothing at all to recommend it to a lover of beauty. There was no garden. The grass grew tall and tangled with wildpinks and weeds, and a few straggly sun flowers nodded lazily over the top rail of a broken-down fence on the marsh side.

There was not a sign of life about the place when Mollie dismounted and walked down the path which led to the front door. Faded curtains, spotlessly clean, screened the front windows, and not even a cat or a chicken greeted her arrival.

"I guess I'll have to go to the back door," she thought, remembering where Dave said he had seen Madge, when suddenly a clear, young voice called from the pear tree she was passing under:

"We don't want anything to-day, thanks; no sewing machines, wax-works, magazines, or patent grass cutters. We like our grass that way."

Mollie stood still, and looked up at the speaker, not knowing whether to laugh or be angry.

(To be continued.)

Cradle Song

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Thy father watches the sheep,
Thy mother is shaking the dream land tree,
And down falls a little dream on thee.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!

The large stars are the sheep,
The little stars are the lambs, I guess,
The fair moon is the shepherdess.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Our Saviour loves His sheep;
He is the Lamb of God on high,
Who for our sakes came down to die.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!

I'll buy for thee a sheep,
With a golden bell so fine to see,
And it shall frisk and play with thee.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!

And cry not like a sheep;
Else will the sheep-dog bark and whine,
And bite this naughty child of mine.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!

Away and tend the sheep;
Away then, black dog fierce and wild,
And do not wake my little child,

Sleep, baby, sleep!

—Anonym us

LIGHTENS LABOR

Cobwebs about a house are usually the sign that the housewife has more than she can do, the way she goes about it; that all her time and strength are utilized in doing heavy work; that she uses soap in her cleaning. If she would only use heavy work would be so lightened that the little things needn't be neglected. Gold Dust gives a woman time to rest, time to visit, time to read, and time to sew. It is much better and cheaper than soap for all cleaning. For greatest economy buy our large package.

GOLD DUST

Washing Powder

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

CHICAGO

ST. LOUIS

NEW YORK

BOSTON

"Go Because it Rains"

"I SUPPOSE you won't go to Sunday school to-day, Lucy?" said a mother one stormy Sabbath, settling herself to read.

"Please let me go to-day, mamma; I want to go because it rains."

"Why, Lucy, that is my excuse for staying at home. How can you make it a reason for going?"

"Our teacher always goes, mamma, in all weather, although she lives so far away. She told the class that one Sunday, when she went through the storm, and did not find even one scholar, she was so discouraged that she could not help crying. She asked us, too, if we did not go to our day schools in the rainy weather: and she said, while we must obey our parents, if we ask them pleasantly to let us go, they would likely be willing. Mamma, will you please let me go to-day?"

"Well, I am willing, my dear, if you wear your suit. Go and get ready."

But the mother no longer took any interest in her book, but said to her husband (a lawyer), who came in from the library, "Lucy is going to the Sabbath school to-day because it rains, so that her teacher may be encouraged by the presence of at least one pupil. Suppose we go to the chapel for the same reason, if not for a better."

"Agreed. I could never plead a cause to an empty court room, and the minister must find it hard work to preach to empty pews." Christian Cynosure.

"FANNIE, I have told you again and again not to speak when older persons were talking, but wait until they stop."

"I've tried that already, mamma. They never stop."—Woonsocket Reporter.

A Unique Ring

DURING Queen Elizabeth's reign she was presented with a very unique ring. It was a plain gold circle, with a silver penny used for an ornament in the place of a precious stone. The wonderful part about this penny was inscribed upon its surface in writing, probably unparalleled in its minuteness, for there in an exquisite miniature hand, were executed the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, the Decalogue, with two short prayers in Latin, a name, motto, day of the month, year of the Lord, and reign of the Queen (Elizabeth). It was covered with a fine crystal set in borders of gold. The writing was so plain as to be easily legible to the naked eye. Peter Bales, one of the first to invent and introduce methods of short-hand writing in the year 1575, executed the work on this penny, and presented it to the Queen at Hampton Court.—Harper's Young People.

FROM GEORGIA: "With sincere regards for your nobly honest and able journal."

Pale, Thin, Delicate

people get vigorous and increase in weight from the use of

Somatose

A Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative.

It is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, prepared for the nutriment and stimulus of weak systems. May be taken in milk, water, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists' in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City, selling agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

At druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

Perfection Itself

is the faultless and gentle laxative called Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient. Its promptness in correcting disorders of digestion and in removing waste matters from the system make it popular the World Over.

TARRANT & CO.,
Chemists, New York.

Finance and Commerce

As time moves on it becomes more and more apparent that the wave of speculative interest set in motion by the revival of fundamental business activities a year or so ago, reached its maximum in the winter months, and has been gradually subsiding ever since. In the matter of promotions, the change is marked. In December and January last, nearly everything offered upon the market was easily and quickly absorbed. Some of it was good, much of it was bad, but all was swallowed by a voracious desire to buy something. Now promotions are extremely slow, if not entirely at a standstill, and it would have to be an extremely attractive investment that would tempt the investor's appetite. And this, too, notwithstanding the money is in poor demand, and interest rates are low. Wall street also clearly displays the decline in speculative interest, and quotations for the list, as a whole, are still hanging around close to the low point reached by the temporary panic caused by Mr. Flower's death. Rallies have occurred, but they are, on the whole, feeble, and caused largely by the over selling by too important bears, and the consequent covering of shorts. No doubt much of this modification of speculative confidence in future values is due to the serious change that has taken place in the crop outlook. In January last, when the manifestation of general confidence in future prices reached its height, the promise of the growing winter wheat crop was superb. The largest acreage ever seeded was in the ground with condition nearly 100, or almost perfect, indicating a crop of at least 400 million bushels. To day, the conditions do not warrant a final yield of to exceed half that amount; or, putting it another way, from the promise of 150 millions surplus over bread and seed in January, in June, the promise is for 50 millions less than bread and seed, which must be made good out of reserves, or out of a surplus from the spring wheat crop. The condition of the spring wheat crop does not warrant the expectation of a result exceeding 225 million bushels, or a total but slightly, if any, in excess of bread and seed.

It has been thought the acreage of corn would be so large as to compensate for the loss in wheat. No doubt the acreage will be in excess of last year, but much depends upon four months of weather yet to come. The planting is, on the whole, late, and much of it has been under unfavorable conditions. Considerable complaint also comes from Illinois and Iowa about the poor seed making replanting necessary over quite important areas. It cannot be hoped, either, that surplus corn will make good deficient wheat in the export column, and we may be obliged to export gold to make good the deficiency.

In business generally, reports are satisfactory as to the volume of trade, the steadiness of prices, etc.

In iron, the demand continues to press on the supply, and full rates are paid on contracts extending well through the balance of the year. Sales for export of manufactured goods, into which iron largely enters, continue; the percent age of exports of that class continues to show encouraging increases, compared with former years. Exports of agricultural products are disappointing, however, as compared with last year, and the balance of trade with the world, together with stiff rates for exchange, still makes shipment of gold abroad seem quite likely in the near future.

South African Trade

An evidence of the gains which American manufacturers and producers are making in their export trade, in direct competition with those of European nations, is found in some recent figures on the trade of South Africa. The British and South African Gazette, which has just reached the Bureau of Statistics, publishes a series of articles on the imports into South Africa, in which it shows that American imports are making a greater proportion of gains than those from Great Britain. The exports of British manufactures from the United Kingdom to South Africa in February, 1899, are shown to be $32,500 in excess of those for the same month of 1898, while our own export figures to British Africa show an increase in February of the present year of $362,941 over February of last year, the general increase in our exports to Africa during the eight months ending with February, being about one million dollars, as compared with the corresponding months of the preceding year. The report of the Export Gazette further shows that the exports of British manufactures from the United Kingdom to South Africa in February, 1899, are 93,856 pounds sterling, or $455,200 below the amount for 1897, while the figures of our own export trade for February, 1899, show exports to Africa of about $350,000 in excess of those for February, 1897.

No feature of the remarkable development of our foreign commerce has been more striking than the increase of late in exports to Africa, which are now nearly six times as much annually as a decade ago, and nearly three times what they were in 1895. In 1889, the total exports from the United States to Africa were $3,496,505; in 1898 they were $17,515,730, and in 1899 they are, up to the present time, practically a million dollars in excess of last year's figures.

The variety and quantity of American goods demanded in Africa are interesting, and, in many cases, surprising. Of bicycles, the exports to Africa in the eight months ending with February, were $120,983, against $75,160 in the corresponding months of 1897. Exports of builders' hardware, which in the eight months of 1898 were $137,704 in value, were in the corresponding months of 1899, $169,221.

Pure Bath Soap

Wool Soap for the bath and toilet — you can't be wrong if you get a white pure soap — color is put into toilet soap to hide impurity — white is the symbol of purity and Wool Soap is white.

If your dealer doesn't sell it, send us his name and address, and we will send you a cake free.

Swift and Company, Makers, Chicago

HIRES ROOT BEER

IS a

Temperance Drink

It is prepared for temperance people, a multitude of whom believe it helpful to the great cause of temperance. Any one who states that HIRES Rootbeer is not a temperance drink, either willfully misrepresents the facts or has not investigated the subject in an impartial manner. HIRES Rootbeer is a temperance drink. The leading chemists say so without qualification, and stand ready to prove their assertion. If there are any fair-minded persons anywhere who have a scrupulous doubt as to the honesty of this claim, and will address THE CHARLES E. HIRES COMPANY, Philadelphia, they will be given every opportunity to satisfy themselves as to the ingredients, the nature, the character of HIRES Rootbeer.

ILLINOIS  CENTRAL

Runs Two Solid Vestibuled Trains Daily

DIAMOND SPECIAL
NIGHT TRAIN
DAYLIGHT SPECIAL
DAY TRAIN

between Chicago and St. Louis.

Free Reclining Chair Cars, Parlor-Café Cars, Pullman Buffet Open and Compartment Sleeping Cars. See that your ticket between Chicago and St. Louis Reads via Illinois Central Railroad. It can be obtained of your local ticket agent.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., Ill. Cent. R. R., Chicago, Ill.

... Bind Your Copies of.

THE LIVING CHURCH

By special arrangement we are able to supply the Emerson Binder, cloth, neatly lettered in gold, to our subscribers at the moderate cost of 75 cents. Address all orders to

The Living Church,

The Pioneer Limited.

 To St. Paul and Minneapolis

The Only Perfect Train

Ticket Office 95 Adams St.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.

F. G. LOGAN

MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.

4 B'd Trade, Chicago.

Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

KINGSFORD'S
CORN STARCH
 FOR THE TABLE.
 The Original, Oldest and Best.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
STEEL PENS.
 GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889,
 AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.
THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY.
 We are the largest
 Makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELLHART HARNESS & CAR- RIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

RUBBER STAMPS.....
AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.
 Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils,
 Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.
 WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.
Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

"WE AND OUR TOUR ECONOMIC"
 Is the title of a very charming and entertainingly written story which has just been issued in book form by the Passenger Department of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y.
 The intending summer tourist will find it not only interesting but instructive. It will be sent free to any address, on application to F. M.
 BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago. A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE
 demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

ILLUSTRATED BOOKLET FREE
 Those contemplating a trip to Annual Meeting
 National Educational Association to be held at Los Angeles, Cal., July 11 to 14, 1899, or others who desire to take advantage of the low rate, should not fail to procure a copy of this interesting booklet, issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y, giving full information as to routes, time of trains, rates, and other valuable and necessary information. Sent free upon receipt of 2 cents postage by W. B. KNISKERN, 22
 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Best Line
 to Denver
Burlington
Route

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number
 One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

Hints to Housekeepers

TO REMOVE GREASE SPOTS FROM SILK.—Mix powdered French chalk with lavender water to the thickness of mustard. Put it on the stain and rub it gently with the finger or palm of the hand. Put a sheet of clean blotting paper and brown paper over it, and smooth it with a warm iron. When dry, the chalk must be removed, and the silk gently dusted with a white handkerchief. If a faint mark still remains, a second application of French chalk with laven-der water will remove it. If wax has fallen thickly on the silk, it will be better to remove it first very carefully with a penknife.

CLEANING BLACK SILK AND SATIN.—Owners of black silks expect to get a great deal of wear out of them, on account of all brands of this material cleaning so nicely. Satin cannot be sponged nor pressed like silk, but much of the shiny look may be removed and a refinish given by dipping each piece in a bowl of naphtha until perfectly saturated, and then hanging in the air to dry. An old method of cleaning black silk that has many followers, is to boil an old black glove in a pint of water in a new tin pan until the water is reduced one-half. Strain, and add a teaspoonful of ammonia and a wine glassful of clean hot water. Sponge the right side of the silk with this, and when nearly dry press with a moderately warm iron on the wrong side. Snip selvedge edges here and there, so they will not draw when wet. When black silk is simply very dusty and grayish in appearance, sponge it with lukewarm water in which borax has been dissolved, a tablespoonful to a pint of water. A really greasy-looking and soiled silk requires more vigorous treatment.
 For such, use two ounces of soapbark steeped for three hours in a quart of hot water. Strain, and sponge both sides of the silk with this liquid, wiping the suds formed on the silk with a fresh piece after sponging. Shake and hang up to dry, but do not iron. When it is necessary to iron silk, it is well to place a piece of old thin muslin or sleazy crinoline between the iron and the material. If a silk can be turned always sponge what will be the outer side. If the silk has become limp, it may have its stiffness restored by sponging it with a liquid composed of a pint of hot water in which has been dissolved a generous quarter of an ounce of powdered gum tragacanth; strain when the gum is dissolved, and use while it is warm.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The most approved way of washing woollen goods, whether underwear or dress goods, is to scrub the spots that need particular attention with the little brush that now comes purposely for such work. The brush costs only twenty-five cents, and will, with proper care in regard to water, soap, etc., prevent that shrinkage and matting of flannels that follows rubbing on a board or between the hands. Wherever it is possible flannels should be washed separately, and not made a part of the general wash. Before hanging on the line they should be pulled and shaken into shape as much as possible.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
 while it is invigorating to the system quiets the nerves and produces refreshing sleep.
 Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN GAME IS MANY TIMES TOO "GAMY" TO GIVE THE NICEST

 TASTE TO ALL GAME USE LEA
&
PERRINS'
SAUCE
 The Original & Genuine Worcestershire.
 IF YOUR GROCER ATTEMPTS TO SUBSTITUTE AN IMITATION
 SEND IT BACK NONE SO GOOD.
 John Duncan's Sons, Agents.
 NEW YORK.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL
 Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.
 Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS, Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS
CHILDS Floral Park New York.

A Fine Cuisine,
BATHS, MEDICAL TREATMENT, and REST
 at The Pennoyer, Kenosha, Wis. Booklet free.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD
Chicago & Alton R.R.
PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

CHICAGO AND KANSAS CITY.
CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS.
CHICAGO AND PEORIA.
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY.

Through Pullman service between Chicago and

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., DENVER, Colo.,
TEXAS, FLORIDA, UTAH,
CALIFORNIA AND OREGON.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

JAMES CHARLTON,
 General Passenger and Ticket Agent,
 CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
 Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous
 Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.
 The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"THE POT CALLED THE KETTLE BLACK,"
 Because the housewife didn't use

SAPOLIO

The Living Church

A Weekly Record of the News, the Work, and the Thought of the Church

The Paradise of God

BY G. W.

We know but little of the Country fair
That lies beyond the grave and gate of Death;
Love's tender mysteries are hidden there,
Unbreathed by mortal breath.

But for the blessed ones who dwell therein,
The Love that passeth knowledge hath sufficed
To fold them from all sorrow and all sin,
Within the Arms of Christ.

And in the strength of Prayer and Eucharist,
Our longing souls would bridge the gulf between;
And soar on wings of faith above the mist
That shrouds the World unseen.

No shining sentinel, with flaming sword,
Waits to withhold us by Divine command;
Only the saving symbol of the Lord
Defends that lovely Land.

But never till this earthly life be past,
And earthly shadows vanish from our eyes,
May angel hands uplift for us at last
The Veil of Paradise.

The Paradise of God; so strangely near,
And still so strangely far beyond our ken;
Unknown, and yet unutterably dear:
To weary hearts of men:

Where shall be no more death, nor bitter strife,
Nor agony of parting and of pain;
Where life but broadens into grander life,
Free from defiling stain;

Where all that once was maimed shall be made whole;
And all that once was lost shall be restored;
Until the perfected and pardoned soul
Be ready for its Lord.

O wondrous World whose sacramental fire
Shall cleanse the penitent from mortal taint,
And try as gold is tried, the heart desire
Of each adoring saint.

Home of our holy dead, where spirits bright
Behold with clearer gaze the Father's Face,
Land of undying love, unfading light,
Unending growth in grace;

Truly we know but little of thy lore,
Or how thy purifying, painless power
Was won for thee till time shall be no more,
At Jesu's dying hour.

Only we know that in thy Garden blest
The souls whom God hath planted ripen still,
Where rest is work, and work but perfect rest
In an All-perfect Will.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;

After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Dammell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lycett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Subscribers should name not only the new address, but also the old.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

FOREIGN.—To subscribers in the Postal Union, the price is 12 shillings; to the clergy, 10 shillings.

EXCHANGE.—When payment is made by check, except on the banks in the great cities, ten cents must be added for exchange.

RECEIPTS.—No written receipt is needed; if desired, stamp must be sent. Change of label should indicate within two weeks the receipt of remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—A subscriber desiring to discontinue the paper, must remit the amount due for the time it has been sent.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marriages, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

Runs Two Solid Vestibuled Trains Daily

DIAMOND SPECIAL

NIGHT TRAIN

DAYLIGHT SPECIAL

DAY TRAIN

between Chicago and St. Louis.

Free Reclining Chair Cars, Parlor-Café Cars, Pullman Buffet Open and Compartment Sleeping Cars. See that your ticket between Chicago and St. Louis Reads via Illinois Central Railroad. It can be obtained of your local ticket agent.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., Ill. Cent. R. R., Chicago, Ill.

A COMBINATION SET
OF THE

Prayer Book and Hymnal

Valued at $5, handsomely bound, and printed on India Paper, will be sent

FREE

to anyone sending Two New Paid-in-advance subscriptions to The Living Church, plus 20 cents for carriage,

FURNITURE Of All Kinds FOR CHURCH AND CHANCEL.

Write for our new catalogue.

Special designs and prices made on application.

Correspondence solicited.

PHOENIX FURNITURE CO.,
Eau Claire, Wis.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.

Church Furnishers and Decorators.

70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.

R. G. GEISSLER, Marble and Metal Work

56 West 8th St. (near 6th ave.) New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS

27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

Cox Sons & Vining.

70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS.

Embroideries, and Fabrics.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1887.
THE E. W. YANDEZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES AND PEALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826. BELL CO.
HAVE FURNISHED 25,000 BELL CO.
CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER - PUREST, BEST,
MENEELY & CO. GENUINE
WEST-TROY, N.Y. BELL-METAL
CHIMES, ETC. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,

CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.

Troy, N. Y., and New York City.

Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

CHURCH BELLS CHIMES

Best quality on earth. Get our price.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

A "HOMELIKE" ATMOSPHERE

prevails at The Pennoyer Sanitarium, Kenosha, Wis. Send for booklet.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of recent important work.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St.
New York

COMMUNICANTS' MANUALS.

Carter's Treasury of Devotion, - $.90
The same (Red Line Edition), - 1.25
Sendamore's Steps to Altar, - .40
Youngs' Communicants' Manual, .30
Sadler's Communicants' Manual, .40
Stubb's Private Prayer Book, - .50
Before the Altar, - .50

Sent by mail on receipt of price. A list giving full description free on application.

E. & J. B. YOUNG & CO., Cooper Union, New York.

Trinity Church Embroidery School

CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes, maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.

MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT,
Trinity Parish House, 101 26th st.

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN President 3-5-7 W 29th Street
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice-President NEW YORK

THIS CHURCH is now being built of STONE, and will cost, completely FURNISHED, less than $5,000.
WE CAN DO AS WELL FOR YOU. SHALL WE?
JOHN BUTCLIFFE,
CHURCH ARCHITECT,
218 La Salle St.
CHICAGO.

The Only
Perfect Train

Ticket Office 95 Adams St.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

IT IS ANNOUNCED THAT THE TROUBLE between Austria and Hungary over the Ausgleich, or economic commercial compact question, has been amicably compromised. The settlement of the controversy marks the ending of a dispute which has threatened the disruption of the Austro-Hungarian Empire since December, 1896. The Ausgleich is the compact between Austria and Hungary which regulates schedules and the proportion of the expenses of the empire which each kingdom must pay into the general treasury, as well as the control of the Austro-Hungarian bank. This compact is renewable every ten years. In December, 1896, the Hungarian government denounced the Ausgleich in hopes of securing a more favorable division of the expenses. Up to that time Austria paid 70 per cent. of the total expenses of the empire, and Hungary 30 per cent. After several months spent in negotiations, it was found impossible to reach an agreement, and on May 4, 1897, the deputations separated. Oct. 21, 1897, the Ausgleich was provisionally prolonged for one year, with the agreement that Austria was to pay 68.6 per cent. of the general expenses, and Hungary 31.4 per cent. During the Parliamentary session of 1897 all efforts to reach an agreement were fruitless. April 20, 1898, a bill was submitted to the Reichsrath for a new Ausgleich, but it was so bitterly attacked in Austria it was rejected. Aug. 15, 1898, Emperor Francis Joseph requested the Austrian and Hungarian Premiers to personally negotiate a new Ausgleich. The two Premiers devised a new plan by which Hungary should regulate its own customs and economic relations with Austria independently and in accordance with its own laws, while Austria should exercise the same right. This plan met with the hostility of both kingdoms. Since that time the negotiations have been in progress almost continuously.

—X—

THE TRUSTEES OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY have decided to establish a collegiate course in commerce, with the co-operation of the New York Chamber of Commerce, which guarantees from $10,000 to $20,000 for the first five years. The course is to be opened to graduates of high schools, and leads to a certificate, but not to a degree. The action of the trustees is attracting considerable favorable comment. While there are many schools and colleges which aim to provide a commercial education, it will be the aim of Columbia to combine a liberal general education with special training in commercial geography, commercial law and accounting, modern languages and economics.

—X—

THE CENTER OF BRITISH DIPLOMATIC effort, at this writing, is in South Africa. London correspondents write glibly of threatened war, but such a solution of the difficulty is extremely unlikely. The British claim to suzerainty over the Transvaal is irritating to the Boer republic, and disinclination on the part of the Boers to recognize this claim is one of the underlying sources of the present difficulty. The Boers had removed twice to get outside the range of British influence before founding their present government, and in 1852 their independence in the Transvaal was recognized. In 1877, however, this territory was formally annexed by the British, at the time when the Imperialists were in control of the government. In 1880, the Boers rebelled against British authority, and defeated the British army in the battle of Majuba Hill. Before another army could be sent to crush the Boers, Gladstone came into power in England, and refused to prosecute the war, saying the Boers had been wronged. The treaty of 1881 guaranteed the Boers independence in all matters of local concern, but established British suzerainty. This was not satisfactory to the Boers, and in 1884 a new convention was made, in which the power of the South African republic was restricted by Britain in only one respect. It cannot make treaties with native tribes outside the Transvaal or with foreign governments, the Orange Free State excepted, without the consent of the British government. Under this convention of 1884, Chamberlain still claims British suzerainty, while the Boer government maintains that it is independent.

—X—

MRS. JANE STANFORD, WIDOW OF THE late Senator Stanford, has decided that the number of women students at Stanford University shall hereafter be limited to 500. The announcement was made on the occasion of a recent gift to the university of $10,000,000. In the academic year just closed, there were enrolled at the university, 490 women students out of a total of 1,100. The announcement created considerable surprise. In explanation, Mrs. Stanford says she is not an opponent of co education, on the contrary, believes the presence of women at Stanford, or any other university, is a great moral good. But the increasing percentage of women students is believed by the patroness of Stanford to be a menace to the aims of the institution, and to augur a change in its character. Restricting the number of women students to 500, it is hoped will greatly increase the number of male students in the next few years. At its inception, Stanford University was established for men, and the widow of its founder believes her action would accord with the wishes of the late Senator Stanford.

—X—

GENERAL GOMEZ HAS ISSUED HIS farewell address to the Cuban army, and has retired, temporarily at least, from the Cuban arena. The address affords the opportunity to convey sentiments relative to the past and future of the island, and also to give good sensible advice to his compatriots. In the interests of harmony, the General says: "We must make useless by our behavior the presence of a strange power in the island, and must assist the Americans to complete the honorable mission they have been compelled to assume by force of circumstances. I, as one of the first Cubans, although one of our last old soldiers, and not far from the grave, without passions or ambitions, call on you with the sincerity of a father, and urge a cessation of the superfluous discussions, and the creation of parties of all kinds, which disturb the country and tend to cause anarchy." It now rests entirely with the Cubans to prove their capability of forming a stable and successful government. The policy being pursued by the administration is, so far as possible, to bring the affairs of the island into a condition where natives shall have a voice and gradually assume full control.

—X—

A NEW PHASE HAS BEEN GIVEN THE food question in Germany by the presentation of an earnest protest against the meat inspection bill. The protest is from the central organization of the Berlin trade, industrial, and mercantile interests, and is in the form of a memorial to the ministry. This organization expresses its satisfaction that the government is preparing to protect the health of consumers by providing for inspection, both of domestic and imported meats. The Reichstag commission's amendments, however, are branded as designing, under cover of hygienic and veterinary regulation, to exclude foreign competition, and thus enable domestic producers to raise prices indefinitely. Germany, declares the memorial, cannot raise enough meat to feed the industrial population, and, instead of curtailing consumption 50 per cent., legislation is needed to increase it. It is further asserted the agrarians have never succeeded in bringing forward a single instance in which the use of imported meats had proven injurious. Purely selfish considerations will suffice to prevent the sending of anything but first-class goods to Germany, as the failure to exercise painstaking care would cost the importers the German market.

—X—

IT IS THE PURPOSE OF THE GOVERNMENT to make the residence of the naval officers now on their way to Guam, to administer the affairs of the new colony, as pleasant as practicable, and to allow every reasonable demand that the governor and his staff may make. Service at Guam is not desirable, and the officers sent there are expected to remain three years. The Yosemite is now on the way there with a general cargo for establishing the colony, including everything needed, from furniture for residences, to windmills and farming implements. The governor, Captain R. P. Leary, was in command of the San Francisco, arriving home from the Asiatic station just prior to the Spanish-American difficulty. He was at one time in command at Samoa, rendering valuable services which the government failed to recognize. But the Legislature of Maryland, his native State, was not remiss in this respect, as the possession by Capt. Leary of a handsome gold watch will testify.

—X—

DISPATCHES FROM PEKING BRING THE statement that the French Minister demands as compensation for the recent imprisonment of a French missionary, the sum of 1,200,000 taels (about $780,000), together with certain mining rights in Sze-Chuan Province. The demands are considered exorbitant by the Chinese government. The Chinese assert the rebellion was not due to any lack of energy on the part of the government, since during its progress they constantly consulted the French Minister as to the best means of obtaining the missionary's release, and on several occasions acted on his suggestions. The missionary referred to in the Peking advices was Father Fleury, a French Catholic, who was captured during the rebellion raised by Yu Man Tsu, in the autumn of 1898.

—X—

ANOTHER NICARAGUAN COMMISSION, numbering representatives of the army and navy, and civil engineers of prominence, has been appointed to examine the Nicaragua and Panama routes, and report estimates and other information that will enable Congress to act intelligently on the canal project. Up to the present time, every canal commission, beginning with the first, which was appointed by President Grant, has reported in favor of the Nicaragua route, and there is no reason to believe the present commission will depart from established precedents. If the canal is to be constructed, and certainly the interests of the country demand it, this commission should be the last, and opposition tactics of delay squared.

The News of the Church

The Church Abroad

English Church Congress

The next Church Congress will be held in London, from Oct. 9th to 14th, under the presidency of the Bishop of London. On the second day, simultaneously, congress services will be held in St. Paul's cathedral, the Archbishop of Canterbury preaching; at Westminster Abbey, the Most. Rev. William Alexander, Archbishop of Armagh, preaching; and at St. Mary Abbots, the Hon. and Rt. Rev. E. Carr Glyn, Bishop of Peterborough, preaching. On the fifth day, at night, a thanksgiving service will be held at St. Paul's cathedral, at which the Bishop of London is to preach. The list of speakers at the various meetings embraces the most distinguished clergymen and laymen in the country, of all shades of opinion, from the Lord Bishop of Rochester to Prebendary Webb-Peploe, and from Viscount Halifax to Sir John H. Kennaway. Among the subjects to be treated are: "The place and the work of the laity," "Communal morality," "Speculation and gambling," "The principles of ritual, and the limits of possible variation of the type of Anglican service," "Conciliation in labor disputes," "Old age pensions," and "Church music with illustrations."

Daughters of the King

That the Order is indeed spreading "throughout the world," is evident from reports recently received from London, England, which state that the Archbishop of Canterbury is patron of the Order, and the Bishop of London, visitor; also that the Order has been enrolled in the Church Guilds' Union, and, by permission of the Bishop of London, is represented on the Women's Diocesan Association. Several bishops and many well-known clergy have become patrons. Four chapters have been formed and charters granted, and several are in course of formation. The Rev. E. D. Boothman, at the last annual meeting, held in the early spring, said that it gave him very great pleasure to testify to the good work done by the Daughters in his parish amongst the Staffordshire potteries, with a population of 15,000. The Rev. A. Chandler also testified to the good work done by the Order in his East-end parish, and alluded to the personal influence which each member should exercise upon others. The Rev. J. Cartmel-Robinson said he hoped to establish the Order in his own parish, and felt that it would be effectual in doing excellent work, not only in poor parishes, but in the wealthy districts in the West-end, where so much luxury abounded.

Canada

Diocese of Nova Scotia

A beautiful memorial window was unveiled in St. Luke's cathedral, Halifax, on Ascension Day, by the Dean of Nova Scotia. The window is in memory of the Rev. William Bullock, D.D., first rector of St. Luke's, and first dean of the diocese, and was brought from Munich. The rector of the church at Springhill Mines is resigning his charge, in order to devote himself entirely to the Cottage Hospital. There is a large new church in this mining town, with a good parish house well equipped for active parish work. Bishop Courtney intended remaining in the south of France till the end of May. He preached to large congregations both in Ottawa and New York before his departure. He is to visit Prince Edward Island in June, when the church at Eglerslie is to be consecrated.

Diocese of New Westminster

That work is being actively carried on in this diocese is shown by the number of new churches, some just finished, others nearing completion. The money for the little church at Trout Lake was mostly obtained in England. Bishop Perrin took a great deal of interest in the C. M. S. Centenary, which was very generally observed throughout the diocese.

Commencements

St. Mary's, Knoxville, Illinois

Closed its 81st year last week, graduating a class of 11 young ladies. Bishop Seymour presided, making an impressive address after conferring the degrees. One student of music was graduated, having passed examination by Mr. Wm. H. Sherwood, visiting director. The clergy attending the Commencement exercises, besides the rector and chaplain, were the Rev. Dr. Gold, of Chicago, and the Rev. Messrs. Moore, Mayo, Nybladh, and Hefter, of the diocese of Quincy. Mr. Sherwood's recital on the evening preceding, was a notable event. The sermon was preached on Sunday evening, for the missionary guild, by the Rev. Dr. Thos. E. Green, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; the baccalaureate sermon in the morning, by the rector. President Finley, of Knox College, delivered the address for the Current Events Club on Saturday evening. At the meeting of trustees, the rector reported the most prosperous year since the opening of the school in 1868. The rooms had all been filled, and several students had occupied the cottage, numbering at one time 114 resident students. A small increase was also reported in the Bishop Whitehouse scholarship, from the Easter offering at the school.

St. Alban's Academy, Knoxville, Illinois

Also reports a prosperous year, with more students in attendance than during any previous year. This school was founded by Dr. Leffingwell in 1890. Since 1894 it has been conducted by Col. A. H. Noyes who has been connected with the work from the beginning. The Rev. Daniel D. Hefter, chaplain, and instructor in languages, has greatly aided in his good influence with the boys, and in his earnest Church work. The academy has been recognized by the Legislature as a military school, and its officers are commissioned by the Governor of Illinois. Dr. Green delivered the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday. Field Day sports were conducted at the fair grounds during the closing days, and some fine exhibitions of military drill were given.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Illinois

The closing exercises of the diocesan school for girls began with the baccalaureate sermon by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Fleetwood, on Sunday, June 4th. The meeting of the board of trustees took place on Monday, and the exhibit made by the rector and treasurer for the past year was most encouraging, the accommodations of the school having been taxed to their utmost capacity. This being also the end of the 10th academic year, the rector gave a resume of the attendance and financial standing of the school, showing it had been unusually successful from the opening day. A pleasing dramatic entertainment was given by some of the pupils on Monday evening. The Commencement exercises were held June 6th, the Rev. Dr. Fleetwood presiding, and in the absence of the Bishop, presenting the diplomas to the class of eight graduates. The Rev. E. M. Stires delivered the address, which was attractive and inspiring. At the ceremony of placing the class-stone in the wall of the main building, the Rev. John Henry Hopkins made a happy address. The class reception in the evening closed an interesting order of exercises.

St. Agatha's School, Springfield, Ill.

The 18th year closed June 1st. The Commencement exercises began with the baccalaureate sermon, preached by the Ven. F. W. Taylor, D.D., on the afternoon of Trinity Sunday, in St. Paul's pro-cathedral. On Monday, May 29th, the school gave an exhibition of the junior and senior physical culture work at Central Music Hall, under the direction of Miss Katharine H. Seabrook, which was greatly appreciated by a large audience. Mrs. Phoebe H. Seabrook, principal of the school, presided at the distribution of the prizes for the school year, assisted by the chaplain of the school, the Ven. Archdeacon Taylor. On Wednesday evening a reception by the senior class was held at the school. Thursday afternoon, June 1st, choral Evensong was sung at the pro-cathedral by Archdeacon Taylor, after which the seven graduates were by him presented to the Bishop of the diocese, who conferred upon each one the diploma of the school. His address to the class appears on another page.

Miss Phelps' School, Columbus, S. Ohio

Commencement began with the baccalaureate sermon at Trinity church, by the Rev. G. P. Torrence. There was an athletic exhibition on Tuesday, and a game of basket ball, followed by an out-of-door performance of "As you like it." The students' recital of instrumental and vocal music ended the day, and showed intelligent understanding, as well as skill in rendition. Wednesday was alumnæ day. The Commencement exercises were held on Thursday, the hall being trimmed with the senior class colors, orange and white. Music and an address by the Rev. John Hewitt preceded the presentation of the diplomas by the Rev. Julius W. Atwood. The graduates numbered 12, four of whom expect to enter Wellesley, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and the State University, to which they will be admitted on the certificate of Miss Phelps' School.

Columbia University

Sunday, June 4th, the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the Rev. Samuel D. McConnell, D.D., D.C.L., in the crypt of the cathedral of St. John the Divine. Class day exercises were held June 5th, and a reception by the dean of the Teachers' College took place the same day. The Phi Beta Kappa initiation occurred June 6th. On June 7th took place the Commencement exercises, which were conducted in the great hall of the gymnasium, and were opened with prayer by the chaplain, the Rev. George R. Van De Water, D.D. The degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon 58 graduates of the college; bachelor of science, on 20; civil engineer, or other kinds of engineer, upon 50; bachelor of laws, upon 22; doctor of medicine, upon 160; master of arts, on examination, upon 77, and doctor of philosophy, upon 33. After music by the American Symphony Orchestra, Dean Van Amringe, acting in place of President Seth Low, absent at the Peace Congress, conferred honorary degrees as follows: Master of arts, on John Aikman Stewart, president of the United States Trust Company; master of sciences, upon Edward L. Trudeau and Rear-Admiral Geo. W. Melville, engineer in chief of the U. S. navy. The degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Carl Schurz, ex-secretary of the Interior, and Brevet Brig.-Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, Governor of the State. The exercises were closed with a benediction by the chaplain. In the afternoon, a meeting of the alumni took place, at which Dean Van Amringe presided. A cable dispatch of congratulation was received from President Seth Low, at "The Hague." A notable feature of the occasion was an address from Brig.-Gen. Roosevelt.

Philadelphia Divinity School

The annual sermon before the associate alumni was preached on Wednesday morning, 7th inst., in the chapel of the school, by the Rev. H. M. G. Huff. The Holy Eucharist was celebrated by the Rev. H. A. F. Hoyt; the Rev. Messrs. Henry Anstice, D.D., and W. W. Newton, D.D., were elected to the Board of Overseers. The executive committee reported that the balance for the renovation of the chapel had been paid. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, the Rev. Horace F. Fuller; vice presidents, the Rev. Harry P. Nichols, the Rt. Rev. Dr. L. W. Burton, Bishop of Lexington, and the Rev. T. A. Daughters; treasurer, the Rev. W. F. Ayers; secretary, the Rev. J. Alan Montgomery. At the joint meeting of overseers and trustees, it was stated that the financial condition of the school was good, there being a balance in the treasury. Supper was served, and a meeting held on the lawn, at which the graduating class were all admitted to the Alumni Association. A number of short addresses were made by the attending clergy and faculty. The annual Commencement was held on the 8th inst., in the church of the Saviour, West Philadelphia. Diplomas were conferred by Bishop Whitaker on the graduating class who had all been previously ordered deacons; viz, the Rev. Messrs. Freeman Daughters, Edward Arthur Dodd, Ph. D., Robert Long, Henry Martyn Medary, Richard Jones Morris, Gashene De Witt Dowling, Oliver J. Whilden. A prize offered by an alumnus for general excellence in homiletics and pastoral care, was awarded to the Rev. Robert Long. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on the Rev. George Cadwalader Foley, of Williamsport, Pa. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell, his theme being "The old and new in religion." After luncheon, provided by the ladies of the parish, a reunion was held in the parish building; Bishop Whitaker presided and made a short address, in which he expressed his satisfaction at the progress and success of the school, where the missionary spirit is stronger and an unusual spirit of earnestness on the part of the joint boards is apparent. Addresses were made by the Rev. Messrs. John Fulton, D. D., W. B. Bodine, D. D., S. C. Hill, J. B. Harding, J. P. Tyler, W. H. Falkner, C. S. Olmsted, D. D., and others.

Cheltenham Academy

The 28th Commencement season began on Sunday evening, 4th inst., when the Rev. Dr. H. Richard Harris preached the anniversary sermon at St. Paul's church, Cheltenham. On Monday, 5th inst., the annual athletic contests took place, while on the day following, declamation contests were held at the gymnasium in the evening. On Wednesday morning the graduating exercises were held, and an address was made by General St. Clair A. Mulholland, of Philadelphia.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

The Bishop visited Belvidere on the 9th, confirming in Trinity church a class of eight, presented by the Rev. C. A. Cummings, preaching to a large congregation, and being present at a well-attended reception afterwards.

On Sunday morning last the appeal of the Rev. Dr. Rushton, in St. Paul's, Kenwood, elicited pledges to the amount of $600 for diocesan missions.

By an inadvertence the name of the Rev. D. F. Smith was omitted from all the published lists of the Mission Board of the diocese.

The Rev. J. T. Magrath preached for the last time on Sunday evening in All Saints', Pullman, being obliged to seek a more congenial climate. He leaves this week, and, after a brief visit to his native city, Detroit, takes up parochial work on July 1st, at Fernandina, Fla. The mission of All Saints will again be attached to that of the Mediator, Morgan Park, in charge of the Rev. Harold Morse.

The Rev. John K. Ochial, as announced in our issue of June 3rd, was ordained to the priesthood by the Bishop of New York, acting for the Bishop of Chicago, on Trinity Sunday, in the crypt of the cathedral at New York. Mr. Ochial was sent to this country by Bishop McKim, of Japan, and studied for four years in the Western Theological Seminary at Chicago. He became a candidate under Bishop McLaren, and was admitted by him to the diaconate in St. Paul's, Washington, during the General Convention. Mr. Ochial spent the past nine months at the General Theological Seminary, where he received the degree of B. D. He sailed for England on the 7th, where he will spend three months in study. On his arrival at Tokyo, he will have charge of the cathedral, and become attached to the corps of instruction of our divinity school there. Mr. Ochial is a very able and painstaking student, of lovely Christian character, and destined to a noble career in his native land.

Fields of Work of Divinity Graduates

The Rev. Mr. Addison, recently ordained, and in charge of St. John's mission on the North side, has won a scholarship at Harvard, and will take a year's post-graduate course in the university next September. The Rev. Mr. Hakes, another of the last graduating class of the Western Theological Seminary, has charge of St. Mary's mission, Park Ridge. A third, the Rev. Mr. Brandt, has been placed at St. Augustine's, Wilmette. The fourth, the Rev. Mr. Delany, has gone to Fond du Lac diocese.

Father Huntington's Appointments

The Rev. Fr. Huntington, who is the guest of the Rev. Mr. Addison, at 148 Dearborn ave., is preaching and holding meetings in the city with especial reference to rescue work. He preached in Grace church on Sunday morning, and in Trinity at Evensong. To a large congregation, consisting mainly of women, he appealed earnestly and forcibly, but with a total avoidance of sensationalism, to follow the footsteps of Him who "came to seek and to save that which was lost." On Monday morning he attended a meeting of the ladies at Grace, and in the evening was one of an invited company at Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's. On Tuesday afternoon 350 ladies were invited to meet and hear him at Mrs. Bryan Lathrop's. His other appointments in Chicago are: 3:30 P. M. Thursday, public meeting in the Auditorium; Friday evening, Emmanuel, La Grange; Saturday, meeting for boys in St. John's, Clybourn ave.; evening, at Mrs. Nixon's; Sunday morning he will preach in St. James', and evening in the Ascension.

Parish House for Church of the Ascension

The fire at the church of the Ascension last Christmas may now be regarded as a blessing in disguise. Not only is the restored church more beautiful than before, but on June 1st a new parish house was opened, complete, at a cost of $6,000, and all paid for. It adjoins the church on the south side, occupies the full width of the lot, and extends back to the west wall of the chapel. The front is of stone, corresponding to that of the church, and of the same style of architecture; both facing on La Salle ave. On the first floor is a rector's study, also a choir and assembly room 17x45 ft., a sacristy, a vestment room, and several lavatories. The second floor has a curate's room in front, in rear of that, a large guild room, a kitchen fitted with gas range and boiler, and an acolytes' room. The basement of the entire property is cemented, and arranged with a view to having a gymnasium at some future day. There has been put in for the whole a steam-heating plant, which was installed at a cost of $1,800. The rector, the Rev. E. A. Larrabee, who completed his 15 years of parochial connection on June 1st, at present ministers unassisted, but hopes and expects to have a curate within a year.

The Diocesan Choir Association

The annual meeting was held in the Church Club rooms last Monday, the Rev. Dr. Little in the chair. Ten clerical and eight lay representatives answered the roll-call. The choir of the church of Our Saviour, on the application of the Rev. J. H. Edwards, was admitted to the association. The Rev. T. A. Snively having been elected president, he was asked by the retiring president to take the chair. The following elections ensued: Precentor, the Rev. Edw. Roland; choirmaster, Mr. James Smedley, of St. James'; organist, with authority to name a deputy if necessary, Mr. Harrison Wild; secretary, Mr. Alf. Thompson; treasurer, Mr. McDougal; librarian, Mr. Thomas, of St. Peter's; standing committee, the above ex officio, with the Rev. Messrs. C. H. Bixby, J. A. Carr, G. W. Knapp, Dr. A. W. Little, and E. M. Stires; Messrs. Robt. Holmes and G. F. Stewart. On motion of Dr. Little, the standing committee was authorized and requested to arrange for one or more choir festivals in the fall.

Dinner for Men of St. Mark's Parish

At the Lexington, on the evening of May 29th; the Rev. Dr. Wilson, rector, presided, and, in a neat speech, explained why such re-unions were of assistance to parish work, tending as they do to break up the isolation which is often felt by the adults of city parishes wherein changes of residence are so frequent. The Rev. Dr. Stone, in a speech on "The Church's outlook," showed how history repeats itself, inasmuch as the Church in all ages has had to struggle with sin, criticism of her divinely appointed methods, worldly indifference to her "old paths," and the tendency to materialism, which is engendered by the discoveries of science, and fostered by attaching disproportionate importance to its rapid advance. After songs, by Mr. W. Cox, of the choir, the chairman introduced the Rev. Dr. Rushton whose assigned theme was "The model parish," and who dwelt upon the importance of the active and united co-operation of the faithful laity in strengthening the hands of a rector.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The class of '99 at Barnard College celebrated its class day in the hall of the college, June 6th. The class numbered 21.

The Ladies' Association of the Peabody Home for Aged Women, held their annual meeting and reception, June 1st. Addresses and reports were made.

It is announced that Bishop Potter has deposed from the priesthood the Rev. David T. Howell, at the latter's request. Mr. Howell recently retired from the staff of the City Mission Society.

The Church Club

At the final May meeting, the Rev. Reese F. Alsop, D. D., made an address on "The Church's work in our new possessions." The Rev. Chas. T. Olmsted, D. D., spoke on the same subject.

Dr. Shields to be Bishop Paddock Lecturer

At the General Theological Seminary, the announcement is made that the Rev. Chas. W. Shields, D. D., LL. D., has been invited to be the next lecturer on the Bishop Paddock Foundation.

Marriage of Rev. G. E. Quaille

June 7th, Bishop Potter united in marriage, at Trinity church, Bayonne, N. J., one of his priests, the Rev. Geo. E. Quaille, rector of St. Mary's church, Livingston, N. Y., to Mrs. Stent, of Bayonne.

Christ Church, Suffern, Enlarged

The parish is pushing forward the enlargement of its edifice, and anticipates having it ready for use in about a month from this date. A new altar and altar rail have been presented. The Rev. Romaine S. Mansfield is rector.

Lay Helpers' Association

In connection with the diocesan branch of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, held its first annual service in the crypt of the cathedral of St. John the Divine, Sunday, June 4th, when the members made their corporate Communion. The annual report of work was presented. The Ven. Archdeacon Tiffany, D. D., made an address.

Archdeaconry of Westchester

The May meeting was held at the church of St. Mary's in the Highlands, Cold Spring. Some 35 clerical and lay members were in attendance. At the Eucharistic service, Bishop Potter was celebrant. The delegates were given entertainment at the rectory. At the business session, routine affairs were considered.

The Tea Saloon of the Church Army

Was opened June 8th, under encouraging circumstances. In connection with it will be a savings bank department, and by a systematic and business-like arrangement, $100 will be saved to patrons, and handed over annually to them. The first hundred patrons of this plan of operation will receive supplies of tea free of cost for a year, through provision of friends of the movement, who desire thus to give a "send-off" to a practical scheme in the promotion of temperance.

New Rector for Holy Trinity, Harlem

The rectorship, vacant by the death of the Rev. Chas. DeWitt Bridgman, has been filled by the election of the Rev. Harry P. Nichols, now rector of St. Mark's church, Minneapolis, Minn. The Rev. Mr. Nichols is a native of Salem, Mass., where he was born Sept. 3d, 1850. He graduated at Harvard, and took theological studies at Andover and Philadelphia. He was ordained priest by Bishop Neely in 1877, and was connected for a time with St. John's church, Philadelphia; was rector of St. Paul's church, Brunswick, Me., 1877-'83; curate of Trinity church, New Haven, 1883-'92; and took his present parish in the latter year. He has been a deputy in the General Convention from the diocese of Minnesota.

Columbia University

At a meeting of the board of trustees, held June 5th, it was announced that Chas. H. Senff had given $5,000, to be used as part of the zoology fund in equipping the Columbia University expedition up the Nile. The members of this expedition left the university about three weeks ago, and are now in Italy. The expedition will seek the co-operation of the British government in pursuing scientific explorations of the deposits at the sources of the Nile, heretofore little understood. It was announced that the Anton Seidl fellowship had been increased by friends of that musician to $12,000. The Carl Schurz fund of $30,000 was received on condition that it be applied to the foundation of a fellowship for the study of Germanic languages, and for the purchase of German literature. The board resolved that a tablet be placed on the site of the old college, at Madison ave. and 49th st., and also on the site of the original King's College of colonial times, in West Broadway.

The Church of the Redeemer, Pelham

Was consecrated by Bishop Potter, June 3d. In connection with this service, the rector, the Rev. C. W. Bolton, celebrated the 80th anniversary of his birth, and the 52nd of his entrance upon Holy Orders. There were assisting in the services, the Rev. Archdeacon Kirkby, D. D., and the Rev. Messrs. Buckmaster, Steen, Hallman, Holmes, and Sill. Bishop Potter was the preacher, and at the close of his sermon congratulated the rector on his long and valuable service in the ministry. A large tent had been erected near the church, and after the service refreshments were supplied to the visiting clergy, while an orchestra furnished music. A feature of the occasion was the presentation to the Rev. Mr. Bolton of a silver loving cup, in behalf of his brethren of the archdeaconry of Westchester, the Bishop making the presentation address. Mr. Bolton was also the recipient of a purse of gold. The parish was organized in 1863, and the present edifice completed in 1893, from designs by Henry S. R. Apelyea. It is a handsome gray stone structure, with a seating capacity of about 1,000 persons.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

St. Stephen's church, Norwood, has executed a deed to the property, with the consent of the parishioners, conveying it to the trustees of the diocese.

At the church of the Annunciation, Philadelphia, the reredos is to be enriched by the insertion of five painted panels from designs by Miss Marianna Sloan and Miss Arlita Sargent.

Hospital of the Good Shepherd

Tableaux vivants, after the Boutet de Monvel pictures for children's story books, were given on Tuesday afternoon, 6th inst., at the Merion Cricket's club house in aid of the hospital. The characters were all taken by children, and an interesting entertainment was the result.

House of the Holy Child

This home for colored children, which occupies two small dwellings, 733 and 735 North 45th street, West Philadelphia, where 23 inmates are accommodated, has had to refuse admittance to many needing its care. Effort is being made to have a commodious building of its own.

New Church for St. Paul's, Philadelphia

Subscriptions are being raised for the erection of a new edifice to seat about 700 persons. The new corporation will be strong from the start, with a fine property upon which a chapel already stands. During the past year there have been more than 400 children in the Sunday school.

The Southwest Convocation

Met on Monday afternoon, 5th inst., in Holy Trinity parish house, the Rev. G. Woolsey Hodge, president, in the chair. An appropriation of $500 each was voted for the French and colored missions. A committee consisting of the Rev. Messrs R. A. Mayo and W. F. Ayer, with Mr. William S. Neilson, of the laity, was appointed to investigate the possibility of other than the regular mission work of the convocation, the Rev. R. A. Mayo was re-elected secretary, and Mr. Henry E. Drayton, treasurer.

New Church of the Ascension, Parkesburg

This church, the Rev. J. F. Bullitt, rector, is erecting its new edifice, estimated to cost in the section now under way, about $4,000. The material will be stone of the neighborhood, with interior finish of natural tinted wood. Temporary glass will be used until memorial windows can be secured. The seating capacity will be about 300, and the nave will measure 60 by 28 ft. The church will have two stories, the lower being used for Sunday school and parish work rooms. For the present the chancel end will be closed off with wood, awaiting the building of a suitable chancel of stone. The plan contemplates the eventual putting up of a tower and spire of substantial proportions, which, from the high location of the church, will be a commanding feature of the town. The style is early English Gothic.

St. James' Church, Perkiomen (Evansburg)

The S. P. G., shortly after its organization in 1701, sent missionaries to various points in Eastern Pennsylvania, among others to the Perkiomen valley. This station was at first supplied from Christ church, Philadelphia. In 1721, the mission was made a parish, and a small church built. The parish was admitted into union with the convention in 1735, it being one of the six churches composing the first convention of the diocese. The present church edifice replaced the first structure in 1843, and in 1844 was consecrated by Bishop Onderdonk. During the present year the interior has been thoroughly repainted and frescoed, making a complete transformation from the previous plain and simple effect. The services were resumed on the first Sunday after Trinity, the rector, the Rev. Alfred J. Barrow, preaching an interesting sermon. Special music was admirably rendered by the choir, supported by a small orchestra. The ancient cemetery on the opposite side of the old turnpike, has been in use since 1701.

Iowa

Theodore Nevin Morrison, D.D., Bishop

A Military Thanksgiving

On Sunday morning, May 28th, in Grace church, Cedar Rapids, whose rector, the Rev. Dr. Green, has been for 10 years the senior chaplain of the Iowa National Guard, there was a thanksgiving service for the return of the officers and men of the local military organizations, and a memorial of those who had died during their tour of service. The field and staff officers of the 49th Iowa, Company C, of the same regiment, the 5th Iowa Battery Light Art., together with the Grand Army, the Sons of Veterans, and the Loyal Legion, marched in order to the church, where, after a beautiful service rendered by the full choir of 80 voices, Dr. Green delivered the address, speaking again in the afternoon at the memorial service of the G. A. R.

Delaware

Leighton Coleman, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The 113th Annual Convention

Held in the parish house of St. John's church, Wilmington, June 7th. A missionary meeting was held the previous evening, at which addresses were made by Mr. Silas McBea, of New York, and the Rev. C. N. Spalding. After Matins, on Wednesday, Mr. S. Minot Curtis was elected secretary for the 39th time, and Mr. John S. Grohe was appointed as his assistant. The Ven. Geo. C. Hall, archdeacon of Wilmington, read his report. The Bishop celebrated the Holy Eucharist, and the preacher was the Rev. F. M. Munson, LL.D. On resuming business, the usual reports were read. Milford was chosen as the next place of meeting for the convention.

The Bishop delivered his annual address, in which some weighty words were spoken on the matter of the remarriage of divorced persons. He regretted that such an amendment had not been adopted by the General Convention as would make it impossible by the expressed law of the Church, for such persons to be remarried. There had been seven clergy received, of whom one had died only last week, the Rev. S. F. W. Symonds. The Rev. Dr. Chas. E. Murray had died on Jan. 26th, 1899. Three clergy had been transferred to other dioceses. There had been 221 Confirmations within the diocese, 206 without. That part of the report of Archdeacon Hall, relating to work among colored people, was after an exciting discussion, postponed indefinitely. The following elections were made:

Standing Committee: The Rev. Messrs. H. Ashton Henry, K. J. Hammond, and J. Leighton McKim; Judge Edward C. Bradford, Mr. S. M. Curtis.

Diocesan Missionary and Education Committee: The Rev. Messrs. W. J. Wilkie and E. K. Miller, Messrs. Francis G. du Pont, and John S. Grohe.

Delegates to the Missionary Council: The Rev. F. M. Munson; Joseph Swift.

Treasurer, William R. Brinkole.

The archdeaconry of Wilmington elected the Rev. Geo. C. Hall, archdeacon, and George A. Elliott, secretary. The archdeaconry of Dover elected the Rev. George M. Bond, archdeacon, and William Denney, secretary.

The remaining business of the convention was completed at Bishopstead, in the chapel of the Good Shepherd, after which the convention adjourned, and the delegates proceeded to enjoy the hospitality of Bishop and Mrs. Coleman.

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The endowment fund of St. Ann's church, Brooklyn, has recently been increased by a gift of $21,000 from a parishioner.

The Parish Guild of St. John's, Brooklyn

The missionary chapter is an active society, and is doing much good, its benevolences extending over a wide field. In addition to many other contributions, its money offerings have amounted to $730.73. The parish treasurer's statement, recently made public, shows a total of funds raised for the year of $13,187.93.

New Parish House for Trinity, Brooklyn

The organization of the School Builders, of Trinity church, Schenck and Arlington ayes., has just held a successful lawn fete, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the building of a new parish house and school on the grounds in the rear of the building. As soon as the fund amounts to $1,000, ground will be broken. Half the sum has been raised, and it is expected the building will be begun early in the fall.

Class of 1874 General Theological Sem'y

On the evening of May 17th, the Rev. Spencer S. Roche, of St. Mark's church, Brooklyn, entertained at a dinner given at his residence members of the class of 1874, in commemoration of the 25th anniversary of their graduation from the General Theological Seminary. Several letters of regret were read from members unable to be present, owing to distance or previous engagements. Great interest was given the occasion by each member recounting in turn, experiences and changes since the graduation of the class. Out of 24, six have passed to the rest in Paradise. Among those present or who sent letters of regret were the Rev. Messrs. John L. Egbert, Alfred E. Johnson, Geo. Wm. Douglas, D.D., Walter R. Gardner, Luther Pardee, Philo W. Sprague, E. H. Van Winkle, etc.

Indiana

The Sixty-second Annual Convention

Held in Grace cathedral, Indianapolis, June 6th, 7th, and 8th, was composed of 24 clergymen and 60 laymen, including seven women, and was, all things considered, one of the most harmonious and successful conventions held in many years. The setting off of the northern third of the State for the diocese of Michigan City, left the diocese impaired in ability, and yet with a vast mission field within its borders, which the House of Bishops refused to set off as a missionary jurisdiction. Right nobly did the members face the demand for increased assessments upon the parishes and missions, and the many other problems that had to be solved. Bishop White, finding it impossible to be present, the Bishop of Southern Ohio preached the opening sermon, taking for his text the choosing of Matthias, and its analogy to the selection of bishops in our own Church to-day. The Rev. Dr. C. Graham Adams was appointed presiding officer pro tem, the permanent organization being effected by the election of the Rev. H. M. Denslow, as president ad interim, and the Rev. Willis D. Engle, as secretary. The Rev. Walter Scott was received as a fraternal delegate from the diocese of Michigan City, and a telegram of regret and thanks was sent to Bishop White. St. David's parish, Indianapolis, was admitted into union with the convention.

The arrangement made by the trustees for the division of diocesan property on the basis of 30 per cent. to Michigan City and 70 per cent. to the old diocese, was agreed to; the Bishop's salary was fixed at $2,500, and the use of the episcopal residence, and $300 for traveling expenses.

The nominations for the bishopric were: The Rev. George Williamson Smith, by the Rev. J. M. Francis; the Rev. James D. Stanley, by the Rev. J. E. Sulger; the Rev. Joseph M. Francis, by R. C. Wilkinson; the Rev. Lewis F. Cole, by E. R. Fletcher; the Rev. Gustav A. Carstensen, by James M. Winters; the Rev. John J. Faude, by the Rev. C. Graham Adams, and the Rev. A. W. Knight, by Louis Howland. The first ballot resulted in the choice by the clergy, of Mr. Faude, and by the laity, of the Rev. J. M. Francis, while the third resulted in the election of Mr. Francis by both orders, which result gave general satisfaction. The bishop elect is 42 years old, and is a native of Philadelphia. He is a graduate of Nashotah, Wis., and was for a time settled at Watertown, that State. He then became a missionary in Japan, where he remained ten years. In 1897, he returned to this country, and was nominated for Bishop of Kyoto, but was not confirmed, because the Church did not have the funds with which to carry on the extended work that had been planned. Since January, 1898, he has been rector of St. Paul's church, Evansville.

The Standing Committee, headed by the Rev. H. M. Denslow, was by ballot re-elected; also C. E. Brooks, treasurer.

The Bishop's statistical report included: Confirmed, 193; clergy received, 11; dismissed (21 to Michigan City), 29; ordained, one to priesthood; candidates for Holy Orders, 6.

The diocesan branch of the Woman's Auxiliary held its annual meeting in the cathedral on Tuesday, which was ably presided over by Mrs. W. D. Pratt, the successor to Mrs. White, as diocesan president. The reports were most hopeful, while the sermon by the Rev. H. M. Denslow was interesting and helpful.

Los Angeles

Joseph Horsfall Johnson, DD., Bishop

Sunday School Service

On Sunday afternoon, May 14th, the Sunday schools of all the parishes and missions within the city—St. Paul's, Epiphany, Christ church, St. John's, Ascension, St. Barnabas', and St. Athanasius'—assembled in the park in front of St. Paul's, the pro-cathedral. A procession was formed, preceded by portions of the vested choirs of St. Paul's, St. John's, and Ascension, and followed by the clergy and the Bishop, which entered the church, singing "Onward, Christian soldiers." After a short and spirited service, addresses were made by Bishop Johnson and the Rev. Messrs. G. T. Griffith and C. E. Spalding.

Sunday School Institute

On Monday, 15th, during the afternoon and evening, a Sunday school convention, composed of the clergy, superintendents, and teachers representing the Sunday schools throughout the diocese, was held in St. Paul's Hall. The Bishop presided, and opened the convention with an address of much interest. After some preliminary proceedings, a very thoughtful and suggestive paper was read by the Rev. M. M. Moore. He treated of the purpose of the Sunday school, and hindrances and helps thereto. Referring to the fact which every rector and superintendent grieves over—that many classes would have no teachers at all, except for the appointment of persons who are entirely unprepared, and who lack the knowledge necessary, Mr. Moore suggested as a remedy, the drawing up of a course of reading for the instruction of teachers. In the evening session, resolutions were adopted, organizing a diocesan Sunday school institute. It is understood that the committee will prepare two courses of study, one for teachers, the other for pupils, with suitable text books to be named, extending over two or three years, with half yearly examinations, a diploma being granted after the final examination in either course.

Minnesota

Henry B. Whipple, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
M. N. Gilbert, D.D., LL.D., Bishop-coadjutor

Ascension Day was well observed by the faithful. Celebrations were held in most of the churches in the Twin Cities.

St. Philip's Mission

St. Philip's Day was observed within the octave by a special vespers service. The Rev. Harvey Officer, in charge, gave a brief summary of the work accomplished during the past five years, and hoped to enlarge its usefulness. The future looks bright and promising, but the greatest drawback is a suitable place of worship. St. Philip's has a vested choir, a chapter of the Brotherhood, of which the vestryman and wardens are all members, and a branch of the Woman's Auxiliary. The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition, and a large class is being prepared for Confirmation.

Guild House for St. Paul's, Winona

A. B. Youmans and wife will erect on the lot north of the church, a stone guild house, that will cost not less than $12,000. Plans have been approved, and work will commence at once. In St. Andrew's chapel, a mission of St. Paul's, has been placed by a Sunday school class, assisted by the teacher, a handsome solid oak altar, prayer desk, and lecturn, and a suitable altar dossal. St. Andrew's is in a flourishing condition. Mr. Arthur Pine, of New York city, has been secured as organist and choirmaster.

The Forty-Second Annual Council

Met June 7th in the cathedral church at Fribault. Litany was said by the Rev. H. P. Nichols. The Celebration was by Bishop Whipple, followed by his annual address. The Rt. Rev. Dr. Morrison, of Iowa, the representative of the General Board of Missions, also made an address. The Rev. A. D. Stowe was re-elected secretary. The council authorized the diocesan Board of Missions to elect a general missionary, at a salary not to exceed $1,200, largely provided for by the Sunday school children's Advent offering. A resolution was adopted, protesting against the seating of Roberts in Congress. The Rev. C. C. Rollit and Mr. F. O. Osborne, were elected delegates to the Missionary Council. Bishop Gilbert's address contained the following statistics: Confirmations, 758; Baptisms, 14; visitations, 130; canonically connected clergy, 91; ordinations, 6; candidates for Holy Orders, 15; postulants, four; contributions to the Bishop's special needs fund, $961.20.

Standing Committee elected: The Rev. Messrs. G. Davis, C. D. Andrews, J. J. Faude, D. D. and W. P. Tenbroeck; Messrs. J. H. Ames, Frederick Paine, Harvey Officer, and the Hon. Isaac Atwater. A resolution of sympathy was extended to Bishop Gilbert, and special prayers for Mrs. Gilbert's recovery ordered to be offered in all the churches in the diocese on the following Sunday. The council adjourned, to meet in Christ church, St. Paul, next year.

Bishop Whipple's 40th Anniversary

This council is memorable as being the 40th anniversary of Bishop Whipple's consecration, and his annual address was reminiscent of that 40 years. He was presented with handsomely bound resolutions, expressive of the love and esteem of his clergy and laity. The citizens of Faribault gave a banquet on Wednesday evening in the armory, in honor of the Bishop, to which all the members of the council and the delegates to the Woman's Auxiliary were bidden; between 300 and 400 sat down. Col. Eddy acted as toastmaster, and speeches were made by Judge Wilder, Bishop Gilbert, Bishop Morrison, of Iowa, Mr. Haven, the senior warden of the cathedral, the Rev. W. C. Pope, Dr. Ryan, the Hon. — Batchelder, and the Hon. — Stevens. Congratulatory letters were read from the Hon. Isaac Atwater who was prevented by extreme age from being present, also from Bishops Tuttle, Wilmar, Neely, Doane, and the Presiding Bishop, Clarke, of Rhode Island.

Central New York

F. D. Huntington, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Trinity church, Syracuse, the Rev. Robert Hudson, Ph. D., rector, has discharged its indebtedness of $6,500

Woman's Auxiliary

The annual meeting of the branch in the Fourth District, was held in Grace church, Baldwinsville, May 18th; 16 parishes were represented, and made reports. Miss Huntington gave an informal talk about the educational and religious work at the Onondaga Indian Reservation. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Wheeler, Skaneateles; vice-presidents, Mrs. C. H. Butler, Oswego, Mrs. H. B. Reed, Marcellus, Miss Mary Hubbard, Skaneateles; secretary, Mrs. John Albro, Syracuse; assistant secretary, Miss Fitch, Skaneateles; treasurer, Mrs. M. A. Stevens, Syracuse; superintendent of Junior Auxiliary, Mrs. Cotton, Geddes.

The annual meeting of the branch in the Third District was held in Zion church, Greene, May 23d. After the Holy Communion, an address on "Gifts and sacrifices," was made by the rector, the Rev. H. E. Hubbard. Addresses were made by Mrs. E. L. Knickerbocker, diocesan president, and Mr. Paul Shimon. At a meeting of the Junior Auxiliary of the district, an interesting address was made by Mrs. F. H. Westcott, the diocesan superintendent.

The annual meeting of the diocesan Auxiliary was held in Trinity church, Binghamton, May 25th. After the Holy Communion, celebrated by the rector, the Rev. Dr. J. H. La Roche, a strong, earnest sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. C. H. Mockridge. At the evening session addresses were made by the Rev. W. D. Manross, the Rev. C. B. Rogbir (a Malay, and the only native priest of the Church on the island of Trinidad), Mr. Paul Shimon, and the Rev. Dr. Mockridge. The annual meeting of the Junior Auxilliary was held May 26th, and the opening address made by Dr. La Roche. Addresses were made to the children by Mrs. W. D. Manross and Mr. Shimon. An address, written by the Rev. C. O. Dantzer, missionary to the deaf, was read by the Rev. H. E. Hubbard. Mr. Dantzer illustrated the sign language, and gave the Lord's Prayer in the signs.

Girls' Friendly Society

The 11th annual meeting of the diocesan branch was held in Trinity church, Utica, May 23d. There are 72 honorary, 107 working associates, and 337 active members. Nearly every one of the 15 branches was represented. A diocesan constitution was adopted, and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. E. Ford; vice-presidents, Mrs. H. C. Sutton, of Rome, Mrs. Julius Baumgras, of Syracuse, Miss Isabelle Doolittle, of Utica; secretary and treasurer, Miss Mary M. Jackson, of Utica.

Connecticut

Chauncey B. Brewster, D.D., Bishop

Consecration of St. James', Farmington

It was an auspicious first of June that saw the fruition of the many prayers and labors of the Church people who, after great opposition, have built and completed their pretty little church without a cent of debt. Bishop Brewster and 16 other clergymen of the diocese were present at the consecration. The instrument of donation was read by the senior warden, Mr. G. S. Mason; the sentence of consecration, by Archdeacon Biddle. The Rev. Samuel Hart, of Trinity College, preached the sermon. The Bishop was the celebrant at the Eucharist. A gratifying feature of the occasion was the loan by the ladies of the Congregational Church, of their parish house, and their assistance in entertaining the guests of the parish. St. James' church is built of pasture stones, and its dimensions within are: nave, 42 ft. by 21 ft. in width, and 27 ft. in height; chancel, 18 ft. by 18 ft. in width, 23 ft. in height. The architect, Mr. Mason, has attempted to incorporate the idea of a gambrel-roofed New England house with the ideal of a Churchly building. It is finished in cypress and yellow pine. The sole emblem used in the decoration is the cross, which appears in the stone mullions of the windows, in the framing of pews and doors, and in the chancel arch. The church, with the lot on which it stands, has cost in the neighborhood of $4,500. The Rev. W. W. Ellsworth is the rector.

St. Paul's Church, Willimantic

On May 26th, a large congregation assembled to take part in the dedication of a new organ and to listen to a recital given by Mr. Davis, the organist of Holy Trinity, Middletown, who, with his choir boys, brought out the beauty and scope of the new instrument, and displayed its abilities in accompanying a strong choir. The new organ is a Hook & Hastings instrument. It is two manual, and has 16 stops and 301 pipes. The money for its purchase was raised by the St. Paul's organ fund committee, of which the wife of the rector, the Rev. Henry Macbeth, is president.

Consecration of Trinity Church, Hartford

This magnificent new church was consecrated by Bishop Brewster, May 31st. There was a very large attendance of the clergy. During the service, the Prayer Book presented to the church by the poetess, Lydia H. Sigourney, in 1861, was used. Colonel Jacob L. Greene, the senior warden, read the instrument of donation. The reading of the sentence of consecration was by the Rev. Storrs O. Seymour, D.D., president of the Standing Committee of the diocese, and rector of the church, under whom the work of building the new church was begun. The Bishop celebrated the Eucharist and preached the sermon. Luncheon was provided by the hospitality committee of the parish, and in the afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, a reception was held in the parish house to meet Bishop and Mrs. Brewster. The first steps toward the formation of the parish of Trinity church were taken Sept. 12, 1859, when 12 men formed themselves into a "religious society," to be known by that name. The parish was admitted into union with the convention in 1860. The present rector is the Rev. Ernest De F. Miel. The church is one of the best equipped in the diocese. The church structures, including the chapel, parish house, and rectory, with the grounds, cost $225,000. The church itself was built at a cost of $150,000. Every seat is free, and it will not be possible in future to sell or assign the sittings. A new organ, costing from $12,000 to $15,000, is contemplated at the present time.

Michigan

Thomas F. Davies, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Sixty-fifth Annual Convention

Met in Christ church, Detroit, June 7th. There was a good attendance of both clergy and laity. The proceedings were harmonious, and were mainly consumed in a revision of the Constitution, which was completed. The opening service consisted of the Holy Communion, Bishop Davies being celebrant, and a sermon by the Rev. John Munday. The Rev. S. W. Frisbie was re-elected secretary, the Rev. Paul Zeigler, assistant, and Mr. W. T. DeGraft, treasurer of the diocese.

The address of the Bishop showed that there had been 1,035 Confirmations in the diocese, against 844 last year, that the parish at Adrian had built a new church valued at $25,000, and that parish houses had been built at Jackson and Monroe, with a fine stone chapel and rectory at the latter place. The most important announcement in the address was that the Bishop had appointed the Rev. Wm. S. Sayres general missionary for the diocese, and that his salary of $2,500 had been provided. Mr. Sayres is a man of ability, education, resources, and tireless diligence. He has had much experience abroad, in China, and at home in the jurisdiction of the Platte and in this diocese. He is the present rector of St. Stephen's church, Detroit, and in charge of the missions at St. Phillip's in this city and Leesville. He has been very active in the missionary work of the Detroit convocation. Michigan has a fund of $14,000, well invested, for the aged and infirm clergy. The contributions to this fund, and interest from investments, realized last year $2,358, and the beneficiaries of the fund were paid $2,487.50, in sums ranging from $100 to $250. Sixteen parishes gave $118.24 to aid candidates for the ministry.

The report of the trustees of the diocese showed the invested episcopal fund to amount to $83,471.49. There was paid the Bishop for salary, house rent, traveling expenses, and salary of secretary, $7,950. The recent large deductions in rate of interest on the loans of the fund, will, in the opinion of the trustees, make a $25,000 addition to it necessary. The diocese has an episcopal residence, but in a bad location and out of repair; so far efforts to sell it have not been successful.

The missions of the diocese are already numerous and hopeful, but could be much extended and enlarged. They are suffering from want of larger contributions. The salaries voted to the missionaries last year were scaled down to 15 per cent. when paid, a reduction in all amounting to $1,200. Last year the pledges in support of diocesan missions amounted to $6,795. The convention this year gave much attention to this matter, but nothing definite or practical came of it. A proposition to raise the money by apportionment instead of by pledges was negatived. At the Wednesday evening missionary meeting, the old plan of pledges was tried again, with diminishing success. The amount pledged was $6,612.00, an amount less than last year which proved inadequate. About $1,000 from interest on invested legacies will be added to this amount.

The elections showed few changes. The deans of the convocations who are also members of the Missionary Board; viz., the Rev. John McCarroll, M.D., Detroit convocation; the Rev. C. I. Channer, Southern convocation; the Rev. T. W. McLean, Saginaw convocation, and the Rev. R. E. McDuff, Central convocation, were re-elected. The lay members of this committee are now Mr. James E. Pittman, Detroit; Mr. James O'Donnell, Jackson; Mr. A. W. Comstock, Alpena; Mr. Theo. H. Eaton, Detroit; Mr. E. G. Stevenson, Detroit; Mr. James Osburn, Owosso; and Mr. John B. Howarth, secretary and treasurer. Provision was made by the convention that this committee confer with the Detroit Church Club as to some form of united action, and the scope of its work in various forms of enlargement was suggested.

Standing Committee elected: The Rev. Messrs. Rufus W. Clark, D.D., S. W. Frisbie, R. Balcom, and Wm. Gardam; Messrs. Sidney D. Miller, W. H. Withington, and H. P. Baldwin.

Delegates to the Missionary Council: The Rev. W. D. Maxon, D.D., and Mr. James E. Pittman.

The convention provided for a conference of the officers of the Church Association and the trustees of the diocese, looking to the union of these two bodies.

The Rev. Dr. Prall offered a preamble and resolution, requesting the Bishop in his next convention address, to express his views and counsel on the marriage by Church clergymen of divorced persons. The resolution was adopted.

The amended Constitution changes the time of holding the diocesan annual convention from June to the Wednesday following the first Sunday in November, so this year then will only be six months' interval between the two conventions.

Albany

William Crosswell Doane, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

St. Paul's church, Troy, has just placed a handsome memorial window, made by Tiffany. The subject is, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." At the base of the window, picked out in colors, is the simple inscription: "In Memoriam Joseph Joslin Tillinghast, warden of this church."

The Troy Archdeaconry

The 69th regular meeting was held in the church of the Messiah, Glens Falls, May 23d and 24th; 27 clergymen were present. On Tuesday evening, the Ven. Archdeacon, Dr. Carey, presided at a large missionary meeting, the Rev. Dr. Pelletreau, the Rev. Canon Tibbets, and the Rev. Chas. H. Shutt were the speakers. Their subjects were well chosen and exceedingly interesting. On Wednesday, at 7 A. M., Holy Communion was celebrated by the archdeacon. At 10:30 A. M., after Morning Prayer, the sermon was preached by the Rev. James A. Smith. At 12, there was held a short business meeting, after which an exceedingly interesting essay, on "Casuistry," was read by the Rev. James B. Meade. The clergy were entertained by the parish at the Hotel Ruliff. At 2 P. M., reports were given from the various missionaries, including the missionary to the deaf people in this diocese, the Rev. Harry Van Allen. The autumn meeting will be held in Trinity parish, Plattsburg.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D.D., Bishop

At a recent meeting of the archdeaconry of New Bedford, the Rev. S. G. Babcock was elected archdeacon, in the place of the Rev. E. W. Smith who resigned.

St. Thomas' church, Cherry Valley, has been placed under the charge of the Rev. Mr. Hague, of Worcester. Services are held every Sunday afternoon at four.

There are now 254 clergymen and 154 parishes in the diocese, besides 59 missions. Last year, 1,997 were confirmed, about 200 short of the record of preceding years. Ten were ordained to the diaconate, and one to the priesthood.

The Choir Guild

The third section rendered the musical service in Emmanuel church, Boston, June 7th. Emmanuel, Boston; St. James', Cambridge; Grace, Lawrence; Our Saviour, Longwood; St. John's, Lowell; Holy Trinity, Marlboro, and St. James', Roxbury, participated. Mr. W. R. Spalding was choirmaster, and Mr. H. P. Newcomb, organist. The music at these service of the Choir Guild was excellent in every way this year, and the great assistance rendered the different choirs of the churches is marked in the higher grade of singing and the popularity of the choral service.

Archdeaconry of Lowell

Met in St. Peter's church, Salem, June 1st. About 70 delegates were present. The Holy Communion was celebrated by Bishop Lawrence. The Rev. James H. Van Buren will continue as archdeacon. The Rev. J. H. Hyde was made secretary, Mr. Dinsmore Blanchard was elected treasurer, and the executive committee, with two laymen, is composed of the Rev. Dr. Shinn and the Rev. Charles H. Perry. A missionary service was held in the evening, and addresses were made by the Rev. Messrs. Mills, Walker, and Carden.

St. James' Church, Fall River

The Rev. G. W. Sargent has taken charge, and is already making an effort to discharge the debt of $600 upon the church building. So far, over $200 have been raised.

Memorial of John Gardner White

Christ church, Cambridge, has recently received a gift of a very rich altar book and brass stand. The opening page bears this inscription:

In memory of John Gardner White, sometime warden of this parish. Departed this life Sept. 7, 1896.

Mr. White was one of the most prominent Churchmen of Cambridge, a man of lovely Christian character. He was especially zealous in the missionary field, and was instrumental in the founding of several churches, notably that of the Ascension, East Cambridge, where his helpful, cheering words and ready sympathy will long be had in loving remembrance.

Quincy

Alexander Burgess, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

St. John's Swedish Church, Galesburg

The second class this year was confirmed June 7th, by Bishop Seymour, of Springfield. The service was an Evensong in English, and was conducted by the Rev. C. A. Nybladh, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Almqvist. The full vested choir of Grace church sang the service, together with a special offertory. There were 24 in the class, including not only boys and girls, but men and women. The girls were dressed uniformly in white, and the boys in black. The class included six from Woodhull, as it was felt that the much overworked Bishop could not be called upon to make a special trip there to confirm a class. Bishop Seymour delivered a splendid and stirring sermon, taking for his theme, "God is Love."

Milwaukee

Isaac Lea Nicholson, D.D., Bishop

Holy Innocents' church, Racine, will rebuild their church structure this summer, at a cost of $1,000, a large portion of which sum has already been raised.

On the occasion of his recent pastoral visitation to Platteville, the Bishop made an address to the students of the Normal School, some 200 in number. It was an exceptionally interesting experience, and largely appreciated.

Mr. James T. Bovill has been placed by the Bishop in temporary charge of the church of St. John the Divine, Burlington, as lay reader, until a permanent curate can be secured.

St. Matthias', Waukesha

One of the young vestrymen, O. M. Jackson, has given a very nice piano for the chapel and choir practice. The interior of the chapel has just been calcimined. A new, large, and attractive board has just been put on the outside of the church. The ladies organized a "One Cent a Day" guild. The officers are: President, Mrs. T. W. Haight; vice president, Mrs. Eva F. Newman; secretary, Mrs. C. F. Parker; treasurer,

Miss Emily Marsh. The society is divided into four departments, each designated by a color. The guild will meet once a month, when the money will be turned in, and a short programme rendered by one of the departments.

Memorial Gifts

A beautiful granite stone font has been placed in St. Chad's church, Okauchee, by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hurlburt, of Oconomowoc, as a memorial gift. The font is 3 ft. high, resting on a square base, well carved and gracefully proportioned, a copy of the font in Zion church, Oconomowoc. A memorial font was also donated this past Easter to St. John's church, Mauston, by the Goodhouse family, in memory of Frederick A. Goodhouse, corporal in the 3d Wisconsin Volunteer Regiment—a faithful Churchman who died at sea in the late war.

Historic Relics

Mr. Francis Kemper Adams, son of the late Rev. Dr. Adams, of Nashotah, has given to the diocese the first office desk used by Bishop Kemper while in his home at Nashotah; also the desk of Dr. Adams and a picture given by Bishop Moore to Bishop Kemper.

St. Stephen's Church, Milwaukee

This parish is rejoicing in a new pipe organ, made by the Kimball Company, of Chicago, costing $500, and also in the reduction of their old-time debt by the payment of $500. This is a remarkable record, and has been accomplished solely by the valiant efforts of that loyal congregation.

Easton

Wm. Forbes Adams, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

The Thirty-first Annual Convention

Convened in Christ church, Easton, June 6-8th. The session opened with Morning Prayer and a sermon by the Rev. Algernon Batte. The Rev. Edward R. Rich, was elected secretary, and the Rev. William H. Adkins, treasurer. The Standing Committee was elected as follows: The Rev. Messrs. James A. Mitchell, Stephen C. Roberts, D. D., Algernon Batte, Wordsworth Y. Beaven, D. D., J. Gibson Gantt.

Board of Missions: The Rev. Messrs. Leonidas B. Baldwin, Thomas C. Page, A. J. Vanderborg, and Messrs. J. E. M. Chamberlaine and Henry Hollyday.

Forty clergymen were reported canonically resident in the diocese; 38 parishes and 67 church edifices; 2,720 families; 6,173 baptized members; 5,903 parishioners; 3,397 communicants; and 2,199 Sunday school pupils. The cost of running the diocese amounted to $47,891.59, of which $23,461.27 went for parochial expenses, including rector's salaries. The church and chapel property in the diocese is worth $271,500, value of the rectories, $74,050, 1,404 acres of glebe land, valued at $39,700. The invested funds amount to $19,390.31.

In the evening Bishop Adams read his annual address. He said there is but one vacant parish in the diocese—Coventry, in Somerset Co.—"but more than half the parishes of the diocese are on the missionary boards, and instead of an emulous competition as to which should get off first and stay off longer, it seems to be all the the other way." The general condition of the diocese is good. The pledges to the General Mission Fund and the Woman's Auxiliary for the work at Crisfield were both overpaid. The clergy are doing good work and their people are supporting them in their efforts. His only reference to some of the perplexing questions now distracting the Church was in these words:

Let it not be ours to forsake the old landmarks for the cozening enticements of a so-called "applied Christianity," which seems to embrace within the letter of our divine commission, and the charter of our powers and duties, a discussion of the "burning questions" of the day, the scandals and panics of society, and everything in short, but the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the conversion of sinners, and the building up of His people in righteousness and true holiness.

During the year the Bishop confirmed 188 persons, consecrated two churches, and held two ordinations, the Rev. Messrs. E. M. Hardcastle, and G. I. Kromer. He also confirmed 426 in the diocese of Long Island for Bishop Littlejohn.

The deans of the three convocations of the diocese reported all as being in good condition, spiritually and financially. The Rev. Giles B. Cooke was appointed dean of the Northern convocation, the Rev. James A. Mitchell, of the Middle, and the Rev. Stephen Morgan, of the Southern. At night of the second day, the Rev. Messrs. C. Ernest Smith and J. Addison Ingle made addresses. The Woman's Auxiliary elected the following officers: Mrs. H. L. Physick, president; Mrs. G. E. Haddaway, recording secretary; Miss Rebecca Wickes, corresponding secretary; Miss Josie P. Dawson, treasurer; Mrs. Wm. T. Malster, president of the Babies' branch.

The Rev. Fv B. Adkins called attention to the fact that the grave in Spring Hill Cemetery, Easton, of the Rev. Edward J. Stearns, one of the greatest scholars in the American Church, is unmarked, and a committee was appointed to raise money to erect a monument to Dr. Stearns.

A resolution was passed instructing the convention to transfer to Worcester parish the property of the church of St. Paul's-by-the-Sea, on the beach at Ocean City. It is proposed to build a new church on another site at Ocean City. The Bishop was authorized to appoint a committee to sell certain land the convention owns in Easton, and to use the proceeds to pay off a debt on the episcopal residence. The report of the Committee on the State of the Church showed that the amount pledged at the last convention for general missions was more than raised, and the offerings by all parishes for all purposes during the year amounted to over $40,000. The diocese was generally reported to be in fine condition, and signs of progress, spiritual and temporal, are abundant. The Committee on the Episcopal Fund reported that it had received $3,000 during the year. This fund is invested in mortgages, etc., and amounts to $40,915.

The diocesan council of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew met at the close of the convention in its first annual meeting, and an organization was perfected. There was a large attendance. Mr. John W. Wood, general secretary of the Brotherhood, spoke on the general aims and work of the order. The Rev. C. Ernest Smith made an address.

A reception was given by the vestry of St. Peter's parish and the guild, and was attended by about 300, who were all served with seasonable refreshments. It was decided that the next convention be held in Berlin.

Colorado

John Franklin Spalding, Bishop

The Bishop's Anniversary and the Council

The council began June 7th, with three celebrations of the Holy Communion, and closed on Friday noon, June 9th. The Sunday before, the baccalaureate sermon to the students of Wolfe Hall and Jarvis Hall was preached at St. Mark's. Monday was devoted to the Commencement exercises of both schools. The French play and the reception at Wolfe Hall were evidently as much of a pleasure to the students as they certainly were to the friends present. Tuesday, there were two Celebrations at the cathedral, the latter held by the Bishop. At this, the Rev. J. H. Houghton preached the sermon before the Woman's Auxiliary, which later held its annual meeting. A bright service was held in the cathedral at 4:30, when the diplomas were given to the students of the diocesan schools, and in the evening the crowded reception at Jarvis Hall proved the new vigor and life which has been infused into that institution of late. At the late celebration of the Holy Communion on Wednesday the Bishop was the celebrant. The service was Stainer's, and was sung by the vested choir of men and boys, augmented by women's voices. The sermon was by the Rev. W. O. Cone. The Bishop of Laramie, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Graves, on the evening of Wednesday, preached at the missionary meeting, on the subject of increased zeal for practical missionary work.

Thursday was devoted to the election of the standing committees and general business. A visit was made to St. Luke's Hospital. The great feature of the evening was the Bishop's reception, which showed the happy feeling generally pervading all the proceedings. In a pouring rain a great number of clergy and delegates visited the Hall to congratulate the Bishop and Mrs. Spalding on the 25th anniversary of his consecration as bishop.

The next day the conference of Sunday school workers met in St. Mark's church, and the semi-annual conference of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was held in the cathedral crypt. Thursday and Friday there were celebrations of the Eucharist in all the churches and also at Wolfe Hall. All the week there were opportunities for Communion at the cathedral and at Trinity memorial church. Wednesday evening a delightful supper was given at the episcopal residence by the Bishop and Mrs. Spalding. The music at the opening service of Holy Communion was the best ever known in the cathedral at such a service, and the attendance at services and meetings, the largest in the history of the diocese. After an era of financial depression, it looks as though the future were brightening in every direction, and that the Church might enter more fully into the possession of its own.

Pittsburgh

Cortlandt Whitehead, D.D., Bishop

Woman's Auxillary

The Pittsburgh branch held its last meeting for the season, June 1st, at the Church Rooms. Among the interesting things were the reading of a paper on the work of the Church in China, and the election of a new president for the Junior Auxillary, Mrs. G. A. Gormly, to succeed Mrs. W. L. Chalfant who was obliged to resign the work on account of ill health. The next meeting of the society will occur on the first Thursday in October.

Daughters of the King

The quarterly meeting of the Pittsburgh local assembly took place May 26th, at the church of the Incarnation, Knoxville. In the afternoon, there was a business meeting, followed by addresses by Mrs. S. G. Hammond and Captain G. P. Hance, of the Church Army, and a sermon by the Rev. Mr. Watson. Tea was served in the Sunday school room at 6 o'clock. At 8 o'clock there was Evening Prayer, with helpful and suggestive addresses by the Rev. Messrs. Danner and Thompson. The offerings were received for the work of the Church Army. Delegates were present from all the chapters in the city and vicinity, as also from McKeesport and Ford City.

Ohio

Wm. Andrew Leonard, D.D., Bishop

Trinity Cathedral

An offer was made for the property on Superior st., by a syndicate of Cleveland business men some years ago, of $125,000, the church authorities having permission to accept a higher offer, if it was made within a certain length of time. As no higher sum has been offered, it is said the sale will soon be closed. The last drawings of the ground plans for the new cathedral, to be built on the corner of Euclid and Perry, as presented by Architect Schweinfurth, have been approved by the building committee, and plans for the interior will soon be considered.

Ecclesiastical Embroidery

The class in this diocese held its annual meeting, at the call of Bishop Leonard, on May 22d, in the cathedral chapel. At 9:30 the Holy Communion was celebrated, Bishop Leonard, celebrant. The Bishop gave his annual address to the class. At the business meeting, at which the Bishop presided, the annual report of the president, Miss E. C. Neff, embodied also that of the secretary and the treasurer. The class has numbered 65 members during the past year, and has done excellent work in all departments. Officers for the ensuing year were elected, and the class adjourned to the first Monday in October.

Ohio Widows' and Orphans' Society

The 54th annual meeting was held in All Saints' church, Portsmouth, May 18th, in connection with the diocesan convention of Southern Ohio. The Rev. Francis M. Hall who has been the secretary and administrative officer of the society since July, 1891, was re-elected to that position. The report of the secretary showed offerings received from 44 parishes in the State of Ohio, amounting to $733 50, less than one-fourth of the parishes in the two dioceses in the State contributing. During the year, 26 annuities have been paid to widows of clergymen deceased, amounting to $2 575. Of these 26 beneficiaries, 12 live in the State of Ohio, and 14 outside of it. The treasurer reported that during the year, the bequest of $5,000 from Mrs. Julia Bedell had come into his hands, and that the invested fund of the society now amounts to $61,906, an increase during the year of $6,411.21, the largest ever made in any one year.

Western Michigan

George De Normandie Gillespie, D.D., Bishop

The Twenty-Fifth Annual Convention

Called to order at 9 A. M., June 7th, in Grace church, Grand Rapids, after Morning Prayer. At 10 A. M., the Rev. R. H. F. Gairdner, rector, celebrated the Holy Communion. The Bishop's address showed unwearied devotion to the cause of Christ during the entire year; 338 persons were confirmed in the various parishes and missions of the diocese. Up to the first day of June no clergyman had withdrawn from the diocese, and the whole number on the list was 37. The Bishop regreted that certain important towns in the diocese had not yet been occupied by the Church, but hoped that the devotion and zeal of her members would, ere long, bring it to pass. Epiphany Mission, South Haven, was the only new church admitted into union with this convention, although the mission church at Dowagiac has now its first settled clergyman. God's goodness was gratefully acknowledged by the Bishop, as he recorded improvements made at Battle Creek, Elk Rapids, Traverse City, Niles, and Grand Rapids; and the lifting, by individual liberality, of the heavy debt from St. Paul's, Muskegon. This church, and the church of the Nativity, Mancelona, were consecrated during the year. The Bishop urged that the contributions to the missionary work of the whole Church might be increased to $1,500. Some $3,000 was expended in the diocese for missionary work during the year, one general missionary ministering to 13 places.

The affairs of Ackley Institute were reported in good condition, and the Bishop referred to success in the raising of more than $8,000, for indebtedness and contingent fund. The retiring chaplain, the Rev. Jas. E. Wilkinson, Ph.D., was highly complimented on his 11 years of devotion to the school.

Wednesday afternoon, the following officers were elected: Secretary, the Rev. J. N. Rippey; treasurer, E. T. Montgomery; Standing Committee: the Rev. Messrs. R. R. Claiborne, Lewis Brown, R. H. F. Gairdner, J. N. McCormick; Messrs. J. D. Burns, Jacob Kleinhaus, W. J. Stuart. Board of Missions: the Rev. Messrs. Wm. Lucas, J. N. McCormick, R. H. F. Gairdner, R. R. Claiborne, George Forsey; Messrs. A. C. Torrey, W. J. Stuart, H. B. Lewis, E. C. Leavenworth, D. G. Robinson. Delegates to Missionary Council: the Rev. Wm. Lucas, A. C. Torrey.

Wednesday evening, missionary addresses were delivered by the Rev. A. P. Viborn and the Rev. Alsop Leffingwell. The latter address was a strong arraignment of indifference concerning the missionary work of the Church. Reports were made by the secretary and treasurer of the Board of Missions, also the general missionary, the Rev. Woodford P. Law, and Mrs.

Roger Butterfield, president of the Woman's Auxillary. At the close of the service, the members of the convention were given a reception at the episcopal residence, by the Bishop and his daughters.

On Thursday morning, the subject of occupying central points by resident clergymen, in lieu of the general missionary system now in vogue, was under discussion. A committee was appointed relative to the proper celebration in December next, of the 25th anniversary of the Bishop's consecration, and of the formation of the diocese. In his closing address, the Bishop spoke feelingly of the value to the diocese of the Rev. Mr. Bancroft, whose failing health has prevented him from taking active work during the past few months. Grace church interior was greatly improved prior to the convention by tasteful wall decorations, and by chancel lights and altar fittings.

A meeting in the interest of Sunday schools preceded the convention on Tuesday evening, and interesting papers were read.

Missouri

Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, D.D., Bishop

Progress in the Diocese

From the Bishop's address to the annual diocesan convention, we take the following: The children's Sunday school Lenten offerings have fallen below last year, at the very time when we wanted to respond to the earnest call to make them more. Last year 53 Sunday schools sent $1,516 97; this year only 47 Sunday schools have responded, with $1 266 91. Last year we reported 51 clergy in the diocese; this year only 49. Ascension, St. Louis, has paid itself entirely out of debt. St. Mark's, St. Louis, has almost for the whole year been in its new church, refreshed and invigorated in its parish life. Grace, Clarksville, has moved its building up into the central part of the town. Mt. Calvary, St. Louis, has been enlarged and improved, at a cost of over $1,300, all of which has been paid. Grace, Jefferson City, has erected a new church for $10,300, and paid for it up to within $1,000. Calvary, Columbia, is building a structure of stone, to cost $15,000 or more. Good Shepherd, St. Louis, has bought a new lot, and is to have a new church. It is in the air, too, that St. James', St. Louis, is to build anew. The Bishop's purse, the lubricating oil can, has had $3,759.84 poured into it and poured out of it, over $500 more than last year. Missouri has given $2 919 96 for domestic and foreign missions, over $200 more than last year. In this line of giving, only 19 of the 58 dioceses are ahead of us. Bishop Robertson Hall and the Orphans' Home go steadily on, and they pay their way as they go. The Church Mission House has been re-opened for the relief of the friendless sick and poor, under Sister Elizabeth, at 1706 Carr st. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew is strenuously active, especially in help to the mission work launched by Mr. Holmes in the City Hospital, the Female Hospital, the Insane Asylum, and the poorhouse. The energetic rector of Kirkwood, with an adjutant right hand in one of the most faithful laymen of the diocese, keeps up services and Sunday school in a little church at St. Paul Station, St. Louis Co. At Jackson, a faithful woman, though for the most part deprived of the help and leadership of a clergyman, has kept Church guidance and Church instruction before the young people, and year by year has presented one and another of them to be confirmed.

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Memorial of Bishop Clagett

On Thursday, May 25th, at St. Thomas' church, Croom, occurred the unveiling and benediction of a handsome brass tablet, in memory of Bishop Clagett, presented to the parish by the Bishop of Washington. The Bishop, the rector, the Rev. Frank P. Willis, and the visiting clergy entered the west door, while the hymn, "Rejoice, ye pure in heart," was sung.

The Te Deum followed, and the Holy Communion was celebrated. Standing by the tablet, the Bishop said a short office of dedication. The tablet is of the finest brass, about four ft. in height and two in width; it was covered by an American flag, with American and British colors draped above. The cord which held the covering was loosened by Miss Williams, of Baltimore, a great-great-granddaughter of Bishop Clagett. The inscription on the tablet is as follows:

To the glory of God and in memory of Thomas John Clagett, Bishop and Doctor. First bishop consecrated within the borders of the United States of America. Twice rector of St. Paul's parish, and in charge of this church. The epitaph inscribed upon his tomb was composed by Francis Scott Key, Esq., and reads as follows [then follows the Latin inscription on the old stone which marked the Bishop's grave]. The body of Bishop Clagett was buried in consecrated ground at Croom, his home in this neighborhood, and after eighty-two years, together with that of Mary Gantt, his wife, was translated to Washington, by the Bishops of the American Church, and interred in the cathedral close on Mount St. Alban, All Saints' Day, A. D. 1898. Grant him, O Lord, eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon him.

The congregation sang the hymn, "For all Thy saints," and the rector spoke a few words regarding the early history of St. Thomas' church, which was an offshoot from St. Paul's parish, and is the same edifice built 175 years ago, with the addition of a Gothic roof, in 1850, and the tower, also a memorial to Bishop Clagett, in 1881. The Bishop also made an address full of interesting historical allusions to the ancient churches of England, and the old parishes within his own diocese. In St. Thomas, Bishop Clagett was baptized, and in its vestry room pursued his studies under the direction of its rector. In after years he proclaimed the Gospel from its pulpit. The recessional hymn was, "O Paradise," and at the conclusion of the service, the visitors who included the wife and daughter of Bishop Satterlee, and a number of Bishop Clagett's descendants, from Washington and Maryland, were entertained at the rectory with beautiful and lavish hospitality.

Kansas

Frank Rosebrook Millspaugh, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. P. P. Bolan, formerly a priest of the Church of Rome, has become rector of St. John's church, Hiawatha.

An old citizen of Topeka, but not a Churchman, Mr. G. G. Gage, has left as the only legacy except to his family, $1,000 to Christ's Hospital.

St. Paul's, Manhattan

The Bishop confirmed a class of 11 on May 27th. The young rector, the Rev. Will P. James, is doing conscientious work, and this old parish is taking on new life. He has, on his own account, added a mission, St. George's, where the Church was not known, and has already the interest of a large number of the people.

Christ Church, Sallna

This parish is growing, under the Rev. Irving Baxter. They hope soon to have the debt to the Church Building Fund liquidated. The Bishop confirmed a class of 11 here, and three more cadets of St. John's military school.

Convocation of the Deanery of Atchison

The annual convocation was held in St. Paul's church, Leavenworth, May 231 to 25th. There were present, 13 clergy, in addition to the Bishop, and lay delegates from several parishes. It opened with a service, conducted by Dean Hill, for the Woman's Auxilliary, at which addresses were made by the Bishop and the Rev. J. H. Molineux, and Mrs. Millspaugh gave an interesting talk on the Triennial Meeting in Washington last year. A missionary meeting was held in the evening, at which addresses were made by the Rev. Mr. Bolland, on "The Spirit of Missions"; by the Rev. P. B. Eversden, on "Missionary work in Kansas"; by the Rev. J. Mayou, on "The mission field in India," and by the Bishop who, in his delightful way, spoke to the choir boys of his early work as a missionary in Minnesota. The Holy Eucharist was celebrated at 7:30 A. M. of the second day, by the Rev. J. H. Molineux. At 10 o'clock, Morning Prayer was said, followed by a second Celebration by the dean, at which the sermon was preached by Archdeacon Crawford. The afternoon was devoted to the Daughters of the King. A short service was said by Dean Hill who is chaplain and founder of the Order in the diocese, after which papers were read on the "Rule of Service," by Miss McFaden, of Kansas City, Kas.; on "The rule of keeping the vows of the Order," by Miss Olive Brockelsby, of Lawrence, and encouraging reports were made from the various branches represented. The Rev. Dr. Cameron Mann urged upon the Daughters the advantages of a literary study of the Prayer Book, the Bible, and Church history. The chaplain also addressed them on the importance of their vows, urging upon them a more thorough consecration to the work undertaken. A second missionary meeting was held in the evening, at which addresses were delivered by the Very Rev. John W. Sykes, the Rev. J. S. Smith, and the Rev. L. G. Moultrie. The proceedings of the third day opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion by the Rev. P. B. Eversden. A very strong paper was read by the Rev. J. S. Smith, on "Symbolism," and practical addresses were made by Dean Sykes, on the Sunday school, and by the Rev. P. B. Eversden, on "Church music."

North Dakota

Samuel C. Edsall, D.D., Bishop

The Tenth Annual Convocation

Opened on June 1st, with the consecration of St. Paul's church, Grand Forks, in which, after this service, the various sessions were held. The day before had been set apart by the Bishop as a Clerical Retreat, which proved to be an occasion rich in spiritual blessing to all who were privileged to be present. The meditations and instructions were delivered in the Bishop's own forcible and practical manner. The evening was devoted to a fraternal gathering of the clergy at the rectory. Mrs. Edsall and the wives of several of the clergy were also present. Mr. B. S. Russell, of Jamestown, recited selections from the poetical books of the Old Testament, and gave a delightful and instructive talk on Psalm xxiv.

The first business session of the convocation opened at 2 P. M. Twelve clergymen, including the Bishop, and an unusual number of lay-delegates, answered the roll call. The Rev. C. Turner was re-elected secretary for the ensuing year, and Col. Peake, of Valley City, as treasurer. The Bishop's primary address to the clergy and laity, besides giving a resume of his official acts since his consecration on St. Paul's Day, was replete with useful hints in regard to the doctrines, discipline, worship, and usages of the Church. During the session, much useful work was done, and all the deliberations were carried on in the most harmonious and agreeable manner. Two important resolutions were introduced by Mr. B. S. Russell, the one referring to polygamy, and the other to divorce. It was felt to be matter of sincere regret that, owing to lack of funds, Archdeacon Appleby's eminent services as general missionary must be discontinued after August 1st. The Rev. Chas. Turner, of Devil's Lake, and Mr. E. C. Elwood, of Grand Forks, were elected Delegates to the Missionary Council.

It may safely be said that no convocation of North Dakota has ever exceeded this in the amount of business dispatched in the same length of time, and in the evident oneness of spirit which characterized all that was said and done. The concluding service, on Friday night, was addressed by the Bishop, Archdeacon Appleby, the Rev. H. J. Sheridan, and the Rev. W. D. Rees. Thus ended a Church gathering which will long live in the grateful remembrance of those who attended it. The harvest is plentiful, the laborers are few, but the outlook is encouraging.

The Woman's Auxilliary

The meeting was addressed by the Bishop who appointed the following officers for the convocation year: Mrs. R. J. Mooney, of Fargo, president; Miss Daisy Reeve, of Buxton, vice-president; Miss Katharine Seward, of Grand Forks, secretary; Mrs. Chas. Turner, of Devil's Lake, treasurer. The treasurer was also elected president of the Babies' Branch of the Auxilliary. Several most excellent papers were read, showing what has already been done, and what it is hoped to accomplish in future. Throughout the proceedings the greatest unanimity prevailed.

Consecration of St. Paul's, Grand Forks

The church has recently been cleared of debt, and presented with two handsome memorials, one a large and very beautiful brass altar cross, in memory of the late Matthew Addison; the other, a brass altar-rail, given by the girls of the St. Margaret's Guild, in memory of their beloved Sunday school teacher and helper, Mrs. Josephine Anderson McDermont; both are the work of the Luetke Art Works, of New York. At the hour for the consecration, the vested choir of 24 men and boys, led by the cross-bearer, and followed by every clergyman in active service in North Dakota, marched to the east door of the church, singing the hymn, "We march, we march to victory, with the Cross of the Lord before us." As the Bishop reached the door, the procession halted a moment, and the words of the consecration Psalm were taken up, Bishop and clergy reading and responding alternately. The service was one of great dignity and beauty. The Instrument of Donation was read by Mr. E. C. Elwood, for many years senior warden, and the Certificate of Consecration, by the Rev. A. T. Gesner, rector of the parish. The consecration sermon was preached by the Bishop, and was a scholarly and eloquent exposition of the manner in which the Infinite God has mercifully revealed Himself to finite beings. The celebration of the Holy Communion concluded the service, the Bishop being celebrant. During the service of consecration, a telegram of congratulation was read from the first rector of the parish, the Rev. Woodford P. Law, of Grand Rapids, Mich. One of the brightest and most promising young men of the parish, after months of careful thought, has decided to study for the ministry of the Church. May 30th, Bishop Edsall confirmed 10 persons, the second class confirmed by him in this parish since his arrival last February.

Mexico

By authority given at the last General Convention, the Rev. Henry Forrester has been visiting the English-speaking missions in Mexico. Leaving the city of Mexico, May 14th, after a 25 hours' ride on the Mexican National, he reached the city of Saltillo, of 20,000 inhabitants, capital of Coahuila, in the Sierra Madre mountains, 5,300 ft. above sea level. Here he was met by the Rev. George Rose, of St. Paul's mission, Monterey. After short notice, ten persons, representing seven families of 32 souls, came together to consider the matter of having Church services at stated intervals; and as a result, it is expected, at the suggestion of the Rev. Mr. Forrester, that the presbyter at Monterey will cover both places. May 18th, services were held in Monterey by the Rev. Messrs. Forrester and Rose, where for the past 18 months there have been continuous services without financial aid from the outside, conducted by a minister of the Church. Monterey, 1,800 ft. in elevation, with skies of almost constant brightness, and climate extremely delightful notwithstanding a summer of six months' duration, has 70,000 inhabitants, and is the gateway not only to Mexico, but to the other Central and South American States, and is also the most progressive city south of the Rio Grande. Mr. Forrester left for San Luis Potosi Thursday night, to gather the Church people together there, expecting to be back in the City of Mexico Sunday, May 21st, to resume his many and arduous duties at the capital. Monterey reports 37 Church families and parts of families, making 142 individuals, with 29 communicants.

Editorials and Contributions

IT is now a burning question in this Church how far the rubber-band of inclusiveness is going to stretch. It is the nature of rubber-bands to include and hold together a great many things, some of them quite distinct in their character and tendencies from others; but it is also the nature of rubber-bands to rebel when the tension is greater than they can bear. There are inclusions which embrace things good and congenial, while others are combinations of evil, and others still unite elements that are of a mixed character. Of all it may be predicated that, being of the nature of a modus vivendi, rather than a vital union, they may incur at any time the penalties which always wait to inflict themselves upon abuse.

INCLUSIVENESS is, beyond question, a good thing in its way, and, indeed, it may be said to be a necessary thing, for "many men have many minds." The Lord Himself recognized its necessity when He included a great variety of men in the number of those whom He called to be Apostles, one of whom had a devil. But inclusion did not prevent this wretched person from going to his own place when the time came. There is, and there ought to be, a limit, else would truth fare ill in its associations, and in the end evil would get control in the world. In our Church, from the time when the men of the old learning tried to kiss the cheeks of the men of the new, and in America, from the time when Connecticut and South Carolina found it possible to federate, not without some nausea, there has been a pretty handsome triumph of the principle of unity. But in these latter days, when nearly everything that calls itself a Church is racked and miserably tormented by the contentions of internal antagonists (with the natural result that many lose faith, and the unbelieving people laugh with scorn), it could not but be that we should have our share of the battle, and our share we have with a vengeance.

THE ordination of Dr. Briggs is an event of less importance in itself considered, than it is when you look at it as an indication of the condition of the Church. Just look at it! Here is a man who was cast out by the Presbyterians for extreme views in Biblical criticism, but who can easily sail into full Orders in this Church, under circumstances and with endorsements which clearly show so extreme a tension of the bond of inclusiveness that many of us, both among the laity and the clergy, are asking the question: "How far is this thing to go?"

FOOD for thought, as well as occasion of surprise, was recently furnished to the members of the Long Island Church Club by the Rev. Dr. Pelham Williams. It was well known that the speaker had some very positive (or rather, negative) views on Sunday schools, and those who knew Dr. Pelham W. expected some plain talk on the subject. It seems that he succeeded in making himself understood, and raised quite a breeze. Some of the brethren were "astounded," the reporter says, "swept off their feet!" One of the utterances that almost took their breath away, was that he did not believe in "any Sunday school that ever was, ever is, or ever will be!" This was rather too strong, we must admit, for it may be that Dr. Williams does not know what the Sunday school of the future will be. But he is not so far from right in his Pelhamesque way of putting it, concerning the Sunday school that "ever has been and ever is." We believe that it is better for children to go to church than to school, on Sunday. To require them to go to both, is to put upon them a burden to which their elders would not submit. Yet we presume that there is scarcely one pastor in a hundred who would vote to abolish the Sunday school. By what other means can he reach the children? They will not come to church, for the most part, even if they do not come to school; their parents do not come, in many cases, nor do they teach the children at home. Is it not possible to bring the Sunday school and the church services together?

— x —

CHICAGO was well represented, we are pleased to see, at the American Medical Association in Cleveland last week. Among the notable physicians of this city—and one most widely known and honored as a Churchman—was Dr. Daniel R. Brower, whose address on "The Medical Aspect of Crime" was perhaps the most interesting of the session. Dr. Brower has made a specialty of "the mind diseased," and has some well-matured convictions upon criminology, which legislators will do well to consider. Not that Dr. Brower holds that crime is the result of disease; it is rather the breeder of mental disease, and this tends to degeneracy, even in children's children. He recommends that such offspring be taken under the control of the State at seven years of age, and be kept in favorable environment. The death penalty no longer, as in ancient times, keeps down the race of habitual criminals. Penalties protect now rather than exterminate. So the hardened cases should be kept where they can do no harm. Judges should be expert in mental pathology, and the pardoning power should rest alone in a board skilled in criminal anthropology. The increase in criminals is appalling; from one in 3,442 in 1850, to one in 757 in 1890.

— x —

The Business Side of Religion

SOME time ago The New York Evening Post published an editorial on New York Churches, which was suggested by the recent troubles in the "West Presbyterian church" of that city. The article exposes with almost brutal frankness the patent results of the present voluntary system. Ministers of various denominations, learned and faithful men and "good preachers," are constantly compelled to surrender their pulpits on the ground that the "cash returns" from their ministry are not satisfactory. The relation has become a matter of hard business. The people who make up the congregations of these churches are not expected to sell their stocks and holdings and lay the proceeds at the feet of the Apostles, that the Gospel may be preached and the poor be fed, either with the bread of heaven or with earthly food. On the contrary, the minister is expected, by means of his gifts of eloquence and the charm of his reputation, to fill the church so full, and to create such a demand for places, that pew rents will go up and the coffers of the church be kept filled to overflowing. It rests with the minister alone to provide the means, not only of paying his own salary, but all the church expenses, and old debts and mortgages besides. In order that pew rents may rise, and the revenues be brought up to the required standard, he is forced, whatever his earlier ideals may have been, to bid more and more for the support of the rich. An immense strain is put upon a man in this way. He must, at all hazards, make the business a paying one. Danger threatens when his watchful trustees or vestry begin to take note that the applications for pews are not much ahead of the number which from time to time become vacant. A crisis arises when vacant pews are no longer promptly taken at the old prices; and when it is seen that, even at reduced rates, the number of those which remain unsold or unrented slowly but steadily increases, the time has come for the pastor's resignation to be talked of, and at last fairly and squarely demanded. "Nobody has a word to say against the pastor; he is a good man and a good preacher; but the Midases have given up their pew, the Gorgeonses advertise theirs for sale, and what are you going to do?"

THE poor minister who, in accepting his position, was assured that he would be kept "free from worldly cares," has soon to face the truth that he is at the head of a great business enterprise, and that its success depends upon himself alone. He must watch with feverish interest the fluctuations in the pew market, and strain every nerve to meet the demand that he shall be acceptable to the wealthiest. His position is peculiar. Oppressed by the worldly interests with which he fondly hoped he might have nothing to do, it is yet absolutely necessary that he should live an intellectual life. To fail in any point as a preacher of more than average ability would be ruin. The temptation is great to leave out something of that Gospel which, under such circumstances, becomes a mere impracticable ideal, or in the end to preach another Gospel, the perversion and travesty of that of old. It is not strange, as The Post says, that while some men of exceptional powers succeed, notwithstanding this enormous stress and strain, many also fail. They go away broken in health and spirit, and with ruined prospects, and are forgotten. Too often the "call" which comes to a preacher who has great success in a country town, and is considered a subject for congratulation, is in reality "a call only to fierce competition, to incessant and heart-breaking labor, to overwhelming anxieties, and to final failure."

THE Evening Post ascribes much of the trouble to the struggle for life among these churches of rival sects. Without regard to the interests of each other, "they push for eligible sites on 'the avenue' as eagerly as if they were so many clubs," as, in fact, when stripped of a certain religious glamor, they really are. The Post observes that this peculiar kind of trouble is not so common among the Episcopal Churches—meaning, we suppose, the Roman and our own. Yet to some extent the same conditions exist, and it would seem probable that sooner or later the same consequences must follow. Doubtless the down-grade movement is checked by a different conception of the nature of the Church and its office in the world, but evidences are not wanting of the dominant presence of the financial motive. It is seen, for one thing, in the steady abandonment of the poorer sections of the city. The Post suggests the remedy which in days to come will be seen to be the true one; namely, some scheme of endowment. There can be little question that the reason why the Episcopal Church in New York has a certain advantage in the points under discussion, is because, beginning with Trinity parish, so much progress has already been made in this direction. We regard it as certain that in great cities it is only by a system of endowed churches, in which rich and poor meet together on equal terms, that the Gospel can ever be adequately brought home to the destitute, and the work of Christ be untrammelled by earthly considerations. An endowed church has its own difficulties, there is still plenty of room for human frailty; but the difficulties here are not such as to subject the religion which we profess, to the humiliation and odium which attaches to a temple controlled by money-changers and in the end devoted to their exclusive use.

Words for the Times

FROM THE ANNUAL ADDRESS OF THE
RT. REV. CORTLANDT WHITEHEAD, D.D.

NO Churchman can read of the agitation now going on in the English Church without deepest sorrow and anxiety. No one can observe the heated discussion which has arisen concerning the limits of toleration in this Church of ours with regard to the Higher Criticism (so called) and Biblical Interpretation, without serious searchings of heart. No one can look out upon the tremendous questions which concern our country and its future policy, and the resultant opportunities of the Church, without a sense of awe and a feeling of weakness in the presence of overwhelming responsibilities.

And I mention these things, not to enlarge upon them, but that you may know that I have by no means forgotten or ignored them. It may be that, concerning some of them at least, silence is golden. Light may come—will come—without the strife of tongues. Of the Church we can always reassure ourselves, "God is in the midst of her, therefore shall she not be removed. God shall help her, and that right early."

Crises there have been all along her history, and she has survived them all. Even the gates of hell shall not prevail against her. If we are Christian men at all, we must perforce say farewell to pessimism, and believe in the ultimate triumph of the Truth. The Golden Age of Christianity lies not in the past, but in the future. We have indeed arrived at perilous times, as the Apostles foretold should come to pass. But what we see is but an infinitesimal portion of the infinite circle of eternity, and we cannot judge rightly from what passes under our eyes in a score of years, or even in a century. We discern only a small part of the immense battle-field, and what can we learn amid the smoke of the conflict and the din of arms? God is working His purpose out, and the progress for truth and right is being made; and because we are Christ's, and have His unfailing promise, we must look forward hopefully and declare over and again with no bated breath that "at the Name of Jesus every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that He is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Only let us be sure that we ourselves remain at all hazards sound in the Faith, giving no heed to fables; and speaking the truth in love, in season, out of season, grow up into Him in all things which is the Head, even Christ. Loyalty to His Person will bring us safely through.

I often think of the encouragement given to the Prophet Daniel when he inquired, as our hearts do to-day: "O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?" And He said: "Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified and made white and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly. And none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand. . . . But go thou thy way till the end be; for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days."

And then, again, those ringing words of our Lord's, clear and distinct through all the ages: "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Only let us humbly ask that we may walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, rising to its dignity, responsibility, and grandeur. What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness? This is no time for indifference, but for faithful, honest, manly, intelligent work for God and Country and the Truth.

The Transfer of Honolulu

ADDRESS BY THE BISHOP OF HONOLULU
TO HIS DIOCESE

My dear brethren of the clergy and laity in the diocese of Honolulu:

THE time has arrived when, as chief pastor of the Anglican Church in Hawaii, I should make fully known to all members of the Church in the islands the course of action that the changed political conditions has rendered desirable to be taken to secure the present well-being of the Church and promote its advancement in the future.

At a recent General Convention of the American Church held at Washington, it was recognized that the Hawaiian Islands having passed under the dominion of the United States, the responsibility of making spiritual provision for their new possession devolved upon that branch of the Anglican Communion, although immediate action could not be taken, inasmuch as the islands had for a considerable period been a missionary diocese of the Church of England.

A resolution postponing the consideration of the course to be taken until after conference with the authorities of the Church of England, having been adopted by the Convention, it did not at first appear open to me to move in the matter until I had received some communication indicating the steps that should be taken under circumstances which have never before arisen in the history of the Anglican Communion. No advice, however, having been received, there appeared, on mature consideration, no valid reason why I should not take the initiatory step toward handing over to the Church in the United States a responsibility which that Church is ready and desirous to assume.

Under these circumstances, the course that I have adopted has been to forward to the Archbishop of Canterbury (with whom, so far as the Church of England is concerned, the final authority rests) a recommendation that the spiritual jurisdiction of these islands be transferred to the Church in the United States as soon as that Church is in a position to receive it and to make provision for its support.

As an offshoot of the Church of England, the Anglican Church has taken root in these islands, and had the country remained in an independent political condition, the mother Church would, without doubt, have continued to foster its growth until it became a self-supporting diocese of the Anglican Communion.

But the trend of public events has been otherwise. The annexation of the islands to the United States points to the advisability of the Church in America taking up and continuing the work that has hitherto been done by the Church of England. With this transfer of responsibility in view, I have placed my tenure of the oversight of this mission in the hands of the Archbishop, so that it may cease as soon as, but not until, the House of Bishops in America is ready to consecrate a bishop to succeed me.

It is quite possible that this transfer of jurisdiction may not at first commend itself to all members of the Church in the islands, in consequence of the various nationalities our membership comprises. But when it is clearly seen that such a transfer follows the natural order of events, and that it would be an anomalous state of things for the Anglican Church in Hawaii not to be attached to the American branch of the Anglican Communion, I am confident that the action I have taken will meet with general approval.

At present I have no means of knowing whether the transfer can be effected during the present year, or whether it will be necessary to wait for the action of the General Convention in 1901. In either case, there is much that you can do in preparation for the change. Times of transition are so often periods of disintegration that I take this opportunity of impressing upon all who realize what it is to be members of the Church of Christ, that the present is a time for united effort to strengthen those foundations that we have been permitted to lay, and to maintain in efficiency the agencies for evangelization and Christian education already established, so that the first American bishop may be welcomed to a missionary jurisdiction full of zeal and earnestness to aid him in the work of further development and expansion.

Under the new order of things, I look forward with confidence and hope to a bright and harmonious future for the Anglican Church in Hawaii. For the realization of a future so full of promise, the one aim of all, both clergy and laity, will be to promote the glory of God and the advancement of His Church.

May the Divine Head of the Church who, at His Ascension, sent down from the Father the Holy Spirit, by whom the whole body of the Church is governed and sanctified, direct our way in peace, remove all causes of reproach from amongst us, and guide all our actions to the accomplishment of His will and the edification of His people, so that the Anglican Church in Hawaii, united in one holy bond of truth and peace, may never cease to be His blessed instrument for the conversion of the heathen and the salvation of souls.

Faithfully and affectionately,
Your brother in the Lord,
ALFRED WILLIS.

Honolulu, April 9, 1899.

Letters to the Editor

PARISH SCHOOLS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

If every church in our land could have its own school for the children adjoining, it would be the Church's greatest benefit. Let its teachers be Churchmen or Churchwomen, and well paid, and the very best that can be secured. Let it be a free school, supported by its own Church, where children can be trained in body, mind, and soul. A child brought up in such a school will stand firm in the "Faith once delivered to saints," against all the waves of doubt and "winds of doctrine."

E. J. R.

COMPETING DENOMINATIONS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Another contribution to the evil of sectarianism was made recently by the Rev. William Hayes Ward, editor of The Independent. Dr. Ward has just returned from Puerto Rico, and after a description of the island and its people, he "dwelt on the unwisdom of setting up a system of competing denominations on the island, each with its little corrugated roof church, the contrast of which with the more magnificent Catholic cathedral would be striking. The wisest plan would be to set up normal schools, to establish churches of Christ, without introducing denominationalism. But this, unfortunately, could not be done, since the different mission boards of other denominations had already been moved by their people to begin denominational work." We may hope for great things when a leading religious paper bewails the "system of competing denominations." An application at home of eliminating "denominational work" would save our brethren the regret of "different mission boards" entering into competition abroad." D. B. S.

A CORRECTION

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In your issue of June 3rd, in the account of the council of the diocese of Lexington, the types made the subject of the sermon before the council, "The Last Order of the Church." It should have been the "Lost Order"—referring to the diaconate, which, as a working order, has been virtually lost. D. D. CHAPIN.

Personal Mention

The Rev. Charles D. Atwell has accepted a call to the rectorship of Grace church, Ishpeming, Mich., entering upon the same the third Sunday after Trinity.

The Rev. John Wesley Brown, D. D., has sailed for a tour of Europe.

The Rev. J. S. Bunting, of the church of the Holy Apostles, Philadelphia, will enter upon his duties as rector of Christ church, Christiana Hundred, Delaware, about Aug. 1st.

The Rev. Walter E. Bentley having resigned the vicarship of St. Mark's church, has become the vicar of St. James' chapel, Mt. Hope, New York city. Address 624 East 179th st.

The Rev. Lewis Brown, of St. Thomas' church, Battle Creek, has been chosen for the fifth time to deliver the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of the Battle Creek High School.

The Rev. H. M. Clarke, Ph. D., has accepted the charge of St. Matthew's church, Eldred, and St. Joseph's, Port Allegany, diocese of Pittsburgh, and will enter upon his duties June 1st.

The Rev. R. M. Doherty has accepted the rectorship of St. Martin's church, Marcus Hook, diocese of Pennsylvania.

The Rev. John F. Fenton has accepted a call to the rectorship of St. Luke's church, Metuchen, New Jersey. Address accordingly.

The Rev. S. W. Garrett, of London, Ohio, has accepted a missionary circuit consisting of Kane, Ludlow, Mt. Jewett, Hazelhurst, Kinzua, Youngsville, and Tidoute, diocese of Pittsburgh, and will enter upon the duties of his new field of labor on June 1st.

The address of the Rev. Wm. J. Gold, warden of the Western Theological Seminary, Chicago, after June 12th, will be Lima, Ind.

The Rev. Stephen Innes has accepted appointment to St. Ambrose church, New York city.

The address of the Rev. E. N. Joyner, for the summer, is Saluda, N. C.

The Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, the Rt. Rev. Frederick Courtney, D. D., D. C. L., arrived in New York from Italy, on the North German Lloyd steamship "Ennis."

The Rev. John McGann has entered upon the rectorship of the church of the Holy Spirit, Mattapan, Mass.

The Rev. James Alan Montgomery will take charge, June 15th, of the mission at Pelham, Pa., established recently by Ven. Archdeacon Brady.

The permanent address of the Rev. Ernest A. Pressey is Woodfords, Portland, Me.

The Rev. S. Van Rensselaer has taken charge of St. Helen's chapel, New Lenox, Mass.

The Rev. Thomas Semmes, who recently resigned the rectorship of St. Andrew's church, Richmond, Va., has concluded to accede to the request made by the vestry and congregation, and will not sever his connection with the parish.

Official

The Standing Committee of the diocese of Tennessee met on June 6th, and organized by the election of the Rev. F. P. Davenport, D. D., as president, and Mr. M. B. Trezevant as secretary. Communications may be addressed to the president at 78 Market st., Memphis, Tenn.

NOTICE OF DEPOSITION

MARQUETTE, MICH., June 5, 1899.

I hereby certify that Charles Ferdinand Drake, presbyter, having renounced the ministry of this Church and abandoned the Communion of the same, was this day deposed by me from the said ministry, in accordance with Title II., Canon 5, § 1., of the Digest, at St. Paul's church, Marquette, in the presence of the Rev. Edward Warren and the Rev. Joseph McConnell.

G. MOTT WILLIAMS,
Bishop of Marquette.

THE ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE

Is organized to assist the Church at large in establishing closer relations with men and women following the dramatic profession, by making special provision for their needs, and aiding them in any and every way conducive to their welfare. A public meeting in the interest of the Alliance, for the purpose of organization, will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum, West Forty-fourth st., near Fifth ave., New York, on Monday evening, June 19th, at 8 P. M.; the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D., Bishop of New York, will preside and make the opening address. Other prominent speakers have been invited to address the meeting. The stage will be represented by F. F. Mackay, president of the Actors' Society, and others.

WALTER E. BENTLEY.

Chairman Church and Stage Committee of C. A. I. L.

TRINITY COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT WEEK, 1899

Sunday, June 25th—9:15 A. M., Morning Prayer and Holy Communion in the chapel; 7:45 P. M., Evening Prayer, in Christ church, with baccalaureate sermon by the president.

Monday, June 26th—3 P. M., Class-day exercises on the campus; 9 P. M., Class-Day reception, in Alumni Hall.

Tuesday, June 27th—9:30 A. M., Prayers, in the chapel; 10 A. M., annual meeting of the Alumni Association; 12 M., annual meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa; 12:30 P. M., breaking of ground for Natural History building; 1:30 P. M., luncheon for the trustees, alumni, and friends of the college; 4 P. M., unveiling of memorial tablet to Clarke Churchman, U. S. A., by class of '98; 5 to 8 P. M., president's reception, at his residence.

Wednesday, June 28th—11:30 A. M., Seventy-third Commencement, in Parsons' Theatre; 2 P. M., Commencement dinner, at the United States Hotel.

HOBART COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT

Sunday, June 18th.—10:30 A. M., Trinity church, sermon before the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and the Hobart chapter of the Student's Missionary Association, by the Rev. C. F. J. Wrigley. 8:00 P. M., Trinity church, baccalaureate sermon, by the Rev. Rob Roy McG. Converse, D. D., D. C. L.

Tuesday, June 20th.—10:00 A. M., White rhetorical prize orations; 11:00 A. M., class day exercises; 3:00 P. M., annual meeting of the associate alumni; 4:30 P. M., meeting of the Hobart College chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa society; 7:30 P. M., alumni social gathering.

Wednesday, June 21st.—10:00 A. M. (Opera House) Seventy-fourth Annual Commencement. Address, by the Honorary Chancellor, the Rev. Wm. R. Huntington, D. D., D. C. L.; 1:00 P. M., Commencement dinner; 8:00 P. M., reception by the president.

Ordinations

On Trinity Sunday, May 28th, in St. James' church, Baton Rouge, La., Mr. Fred DuMontier Devall was admitted to the diaconate by Bishop Sessums. The candidate was presented by the rector, Mr. Gresham, and the sermon was preached by the Bishop.

On the 1st Sunday after Trinity, in St. James' church, Buffalo, Bishop Walker advanced to the sacred order of priests, the Rev. Walter R. Lord, one of the curates of St. James' parish. The sermon was preached by the rector, the Rev. C. H. Smith, D. D., who was also presenter.

On Trinity Sunday, in St. Stephen's church, Boston, Bishop Lawrence advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Messrs. H. R. Talbot, H. Whitmore, F. R. Kimball, E. N. Bullock, and A. H. Ross. Messrs. C. T. Gregg, R. T. Loring, B. T. Takal, and M. Taylor were made deacons. Bishop Hall preached the sermon.

Trinity Sunday in St. Paul's church, Buffalo, W. N. Y., Bishop Walker ordained the following to the diaconate: Messrs. J. C. Ward, L. T. Scofield, M. S. Johnson, David C. Huntington, and M. H. Milne. The presenters were the Rev. Drs. W. D. O. Doty, the Rev. J. A. Regester, and the Rev. C. H. Boynton; the latter preached the sermon.

In St. Paul's church, Duluth, May 31st, Bishop J. D. Morrison advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Francis E. Alleyne. The Rev. J. F. Hamilton, D. D., preached the sermon, and the Rev. Albert Ryan, D. D., LL. D., presented the candidate. The Rev. Mr. Alleyne becomes rector of Emmanuel parish, Alexandria, Minn., which he has served the past year.

On Trinity Sunday, at the church of the Ascension, Pittsburgh, Mr. Laurence Foster Bower was admitted to the diaconate by the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, S. T. D. The sermon was preached by the Bishop, and the candidate presented by the Rev. R. W. Grange. Mr. Bower is a graduate of the class of '99 of the General Theological Seminary in New York, and will begin the exercise of his ministry in some of the missions of the diocese.

Died

MARTIN—On Wednesday, May 31, 1899, at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Farrar, 307 S. McNairy st., Nashville, Tenn., Laura, beloved wife of the Rev. Mayo Cabell Martin, rector of St. Clement's church, El Paso, Tex.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

TILLINGHAST.—On Thursday, May 26, 1899, J. Wilbur Tillinghast, for many years senior warden of St. Peter's church, Albany, N. Y.

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

Church and Parish

A PLEASANT home in Episcopalian family for children of parents who may wish to travel. Kind motherly care. References. Address MRS. S. DAVIES, 7015 St. Lawrence ave., Chicago.

A LADY desires work in a Home for Aged Women, or in a Babies' Home. She will work for her board and a small remuneration. For further particulars, address the SISTERS OF THE HOLY NATIVITY, Fond du Lac, Wis.

EXPERIENCED priest wants sole charge, or curacy church. Age 38. Musical, good preacher, visitor. Address CLERICUS, care THE LIVING CHURCH.

EUCCHARISTIC WAFERS.—Priests' wafers, one cent; people's wafers, twenty cents a hundred; plain sheets, two cents. MISS A. G. BLOOMER, 239 Railroad ave., Mt. Vernon, New York.

CLERGYMAN of New York city (university graduate), spending summer at Newport, R. I., will receive into his family, from June 15th to Oct. 1st, a few boys or young men preparing for college. Highest social and educational advantages. Terms for the season, $500. For further particulars, address G. W. K., THE LIVING CHURCH.

MUSICAL SCHOLARSHIP.—A full scholarship will be given a student to act as organist at Nashotah Seminary. Address DR. WEBB, Nashotah House, Wis.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL of the church of the Epiphany, Chicago, would be glad to mail on or about the 8th of each month, from 100 to 125 copies of the Junior Auxiliary Publishing Company's Missionary Leaflet S. S. Lessons on the Church's Mission Work, to any Sunday school whose superintendent would notify the undersigned that these leaflets would be of use. The first series will be studied this year.

JOHN HENRY HOPKINS, Rector.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, June, 1899

4. 1st Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
11. ST. BARNABAS, Apostle. 2nd Sunday after Trinity.	Red.
18. 2d Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
24. NATIVITY ST. JOHN BAPTIST.	White.
25. 4th Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
29. ST. PETER, Apostle.	Red.

And owls that mark a setting sun declare
A starlight evening and a morning fair.

A dripping June brings all things in tune.

Pen-and-Ink-lings

THE history of Bible publishing in America discloses the fact that Philadelphia has played a most important part in this branch of book-making. The first Hebrew Bible published in this country was printed by William Fry, of Philadelphia, in 1814. This was the second American book in Hebrew characters, the press of Harvard College having issued in 1809, an edition of the Psalms. The Sauer Bible, of which reprints are still in existence, was printed in Germantown, in 1743, and the first Douay Bible reprinted in America, was published in Philadelphia, in 1790.

IT must have been a great comfort to her worshipers to see Mrs. Eddy "attired in a quietly elegant gown of gray satin covered with exquisite black lace." There is, it is true, no such thing as matter, silk or otherwise, and one must therefore interpret this description in a purely idealistic sense. It was only the reporter's belief in gowns and lace!

LILLIAN NORDICA, writing on "America's Musical Future," in Ainslie's Magazine, thus expresses her opinion:

Musical success is more difficult here than in a country like Italy, because in Italy, a child with a taste for music would receive more general approval. I do not say that a love for music makes a nation intellectually superior to one that has not a love of music. I consider the United States a much more intelligent nation than Italy. I might say that there is just as much love for music here as there is anywhere, but it is a love for a lower, a simpler form. I will say, however, that an intelligent nation which has a sincere love of classic music is a greater nation mentally than one without it, and if Italy were as well equipped in other respects as America, it would be first in the world. America leads in business just as those nations which have a sincere love of music lead in music. If some young Americans with their intellectual strength and their new blood, brought the same love of perfection, the same willingness to work tirelessly and long, to the study of music which they now bring to the task of acquiring a fortune, there would be more great musicians of every kind in the country, I can assure you.

THIRTY schools in New York will be used for eight weeks during the summer as play-schools for the poor.—A water-color by a boy of thirteen, named Adrien Etienne, has been accepted for this year's exhibition by the Champ de Mars salon.—A co-operative colony, similar to that at Ruskin, Tenn., is to be formed at Porterville, Cal.

IN answering the question how the power of the pulpit is to be maintained, Dr. R

S. Storrs, in The Independent, gives this advice:

It cannot be, on the large scale and permanently, by introducing more frequent discussion of political, social, economical subjects, or discourses on questions of political reform. . . . To make them the common stuff of preaching appears wholly inadmissible. It is always passing from the higher themes to the lower, sometimes descending from uplands into bogs. Often the people who are presumed to be listening, know more about the matters thus discussed than does the preacher; and at all times, his office and privilege are—which in this case he foregoes—to address the higher nature in man, with the highest thoughts and motives he can summon, in the highest exercise of his most positive and stimulating spiritual force.

DR. STORRS further says:

Certainly, discourses which catch their themes from the newspapers, and undertake to comment on weekly happenings . . . it is a mild thing to say of these that they are the least respectable of all the forms of impertinent chatter which sometimes masquerades as "preaching." Nor can the pulpit be maintained in honor and power by selecting for it eccentric subjects, and picking out texts capable of being made to seem, at least, to match these subjects—in other words, by what is known as "sensationalism" in preaching. This strikes at the root of all reverence for divine things, and is thoroughly offensive, not alone to educated taste, but to sound and serious moral judgment.

ON the positive side, Dr. Storrs states the one thing which, in his opinion, as human nature is constituted, may and should maintain the pulpit in the general estimation. "It is the clear, emphatic, unaltering exhibition of the divine facts set forth in the Gospel, and of the relation of these to the action, the character, and the destiny of men."

The supernatural elements in the religion of Christ—not its ethical teachings alone or chiefly, not its exquisite portraiture of life and spirit, except as these are related to the unique character and work of the Master—the supernatural elements which are the eternal substance of the Gospel, must give to preaching its elevation, its inspiration, its cogent and vital appeal to men, its commanding address to the conscience, with the deep sensibilities to hope, aspiration, and the passion of love. Man was made, the earliest record tells us, in the image of God; and the deep things in man are only brought forth in instinctive response to the deep things in God.

A NATIONAL Musical Convention is a thing somewhat out of the ordinary, and of good omen for a people generally supposed to be principally devoted to money-getting, even to the exclusion of other interests. The recent Biennial of the National Federation of Musical Clubs was in no sense a sectional gathering. The delegates came from the extreme ends of the United States, and their purpose was to consider and adopt such means as might best promote the higher musical culture of this country. The meetings lasted for five days, half devoted to hearing music from club members and the other half to consideration of work done and to be done. It was interesting to note, says The Outlook, that the artists seemed to need no introductions or explanations, for the language of their art was a universal one, and they recognized that the work done by them was a benefit to the communities in which they lived, practical results being evident in some cases.

EPITAPH IN A KIRKYARD

Here lies the body of Sergeant Alex. Mackpherson, Who was a most extraordinary person; He stood six feet eight in his stocking feet, And always kept his accoutrements clean and neat.
He was slew
At Waterloo,
Where a great b'g round bullet
Went in the back of his neck and came out of his gullet;
And of such is the kingdom of heaven!

Woman's Power and Privilege

AN ADDRESS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF
ST. AGATHA'S SCHOOL, JUNE 2, 1899

BY THE RT. REV. GEO. F. SEYMOUR, D. D., LL D., BISHOP OF SPRINGFIELD.

DEAR alumnae now of St. Agatha's School, as you have just been added by academic birth to our goodly family of daughters, we greet you and welcome you to your new position of dignity and responsibility.

We cannot forbear, as we look into your youthful faces, full of faith, hope, and heavenly charity—we cannot forbear saying a few words, which, like seeds dropped at the right season into the soil, will produce, we trust, in due time their harvest.

Your past is brief; perhaps it seems long to you now, but the future will soon give it its proper proportions, and you will look back upon it and unconsciously separate it into home life and school life. Their memories are sweet and tender, and those of school for you close this day in the solemn present, which is your commencement, celebrated and solemnized in our pro-cathedral, under the auspices of Evensong, on the first day of summer.

The skies are bright, dear girls; the air is pure and fresh and fragrant with the odors of roses and sweet flowers, and the spring has left us and you an unusually rich legacy of verdure in tree and meadow and garden. You are fortunate in your festal day, as it smiles upon you with more than ordinary loveliness of summer on the first of June.

Leaving the past and present, then, we desire to help you to give character to your future, that it may be in harmony with your past and present, rich in usefulness and blessing to others, and a benediction to yourselves.

God measures the length of our days, since "our times are in His hands." We cannot tell how long we shall be permitted to live here. We cannot forecast and say which of you seven will be called away first, and which will be left to tarry as the last. We cannot reveal these secrets. But we can speak of what is vastly more important—your relation to your own future, be it long or short. God puts that future in your hands largely to mould and fashion as you will. The moral and spiritual forces which will give it character reside within you, deep down in your souls. Whether your lives shall be passed in affluence or poverty, in joy or sorrow, in positions of worldly influence or in obscurity, makes no difference as regards your relation to your own future, in the eye of God, and in the presence of all mankind—that you must control yourselves in good degree, whatever be your earthly condition.

Your homes have helped you hitherto.

Perhaps father and mother, or, perchance, others, have strengthened wholesome advice with the potent influence of domestic love. And the school followed, with food for the mind, and the culture of gentle manners, enforced and illustrated by the examples of principals and associates, as devoted Christian women, and over all reigned supreme the love of God, in Bible lesson and prayer and sacrament.

But now all this is ended for you. The day, the hour, has come when you must leave school—St. Agatha's—and go forth as graduates, and in a larger degree than ever before become responsible for yourselves. Just at this point we desire to give you our message of counsel and admonition, that you may be in the light of the divine truth a law unto yourselves, when you go forth from home and school, and are perforce left to yourselves to stand alone, without the shelter of parents and teachers by your side.

You have been trained to help yourselves; that is the purpose of education; but our resources, even at the best, are not enough for the battle of life. We need more, we need higher help. This it is our happiness to assure you that you have in the Holy Spirit who dwells in you, and will abide with you, if you will allow Him to do so, forever. The Holy Spirit is a person. He has eyes to see and ears to hear and a heart to love. He is Light and Truth and Power. Our Lord calls Him Paraclete, one whom we may always call to our side, to aid us as we may need, and He will never turn a deaf ear to our cry. "He is always more ready to hear than we to pray."

Our wish, then, is to impress upon you this one lesson, that you have within call, nay, within you, the Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, to help you. If the way seems dark, to be a lantern to your feet; if you are faint and weary, to strengthen you; if you are perplexed, to guide you; if you are in trouble, to comfort you; if you are cast down and hopeless, to lift you up and refresh you. In a word, the Blessed Paraclete yearns to be your constant companion forever, always helping, guiding, refreshing, comforting.

If you, by faithfulness to your God, to your religious duties, to your prayers, your Church, your Bibles, will keep your Divine Companion by your side, we have no fear for your future. It will be useful and fruitful in blessings for earth, and it will be lovely in the sight of God. A woman shielded by the Holy Ghost, in the companionship of the Blessed Paraclete, must take her place with the holiest and best. A holy woman is a marvelous power for good in this evil world.

As the Bible paints her—and in that Holy Book the artist is God—she is queen of the home, and rules her subjects with discretion, and draws them to her with reverential love. She is the still small voice in society which breathes peace and soothes and calms the outbreaks and storms of human passion. She is the example of chastity and virtue, which restrains by her presence the evil propensities which are always seeking to degrade and deprave. She is the uplifter who points by her life to the skies. God commissions her, whether she be maiden, wife, or mother, to pour into the world the blessed influences of love and tenderness and purity and devotion, and thus fulfill the dignified and grand and glorious destiny to which her Creator has called her.

Remind yourselves often of your blessed privilege by sex of being associated with the purest and the best as you recite that article of your faith, "conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary," and think again of your privilege as you pass on, and say, "crucified under Pontius Pilate," and look away from him to his home, and recall his wife who did all that she could, poor heathen woman, to save him from his horrible fate. The Creed, the blessed Creed, will be a constant reminder of the glory of womanhood, as exhibited in Holy Scripture, and presented explicitly in the Virgin Mary, and suggested implicitly in the wife of Pilate. Married or unmarried, you are to be the Lord's. The Holy Ghost calls you to this high estate, and He will help you to abide in it forever, as your Companion, by your side, the Paraclete, your Defender with His spiritual armor, and your God with His gracious gifts.

Is it an accident? Nay, is it not a charming coincidence, that as a graduating class you bear in your number seven, the signature of the Blessed Spirit? The Holy Ghost joins earth to heaven, and this He does by His number seven, as well as by His presence in the Church and in the souls of men. The number of perfection, seven, is made up of the sacred number three, the signature of the Holy Trinity whose home is heaven, and the number four, which is the signature of earth as representing her four corners, and thus three and four bring heaven and earth together in the number seven.

You are seven, dear alumnae of St. Agatha's, and let your vocation be, by the help of the Holy Ghost who reigns in your hearts, to unite earth with heaven in your lives as true Christian women, and you will be acknowledged in the end as St. Agatha's good and faithful servants, fitted to enter into the joy of your Lord.

Book Reviews and Notices

The Old Testament from the Modern Point of View. By the Rev. L. W. Batten, Ph.D., Professor of the Old Testament Languages and Literature in the Philadelphia Divinity School. New York: James Pott & Co.

This work has decided merits. Among all the attempts we have seen to make the objects, methods, and results of the literary and historical criticism of the Old Testament clear to the mind of the average cultivated reader, this is the most successful. It calls for no technical knowledge. The ordinary command of logical methods which every educated man possesses, or ought to possess, is sufficient to enable one to grasp the processes here presented, and to test the validity of the conclusions arrived at. The author, as his position as a priest of the Church and a professor in one of our theological schools, would certainly lead us to suppose, writes "from the point of view of a believer, not only in the verities of the Christian religion, but also in the Old Testament," and desires to state, "most emphatically, that he discovers nothing in the results of his studies at variance with the Christian Faith." He also declares himself a believer in the inspiration of the Old Testament, and in the supernatural. Much depends upon the sense in which these terms are used. We take it that, by the author's admission, that sense is not precisely the same with that which has prevailed in the Church. The introductory chapter gives lucidly enough, an explanation of the term, "Higher Criticism," making it equivalent to literary and historical criticism. He defends the critics against the charge of unsettling people's minds by the negative and destructive character of their work. The idea seems to be that the critic has no concern with the field of the theologian, and that it is the business of the latter to gather up the fragments and show how the changed view of the Old Testament can be brought into harmony with the Christian Faith. But surely no Christian critic can take such an exclusive view of his vocation. His faith in the ultimate outcome may be sufficiently firm, but he is bound to consider the souls of others. He has no right to press onward to his goal regardless of those who may, through his means, fall by the way. When men throw out such expressions as "myth" and "legend," in connection with Holy Scripture, they do this kind of injury. To the minds of most men, the word "myth" is associated with the monstrous stories of Greek and Roman deities, and no amount of explanation can do away with such associations. Likewise the word "legend" means false history, and the inference drawn by the ordinary mind, when that term is applied to the matter of the Old Testament, is that we have there a bundle of lying narratives. The aim of the higher critic, it is said, is to make people see things truly, but if he claims to be a Christian, he will acknowledge that this is not to make them see truly. In fact, if the traditional view is not the true view, it must be acknowledged that the view suggested to the minds of most people, by the use of the terms we have mentioned, is still less true, and is, in fact, utterly disastrous. We do not intend to indict the book before us on this count. It is comparatively, though not altogether, free from this particular objection. Professor Batten, however, thinks that a better knowledge of the New Testament doctrine of the Old Testament would prepare people to look at the latter in a different way from that which is now common. He quotes from the Epistle to the Hebrews, and from the Sermon on the Mount, to prove that the New Testament regards the Old as "imperfect," and that our Lord "sets aside laws, doctrines, or morals of the Old Testament." But the word "imperfect" is ambiguous. It may be used to denote that which is incomplete, or that which is mingled with error. In the former sense, we acknowledge that the Old Testament is imperfect, but not in the latter. And this applies to the ceremonial law as fully as to any other element of the Old Dispensation. All was to be "fulfilled," not set aside, or condemned as erroneous. In another place, our author seems to confound "Jewish traditions" with the Old Testament (p. 26).

In Chapter II, Professor Batten answers several arguments against the validity of critical results. The first of these is the argument from archaeological discoveries. It will be admitted, no doubt, that Sayce and Hommel have claimed too much. Yet it is evident that some of the arguments formerly deemed conclusive, are no longer possible; as, for instance, that Moses could not have written the Pentateuch, because writing was hardly known in his time. That argument has changed its form since it has been proved that a vast literature existed in all the nations around. It is now said that the Israelites could have had no part in this because they were nomads. But they were only accidentally nomads, and that during a period shorter than the life of many men. And shall we altogether set aside the tradition that "Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians"? Whatever may be the force of other arguments, this surely must be given up. And it is archaeology which has effected this. Our author acknowledges also that in some instances positive confirmation has come from this source, of Scriptural statements, formerly called in question because they were said not to be attested by other historical documents. This ought to shake that suspicious attitude, so often perceived, but which does not seem properly critical, by which the statements of those who spake as the Spirit gave them utterance, are regarded as questionable, unless they are confirmed by other documents. The argument from silence, or from ignorance, has played too large a part in many so-called critical investigations. As to the differences among critics, in their results, our author urges that they are not so great as is often assumed, and that in certain important points, they have come to permanent agreement. He recognizes, however, the existence of a radical school "who base their conclusions too largely upon mere conjecture," and apparently rules it out of court.

Three chapters are devoted to the "Hexa-teach," and contain much interesting analysis. In many cases, we have nothing to urge against the methods employed, or the points made. But in various places we are entirely at variance with the interpretations of the critics. We deny, with the Church at all times, that the Prophets are to be considered in the places quoted (p. 154), as declaiming against "the ceremonial law as such." But this, as Strong says (Bampton Lectures, p. 39), is probably the transference of a modern conception to the age of the Prophets. Undoubtedly, these passages refer to the abuse of the sacrificial system. Prof. Batten asks why the Prophets should "have spoken in such a way as to leave in doubt, to say the least, their meaning?" The answer is, that there never has been any doubt until these modern days, unless it may have been among certain heretics of the early ages. The conception of religion ascribed by the critics to the Prophets is, as Strong says, "surely an anachronism. It could hardly have been expressed in any terms which the people of that day could have understood. And it must necessarily have failed hopelessly." It is, in fact, a purely modern and Protestant conception. It is opposed to the whole tenor of the New Testament. Our Lord never criticises the Temple worship. The Epistle to the Hebrews shows how one most important element of it was fulfilled in the New Covenant; and St. John in the Revelation pictures the worship of the Church under forms and symbols similar to those of the Old Testament, and expressing the same fundamental ideas.

Chapters VI and VII are devoted to the historical books. We wish here that the writer could have consistently remembered his dictum on p. 193, about the non-interference of the departments of theology and criticism, or else that his theological insight had been more clear. So long as he confines himself to the literary and historical side of things, we have little fault to find, whatever doubts may now and then arise, but when he comes to deal with the moral and theological aspects of the case, we are inclined to find some fault.

In his treatment of the Prophets in Chapter VIII, we pass over the methods by which their dates are ascertained, and their relation to their own times; neither do we regard as a crucial matter the ingenious process by which they are analyzed into fragments, though we take some satisfaction in the writer's conviction that this kind of thing has been carried considerably further than the facts warrant. But the point of view in which the Prophets are to be regarded is all-important. Professor Batten here takes issue with the Church. The Church is wrong in having laid chief stress upon the "predictive element" in prophecy. The real importance of the Prophets, it seems, and the entire meaning of their utterances, is to be sought in their relation to the events of their own times. To this we answer that in this matter the Church was taught by Christ and His Apostles. It was Christ who said, "Search the Scriptures, for they are they which testify of me." It was He who, "beginning from Moses and from all the Prophets," interpreted to the two disciples, "in all the Scriptures," the things concerning Himself. The Apostles constantly used the Scriptures in the same way. The Church always has delighted to find Christ and His Kingdom the burden of the Old Testament everywhere. And this has been to her the chief and the enduring value of the ancient Scriptures. The Prophets no doubt spoke for the establishment of righteousness in their own time, but that is not, and could not be, what gives their utterances permanent value. He "who spake by the Prophets" is greater than the Prophets, and He gave to their words a higher meaning than even they always knew, a meaning which made part of the mystery revealed at length in Christ. However interesting and instructive it may be to bring back the ages and circumstances in which the Prophets lived and moved, that can have little real religious value, save as it serves to illustrate and illumine the Messianic spirit and teaching. As the Jews of old, according to Professor Batten, read "with a single eye to the future destiny of Israel," and so cared little in any case for the names of authors and the exact dates and order of various prophecies, in comparison with their matter; so the Christian Church has always read with a single eye to Christ and the destinies of His true Israel, and this leaves those antiquarian details in the same position of relatively minor importance as before. Furthermore, this view of the use of the Old Testament is one which it is aside from the proper province of the critic to call in question. To re-establish any or all the Prophets in their original historical setting (a feat which can only be approximately accomplished), leaves it entirely untouched. Rightly regarded, these critical labors may do much to aid the Christian teacher at his starting point, but too much is claimed for them when it is supposed that they prove that the Prophets were not speaking of Christ, but only of their own times. The same remarks apply to the Psalms, which are treated of in Chapter X.

The last chapter, namely the twelfth, to which the author directs special attention, is most important for a correct understanding of his point of view. We observe first that the estimate of the supernatural which is here suggested is one which must profoundly affect the view taken of the Old Testament throughout. Miracles, as signs of God's presence, are minimized. The author denies that the Church sets this value upon them. He sums up what he conceives to be the teaching of the Church on this subject, in the words of the Creed, "Who spake by the Prophets." The point intended to be made is not quite clear. Is it meant that, while God manifested himself in the utterances of the Prophets, this was not the case when they related miraculous occurrences? The significance of this position becomes plainer when the author remarks that in his opinion too hard a line has been drawn between the natural and the supernatural, and goes on to speak eloquently of the presence of God in the works of nature. He proposes to substitute for this term, supernatural, the term, God. Then, the idea seems to be, whatever havoc criticism may make of the sacred records, enough will remain to reveal the presence and working of God. This he considers is all that the Creed requires. We doubt whether the writer has faced the logical bearings of this. In the same way "God" may be found in the philosophers and poets of all ages, in Buddha, Confucius, and Mohammed, and in the so-called "sacred books" of various religions. In the same sense, He may be found in the history of all nations as well as in the history of the Jews. No one has developed this more fully or more beautifully than Cardinal Newman, in the third of his lectures on "The Idea of a University." But why does the Creed say only He "spake by the Prophets"? why not also, He spake by the sages, the poets, the historians of all the past? Is it not on this theory equally true? But has the Church ever doubted that those words of the Creed have an exclusive sense?

The truth is, that in this denial of the distinction between the natural and the supernatural, as it has ever been held in the Church, we touch the crucial point. A hundred years ago in Germany, the doctrine began to be taught that Christianity is but a republication of natural religion. In our own age and country the same results are attained by insisting upon the Immanence of God, and leaving out the truth of His Transcendence. This, in the end, obscures the truth of His Personality, and conducts us to an enlightened form of heathenism. We are not charging Professor Batten with this conclusion, but we miss any statement of his which would guard the reader against it, just as in his treatment of inspiration, we miss any attempt to distinguish between the inspiration of the Prophets and that of other wise men. On the subject of miracles, the author is careful to say that he does not reject them per se, but the tendency to minimize them to the utmost is very evident. It is not quite easy to understand why certain narratives are set down as legendary except for the reason that they contain accounts of miracles.

The truth appears to be this: The Old Testament is a revelation of God as One and yet Personal. It is God, not as in nature, which is everywhere taken for granted—a truth which needs no miracles to attest it, for it is attested by the greatness and harmony of the universe—but God as above nature and absolutely separate from it, while at the same time present in every part of it at every moment. In other words, it is God in His Transcendence who is brought to the knowledge of men, that knowledge they may worship and obey. This is the significance of the theophanies, of the miraculous manifestations, of the perpetual Presence in the Holy of Holies. In and through these extraordinary revelations, along with inspired histories, psalms, and prophecies, Christ is foreshadowed and the way is prepared for the Incarnation. No result of natural evolution, but in every sense supernatural, the way which led up to it was supernatural also. No recognition of God as manifested in the motions of the heavenly bodies, in the blade of grass, the putting forth of leaf and flower, could ever have conducted men to the thought of the Incarnation.

We have had no desire to deal in an unfriendly spirit with Professor Batten's Higher Criticism. So far as it is merely criticism, uninfluenced by considerations which belong to another sphere, we are quite indifferent to its conclusions, and are entirely without alarm. But we think it of the first importance at the present time to point out that the confusion which we here find, as in other recent books treating of the same subjects, between the natural and the supernatural, the virtual emptying of the dogma of inspiration of all distinctive meaning, and the narrowing of the scope of prophecy, are seriously inconsistent with the Christian religion, and, in their consequences, destructive. These positions are not the results of criticism as such, but they must infallibly affect the methods and conclusions of the critic who holds them.

Books Received

Under this head will be announced all books received up to the week of publication. Further notice will be made of such books as the editor may select to review.

THOMAS WHITTAKER, New York.

The College Warden. By Henry A. Fairbairn, M.A., M. D. Illustrations. $1.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., Philadelphia.

The Word Protestant in Literature, History, and Legislation. By the Rev. W. H. Cavanagh. $2 net.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO

The First Book of Birds. By Olive Thorne Miller. $1. HARPER & BROS.

Cromwell's Own. A story of the great Civil War. By Arthur Paterson. $1.50.

When the Sleeper Wakes. By H. G. Wells. Illustrated. $1.50.

The Dreamers. A Club. By John Kendrick Bangs. Illustrated. $1.25.

Reminiscences. By Justin McCarthy. 2 Vols. $4.50.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY

Standard Intermediate School Dictionary. $1.

JAMES POTT & CO.

Church Lesson Books: Church Catechism, The Church Year, The Apostles' Creed. By the Rev. J. A. Regester, S. T. D.

F. TENNYSON NEELY

Justice to the Jew. By Madison C. Peters. $1.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY

Field, Forest, and Wayside Flowers. By Maud Goings. $1.50.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY

When Love is Lord. By Tom Hall. $1.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

Ethics and Revelation. By Henry S. Nash. $1.50.

From Comte to Benjamin Kidd. By Robert Mackintosh. $1.50.

Richard Carvel. By Winston Churchill. $1.50.

Dryden's Palamon and Arcite. From Chaucer, 25c. Notes on the General Epistles of SS. James, Peter, John, and Jude. By the Rev. M. F. Sadler. $1.50.

THE CENTURY COMPANY

Bound Vol. The Century Magazine, November—April, 1898—1899.

D. APPLETON & CO.

A History of the American Nation. By Andrew C. McLaughlin. $1.40.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XVII.

IT was a day or two after the mutual defiance had been given in Fort Hunter chapel, that an odd company met together at dusk on the east bank of the Schoharie creek. One, Vreeland, had here a home-stead, and on his farm, some distance behind the house, was a small lake, known throughout the neighborhood by the owner's name. This pond, for it was but little more, was in turn backed by a semi-circle of high, precipitous hills, forming a natural screen. Vreeland himself was a patriot of the intensest kind, and though he had married a wife from a Tory family, had no difficulty in repressing her, or in brow-beating her kindred.

It may have been merely accidental that a neighbor with a bag of meal from Frederick's mill should stop to compare prices with the farmer who had carried his grist to Peggy Wemples' in the valley. Certainly there was no special reason why others from Warren's Patent, or the Auries Kill, should not drop in to inquire for Vreeland's family, or that well-known residents from Mohawk and Caughnawaga should not cross the river to discuss the events of the preceding Sunday. At any rate, it was natural enough that all should gather by the browned grasses of the mirror-like lake, where the purple-shadowed hills alone looked down upon them. If these neighborly folks were by any chance conspirators, truly they had chosen a secluded spot, though one which spoke only of peace, perpetual and strong.

The pipes were all filled, and Vreeland's wife, with two or three other women, helped the men to home-brewed ale and apple-cider. But there was little just now of either smoking or drinking. All were intent on the words of a dark-browed man who seemed a stranger.

"In truth," he said, "there is no quiet nor safety for these parts while yon Tory rafter hath leave to disport himself. Who knows what moment he may whistle down upon ye the red devils under the Gospel-prating Brant? Have ye forgotten the descent upon the Unadilla? Do ye not know that even now the Injun is gathering his braves, and who can tell where the tomhawk shall first strike. Methinks I can see even now the crafty Mohawks and fierce Senecas stealing around yonder hills, and bursting with flame and scalping knife upon your settlement. Do ye not see your women dragged from your homes, your helpless babes tomhawked in the cradle?"

As the fanatical figure bent forward his tall body, the fading light playing weird tricks with his wild countenance, and his lean finger pointing toward the hollows of the hills, where the ominous shadows were deepening, a thrill of horrid expectation passed through his hearers. Almost they saw in imagination the dusky, treacherous forms of the savages, almost they felt the edge of the scalping knife, and smelled the odor of burning flesh.

One moment of this shuddering silence, and then deep-muttered protests and shrill imprecations rose from the little assembly. "The popish domine shall soon be silenced!"

"Mayhap the Glebe House will grow too hot to hold the parson!" "If the County Committee will not act, there be other means—" and the like.

Then it was that Katrina Myndert, with wonderful boldness, spoke out: "'Tis a foul besom that stirs up such a dust," she said. "The Domine Underhill has never been aught than kindly to the valley folk. Ods, Yunker, have not I myself asked him to speak peace to the red Injuns, and he has done so?"

Be still thou fool-brained Madel!" exclaimed the amicable Dirck savagely, but Dame Cairnewas interrupted: "You be blowing on cauld porridge, Dirck," she said, "for Katrina will still give credit to what the meenester ha' told."

"'Twill be hard to think no harm intended, when a mon shall see his scalp unhinged afore his very eyes," remarked Sandy drily, and again the half-hushed babble of voices arose.

It may be that nothing unlawful was planned or concluded that evening, but when the uninvited guests took leave of their pale-faced hostess, it was apparent that they spoke with more confident voices, and yet the waving branches of the trees might have been peopled with concealed redskins, and the starry points coming out over the hill-tops might have been magnified into the beacon fires of enemies. Indeed, it needed a stout heart that night for a woman-body to ford the creek without hearing in the gurgling water behind her the splashing hoofs of a goblin horse!

It was only the next day that Mr. Underhill was alone in the fort chapel. He had been making intercession before the altar, not only for his own flock, but for those other sheep in the wilderness, "not of this fold." Then reverently taking the silver vessels from the case where they were usually kept, he had bestowed them in a small leathern bag, evidently brought for the purpose. This done, he carefully dusted the sacred book which his rival had so vigorously pounded on the preceding Lord's Day, and carried it to the receptacle from which he had just removed the Communion plate. This he carefully clasped and locked. Returning to the nave of the church, he paused before the canopied pew which had been sacred to the occupation of the wise old English baronet, but which had so recently been filled with alien intruders. Then disposing of some brazen-clasped Prayer Books in the vestry, he came back with hammer and nails, and deliberately barred the pew, which he regarded as the rightful property of Sir John Johnson. But the sound of his vigorous blows on the nail heads was suddenly overpowered by a clangor from above. It was the Queen's bell, which for many years had called the valley Churchmen to their prayers. Astonished at the sound, Mr. Underhill stopped in his work of defence, and hastened to the belfry ladder, thinking to discover the intruder. He was but in time, however, to see a figure leap out upon the roof, drop to the parapet which led to a near block-house, and scamper away.

The amazed clergyman could by no means have identified the author of this exploit, but Letty, the maid, afterwards maintained that it was the recreant Karl. He had been spying, she said, upon his former master, and reported that Mr. Underhill had cleansed every strange footprint with holy water.

The priest was still standing with one

ROYAL Baking Powder

Made from pure cream of tartar.

Safeguards the food against alum.

Alum baking powders are the greatest menaces to health of the present day.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

hand on the vibrating bell rope, and the other grasping the heavy hammer, when the door at the north end of the church was pushed suddenly open, and an infuriated mob of men and women crowded within. Many of these glared at the man who stood at bay, with white and angry faces, while the black looks of others were half hid by make-shifts at disguises.

Making one step forward, and raising his hammer, Mr. Underhill cried warningly: "I forbid you from this holy place! Ye shall not enter!"

It was now impossible, if it had not been so from the first, to placate the lawless throng. Nor was there any to make such futile attempt. The clergyman's words had scarcely left his lips, when one of the leaders, with a grasp that could have belonged only to Dirck, the smith, wrenched the hammer from his uplifted hand. Instantly, the defenceless man was pinioned by two or three more, and the bell-rope was twisted so tightly about his neck that he was half throttled. He who held the end of the rope remarked coolly, in a well-known voice, "If ye haud yersel' stiller, meenester, ye will find the bit collar muckle easier. I canna' answer for the consequence if ye tak the reesk to pu' awa at a slip noose."

Mr. Underhill being thus effectually silenced, no further violence was offered him, but in his very sight the horrid work of destruction went on. The Communion plate was found and seized, and every other bit of moveable furnishing was soon in the hands

"To Err is Human."

But to err all the time is criminal or idiotic. Don't continue the mistake of neglecting your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will make pure, live blood, and put you in good health.

All Gone—"Had no appetite or strength, could not sleep or get rested, was completely run down. Two bottles Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the tired feeling and I do my own work." MRS. A. DICK, Millville, N.J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

of the greedy mob. The altar-table, pulpit, and desk were stripped of their hangings, and the illuminated tablets were torn from the wall. The painting of Her Majesty's arms was received with a derisive howl, while the seal of the venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, and the es-cutcheon of the Johnson family were trampled upon with unholy glee.

In a few moments the whole interior of the sacred building was a pitiable wreck. Its floors were piled with the desecrated emblems of authority, its windows broken, and even the bell torn from its supports. The benches usually occupied by the plainer folk, were heaped together in the centre, as if the still further iniquity of fire had been thought of. Women were as active as men in the work of despoliation, and the suffering priest shuddered at many an act which their wanton hands performed. If he saw now that his course of defiance had been worse than a mistake, it was too late to do more than to lift up his heart to Him whose servant he was. If he attempted any entreaties to those who wreaked their fury in gross sacrilege, the tightening of the rope shortly stopped him. He would have given much for the aid of Alan's strong, young arms, and for his influence with such so-called patriots, but Alan he had sent away to fight on distant fields.

Two surly Dutch farmers had just rolled in a barrel of rum, and were striving to raise it to the reading-desk, when there arose fresh disturbance at the door. Then Mrs. Underhill, jostled and hindered by the rabble, made her way to her husband's side. With one shriek at the sight of his danger, she fell with helpless fury upon him who now held the rope.

"Nay, nay," said Mr. Underhill, trying to reach out his fettered hands, while he gave such utterance as his swollen lips and tongue would permit, "this is still God's house, and He is in His temple."

Mrs. Underhill buried her weeping eyes on her husband's breast. "Letty, the maid, told me," she whispered. "Oh, be patient, dear heart! Evelyn has sent George for help, and Margaret is arming the servants."

"You needna' greet like a loosened tap, woman," said the man of the noose. "If the meenester will but recant his allegiance to the Church and Crown of England, he may go as free as air."

"Aye, recant, recant!" cried a number of voices, while women and children crowded forward to hear.

Mrs. Underhill raised again her head from her husband's breast. It was the one consciously heroic moment in her life. "Recant, you say!" she cried. "Let me speak for him who cannot for himself! We believe ever in One Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, and we profess allegiance to Christ's anointed king, the defender of our Faith."

The instant was imminent in peril. Another moment, and the surging mob might have thrust upon their victims the crown of martyrdom. But just then the clatter of horses without arrested the threatening hands, and the entrance of a small, armed posse caused their angry owners to fall back. "What is this?" cried young Sammons. "What do you in this sacred place? Shame on you to halt an innocent man! I have here authority from the County Committee to disperse this mob."

The leaders looked at one another and muttered sullenly. They knew the county authorities were not likely to stand by them in their ill-doing.

One of the new-comers stepped forward to release Mr. Underhill, while another began a speech to the rioters, finishing with the declaration that the clergyman would doubtless give his parole to leave the district peaceably.

"Yes, parole, parole, let him give his parole," shouted several voices.

Mr. Underhill hesitated, but Sammons spoke earnestly in his ear, and then the priest spoke: "I am innocent of any conspiracy, as God is my witness. But He knoweth that if my departure from this neighborhood will avert disaster from you, I will give my parole so to depart. As for you, you have made God's house as a den of thieves. Take care lest a worse evil befall you!"

And so for this time Mr. Underhill was permitted to return to his home, leaving the church which he loved despoiled and dishonored. Happily he knew not then that there should be no Ezra to restore the sacrifice of the altar, nor that brutal men should desecrate the sanctuary to the stabling of brutes! The Communion plate had been yielded up by its purloiners, and the sacred manuscript over which the clergyman had labored so earnestly, was in safe hiding. All else was gone.

But the appetite of the lawless for destruction was not yet glutted. The very next night after the scene at the chapel, the mob, elated by their triumph and by strong rum, re-assembled, and made an altogether wanton attack upon the Glebe House itself. Here again they wreaked their will, plundering and despoiling, until they were taught that even a priest's hands may be strong in the use of a gun-stock, and that the weapons which George and Philo handled were not loaded with play bullets.

The next day Mr. Underhill's family took refuge with friends in Schenectady, under a promise of protection from the County Committee. As they made their sorrowful way thither by water, the body of a man was discovered, floating face upward upon the river. The ghastly thing was washed toward them by the current, and Mr. Under-

The Summer Morning Breakfast.

Pillsbury's VITOS, the ideal wheat food, does not heat the blood. It is sterilized, and will keep until used. Fruit, Pillsbury's VITOS with cream, and tea or coffee, form an admirable menu for a summer morning breakfast. Pillsbury's VITOS, being made from hard spring wheat grown in the famous Red River Valley of the North, contains an unusual percentage of gluten, and feeds both body and brain. It is natural nourishment for summer. Write for book of VITOS recipes.

THE PILLSBURY-WASHBURN FLOUR MILLS CO., LTD., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
GROCERS EVERYWHERE SELL VITOS.

Trial Package Free!

If any reader, suffering from rheumatism, will write to me, I will send them free of cost a trial Package of a simple and harmless remedy which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 40 years' standing. This is an honest remedy that you can test before you part with your money. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 203 Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

hill leaned forward to look. "I know that face," he said. "'Tis the man I have always suspected of killing my poor Waharie. I fear one of our shots yester night has taken effect, or the stranger has been too heavily loaded with Dutch rum to find the ford."

"Oh, sir!" cried Evelyn shudderingly, "I have seen the same face on the day that Griffith has been snatched away. It must even be the sour-faced jailor of whom he spoke so oft!"

"The Lord have mercy on him in That Day," said the priest gravely, "and forgive us all to whom, it may be, men are seen but as trees walking."

(To be continued.)

The Circulation of the Bible

THAT most wonderful, most beautiful, and most sacred of all books, the Bible, exceeds all others in the extent of its circulation, not only in numbers, but in point of territory over which its circulation extends. Translations of it have been made into almost every known language. The American Bible Society alone has printed it in the following tongues:

English, Welsh, French, French Basque, (Pyrenees), Spanish, Catalan (eastern Spain), Portuguese, Norwegian (in German type), Arabic, Syriac (ancient), Syriac (modern), Arabic (Mesopotamia), Ebon (Marshall Islands), Kusaian (Strong's Island), Gilbert Islands, Ponape (Ascension Island), Swedish (in German type), Finnish (in German type), Dutch, German, Polish, Hungarian, Bohemian (in Roman type), Italian, Bulgarian, Esthonian (Russia), Esthonian (Dorpsat), Armenian (ancient), Armenian (modern), Mayan (Yucatan), Mortlock, Hawaiian, Zulu, Benga (West Africa), Grebo (West Africa), Mpongwe (West Africa), Dikele (West Africa), Mohawk, Choctaw, Cherokee, Seneca, Dakota, Ojibway, Muskokee, Delaware, Nez-Perces.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has, besides printing the books in the languages above-named put forth editions in two hundred other tongues and dialects, including two dozen native African dialects, and including every nation in Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australasia.

Everywhere in the world the Holy writ is being sent. When Stanley made his tour of Central Africa, tons of volumes were to be found among his supplies, and the authorities quoted announce that thousands of copies are even now traveling on pack and on sledge through the frozen polar regions to people who have not only never heard of this book, but to whom books of any sort whatever are entirely unknown. It is estimated that in ninety years, the Bible societies of America and abroad have distributed over 230,000,000 copies.—Harper's Young People.

AN English clergyman was called suddenly to preach before the students of a well-known college. He hurriedly chose out of his "barrel" a sermon, and, without reading it, went to the college chapel, the congregation of which was wholly composed of male students. He got along famously until near the close, when he amazed the boys by beginning his peroration thus: "And now a word in conclusion to you who are mothers." Philadelphia Saturday Post.

Art Among the Eskimos

WE did much entertaining, as we were continually visited by different members of the tribe of two hundred or more. They were content to sit and share the warmth and shelter of our house, and gaze on the curious things it contained. They would turn the pages of a magazine by the hour, and, holding the book upside down, ask questions about the pictures. What particularly pleased them was anything in the shape of a gun, knife, or ammunition. Of eating they never tired. The amount of food they consumed was astonishing, and they particularly reveled in our coffee, biscuit, and pemmican. This love was manifested by a little ditty that they sang quite often:

Uh bis-e-ken,
Uh-pem-e-kem.

The women are very clever with the needle, and as most of us had adopted the Innuut boot of sealskin, which required frequent mending, they were always in demand. In mechanical ingenuity they are remarkable. Both men and women are carvers in ivory, and the tiny figures—human as well as animal—that they fashion in this material, although somewhat crude, show no mean ability. This skill is also to be remarked in regard to the use of the pencil. One of them, As-sey-e-yeh, drew from memory a steamer in perspective, with the reflections in the water, and that, too, in a suggestive and artistic way.—Frank Wilbert Stokes, in the July Century.

LED INTO IT

By following the habit of friends.

As I took my coffee in very moderate quantities, I really did not believe what my friends frequently told me, that coffee was the cause of the gas on my stomach, which has troubled me for, oh, perhaps, forty years.

I am now a little over sixty years old, and I know that this gas trouble came on about the time I was twenty, and has been with me ever since. I have denied myself almost every kind of food pleasant to my taste, but without any appreciable benefit.

All of my friends have known of my trouble, as it has been of such long duration. Sometime ago I was called to nurse a sick friend who had Postum Food Coffee in the pantry and used it in place of coffee, praising it very highly. For about a week I used it as they did, as my only beverage, and the second day I noticed a change in my condition, and from that time on I never had one attack of the belching of gas. The friends exclaimed: "Why, where has your trouble gone?" and everyone in the house knew that I had been entirely cured by leaving off coffee and taking Postum Cereal instead. You can depend upon it that never since that time has coffee passed my lips, and never will while I can get the food drink, Postum. My stomach has grown so strong since that time that I can eat anything I like, and now take great pleasure in my meals and in life altogether. I send you a list of friends whom I know have been greatly helped by leaving off the use of ordinary coffee and using Postum Food Coffee in its place. Some of these made very flat, poor Postum on the start, as they only boiled it a few minutes, but it is generally known now about here that the only way to get the flavor is to boil it long enough. L. M. Graham, 729 8th st., Oakland, Cal.

Summer Dainties

Libby's Luncheons

What you want when you want it—fire-less, heat-less, work-less, all-ready substantial.

Deviled Ham, Potted Ham, Beef and Tongue—The proper sandwich food. Nothing else so good.

Veal Loaf—A delicious viand.

Ox Tongue (whole)—Appeals to all particular palates.

Peerless Wafer-Sliced Smoked Beef—So very fresh-tasting.

Pork and Beans—Better than Boston-baked.

Put up in convenient size key-opening cans.

"How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Yours for a postal.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago.

This Elegant Rocker..

Is made of Quarter-sawed Oak or Mahogany finished, is finely carved, and has high back. It is full spring, upholstered and box seat, covered with silk velours in all the popular shades. This durable Rocker is exactly like cut and is the best value ever offered to the public. Regular $4.50—our price for this sale ONLY $2.50 cash with order. Write for our 120 page furniture catalogue, free.

...Established 1878...

J. STOREY FURNITURE CO.
331-33 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.

A SUMMER IN THE NORTH

The delightful summer resorts of Wisconsin and Michigan are reached by the Chicago & North-Western R'y, among which are Waukegan, Madison, Devil's Lake, Green Lake, Gogebic Lake, Fox Lake, Lake Geneva, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Lake Minnetonka, White Bear, Duluth, Ashland, and Marquette. Free copy of "Hints to Tourists" sent on application to W. B. KNISKERN, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, 22 Fifth ave., Chicago, Ill.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

A COMBINATION SET

OF THE

Prayer Book

AND

Hymnal

Valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent to anyone sending Two New Paid-in-Advance Subscriptions to The Living Church, plus 20 cents for carriage.

FREE

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

Mimic Boats

BY EMMA PLAYER SEABURY

Over the meadows Bertha and Nell
Are chasing the flying rill,
As it rushes over rocks, pell mell,
And gurgles around the hill;
They have mimic boats on the foaming stream,
And with all their loving care,
On curve or twig, or ragged seam,
They are stranded here and there.
Oh, busy and fleet are the flying feet
That are skimming along the hill,
But the voice of the river says: "Come, my sweet,"
And swifter hurries the rill.

"They are going over the baby falls,"
One shouts as she passes me.
"They are gone, and wrecked," one backward calls.
"Oh, my beautiful treasure; see!"
But a little eddy seized Nellie's boat,
And held it as if in play,
Then whirled it around and set it afloat,
And hastened it on its way.
Oh, watchful and loving were both, I know,
They swept o'er the same cascade;
One drifts on peaceful waters below,
And one on the rock is laid.

"You are bad and cruel, you naughty brook!"
Rebellious, my darling wept;
Her little friend gave no backward look,
And the toy ship onward swept.
We launched it again, but hopes were fears,
The day was spoiled so soon,
She had learned the lesson of all the years
In that one brief afternoon.
If friends drift past, and your life boat strands,
God grant you, my darling, then,
The aid of loving and helpful hands
To launch it over again.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY IZOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER X.

TONY'S SISTER

SHE was certainly little, as Dave had said, and she looked so much like Tony, with her short black curls and big brown eyes, that Mollie was completely amazed. There was the same small oval face, tanned well, and even the deep dimple in her chin was a duplicate of the one in Tony's. She wore a scant little black calico dress, and altogether looked, as Evelyn would have said, "decidedly out of style." Mollie hesitated, in spite of herself, before stating her errand. At last she said:

"I'm Mollie Gray. I guess you know my brothers."

"The frown of frankly aggressive disapproval vanished, and Madge smiled. Mollie mentally decided that she had never seen such deep dimples in all her life as Tony Ferrall and his sister had, and she felt that after that smile she could not help championing the new candidate's cause.

"Of course I know Dave and Art," Madge replied promptly. "They're awful nice boys, Tony says. Wait till I come down."

She started to swing down to the ground by the aid of a bough, and then paused.

"Don't you like seckle pears just a little before they are ripe, when you can take a good hard bite, you know?"

"Yes, indeed I do," Mollie responded heartily, and a vigorous shake of the tree brought down a shower of the fruit.

"There," Madge said, as she jumped down. "We can sit right here on the grass, and talk and eat all we want to. Mamma's got a bad headache again, so we can't go in doors. What made you come here, any way? Bet a cookie the boys sent you or you'd never have come."

A guilty flush nearly hid Mollie's freckles at the chance shot which struck her conscience, but she replied honestly:

"No, I wouldn't, because I didn't even know that Tony had a sister. Dave told me, and I came right away to ask you," she hesitated, and took a bite of her pear to give herself time to reflect, then she plunged ahead recklessly—"to ask you to join our club, St. Dorothy's Sisterhood, you know, so that you can get acquainted with all the girls here, and have a good time."

Madge did not look at all elated or surprised, as Mollie had expected her to. She lay at full length on the grass, her chin supported by one hand, and thoughtfully munched pears.

"Will you?"

Madge shook her head soberly.

"Mamma's sick lots of the time," she said gravely, "and I look after the house."

"All by your self?" asked Mollie, in surprise, looking down at the thin little form in the grass.

"Tony helps some," Madge said, modestly, "but he can't be as quiet as I can. He is only a boy, you know."

"Going on sixteen?" then she added, seeing the look of surprise in Mollie's face, "Oh, I know I'm awful little to look at, but I can work hard!"

"Can you?" Mollie said, absently. She was thinking of Virginia Hardy and the life she led, and comparing it with this little life she had found down in the old green house. "Well, you can join any way," she added, recalling herself. "I'll propose you at the next meeting, and then see that you get a badge, and you can come whenever you have time."

After due consideration, Madge accepted these conditions, and Mollie felt when she left the forlorn little figure at the foot of the embankment, that the favor conferred was far from being all on the side of the S. D. S.

The visit of the girls to the Excelsior lodge rooms followed that afternoon, and after they had "poked over everything pokable," as Bobbie said, they took their leave with many words of good-will and compliments to the boys.

"Did you see her?" Dave asked Mollie, leaning over her shoulder, as she started down the ladder, and Mollie laughed.

"Of course I did. Dimple is to be our new member."

"Will the girls take her?"

"Haven't asked them yet, but they will, of course," retorted Mollie.

Dave gave a shrewd whistle, and retired

For Modifying Milk

Frequently cow's milk does not agree with a baby; the milk needs modification to make it resemble mother's milk. There are various ways to modify milk but the best way, the easiest way, the way to make the nearest approach to mother's milk, is to modify with Mellin's Food. It makes the casein more digestible, and furnishes proper elements of nutrition for the growth and perfect development of the child.

Mellin's Food

Our baby girl is 4½ months old and cow's milk alone did not agree with her at all, but we have had no trouble with Mellin's Food; baby seems to like it very much, so we shall continue using it. There is no colic or stomach trouble whatever after eating. She is very bright (so our neighbors say), very good-natured and seldom cries. I like the food and drink it myself. I think it a very pleasant hot weather drink although I am not an invalid. Mrs. Chas. H. Campbell, Parkville Station, Hartford, Conn.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

EXCURSIONS VIA THE WABASH

Detroit, Mich., July 3 to 6, account Christian Endeavor Convention. Rate from Chicago, One Fare for the Round Trip.

A glance at this map will show you that the Wabash is the direct line from Chicago to Detroit. It is the only line running free reclining chair cars from Chicago to the East. Ask for tickets via the Wabash.

Send postal card for illustrated Wabash official C. E. Folder giving full information as to rates, routes, limits, attractive side trips, etc. Write us about any trip you have in view. We can assist you.

F. A. PALMER, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt.,
97 Adams St., Chicago.

Hard facts

for women who wash. No work you do is so unhealthful as your work over a washtub.

This hard, perspiring work in the midst of soiled clothes and tainted steam will make trouble for you. The less of it you do, the better. Wash with Pearline, and there's little or none of it. Nothing but rinsing the clothes, after soaking and boiling them. Consider your health.

Willsons NOW USE Pearline

with plenty of ideas of his own on the subject.

It was a bright, sunny autumn day in October, and the girls of St. Dorothy walked up the street arm in arm in pairs towards the bluff, Eleanor and Mollie bringing up the procession. Virginia had sent her regrets, as she could not climb the ladder, and had invited all of the girls to a cosy re-union on the Hardy veranda, an invitation they were far from being loath to accept, as Virginia's reunions were famed in the Sisterhood as about the jolliest good times going on.

It was during the long, leisurely walk that Mollie broached the subject of Madge Ferrall. As she told of the visit to the little green house, a puzzled look came into Nell's blue eyes.

"And she's such a nice little girl, I knew it wouldn't make any difference, her being poor. Will it, Nell?" concluded Mollie.

"Not to me," Eleanor said, heartily, "that is what I started the club for, and I know that what Dave says is true. We have neglected the earnest part of our work for the social."

"Well, any way," Mollie said hopefully, "Virgine is sure to be on our side, and her word always helps so much."

"But what will the others say?"

"The Excelsiors took Tony," returned Mollie stoutly. We aren't any better than they are."

"Yes, I know, but there's Evelyn, and her set, and Virginia may go with them." Nell hesitated for an instant. "They won't have her; you see if they do!"

Mollie's eyes flashed, and her lips closed in a firm line of determination. She was thinking hard, but the uppermost thought of all was:

"Virgine will be true blue."

(To be continued.)

"Rest for the Weary"

UPON seats placed in different localities, in the city of Pasadena, California, these words are engraved, and the story connected with the inscription is full of pathos. Richard M. Stafford, a young man of lovely character, came hither in the hope that here he might find renewed health. This hope, however, was not to be realized. Month by month his strength grew less; but still he loved to walk abroad in the sweet air, to enjoy the fair scenes around him, and often he had need to pause for rest. A friendly bench in front of a store was the only provision he found for out-of-door "rest for the weary"; and so, before he passed away, he framed a bequest, providing seats to be placed at different points throughout the city, that upon them the weary might rest.

It was a beautiful thought, and should keep his memory green in many hearts. The first one of these seats that I noticed, commanded a fine view of the "Mother Mountains," and as I thought of the weary ones who, in years to come, would rest there, and take in the inspiration of the hills in their ever-changing beauty,—the hills that speak to us of Him from Whom cometh our help, I thanked God that he had given to his young servant so sweet a thought for others—a thought taking shape out of his own weakness and need.

Surely, as the years go by, many who, at these halting places, pause for rest, and read the brief, but touching inscription, will breathe the spirit, and, mayhap, the words of the prayer for those who have gone before us with the sign of the faith: May he rest in peace, and may light perpetual shine upon him. —Y. Y. K.

KINGSFORD'S "SILVER GLOSS"

STARCH FOR LAUNDRY.

Has been constantly USED BY MILLIONS all over the world FOR FIFTY YEARS.

Educational

CONNECTICUT

CONNECTICUT, Hartford.

Woodside Seminary for Girls.

Re-opens September 27.
Address for circular.

MISS SARA J. SMITH, Principal.

ILLINOIS

St. Alban's Academy.

Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports.
A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address,
REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1899. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Send for illustrated catalogue to Joseph H. Harker, Ph. D., Pres.,
Jacksonville, Ill.

MASSACHUSETTS

The Highland Military Academy.

Worcester, Mass. 43d year. A First-Grade Preparatory School. Modern Sanitation. New Athletic Field. Generous Table. Live Teaching. Small Classes. Visitor: The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D.D.
Head Master: Joseph Alden Shaw, A.M.

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall.

Episcopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re-opens, D. V., Sept. 13th, 1899. Apply to SISTER SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls.

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIPPLE, Rector. MISS CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address
ST. MARY'S HALL, Faribault.

Educational

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

The Castle, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. Advantages of N. Y. City. All departments. Graduates students. Prepares for college. MISS C. E. MASON, LL.M., Prin.

OHIO

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

Pennsylvania College for Women.

A situation and home of rare beauty, instruction unsurpassed for thoroughness, complete and modern equipment, and the intellectual opportunities of one of the centers of art and culture of the country. Academic and college departments. Schools of art and music. Moderate terms.

Mrs. R. J. DeVORE, President,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Trinity Hall, Washington, Pa.

A School for Boys. With high aims, standards, and requirements. Equips boys for college or business; large corps of able instructors; personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Refined, elevating surroundings. Term, $500.
WM. W. SMITH, Rector.

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH, WASHINGTON, Pa.

BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral Morning; and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalogue, write to Wm. W. SMITH, Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls. The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many. The school is first-class in every respect. Bishop Hare makes it his home.
Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL, Sioux Falls, S. D.

WISCONSIN

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes manly boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address
REV. ARTHUR PIPER, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David H. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address,
THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

Mere weight itself, if the flesh be pale and flabby, does not indicate good health, but when the flesh is firm and rosy, as in the case of Mellin's Food babies, then every ounce of weight is indicative of the baby's good health and condition.

"The Great Superiority"

of Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient is in its power to relieve without irritation. It cleanses and refreshes the stomach and bowels, removes gouty and rheumatic poisons from the blood, and allays feverish conditions in a wonderful manner.

TARRANT & CO., Chemists, New York.

At druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

Finance and Commerce

DULLNESS still prevails in all speculative centres. In Wall st. stocks have had a slight rally, but the volume of business is not large enough to promise anything material in that line, and the midsummer apathy is approaching. Perhaps the event of the past week of most interest was the government report on the wheat crop. In substance, it shows a condition June 1st, promising a total yield of spring and winter wheat of about 530 million bushels, or about our average crop. This is quite a reduction from the condition reported a month earlier by the Agricultural Department, and in that comparison is considered bullish, but its promise of a total of 530 millions is larger than the general commercial expectation. The invisible reserves of wheat are thought to be of fair size. There is a small decrease in the area of spring wheat, but the condition is 90, which is very good.

The condition of the corn and oats crop is generally thought to be good, with a large acreage.

In respect to business at large, the bank clearings continue to show a smaller increase as compared with last year, than during the winter months. Much of this loss is no doubt due to falling off in speculative transactions in the larger centres. In the different branches of distribution, business continues good, but there is no great rush except possibly in the iron trade, where stocks are small, and the demand all the time pressing on the supply. Cotton continues steady in price. A small decrease is estimated in the area planted, but it is so small (about 4 per cent.), that it fails to stimulate the speculative situation, and money continues easy everywhere. The exportations of gold which we have foreshadowed have begun, and are likely to continue. We can lose a good many millions in gold supplies without having any detrimental effect except in a sentimental way. Provisions are still at a stand still. The market is full of speculative investments, and must digest what it has already taken. Bonds and good settled dividend-paying securities are in good demand, but the public is disposed to wait awhile, and see how the industrials pan out that are already on the market, and whether the common stock of most of them will pay interest.

Bank finances are in good shape, and the revenues are up to expectations. With the exception of wheat, which has fluctuated a good deal in response to the crop news, the grain and provision market are dull. The export demand has improved a little of late, but is still unsatisfactory.

Colonial Trade

AMERICAN producers are already finding an enlarged market in Cuba, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines. The figures of the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, just issued, indicate that the exports of the fiscal year, which ends with this month, will show a larger exportation to Hawaii and the Philippines than ever before, and larger to Cuba and Puerto Rico than in any previous year, except those in which the reciprocity features of the McKinley law were in operation. The exports to Cuba in the ten months ending April 30, 1899, were 50 per cent. in excess of those of the corresponding months of 1898, and more than double those of the same months in the fiscal year, 1897. To Puerto Rico, the exports are 83 per cent. in excess of the corresponding months of last year, and to Hawaii, the exports of the ten months are 57 per cent. in excess of those of the same months in 1898, and double those of the corresponding months of 1897. To the Philippines, the exports, despite the continuous war conditions, are three times as much as in the corresponding months of any preceding year. The total exports to Cuba, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines in the full fiscal year which ends with this month, will reach about $30,000,000, against $17,000,000 last year. Our sales to these islands in the fiscal year 1899, even under the unsettled conditions which have prevailed in all of them, except Hawaii, will exceed those of any previous year, save those of 1893, the most successful year of the reciprocity term. These figures of course do not include any of the supplies sent by the government to its troops in the island, or supplies sent to the suffering Cubans. It is also interesting to note that the exportations to Spain are approaching their normal condition, those for the ten months ending with May 1st, being $8,000,000, against $10,000,000 in the corresponding months of last year, and less than the latter amount in the corresponding months of the fiscal year 1897.

The increase in exports to these islands is in almost all classes of articles which we have been accustomed to send them. Exports of agricultural machinery to Cuba in the ten months just ended, are three times those of the corresponding months of last year. Wheat flour shows an increase of nearly 50 per cent. Cars, carriages, and other vehicles are in 1899 four times the amount of exports in the same lines during 1898. Exports of cotton cloths to Cuba, which in ten months of 1898 were 138,662 yards, and in ten months of 1897, 251,803 yards, were, in ten months of 1899, 5,393,444 yards; while to Puerto Rico, the exports have increased from 22,878 yards in ten months of 1898, to 1,584,670 yards in ten months of 1899. Other manufactures of cotton increased in like proportion, the value of "all other" manufactures of cotton exported to Cuba in ten months of 1898, being $11,715, and in ten months of 1899, $81,369; while to Puerto Rico, the increase was from $1,678 in ten months of 1898, to $16,681 in ten months of 1899.

A CLERGYMAN writes from Memphis, Tenn.: "Your paper is a great help to me in every way."

CONSUMPTION

Bronchitis, Chronic Pneumonia, Consumption, Pleurisy, etc.,
SUCCESSFULLY TREATED.

Diseases of the lungs have been successfully treated and cured for fifty years by Drs. R. and E. W. Hunter by their inhalation treatment. Full particulars given in their book on the subject.

DR. E. W. HUNTER. BUCKLEY, ILL.
Dear Sir:—I take pleasure in recommending your inhalation treatment for consumption, it being very successful in my case, which was pronounced incurable by my home physician, I having had several hemorrhages and night sweats. Accidentally having heard of your method of treating lung disease by inhalation, I gave it a trial, and heartily testify that it has returned my health, and, I have every reason to believe, effected a permanent cure.

MRS. JOHN A. KOPLIN. PRINCETON, ILL.
Dr. Hunter: In regard to your remedy for consumption, I want to say I have more faith in it than in any other remedy in this world. I was forced to give up preaching, and physicians said I had consumption. I tried a month's treatment with you, and before the medicine was all gone I discontinued it, for I was cured. I thank you very gratefully for my new lease of life.

Dr. Hunter's book will be mailed free of charge by writing to CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE BLK., 112 CLARK ST., CHICAGO.

Lyrics of the The Living Church

A handsomely bound volume of poems which have appeared in THE LIVING CHURCH. A few hundred volumes were secured from the publishers at a very low figure, and although retailing at $1.50, we can offer a volume for 50 cents, plus 10 cents for carriage, in connection with a renewal of subscription for one year to THE LIVING CHURCH. As the plates were lost in the great fire which destroyed the publishing house of A. C. McClurg & Co., no new edition can be issued. Address, THE LIVING CHURCH, 55 Dearborn st., Chicago.

Exports to China

EXPORTS of merchandise from the United States to China in the fiscal year about to end, will be larger than those of any preceding year in our history. A decade ago the exports to China were less than three million dollars, and to China and Hongkong combined were little over six million dollars. In the fiscal year 1899, our exports to China will be more than thirteen million dollars, and to Hongkong more than six million dollars, making a total to China and Hongkong of over twenty million dollars, or more than three times as much as that of a decade earlier. That the bulk of the exports to Hongkong may properly be considered as ultimately destined for consumption in China, is shown by the fact that the official reports of the imports into China, show that over 44 per cent. of their imports are from the port of Hongkong. The 1899 exports to China and Hongkong combined, will show a gain of nearly or quite 25 per cent. over those of last year, while the total exports from the United States for the fiscal year 1899, will be little, if any, in excess of those of last year, thus showing a more rapid growth in our exports to this particular part of the world than elsewhere.

Swift's Highest-grade Products

Premium Hams, the best hams cured.
Premium Breakfast Bacon, no other quite so good.

Silver Leaf Lard, all lard and nothing but lard.

Beef Extract, the strongest, the purest, the best.

Jersey Butterine, delicious and wholesome.

Cotosuet, the perfect vegetable shortening.

Sold everywhere

Swift and Company, Chicago

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.
FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

Best Line
to
Denver

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.

F. G. LOGAN

MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.

Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

4 B'd Trade, Chicago.

Bottled Fun

*Cut the string
And let it run;
Nothing like it
Under the sun.*

There's delight in the flavor, there's health in the purity of HIRE'S Rootbeer. The great temperance drink. When the day is hot there is no drink so satisfying; when the vitality is low no drink is so beneficial; when you are over heated no drink is so cooling as

HIRE'S Rootbeer

A temperance drink for everybody.

Make it yourself at home. A package of Extract makes five gallons. HIRE'S Rootbeer, Carbonated ready for drinking. Sold everywhere by the bottle and case. Write to THE CHARLES E. HIRE'S COMPANY, Philadelphia, and ask how a boy can make from 40 cents to $4.50 per day.

Made to clean between the teeth. The

Prophylactic Tooth Brush

is the ONLY brush that does this thoroughly, because it has irregular tufts and is curved to fit the mouth. Note the illustration. Always sold in a yellow box. By mail or at dealers'. Adults', 35c. Children's (3 sizes, 25c). Send for free booklet "Tooth Truths." FLORENCE MFG. CO. 25 Pine St., Florence, Mass.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889,
AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.

THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

Somatose A perfect food for the invalid, the dyspeptic, or the baby. Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD

Chicago & Alton R.R.

PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

CHICAGO AND KANSAS CITY.
CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS.
CHICAGO AND PEORIA.
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY.

Through Pullman service between Chicago and

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., DENVER, Colo.,
TEXAS, FLORIDA, UTAH,
CALIFORNIA AND OREGON.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

JAMES CHARLTON,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Occupations for Women

Five "hostesses," says the New York Sun, are now included in the staff of one of New York's large department stores. Some people call them guides, but the five women themselves prefer to be known as hostesses. The role of these hostesses is that of a guide and adviser. A woman comes in with a list of purchases she wishes to make. She doesn't know the store, and, moreover she isn't very sure that she knows just what she wants. She takes a hostess to be her guide and counsellor. Her new ally knows all the inns and outs of the store, and can lead the way without loss of time from one department to another, securing immediate attention in each. She is also thoroughly informed as to the latest fashions, the best and most popular materials, colors, and designs. She gives her advice as to what will be the most becoming thing to get, how much material to buy, what trimmings to select—every one of the problems, in fact, which torture the solitary shopper with doubts. Each of the five hostesses has her own clientele of customers who always depend on her to shop with them. One is a Southern woman who makes the customers from the South her own particular charge. Another of the hostesses is a Catholic, and takes care of all the customers from the convents and other essentially Catholic institutions. This privilege of having shopping made easy is not alone for out-of-town customers. Many city women avail themselves of it. There is no charge to the customer at all.

A young woman living in a town in which one of the largest universities is situated, has hit upon an excellent method of earning her own living. Her skill in making "fudges," those toothsome chocolate sweets that are said to have originated at Vassar, had often been praised by her friends, and it occurred to her one day that what she did for pleasure might be turned to profit. She made a few boxes of the sweetmeats, and induced a neighboring druggist to let them be on sale in his store. The first boxes, and afterwards a second and larger lot, were quickly disposed of, and orders for more were received, chiefly from the collegians. Her next step was to get some plain white boxes, pack the fudges in them, and tie the boxes with a broad ribbon of the college color. Having some little skill with her brush, she decorated each ribbon band with the college name, and put this newly titled fudge on the market. There was an immediate and generous response. The undergraduates were delighted with the compliment, and the tasteful daintiness of her wares, and although her business began only last October, she has already found it necessary to enlarge her plant to keep pace with her orders. An assistant is employed to help her with the unskilled part of the process, and she herself works every day, and often until late in the night, in an effort to supply the demand for her bonbons. She has established agencies throughout the town and in a neighboring city, and is probably building up a permanent and excellent business.

REFRESHING SLEEP.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

taken before retiring quiets the nerves and induces sleep.

Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"WHERE DIRT GATHERS, WASTE RULES."

Great saving results from the use of

SAPOLIO

GOOD NATURED BABIES ARE THOSE RAISED ON
GAIL BORDEN

EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK.

SEND "BABIES" A BOOK FOR MOTHERS.

Borden's Condensed Milk Co., N. Y.

THE ROVER

An Illustrated Magazine for Boys.

Monthly. $1.00 a year. Specimen copy for the asking. E. & M. HUTCHINSON, Publishers, 107 Dearborn St., Chicago.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS,

Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park New York.

RUBBER STAMPS.....

AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.
Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils, Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

Lea & Perrins' Sauce

The Original and Genuine Worcestershire.
Known the world over. Take no substitute.

... Bind Your Copies of.

THE LIVING CHURCH

By special arrangement we are able to supply the Emerson Binder, cloth, neatly lettered in gold, to our subscribers at the moderate cost of 75 cents. Address all orders to

The Living Church,

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.

The Living Church

A Weekly Record of the News, the Work, and the Thought of the Church

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL, Knoxville, Illinois.

ST. MARY'S, Knoxville, is one of the oldest Church Schools in the country, yet new in appointments and improvements. It is incorporated; buildings and furnishings are valued at $150,000. Among the trustees are the Bishops of Chicago, Quincy, Springfield, and Cairo. It has preparatory and collegiate courses of study, leading to the degree of B. A. The Course in Music is notably advanced, being under Mr. Wm. H. Sherwood, Visiting Director.

As may be seen in the above illustration, ST. MARY'S is not a cottage; it is an Institution, on a large plan, equipped in a liberal way. At the same time, it has a real home life; one hundred students, with teachers and the family of the rector, living together under the same roof.

After more than thirty years under the same management, and with a continuous record of success, ST. MARY'S may fairly claim to rank among the leading institutions of the Church, for the preparatory and higher education of girls and young women.

While ST. MARY'S is not a sanitarium, it gives the most careful attention to the health of its students. Under the Sargent system of gymnastics, and with daily exercise in the open air, splendid results have been secured. The following average gains have been made from October to April. Time of exercise, one-half hour a day, four days in the week. Number of students, one hundred.

Lung capacity	30 cubic inches.
Strength of chest	44 pounds.
" " back	43 "
" " legs	96 "
" " arm	12 "
Weight	10 "
Chest expansion	30 centimetres.
Girth of upper arms	15 "

A Register will be forwarded, on request, giving terms, plan of work and recreation, course of study, etc. The curriculum has recently been extended an entire year. The following States were represented, last year, in the list of students: Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Colorado, Michigan, Ohio, Kansas, Indiana, Arkansas, Kentucky, New Mexico, Louisiana, California, New York, and Montana.

Address the Rev. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector and Founder, KNOXVILLE, ILLINOIS.

Educational

ILLINOIS

St. Alban's Academy,
Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports.
A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.
Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address,
REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.
Opened September 18th, 1899. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

When a School Doubles

its attendance in three years, it merits the attention of parents who seek the best for their daughters. The

Illinois Woman's College
has done this. Its health record is remarkable. Send for illustrated catalogue to Jos. R. Harker, Ph. D., President,
Jacksonville, - Illinois.

MASSACHUSETTS

This entire building, and two annexes, are devoted exclusively to the work of the

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

Accessible to musical events of every nature. The best masters in music, elocution and languages that money can command. George W. Chadwick, Musical Director. Prospectus free.
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

Bradford Academy.

Founded 1803. For the higher education of young women. Classical and Scientific course of study, also Preparatory and Optional. Year begins Sept. 20th, 1899.
Miss Ida C. Allen, Principal, Bradford, Mass.

Rogers Hall School,

For Girls. Certificate admits to College. Apply to
Mrs. E. P. UNDERHILL, Lowell, Mass.

The Highland Military Academy,

Worcester, Mass. 43d year. A First-Grade Preparatory School. Modern Sanitation. New Athletic Field. Generous Table. Live Teaching. Small Classes. Visitor:
The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D.D.
Head Master: Joseph Alden Shaw, A.M.

MICHIGAN

MICHIGAN, Ann Arbor.

University School of Music.

Albert A. Stanley, A.M., Director. Unusual Advantages from connection with the University of Michigan. For Calendar and detailed information, address the Secretary

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall.

Ep'scopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re-opens, D. V., Sept. 13th, 1899. Apply to SISTER SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls,

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIPPLE, Rector. Miss CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLIS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address
ST. MARY'S HALL, Faribault.

NEW YORK-STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.
Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON,

Educational

NEW YORK STATE—Continued

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

THE CASTLE,
Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. A beautiful school. Advantages of N. Y. city. All departments. Endorsed by the Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. For this circular address
Miss C. E. MASON, LL. M.

Training School for Nurses.

There are a few vacancies. Applicants must be over twenty-one; of sound health and good education. Apply to SUPERINTENDENT, St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, N. Y.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Phillips Exeter Academy.

The 117th year begins Sept. 13, 1899. Eighty scholarships awarded to students of high standing. Six important buildings added since 1886. For Catalogue and Illustrated Supplement, address

HARLAN P. AMEN, Principal,
Exeter, N. H.

OHIO

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

St. Luke's School Bustleton, Pa.
(near Philadelphia)

"A thorough and honest school, the kind of a school to which sensible parents desire to send their sons."—Bishop WHITAKER. Grounds and situation are exceptionally beautiful and healthful. Individual instruction. Full equipment.
CHARLES H. STROUT, Principal.

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH,
WASHINGTON, PA.

BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral Morning and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalogue, write to Wm. W. SMITH Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls.
The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many.
The school is first-class in every respect.
Bishop Hare makes it his home.

Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL,
Sioux Falls, S. D.

WISCONSIN

Racine College Grammar School,

"The school that makes manly boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address
REV. ARTHUR PIPER, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address,
THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

A SUMMER VACATION

Can be most enjoyably spent at Milwaukee, Waukesha, Madison, Devil's Lake, Green Lake, Gogebic Lake, Lake Geneva, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Lake Minnetonka, White Bear, Duluth, Ashland, Marquette, and the resorts of Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, and Minnesota, Dakota Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Glenwood Springs, or in the valleys and Mountains of Colorado, Utah, and California. Exceptionally fine train service to all points. Low-rate tourist tickets and pamphlets upon inquiry at ticket offices. Ask for tickets via Chicago & North-Western R'y, City Ticket Office, 193 Clark St.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St.
New York

Hot Weather Comforts

It is easy for clergymen to dress as coolly as laymen. Here are some ideas:

ALPACA CASSOCK—Latin Style—no lining whatever; a perfect summer vestment - $12.50
SERGE SACK SUITS—Cool, Clerical. Comfortable—$15.00
Cassock vests, $1.00 extra.

Clerical or Semi-clerical Sack...$7.50
Single-breasted Vest..... 3.00
Cassock Vest..... 4.00
Trousers..... 4.50

CELLULOID CLERICAL COLLARS—A perfectly shaped clerical collar of celluloid—either regular shape standing or Roman style, each, $0.25
SILK RABATS—dispenses with vest—made in two styles—for Roman or Anglican collars, $1.50

WE DELIVER FREE IF MONEY ACCOMPANIES ORDER.

Height..... Weight.....
Collar..... Waist.....
Chest..... Leg.....
Sleeve..... An't Enclosed, $.....

E O THOMPSON'S SONS
CLERICAL OUTFITTERS.

908 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, 245 Broadway, New York.

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN President 3-5-7 W 29th Street
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice-President NEW YORK

Trinity Church Embroidery School
CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes, maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.

MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT,
Trinity Parish House, 101 26th st.

AMUSEMENTS IN THEIR RE-LATION TO RELIGION.

BY THE

Rt. Rev. George F. Seymour, S. T. D., LL. D.,
Bishop of Springfield.

8 pp. $1.50 per hundred. Lots of two hundred or more, $1.25 per hundred. Address

THE GAZETTE, Publishers,
CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

THE ROVER

An Illustrated Magazine for Boys.

Monthly. $1.00 a year. Specimen copy for the asking. E. & M. HUTCHINSON, Publishers, 107 Dearborn St., Chicago.

CHURCH ARCHITECT,

JOHN SUTCLIFFE,
218 La Salle Street, - Chicago

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

IT IS ANNOUNCED ON HIGH AUTHORITY that General Dragomirow, the famous Russian strategist, has suggested to the Czar the restoration of the independent kingdom in Poland in order to create a buffer State between Russia, Germany, and Austria, and thus enable the three nations to reduce their enormous frontier garrisons and avert irritation in the future. This plan contemplates the rehabilitation of the ancient kingdom by reuniting territories divided between Russia, Germany, and Austria after the defeat of Kosciusko by Suwaroff and reapportioned by the treaty of Vienna in 1815. It is said that the Czar has referred the matter to a special commission, as nothing can be done without the consent of Austria to the recession of Galicia, and the surrender by Germany of the principal Polish territory absorbed by Prussia. It is more than a hundred years since Poland, after the heroic resistance of its people, led by Kosciusko, was finally divided among the great Powers, and its identity as a nation lost. For a while Napoleon gave new hope to the Poles, but he accomplished nothing towards the independence, and at the Congress of Vienna in 1815 the territory of Poland was again distributed among Russia, Germany, and Austria. But the Poles did not consent willingly to their fate. In 1830 an insurrection broke out in Warsaw, and for a time the Poles were successful over their Russian oppressors. But finally they were overcome by the weight of numbers, and in 1832 the last vestige of independence was taken away, and Poland declared an integral part of the Russian Empire. In 1846 slight outbreaks occurred in both German and Austrian Poland, as well as in the provinces which had been annexed to Russia, but they were easily put down. Again in 1855, in 1862, and in 1864 the Poles made despairing attempts to regain their independence, but were beaten, and the burdens under which they labored greatly increased. For the last thirty years they have submitted to their fate without attempting to rebel.

—X—

EVENTS FOLLOWING THE RECENT Cabinet crisis in France have served to reveal the strength of the Socialists and Radicals. The failure of Poincare to form a Cabinet was directly due to his inability to command the support of the extremists among the Republicans. Sarrien, the leader of the Radicals, served notice that his party would not support a Cabinet which contained Barthou, hence Poincare, fearing that if he yielded in this, objections would be made to Ribot and others, surrendered the task of constituting a ministry. The support of the Socialists and Radicals is necessary to the Moderate Republicans, and these extremists hold a somewhat similar position to that of the Centre party in Germany. The Socialists hold the balance of power, and their votes are necessary to the Moderates.

—X—

A COMPANY WITH A CAPITAL OF $150,000 has been formed in London for the purpose of attempting to cast steel by a method discovered by Professor Dewar. This method if successful in practical tests, promises to revolutionize the steel industry. The method of Professor Dewar employs liquid hydrogen which he has demonstrated to possess extraordinary power in producing high vacuums with extreme rapidity. Reckoning from the absolute zero of temperature, the boiling points of hydrogen, oxygen, and chlorine are 35, 90, and 240 degrees respectively.

From these figures the professor inferred that liquid hydrogen as a cooling agent ought to be as much superior to liquid air as liquid air is superior to liquid chlorine. Calculating from Willard Gibbs' formulas, he showed that the vacuum left after liquefying the air out of a vessel by means of liquid hydrogen cannot exceed the millionth part of the atmospheric pressure. This is just about the pressure of the vapor of mercury in the Torricellian vacuum, so that as good an exhaustion ought to result as by boiling out an inclosed space with mercury, and with much greater rapidity. The air bubbles which now cause flaws and weaknesses in the steel produced by ordinary methods will by the vacuum method be entirely prevented, it is claimed, and a quality of metal produced superior to any which the world has yet seen.

—X—

A RECIPROCITY TREATY BETWEEN the United States and Great Britain in relation to trade between this country and the British colony of Barbadoes has been signed by the representatives of the two governments. It is the first treaty framed under the Dingley law, and the first of the series of treaties which the British colonies to the south of this country are seeking to effect. The treaty is made for the term of five years, with provision for an extension, unless either party should denounce it in the meantime. It is made strictly within the terms of the Dingley law which provides for a reduction of not more than 20 per cent. of the regular duties on merchandise which may be agreed upon, in return for reciprocal reductions given by other countries. This section further permits goods to be taken from the dutiable list and placed on the free list for a term of years. The act provides that the treaty is to be made by the President, by and with the consent of the Senate, and an anomalous clause is added that the reduced duties are to apply when such treaty shall have been fully ratified by the Senate and "approved by Congress." The treaty relating to British Guiana is about ready to be signed, all the essential features having been agreed upon. The Jamaican negotiations have also begun.

—X—

A OKLAHOMA MAN IS REPORTED TO have discovered a method of protection from cyclones and waterspouts, and according to newspaper reports, successful tests have been made at Hennessey, O. T. The inventor does nothing more nor less than demolish the twisting funnel on its approach by discharging by means of a cannon a good sized load of salt. It remains to be explained just why salt should exercise such an effect, but it is asserted that calamity to the town of Hennessey has thrice been averted this season by the salt cure. The Hennessey town council employs the inventor on a salary of $50 per month to maintain a watch for wandering cyclones; and four canons, stationed on the four sides of the town, are always loaded and ready for work. The cannon theory is not new, having been applied at sea many times when vessels have been threatened by waterspouts.

—X—

PUBLIC SENTIMENT, TO A CONSIDERABLE extent, upholds Governor Pingree in recent vetoes of sundry Bills passed by the Legislature of the State of Michigan. The reason given for vetoing the beet sugar bounty Bill was the failure to place any limit to the amount a company may receive in any one year. While this is the most objectionable feature, the Governor says the Bill also has his disapproval because it will result in increasing the taxes of property owners, and the Legislature has passed no laws to equalize this burden of taxation and make corporate and other property pay its share of taxes. The Governor says an effort seems to have been made to appropriate money out of all proportion with the present revenue of the State, and to stifle all measures framed to make tax dodgers who either controlled or obstructed legislation, bear their share of increased expenses. Attention is called to the failure of the railroad, copper, and iron tax Bills, the Michigan Central repeal Bill, and the joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to overcome objections to the Atkinson law, and the Bill reducing the tax rate of express companies. The declaration is made that the final result of the legislation on the tax question is an actual reduction of taxes on corporate property.

—X—

MICHIGAN HAS ENACTED A DRASTIC anti-trust law. A "trust" is defined as "a combination of capital, skill, or arts by two or more persons, firms, partnerships, corporations, or association of persons, or of any two or more of them for either, any, or all of the following purposes: To create or carry out restrictions in trade or commerce; to limit or reduce the production, or increase or reduce the price of merchandise or any commodity; to prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transportation, sale, or purchase of merchandise, produce, or any commodity; to fix at any standard or figure, whereby its price to the public or consumer shall in any manner be controlled or established, any article or commodity of merchandise, produce, or commerce intended for sale, barter, use, or consumption in this State." The law provides that for a violation of any of its provisions by any corporation or association, the Attorney-General shall institute proceedings for the forfeiture of the charter rights, franchises, or privileges of the offender, and for the dissolution of the same under the general laws of the State. A heavy penalty is provided for violations, and any person injured in business or property by violations of the Act, is entitled to recover twice the damages sustained.

—X—

THE PRESENT AGITATION IN THE State of Illinois, and particularly in the city of Chicago, emphasizes precautionary measures being taken in several sections of the country against tuberculosis, through infection from diseased cattle or infected milk. Of the two expedients adopted in different States, one deals directly with the cattle, and the other with the milk supply. In Massachusetts, quarantine against infected cattle is maintained, and in the last three years 10,979 tuberculous cattle have been killed by the authorities, and $366,805 paid to their owners. Illinois is now following the example of Massachusetts, by inspecting cattle of milk dealers, and the results have been somewhat startling, as many infected cows have been found. Buffalo stands at the head of large cities in pure milk supply. City ordinances authorize the inspection and destruction of all tuberculous cattle within the city limits, and require certificates from all milk dealers beyond the city limits, that their herds have been examined by the health authorities and are free from infection. No milk can be brought into the city except under the protection of such certificates. In this way tuberculous milk is now effectually excluded.

The News of the Church

Bishop Seymour's Anniversary

The Feast of St. Barnabas, being the 21st anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Seymour as the Bishop of Springfield, was observed at St. Paul's pro-cathedral with special prayers at the celebration of the Holy Eucharist. The rector, the Ven. Archdeacon Taylor, preached from the text St. John xv: 16, "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."

In conclusion, Dr. Taylor said: "A few words concerning our own beloved Bishop whose anniversary we hold to-day, may not be considered inappropriate from one who has labored with him in the Gospel throughout the 21 years of his episcopate, as a presbyter in his diocese. The episcopate of your Bishop attains its majority to-day. Twenty-one years ago on St. Barnabas' Day, 1878, the Rt. Rev. George Franklin Seymour, D. D., was consecrated a bishop in the Church of God, with jurisdiction in the diocese of Springfield. Of the ten consecrators, all, I think, except Bishops Neely, Scarborough, and McLaren have passed beyond the veil, while he who was then elevated to the episcopate has rounded out the measure of three-score years and ten, by God's good providence well sustained in health and strength.

"It is our privilege to-day to look back upon the past, and to sum up its significance, for an episcopate of 21 years is not so common as to be unworthy of notice. I need not speak of our Bishop's profound learning, persuasive eloquence, and devotion to the labors of his office, for these are familiar to all of you. But I must do more than allude to the uncompromising position which the Bishop has always maintained as a teacher and defender of the Catholic Faith, as it is held and set forth by the Church in the Book of Common Prayer, as being one of the most significant facts of his episcopate, and one that has given this weak and poor diocese an influence and a name ranking it among those which are greater in material resources. The courage to speak out when weak and worldly men would jeopardize the truth by unworthy compromises is a rare gift in these days. A false and hollow peace in the Church is always too dearly bought. If there be no controversy, and valiant blows struck in defence of the Faith, the Church will become honey-combed with heresy and worldliness while men sleep.

"To defend the Faith is not a pleasant or comfortable vocation. It requires for its success that they who undertake it should be 'good men, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith,' but just because they must be such, they are called to self-sacrifice, to endure hardness, the slights and contempt of the worldly, the easy-going, the compromising, and the profane. Nevertheless, as we look back over the Church's long struggle with the world and all its untruth, it is of such champions of God's truth that we perceive the words of our Lord to have been especially spoken: 'Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit shall remain.'

"It is to such sturdy warriors for the Faith that we owe it, under God, that the Faith has not long since perished from the earth, and that we and our children still have the benefits and blessings of it. We need to pray that our bishops may have more of the boldness and courage of leadership of the Apostles Paul and Barnabas, of a St. Athanasius, or a Cyprian, or a Leo, or a Gregory, of Bishops Andrews, Laud, and Ken, that they may be indeed like St. Barnabas, the sons of consolation, able and willing, no matter at what cost to themselves, to strengthen and confirm the people of Christ in the Faith, to quicken their love and zeal for the truth, and to drive away indifference and worldly falseness from the Church of God, both by their word and their example. That the Divine Head of the Church, the great Shepherd and Bishop of our souls, has given to this poor diocese such a Barnabas, such a son of consolation, to be its bishop, and has mercifully sustained him in the labors of his arduous office these thrice seven years past, may well evoke our hearty thanksgiving to God. And to our thanksgivings we add our fervent prayers to God that he will grant to our beloved Bishop many more years of ministry and service in the episcopate, and will sustain him in his labors, comfort him in his trials and disappointments, crown his years with blessing and honor, and will enable him, with the flock committed unto him, to attain everlasting life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

"Our love, our prayers, our loyalty, and our faithful co-operation, are the least that we can offer our Bishop and Father in God; but let us pledge him these, and fulfill our pledge right well, that we may comfort his heart also, and may, with him, be strong and of a good courage, 'that with purpose of heart we may cleave unto the Lord.' Thus shall we be doing our part, in co-operation with the grace of God given us through the apostolate, to secure that permanence of the fruits of the ministry committed to our Bishop, which Christ has promised, and to become partakers of the joy which is reserved for all who are true of heart."

The Board of Missions

The Board of Managers met at the Church Missions House, June 13th. The Bishop of New Jersey was called to the chair, which he afterward resigned to the Bishop of Kentucky. There were present four bishops, seven presbyters, and five laymen.

An offer of certain property now belonging to the Connecticut Indian Association at Fort Hall Agency having been made to the society, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved: That title be taken to the property at Fort Hall Agency in the missionary district of Boise; but that such action be delayed until after the consecration of a Bishop of Boise, if such delay will not endanger the consummation of the transfer.

The Finances

According to the treasurer's statement it appeared that there had been an increase of 181 in the number of Sunday schools contributing, and an increase of $2,000 in the amount so far received from this source, while the sum from each individual school averaged about a dollar less than for the same time last year. With regard to the general finances the report showed that (notwithstanding there was nothing to offset the single offering of $10,000 in 1897-98) there was an increase of $1,392 as compared with June 1st last year. While this is most encouraging, the point is ever in mind that the current appropriations are much larger in the aggregate than in any previous year, principally because of the growth of the work, which is in itself a marked evidence of success. It is very sure that therefore many and large individual contributions will be required during the summer. The Executive Committee reported that the society had had 37 representatives at as many diocesan conventions recently held, and they left it with the associate secretary to arrange a series of engagements for the Rev. J. Addison Ingle, on vacation from the China mission, on Sundays in the larger parishes, say from Boston to Chicago and from Buffalo to Richmond; giving weekdays to some of the smaller parishes, and to auxiliary and other meetings. The associate secretary would be very glad to correspond with rectors on this subject.

The Ecumenical Conference

Letters were at hand from the Rev. S. L. Baldwin, general secretary of the "Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions," to be held in New York next year under the honorary presidency of ex-President Benjamin Harrison. The former of these letters requested that preparation for this conference should not be confined simply to the speakers, writers, and delegates, but should be a three-fold preparation of the whole Church by prayer, by study, and by contributions. It was suggested that monthly public services for prayer for the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ should be held, that the conference should be remembered before the Throne of Grace on other occasions, and especially in all Christian households. Contributions toward the conference, in the amount of five dollars each, are asked from every parish, with the information that to each such contributor a copy of the report in two volumes will be sent when issued, for parish and missionary libraries. The second letter requests the appointment of "fifty-six delegates, including the women." The Board of Managers directed that the foregoing should be published, and that its committee already appointed to participate in the conference should nominate the delegates.

Appropriations to Domestic Missions

Forty-six communications were at hand from bishops having domestic missionary work within their jurisdiction, and from the Standing Committee of the diocese of Indiana. Favorable action was had in those instances where it was required, and an additional appropriation for the next fiscal year was made for the work among white people in the amount of $800, and an additional appropriation for work among the Indians in the amount of $300, upon a presentation of facts concerning the needs of his missionary district by the Bishop of North Dakota, and a grant was made to the Bishop of Sacramento for the completion of certain new churches, from the income of the Anna Mary Minturn Fund. The appropriation at the disposition of the Commission on Work among the Colored People was raised for the next fiscal year (from $57,920) to $62,000.

Missionaries Needed for Alaska

A request from the Bishop of Alaska for the prompt appointment of an American clergyman for Fort Yukon, to take the place of the Rev. Mr. Hawksley, whose services have been generously loaned for a year by Bishop Bompas of British Columbia, was referred to a committee with power. The Bishop invites application for work among these Indians from young and strong clergymen, full of missionary zeal. Remarks: "It would be well for him to have some medical knowledge. Urgency is required if we are to send him in this year, and this year he is needed." Owing to the difficulty of reaching the Bishop, communications on this subject should be addressed to the Associate Secretary, Church Missions House, New York. A missionary is also needed at Ketchikan, where the country is filling up with prospectors. The same man could work among the Hydahs. His salary is pledged, if unmarried. Delayed letters written last autumn have been received from Anvik, and two, posted in the early spring of this year, have come from Circle City.

United Offering Appointments

Under the United Offering of 1898, Mrs. A. M. Chisholm and Miss F. Foxhall were appointed: as Church workers in the diocese of North Carolina, upon the nomination of the Bishop, the latter of whom is to reside for a time in a deaconess house for special training previous to entering upon duty; Miss Ellen Hartford was appointed, in the room of Miss C. Brandon (deceased), on the nomination of the Bishop of Georgia; Miss R. Ford Heath was appointed to do the general work of a Bible woman on the nomination of the Bishop of Lexington, and a grant at the rate of $150 per annum was made to the Bishop of Laramie toward the education of Mrs. C. LeHew in the Deaconess Training School at St. Paul, Minn.

Foreign Mission Appointments and Work

A large number of letters were at hand from the foreign missionary bishops, Bishop Williams, and several of the missionaries in Africa, China, and Japan, which received due consideration. Miss Eliza L. McCook, of Hartford, Conn., was appointed a missionary teacher to China, Mr. James Jeffries Chapman of the Virginia Seminary as missionary to Japan, to take effect upon his ordination on June 23d, and Mrs. Lillian Heywood Robinson, trained nurse, etc., to Cape Mount Station, Africa. With great regret the information was received that by the secretary's latest advices the Rev. Dr. Hope had decided not to accept his appointment to Cape Mount, thus leaving this important station, with a numerous band of missionary workers, and 150 children under instruction, still longer without a resident priest. The call for a competent man in full orders for this St. John's mission is reiterated in the strongest possible terms. The Rev. S. J. Taylor, of Hoffman Institute and High School, Cuttington, appeals for contributions to complete the building, Epiphany Hall, to erect a chapel for daily morning and evening prayer, and for the establishment of mechanical trades. One of the officers of the British steamship "Cabena," has become so much interested in the institution that he has offered prizes to be competed for by the students. Twenty-six of the pupils were confirmed on March 15th. In the two schools there are 125.

Gifts to the Board of Missions

The Rev. A. D. Gring, of Japan, has presented to the Church Missions House two edict boards against Christianity, the last removed by order of the government, and a stone image 1,004 years old, excavated when digging the foundations for St. Agnes' School building in Kyoto. The Rev. John Davis, S.T.D., of the same mission, has presented to the Church Missions House Library the first volume (three others to be published) of his Chapters in Ecclesiastical History, especially prepared by the students of Trinity Divinity School, Tokyo. On the testimony of Bishop McKim, in producing this large work in addition to his routine duties, Dr. Davis has been of the greatest service to the mission during the comparatively short time he has been connected with it. The Japanese clergyman in charge of St. John's church, Osaka, at his own instance, sent $6, Lenten Offering of his Junior Auxiliary, to the treasurer, and the same amount to the Japan Church Mission Board. Miss Bull, who transmitted it for him, ventures to believe that, by the course of the sun, this is 12 was the first Easter offering of 1899.

Commencements

The Kettle School for Girls, Syracuse

June 16th, the Rev. Edward H. Coley made an address to the graduates, and diplomas and testimonials were presented by the Bishop. The school has a Board of Trustees, and Miss Mary J. Jackson is the efficient principal.

St. Luke's School, Bustleton

The baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class was delivered at the memorial church of St. Luke, the beloved physician, by the Rev. H. J. Cook. The closing exercises were held on the 15th inst., in the school gymnasium, where Bishop Talbot delivered the address to the graduates. The diplomas were presented by the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, to the nine graduates. Medals and prizes were also presented to honor students.

St. Stephen's College, Annandale

The 39th annual Commencement took place June 15th. In the evening a memorial service was held, commemorating the late Rev. Dr. Fairbairn, warden of the college, and the late John Bard, one of its principal benefactors. Addresses were made by Bishop Potter and others. The degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred upon nine graduates, and certificates were given to three special-course men. The degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon the Rev. Easton E. Madeira, B. A., class of '91, and the Rev. Larrien Longley, B. A., class of '96.

Penna. College for Women, Pittsburgh

Was very happy in its closing exercises, which were of great interest throughout the week.

The Commencement exercises were held Monday morning, June 12th, in the beautiful chapel in Dilworth Hall. Myra Reynolds, Ph.D., associate professor of literature in Chicago University, delivered the address. Her subject, "The relation of modern poetry to the common people," afforded a theme for a witty, forceful, scholarly address, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. President R. Jane DeVore conferred the degrees.

Cathedral School of St. Mary, Garden City

Held June 8th, at the Stewart Arms Casino and on the school grounds. The guests were received by the principal, Miss E. L. Koues, the faculty, and the nine graduates. The Bishop delivered the address to the class and presented the diplomas. Both the school and Casino were artistically decorated with palms and ferns, and the colors of the class of '99, lavender and gold. A musical entertainment was given at the close.

Seabury Divinity School

On June 6th held its Commencement exercises in the oratory of the school, at Faribault, Minn. The Holy Communion was celebrated at 7 A. M. At the 11 o'clock service the oratory was too small for the congregation. Bishop Whipple, Bishop Gilbert, and Bishop Morrison, of Iowa, were present. The baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the Bishop of Iowa, and was a most forceful and eloquent presentation of "The man of God" as he should be. Warden Butler presented the graduates to Bishop Whipple who conferred the diplomas and degrees. Seven students were graduated, and four of them received the degree of bachelor in divinity. The graduates were Frederic Carman, Arthur N. Clogett, Philip H. Linley, Emery E. Lofstrom, Marcus J. Simpson, William Toole, and Arthur H. Tripp, all of whom have Western missions waiting for them. In addition to the seven graduates, two other students who have taken special courses at Seabury, were ordained on the following Sunday, one for work among the Swedes, one for work among the Indians, and both in the missionary jurisdiction of Duluth.

Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown

Tuesday and Wednesday of the first week in June were the days when the Berkeley men gathered about their alma mater. The annual service was held in St. Luke's chapel, on the evening of June 6th. The alumni sermon was delivered by the Rev. Millidge Walker. On the following morning, there was a Celebration at 7 o'clock, followed by Morning Prayer at 8:30, after which the alumni held their annual meeting in the library, the Rev. Dr. Hart presiding. A minute commemorative of Bishop Williams was prepared by the Rev. Dr. Vibbert, of Trinity chapel, New York, which was unanimously adopted by a rising vote. The death of six of the alumni during the past year, was announced; viz., the Rev. William Kirtland Douglass, D.D., '53, of Louisiana; the Rev. Benjamin Eastwood, D.D., '63, of Rhode Island; the Rev. Joseph Edward Pratt, '67, of Central Pennsylvania; the Rev. Howard Saxton Clapp, '75, of Pennsylvania; the Rev. John Richard Lambert, '84, of New York, and the Rev. Henry Dows Stebbins, '88, of Central New York. Bishop Brewster was elected president for the ensuing year; the Bishops of Long Island, New Hampshire, Southern Ohio, Michigan, California, Georgia, Spokane, Olympia, and Sacramento, honorary vice presidents; the Rev. Dr. Hart, of Hartford, and the Rev. Dr. Lines, of New Haven, vice-presidents; the Rev. Prof. Barbour, of the Berkeley Divinity School, secretary; the Rev. P. L. Shepard, treasurer. A vote was passed congratulating the Rev. Dr. Binney on his election to the headship of the school, and assuring him of the sincere esteem and hearty support of all the alumni. Resolutions were also adopted expressing affectionate regard for Prof. William Allen Johnson who soon becomes professor emeritus, and satisfaction at the appointment of Dr. Hart to succeed Bishop Williams in the chair of Doctrinal Theology, in a place so long associated with his personality. The Rev. Cornelius G. Bristol reported that the alumni library fund amounted to $7,000, and that the subscriptions for the Bishop Williams memorial fund aggregated about $31,500. Earnest addresses were made by Bishop Brewster, the Rev. Prof. Townsend, the Rev. Dr. Blanchard, of Philadelphia, and others. The ordination service was held at 11 o'clock, in Holy Trinity church, and is recorded elsewhere under the usual heading. Bishop Hall, of Vermont, preached the sermon, on "We speak that we do know and testify that we have seen," St. John iii: 11. At 4 o'clock, Dean Binney held his reception, and at 7 o'clock Evening Prayer was said, concluding a notable anniversary. There was a splendid gathering of the alumni, and every one seemed to feel it a personal matter to make this, the first Commencement succeeding Bishop Williams' death, an opportunity to prove his loyalty to this "school of the prophets," which will be forever identified with his great name.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

The Bishop went, on Saturday, to Gambier, Ohio, where, on Sunday, he preached the baccalaureate sermon in Kenyon College, of which he is a trustee, and attended the Commencement on Tuesday, on which occasion an honorary doctor's degree was conferred on the Rev. A. L. Williams, Bishop coadjutor-elect of Nebraska.

The first meeting of the recently-elected Board of Missions was held in the Church Club Rooms on Saturday, the 10th, when appropriations to the amount of $8,000 were made for diocesan missions during this diocesan year. The Rev. Jos. Rushton was re-elected secretary, and Mr. F. F. Ainsworth, treasurer.

On the first Sunday after Trinity, the rector of Epiphany appealed to his people for offerings of silver, to be melted down for a chalice and patten, to replace those stolen some time ago. On the following Sunday enough was offered to procure three solid silver vessels.

The Sunday schools of the cathedral, Epiphany, and St. Mark's, will have a combined meeting at the picnic grounds of the C. M. & St. P. R. R., on Saturday, July 1st.

At Winnetka, arrangements are progressing for the purchase of a large lot with a house on it, suitable for a rectory. The Rev. T. A. Snively preached for Mr. Curran last Sunday.

Rev. A. L. Williams Accepts the Bishopric

Immediately after a conference on the 13th with Bishop Worthington, then passing through Chicago to take up permanent residence near the sea, by order of his medical advisers, Mr. Williams sent to the secretary of the diocese of Nebraska formal notification of his acceptance of the recent election at Omaha, subject to the ratification of the Bishops and Standing Committees. On Sunday morning last there was read to the congregation of Christ church, Woodlawn, a letter from the rector to the senior warden, Mr. O. W. J. Lafferty, informing the wardens and vestry of his acceptance of the coadjutorship of the diocese of Nebraska, and intention to resign the rectorship in September. It is generally understood that Mr. Williams' consecration will take place in Trinity cathedral, Omaha, on Friday, Sept. 29th, the Feast of St. Michael and All Angels, though no definite arrangements may be made till July. The Rev. J. Charles Gairdner, of Tecumseh, Neb., officiated in Christ church last Sunday, in the absence of the Rev. A. L. Williams.

Guild of All Souls

The annual meeting was held on Wednesday, the 14th, in the church of the Ascension, after a choral celebration of the Holy Communion, with the rector as celebrant, the Rev. Dr. Webb, president of Nashotah House, preaching a fine historical sermon. An encouraging report for the past year was read by Mr. T. E. Smith, Jr. The Rev. E. A. Larrabee was re-elected president, and Mr. Smith, secretary. An adjournment to the new and commodious parish rooms followed, where an appetizing luncheon was served by the ladies of the parish, and enjoyed by a dozen of the clergy and some 40 of the laity. Informal, but extremely appropriate addresses were delivered by the rector, by the Rev. Dr. Webb, Father Huntington, the rector of St. James', South Bend, and the Rev. A. L. Williams.

Meeting of the Clerica

On the invitation of Mrs. Cleveland, the members of the Clerica, to the number of 12, spent a very pleasant day, on the 14th inst., at Dundee, one of the many pretty towns on the Fox river. Leaving by the N. W. R. R. at 10:30 A. M., the party were met at Elgin by the hostess, and taken by "trolley" to the rectory of St. James. After participating in its hospitality, the company re-assembled in the church, and were given a very interesting account of the stages whereby a Baptist chapel standing on piles had advanced to its present dignity of a well-appointed and firmly-based Church edifice—stages which plainly indicate a quarter of a century of painstaking effort and personal sacrifice, the Rev. Dr. Cleveland representing in the neighborhood, far and wide, "the beloved physician." So very enjoyable was this gathering in the country, that the Clerica anticipate with satisfaction a repetition in the July and August meetings, probably in a northern direction.

Father Huntington's Visit

Father Huntington rounded out his week's work by preaching in Emmanuel, La Grange, at the regular Friday evening service of the 16th, and addressing the young men of St. John's mission, 62 Clybourn av., on Saturday evening, his subject being, "Nailing three lies," which are commonly held—namely, that what is natural is right; that what others do, one may do; and that the laws of purity for men and women differ. On last Sunday morning he preached in St. James', visited St. Thomas' in the afternoon, and made his final address on rescue work at the Ascension in the evening.

Silver Wedding of the Rev. H. Lindskog

On Friday, of last week, there was a notable gathering of parishioners in St. Ansgarius' church, the occasion being a commemoration of the "silver wedding" of the much beloved rector, the Rev. Herman Lindskog. After service, the Rev. Dr. Stone, specially designated for the purpose by the Bishop, who was unavoidably detained elsewhere, made a presentation address to the rector. The articles presented were, a silver collar, including miniature "bands" (vilgobits), still commonly worn in church by Swedish ministers, a handsome solid silver service, and a small purse from some of the clerical brotherhood. The felicitous reply of Mr. Lindskog was both touching and eloquent. Refreshments were served in the parish rooms under the rectory, and other addresses made. The whole proceedings of a day memorable in the life alike of the congregation and its pastor, leave the impression that it would be difficult to find, in any parish of our Church, a more decidedly beautiful illustration of the true pastoral relation in all its fulness. Twenty of Mr. Lindskog's 25 years of married life have been spent in this country, and 12 in his present cure.

Gifts for St. Mark's, Evanston

A bequest of the late Mrs. Beach leaves the sum of $4,000 for a memorial window. Another parishioner has promised to give, in the next two years, $4,000 for a new altar. A beautiful window, presented by the Sunday school, is now on its way from England.

St. James' Church

The envelope system was recently introduced in St. James'. On Sunday next the services will be at 4 P. M., instead of the usual summer hour at 5 P. M., the occasion being a special service for the various chapters of the G. F. S., the sermon to be preached by the rector of Trinity. Dr. Stone sails on the 12th prox., with his wife, for a couple of months' travel in Switzerland.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The church of the Messiah, Rhinebeck, the Rev. Ernest C. Saunders, rector, was consecrated on June 17th, by Bishop Potter.

At St. Mary's chapel, Sherwood Park, June 14th, Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, acting for the Bishop of the diocese, administered Confirmation.

The church of the Holy Communion, the Rev. Henry Mottet, D. D., rector, has received a bequest of $10,000 by the will of the late Caroline A. Cisco.

The archdeaconry of New York has purchased land for the building of a new church and parish house at Woodlawn. The latter will be first erected.

The church of the Holy Faith, the Rev. Norton C. Smith, rector, has recently received a memorial gift of a stone altar, inlaid with mosaic work.

St. Bartholomew's church, the Rev. David H. Greer, D. D., rector, will be closed after July 9th, in order that necessary repairs may be made to the roof of the sacred edifice.

The 13th anniversary of the consecration of St. Thomas' church, Mamaroneck, was celebrated on St. Barnabas' Day. In the evening, the Ven. Archdeacon Kirkby, D. D., preached a special sermon.

The Bishop's secretary, the Rev. George F. Nelson, D. D., who is also registrar of the diocese, has just left the city for a vacation of two months, during which time his duties will be taken by the Rev. Robert L. Paddock, in charge of the pro-cathedral. Dr. Nelson is also superintendent of the City Mission Society, whose interests will be looked after during his absence by Mr. T. V. Boynton, its treasurer. Dr. Nelson will go to Alaska, and visit the more important points, returning during August.

Church of St. Edward the Martyr

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Charles C. Grafton, Bishop of Fond du Lac, made a visitation in behalf of Bishop Potter, and administered Confirmation on the evening of June 16th, to 24 candidates.

Summer Home of Calvary Parish

Has just been opened for the season, under the care of Miss Haight. It is located at Mt. Carmel, N. Y. During the summer months the chapel of the church will be repainted and decorated, and generally improved.

Death of Rev. W. O. Embury

June 15th, at Inwood-on-Hudson. He was chaplain of the House of Mercy and other institutions at Inwood, which are conducted by the Sisterhood of St. Mary. The burial service was held June 17th, in Holy Rood chapel, New York.

Fresh Air Work

The church of the Holy Cross, which re-begins its fresh-air summer work at St. Andrew's cottage at Farmingdale, in a few days, has arranged to care for about 200 boys from the city. About $500 is needed to meet this expense. The work is under the care of the Rev. James G. Andrews.

Wedding of Bishop Potter's Niece

The wedding of Miss Mary Josepha Potter, niece of Bishop Potter, and daughter of the Rev. Dr. Eliphalet Nott Potter, president of Cosmopolitan University, to Mr. Geo. T. Smith, of Ballston Spa, N. Y., took place June 14th. The ceremony was conducted at Saratoga Springs, by Bishop Potter and the Ven. Archdeacon Carey, D. D.

A Flower Service at St. Matthew's, New York

On Sunday, June 11th, at 4 P. M., the Scripture selections, hymns, prayers, and the address of the rector, the Rev. Dr. Edward H. Krans, all had flowers for their subject. During the service, offerings of flowers were borne to the chancel and formed into an emblem of the Trinity, and laid in bunches around the triangle. After the service, they were taken to five of the city hospitals, and to sick persons in families.

Marriage of Rev. A. R. Mansfield

At the church of the Transfiguration, June 14th, Miss Ella Louise Huntington, daughter of Mrs. Julia C. Hamilton, was married to the Rev. Archibald R. Mansfield, chaplain of the Seamen's mission, Pike st. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Romaine S. Mansfield, father of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Thomas R. Harris, D. D. A reception followed at the Holland House.

Woman's Auxiliary

The Westchester branch met at Christ church, Rye, on June 8th, for its annual meeting. Archdeacon Kirkby made an address at the opening service. Addresses were also delivered by the Ven. Dr. Van Kleeck, archdeacon of Westchester, the Rev. Reese F. Alsop, D. D., on the missionary work at Cape Mount, Africa, and Miss Sanford, of Pelham, on the work at the Navajo Indian Hospital, Arizona. The report of the treasurer of the auxiliary was presented, through Archdeacon Kirkby.

Transfiguration Chapel

The Bishop visited the temporary church of the congregation of Transfiguration chapel, on the evening of June 7th. After administering the rite of Confirmation, the Bishop, in his robes, went outside the building and addressed a large crowd from the steps. "Father Rich has asked me," he began, "to say a few words to those persons in this parish who could not gain admission to the church on account of its size"; his whole address was listened to in respectful silence. The hymns were accompanied by a brass band, and the street lighted by calcium lights. It was a somewhat new departure for New York city.

Archdeaconry of Westchester

At the Spring meeting, just held at the church of the Holy Communion, Liberty, the Rev. P. C. Cleaveling, rector, the session lasted two days. On the first day, the clergy and laity, of whom a considerable number were in attendance, made a visit to the Loomis Sanitarium, where they were hospitably entertained by the medical staff. At night, a missionary service was held, with addresses by the Ven. Archdeacon Van Kleeck, D. D., and the Rev. Messrs. David Evans and Henry Barker. On the second day, there were two Eucharistic services, at the second of which the archdeacon was celebrant, and the Rev. Thomas Burrows, preacher. Business of more than usual importance was transacted, and revised by-laws were adopted.

A Sisterhood Disbanded

On Wednesday of last week, the Rev. Geo. M. Christian, D. D., the new rector of the church of St. Mary the Virgin, took steps for the discontinuance thereof of the Sisterhood of the Order of the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which was established in connection with the parish by his predecessor, the Rev. Thomas McKee Brown. When the discontinuance was decided upon, the Order had become reduced to two Sisters, the Mother Superior and Sister Mary Angela, with a number of lay members who have assisted in the work. With the consent of the two Sisters, they have been transferred to the mother house of the Sisterhood of St. Mary, at Peekskill. It is understood that no friction of any kind has occurred, and that the movement is in the interest of those concerned.

St. Ignatius' Church

Plans have been nearly completed by Mr. Chas. C. Haight, the architect, for extensive additions and alterations of St. Ignatius' church, the Rev. Arthur Ritchie, rector. A new approach will be built, and the church will be so constructed at the chancel end as to afford greater altar space than at present. The chancel will be deepened, and will be lighted by new lancet windows of stained glass—seven on each side. A new roof will be constructed, in Gothic design. A handsome brown stone house, immediately in the rear of the church, which has recently been purchased by the parish, is to be converted into a parish house. The lower portion will be fitted up for the use of the parish guilds and Sunday school, while the upper portion will be used by the clergy. The last services in the church previous to the alterations were held Sunday, June 11th. It is hoped the church will be ready for reopening early in October.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

A garden party in aid of the organ fund of Calvary church, Germantown, the Rev. Dr. J. DeW. Perry, rector, was held on the lawn of Mrs. Geo. L. Harrison's handsome residence on Thursday afternoon, 8th inst., a snug sum being realized.

There was a meeting in behalf of the Church League for Work among Colored People, at the church of the Holy Apostles, Philadelphia, on Sunday evening, 11th inst. The Ven. Cyrus T. Brady and the Rev. Robt. W. Forsyth addressed the congregation in behalf of the colored mission work.

Boys' Club House

The building to be erected by the Church Club for the exclusive use of the Boys' Club, at Howard and Somerset sts., Kensington, will be three-stories high, of Flemish band brick, with stone trimmings, and will measure $95\frac{1}{2} \times 108\frac{1}{4}$ ft. Everything calculated to instruct and amuse the boys will be provided.

Bequests to Charities

The executor named in the will of the late Amanda L. Muller, states that she has directed that one-tenth of $15,000 left her by an uncle is to be paid to certain charities, included among which are the Ladies' Italian League of L'Emmanuello, $300, and the Seamen's Mission, (church of the Redeemer), $200.

University of Pennsylvania

On Sunday morning, 11th inst., some 400 members of the graduating classes, being about 70 per cent. of the whole number, assembled at the parish house of Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia, whence, preceded by Messrs. Lewis H. Redner and Theodore H. Morris, church wardens, Provost C. C. Harrison, and the deans of the several faculties, they went in procession to the main entrance of the church, and took seats in the nave. After Matins had been said, and the "University Hymn" sung, the rector, the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, preached the sermon.

Episcopal Hospital

The exercises connected with the graduation of the 10th class of pupil nurses from the hospital training school were held on the 15th inst. in the chapel of the hospital. John C. Browne, on behalf of the superintendent, presented 18 candidates to Bishop Whitaker who, after the usual service, conferred the diplomas. The class numbered three from Philadelphia, five from Pennsylvania, two each from Canada and Virginia, and one each from New York, Maryland, North Carolina, Kansas, Ohio, and Ireland. An address was delivered by the Bishop. The laying of the corner-stone of the new Nurses' Home followed. Addresses were made by the Bishop and the Rev. Dr. J. N. Blanchard. The contents of the corner-stone was read by Ewing L. Miller. The Rev. Messrs. H. M. G. Huff, W. W. Taylor, and H. A. F. Hoyt, took part in the services.

St. Paul's Memorial Church, Overbrook

The corner-stone of the new edifice was laid on the 17th inst., by Bishop Whitaker, assisted by Archdeacon Brady, and others of the clergy. The building is the gift of Mrs. William Simpson, Jr., her son, W. Percy Simpson, and her father, the late David Morgan, one of the first vestrymen, and is in memory of her husband, the late Wm. Simpson, Jr. The church will be erected after the model of the English country church of the 16th century, and is to be constructed of local greystone with Indiana limestone trimmings. The plan is cruciform, with a massive tower at the intersection of the nave and transepts. The interior walls are to be finished in dressed stone. The roof will be open timbered. All the interior woodwork will be of oak. The aisles will be tiled, and the floor of the chancel, mosaic with marble steps. The altar, pulpit, and font will be of carved stone, and the altar rail of brass. Several memorials are promised, including a fine organ, handsome baptismal font, and a marble statue of David, a beautiful piece of work, sculptured in Europe. The plans of the building committee include the erection of a parish house and rectory as soon as the church is finished, which will be early in the fall. This church was organized as an independent mission in February, 1898, by Archdeacon Brady, who conducted the services until May 1, 1898, when the Rev. E. A. Gernant was appointed priest-in-charge by Bishop Whitaker. Archdeacon Brady, as previously announced in our columns, has recently been elected the first rector of the parish, and will assume his duties in October.

Central New York

F. D. Huntington, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Thirty-first Annual Convention

Opened in Christ church, Oswego, June 13th, at 4:30 P. M. The Rev. J. K. Parker was elected secretary, and the Rev. Wm. Cooke, assistant secretary. Hon. A. H. Sawyer, chancellor of the diocese, presented a resolution expressing the sympathy of the convention for its treasurer, George J. Gardner, in his illness, and re-electing him; also that the Standing Committee appoint an assistant treasurer. Adopted. The Bishop's address, showing his characteristic vigor of thought and matchless diction, covered the following points, especially: The Higher Criticism, Importance of veracity, Ethics of ordination, and Minding our own business. He made fitting allusion to the death of the Rev. H. D. Stebbins, the Hon. R. P. Flower, and Mr. Hamilton S. White. The Rev. Dr. J. Sanders Reed presented an amendment to the canon prohibiting any church to be erected within one-half mile of any other in any city, town, or village, without permission from the Bishop and Standing Committee. Adopted.

The Rev. Dr. Babcock moved for a committee of five to be appointed to buy a tract of land in Syracuse, and to prepare plans for the erection of a diocesan house in honor of the Bishop who celebrated his 30th anniversary April 8th. Judge Andrews made an eloquent address, in which he seconded the measure, which was carried. The Bishop appointed the committee. The Rev. Dr. McKnight, of Elmira, introduced a preamble and resolution setting forth the evils of divorce, and calling upon the State legislature to enact a law compelling parties desiring to be married to procure a legal license from duly constituted authorities. Adopted.

Two parishes, St. Andrew's, Utica, and the church of the Saviour, Syracuse, were admitted into union with the convention.

The Standing Committee was re-elected as follows: The Rev. Drs. John Brainard, Henry R. Lockwood, Theodore Babcock, the Rev. Philip N. Meade; Messrs. Azariah H. Sawyer, LL.D., John R. Van Wagenen, George T. Jack, William D. Dunning. The Rev. Dr. McKnight offered resolutions condemning the growing tendency toward amusements and secular pursuits on Sunday, and calling upon Churchmen to preserve the sacredness of the day, and refrain from desecration of it. Adopted.

The Rev. P. N. Meade and Wm. H. Watson, M. D., were elected delegates to the Missionary Council.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D. D., Bishop

Mr. Hadley will officiate at the mission at Fairhaven during the summer. The average attendance is 32.

The parishioners of St. Matthew's, So. Boston, have presented the rector a purse of money, to be used upon a summer outing.

Grace church, New Bedford, will be in charge of the Rev. F. M. Garland, during July and August. The Brooks Club have presented to the Rev. and Mrs. Rousmaniere a sum of money, with a request that they purchase while abroad something that should serve as a fitting testimonial from the club. They sailed June 31, on the steamer "Lucania."

New Parish Room at Dedham

The new parish room connected with the church of the Good Shepherd, Walnut Hill (Oakdale), was opened on June 7th. There was choral Evensong in church, with a sermon by the Rev. Fr. Osborne, S.S.J.E., after which the congregation went in procession to the new building which was blessed by the rector, the Rev. W. F. Cheney. The gift of a valuable grand piano has been received from a member of the parish for use in the parish room.

Rhode Island

Thomas March Clark, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Wm. N. McVickar, D.D., Bishop Coadjutor

The 109th Annual Convention

Assembled at St. John's church, Providence, June 13 and 14th. The sermon was preached by the Rev. E. H. Porter. After the celebration of the Holy Communion, Bishop McVickar called the business session to order; 55 of the diocesan clergy were present, and 39 parishes were represented by delegates. The Rev. S. H. Webb was re-elected secretary.

Bishop McVickar, in his second annual address, said: "No less than 17 of the clergy of Rhode Island have been transferred during the past year to other fields, an unprecedented number in the annals of the diocese. There have been received 14 clergymen from other dioceses. Death has removed from our midst the Rev. Walter G. Webster, the Rev. John Hedman, and the Rev. Benjamin Eastwood."

The Bishop's record of official acts contains the following: Number of persons confirmed, 662; ordinations to diaconate, 1, to priesthood, 2; lay-readers licensed, 35; postulants received, 4; candidates for Holy Orders, 3; clergymen deposed, 1; corner-stones laid, 1; consecrations of chapels, 2; sermons and addresses, 195; Baptisms, 10; marriages, 3; funerals, 10.

The Bishop dwelt, in his address, upon two of the crying needs of the time—the growing laxity in the matter of social morality, and of Sunday and its proper observance.

Think of it, in Rhode Island last year, there were solemnized, if we may use such a word in view of results, 3,332 marriages, and there were granted 490 divorces, that is, the number of divorces granted bore to the number of marriages the ratio of something over 10 per cent., and Rhode Island, bad as it is, is overshadowed by other States in this matter There is much that we can do, ought to do, in the exercise of our citizenship, to reform our civil legislation in the interest of purity, to remodel the law which governs marriage and divorce. The Christian, before all, must take his individual stand and let his colors fly, and by his own word and example, uphold the Church's standard. It is not the question so much of a new canon on divorce, as it is Christian influence exerting in our midst a public sentiment for purity.

No thoughtful Christian can observe the drift and tendency of the non-observance of Sunday without most anxious apprehension as to the results. The tendency to curtail the time devoted to God's worship—to compromise on a single service, and even that of shortest and meagrest character, and that but intermittently, while the rest of the day is given over to self-indulgence and festivity, suggests a sad contrast with the quiet and happy Sundays of our childhood's memories, with their precious opportunities for spiritual growth, and the cultivation of the cognate graces of family life. Make Sunday again what it was a quarter of a century ago, as you once knew it, a happy, bright, lovely day, because, first of all, a holy day devoted primarily to thoughts of higher things, to communion with God, and then to the cultivation of simple enjoyment of family life.

In closing, he pleaded for an itinerant missionary who, in connection with the Bishop, shall go up and down, holding services, preaching the Gospel, and starting Sunday schools in the more central spots of the sparsely settled western part of the State. He also appealed for a more liberal support of St. Mary's Orphanage, St. Elizabeth's Home, and St. Andrew's School, and spoke of the need of a home for consumptive patients.

Calvary church, Providence, was admitted into union with the convention, and St. Peter's-by-the-Sea, Narragansett Pier, was given permission to withdraw when certain conditions shall be fulfilled. In accordance with the report of the Board of Audit and Finance, an assessment of $6,900 was ordered upon the several parishes, which is $1,320 more than the amount assessed last year. The trustees of Widows, Orphans, and Clergy Fund, have a fund now amounting to $70,761.82. One thousand dollars has been given this year by Mrs. E. A. Shepard, of Providence, and an additional $1,000, not received yet, is a legacy left by the late Rev. Wm. R. Babcock; $3,433.33 was last year given to 13 beneficiaries, and for the ensuing year, $3,600 is to be divided among 12 beneficiaries. It was resolved to raise $5,000 for the missionary work of the diocese for the ensuing year.

The Committee on Christian Education urged a more systematic study of the Prayer Book, and recommended a diocesan course of normal instruction for Sunday school teachers. The convention ordered printed 2,000 copies of so much of Bishop McVickar's address as refers to social morality and Sunday observance. A committee of 11 was appointed to memorialize the State Legislature upon the matters alluded to by the Bishop in his convention address, under the head of "Social Morality." The Rev. James H. Lamb addressed the convention in behalf of the Clergy Retiring Fund Society.

The missionary canon was amended, providing for the election of a dean in each of the three convocations, to serve three years.

Bishop W. C. Doane, in behalf of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, addressed the convention, with the result that it was resolved that the members of the Missionary Council from the diocese of Rhode Island be appointed as a committee on the diffusion of information and the increase of interest as to the general missionary work of the Church.

The Standing Committee was re-elected; namely: Rev. Messrs. E. H. Porter, G. McC. Fiske, D. D., C. A. L. Richards, D. D., Daniel Henshaw, S. T. D.; Messrs. John Nicholas Brown, Rathbone Gardner, D. L. D. Granger, and John H. Stiness.

The next convention was appointed to meet on the second Tuesday in June next, at Trinity church, Bristol.

Los Angeles

Joseph Horsfall Johnson, D.D., Bishop

Woman's Auxillary

The third annual meeting of the diocesan branch was held in St. John's church, Los Angeles, May 16th. The day began with the celebration of the Holy Communion, the Bishop being celebrant. The sermon was preached by the Rev. R. H. Gusthee. After organization and the roll call of delegates, which showed an attendance of over 200 women, a social hour was enjoyed, and an excellent lunch served in the guild rooms by the ladies of the several parishes of Los Angeles. At two o'clock, the business meeting was called to order by Mrs. T. A. Eisen, the president. Reports were read, which were all very encouraging, and showed that interest has been deepened in all lines of missionary work. The president read her annual report, touching upon the work of the auxillary in the past, and making suggestions for the future. An interesting paper on Cuba was read by Dr. Anita Tyng, of Pasadena, and the afternoon closed with a delightful paper by Miss Nancy M. Hitchcock, of Pasadena, on the last triennial meeting of the Woman's Auxillary in Washington. Officers for the coming year were appointed by the Bishop as follows: Mrs. T. A. Eisen, president; Mrs. Lucy C. Spencer, first vice-president; vice-president for Santa Barbara, Mrs. S. B. P. Knox; for Los Angeles, Mrs. M. P. Reynolds; for Riverside, Mrs. J. M. Paten, and for San Diego, Miss E. Woodward; treasurer, Mrs. E. H. Spencer; secretary of Junior Auxillary, Miss Elliott; directress of Altar Society, Mrs. J. H. Johnson; secretary of Babies' Branch, Mrs. W. M. Friesner; secretary of the Missions Class, Dr. Anita Tyng; correspondent of Church Periodical Club, Miss Annie Wilson. In the evening a missionary meeting was held in St. John's church, and addresses were made by the Rev. Messrs. H. B. Restarick, William MacCormack, and B. W. R. Tayler. Bishop Johnson presided in his earnest and happy way.

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

At the local assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, held June 17th, at the church of the Resurrection, Richmond Hills, the Rev. Geo. C. Groves delivered an address on "Christian manliness."

Bishop Littlejohn held a Confirmation service on the afternoon of Sunday, June 11th, at Caroline church, Setauket. A class from Christ church, Port Jefferson, was also presented.

In connection with St. Timothy's church, Brooklyn, the Rev. Walter Irving Stetcher, priest-in-charge, a new work has been undertaken for the benefit of the colored people of the 24th and 25th wards. Mr. Stetcher has the assistance of a lay-reader in this mission. During the past year St. Timothy's has been enlarged, at a cost of $1,300.

Church of the Ascension, Greenpoint

Has been repaired and decorated. Two new stained glass windows have been put in the chancel. The Confirmation class of this spring made an offering of a brass font ewer, and the Church Guild, that of a new chalice. The parish house also has been repainted and repaired, adding much to its attractiveness.

St. Paul's, Flatbush

Plans for a new church by Architect Herbert B. Brewster, have recently been accepted by the rector and vestry. The new edifice will be erected on the corner of St. Paul's place and St. Paul's court, adjoining the present building, and will be a dignified and simple example of pure English Gothic. It will seat 800, and will cost about $45,000. It will be built of brick with stone and terra cotta trimmings, and in size will be 70 x 150 ft. The work will probably be completed by next Easter. The present church was erected 65 years ago, and has been enlarged three times, but is still inadequate to the needs of the constantly growing congregation. The Rev. T. G. Jackson has been rector of St. Paul's for the last 10 years.

All Saints' Church, Great Neck

The new memorial parish building was formally opened by Bishop Littlejohn June 14th. The benediction service was followed by a luncheon served to the visiting clergy in the dining-room of the new building, which is the gift of a parishioner. It is a two-story and basement structure, of native stone, and is thoroughly furnished throughout. Its cost was $18,000. In the afternoon the annual meeting of the Queens and Nassau counties parish missionary committees was held. Reports of the last year's work were read, new officers elected, and other business transacted. Addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell, D. D., and Dr. O. A. Glazebrook. An open discussion on "The Church's outlook in Queens and Nassau," was held, led by Archdeacon Henry B. Bryan. Tea was served at six o'clock, followed by a reception by the rector, the Rev. Kirkland Huske and Mrs. Huske.

Michigan City

John Hazen White, D.D., Bishop

A Sexton's Long Service

On Sunday, June 4th, 1865, Mr. Anson P. Elliott entered upon service as the sexton of St. Thomas' church, fulfilling the duties of the office every year since. On Sunday afternoon, June 4th, 1899, was held the funeral of his wife, Mrs. Pruda Pomeroy Elliott, who was the longest-time resident in the township, dating from 1834, a member of the first settled family in Plymouth.

St. Paul's Church, Gas City

The annual parish picnic was held June 10th. It was very largely attended, and the perfect weather and adequate arrangements for the entertainment of all, combined to make it a most enjoyable affair. This picnic is an established feature of St. Paul's, and is not only the source of much enjoyment, but of permanent good results. On Sunday evening, June 11th, the children of the Band of Hope sang a temperance cantata, "How to fight the drink," to a large congregation. Much credit is due to the conductor, Mr. Thos. Williams, and his assistant, Mr. David Jones, for the splendid showing made by the children on this occasion, and also for a flourishing Sunday school and Band of Hope. The two guilds of ladies recently contributed $155 to the rectory debt, leaving but $480 to pay on a substantial rectory built a year ago. There is no other debt on the property of the parish, and there is good promise for a steady growth of the congregation. Every department of the parish work is in capable hands, and the utmost harmony prevails.

Indiana

Acceptance of the Bishopric

ST. PAUL'S RECTORY, EVANSVILLE, IND.,
14th June, 1899.

The Rev. H. M. Denslow, President ad interim of the 62d Annual Convention of the Diocese of Indiana.

REV. AND DEAR BROTHER:—Your official notification of my election to the bishopric of Indiana, by the recent convention, was duly received, and the subject has been given my most careful and prayerful consideration. To help me in making a right decision, I have had the privilege of conferring with certain bishops, in whose judgment I have the fullest confidence; and I now notify you that, if the Church shall ratify the choice of the convention, I will humbly and trustfully accept the high office to which I have been called.

In announcing my decision, I want to add that the courtesy and good-will which prevailed throughout the session of the convention make me confident that, if consecrated, I shall receive from the clergy and laity that loving and loyal support which will enhance the success of our common work for God and His Church in this great diocese.

Most faithfully yours,
JOSEPH M. FRANCIS.

West Virginia

George W. Peterkin, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Twenty-Second Diocesan Council

Convened in Trinity church, Huntington, June 7th. It opened with Morning Prayer, sermon, and celebration of the Holy Communion, Bishop Peterkin, celebrant. The Bishop's report dealt mainly with practical matters appertaining to the Church in the State of Virginia. He expressed a desire that the council would select a Bishop coadjutor to assist him, stating that the duties assigned the coadjutor would be a fair division of the work coming under the jurisdiction of the present Bishop. It was moved that the council should proceed at once to elect the coadjutor. The vote taken determined that a special meeting of the council should be called for this purpose during the next five months. The report of the Committee on Permanent Episcopal Fund provoked a debate of two hours. The fact was brought to light that only $1,000 could be relied upon for the support of a Bishop-coadjutor from this fund. It was thought by the committee that the salary should be $1,800, and that of the Bishop's, $2,000, with the use of the episcopal residence. The Rev. John S. Gibson moved an amendment, making the salary of each, $2,000, which was finally adopted.

The Standing Committee, composed of the Rev. Messrs. G. A. Gibbons, W. L. Gravatt, W. H. Nielson and J. Gassman, was re-elected, also the committees on education, Sunday schools, and missions. A motion was made to request the Bishop to appoint agents to canvas parishes and missions in the diocese before the convening of the special council, for the purpose of raising funds for the support and maintenance of the Bishop-coadjutor: The Rev. Dr. Pearson, of Dayton, Ohio, agent of the American Bible Society, addressed the council upon "The duties of our Churches to the Philippine Islands." The report of the finance committee showed the growth of the Church funds in the diocese as far beyond all expectations, and that the increase of communicants was encouraging in the extreme, showing a bright outlook for the future of the Church in West Virginia.

Bishop Dudley, of Kentucky, preached an eloquent sermon on the last night of the council. After the services a banquet was served in the Adelphi Hotel, Bishop Dudley being the guest of honor. There were 80 of the visiting clergy present. The Ladies' Aid society of Trinity church tendered the council a reception on the first evening of its session. Meetings were held June 7th, of the West Virginia branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, and the diocesan assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. The council has decided to change the date of its meeting from the first Wednesday in June, to the same in May. Shepherdstown was selected as the next place of meeting.

Southern Virginia

Alfred M. Randolph, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Seventh Annual Council

Held its opening service in the church of the Epiphany, Danville, June 8th, with 140 delegates in attendance. There was a Confirmation by Bishop Randolph, of a small class, just before the council opened. The council sermon was preached by the Rev. W. G. Hullihen, after which the Holy Communion was celebrated by Bishop Randolph. A business meeting was held, with a general service at night, at which able addresses were made by a number of clerical delegates, on the work in the diocese during the past year, and the outlook and responsibilities of the coming 12 months. Bishop Randolph's annual report stated that all visitations for the year had been accomplished, referring to the fact that by reason of inaccessible parishes far removed from means of rapid transit, the diocese of Southern Virginia is the most difficult and laborious diocese in the South to visit. The Theological Seminary and High School at Alexandria were reported to be doing greater work than ever before in their history. In speaking of the Industrial School for Colored People at Lawrenceville, the Bishop says: "Thanks to the generosity of good men and women of the North who have endowed this school, it is able to do a grand work, being well equipped in all its departments, and its property is worth $75,000." A feeling tribute was made to Charles L. Southern, a colored presbyter, who died during the past year, also to George T. Wilmer, D.D., of Pittsylvania Co., the oldest presbyter in the diocese, who also died since last council. The Bishop reports an increase of Confirmations during the year; seven deacons and nine presbyters have been ordained, and there are 19 candidates for Priests' Orders.

The following Standing Committee were elected: the Rev. Messrs. T. M. Carson, D.D., J. G. Lloyd, R. J. McBryde; Messrs. C. M. Blackford, George P. Craighill, and M. P. Burks. The report of the Diocesan Missionary Society asks for $7,000 for next year's work. An invitation was accepted for the council to meet next year at St. Paul's church, Lynchburg. Owing to the oppressive weather in June, it is probable that the meetings of the council for the future will be held on the last Tuesday in May. Discussions of amendments to Canons VII. and XIV. occupied much time. These amendments made radical changes in the manner of raising money for the council's contingent fund, and gave the assessment committee arbitrary powers in the matter of assessing and collecting the fund from the churches. A substitute amendment, which greatly modified these arbitrary powers, was accepted. The report on the state of the Church shows communicants, 11,174; increase in Sunday school teachers and scholars, about 3,000. The Woman's Auxiliary reports $1,000 increase in foreign mission collections. The encouraging statement was made that the supply of clergy in the diocese is fully equal to the demand. This report is pronounced to be the best in the history of the diocese. A committee of four, with the Bishop at its head, was appointed to present the claims of the ministry to the young men of the State university and colleges. A committee was also appointed to supply information as to the best methods of Bible study. The Rev. W. S. Campbell, of Richmond, agent of the Virginia Bible Society, addressed the council on the work of the society in the 150 prisons of the State, showing the great good being done by it. The financial report shows total receipts for the year, $8,473.56; total disbursements, $7,943.46; total value of Church property, $1,052,926.88. The floating debt amounts to $7,241; funded debt, $85,845.

Dame Memorial Chapel, Danville

This chapel was built in 1892, by the late Rev. Geo. W. Dame, D.D., who was rector of Camden parish and the church of the Epiphany for 55 years. Eight churches stand to-day as monuments of his faithfulness and energy. By Dr. Dame's will, this chapel, erected on his own land, and built entirely at his expense, was donated to Epiphany church, to be used as a chapel until it should become practicable for it to be a regularly organized church. Its consecration took place in connection with the council. Dr. W. M. Dame, of Baltimore, son of the late Dr. Dame, preached the sermon, and his two brothers, the Rev. George W. Dame, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Nelson P. Dame, of Winchester, assisted at the celebration of the Holy Communion. In the congregation was nearly every member of the family of the late Dr. Dame.

Kentucky

Thomas U. Dudley, D.D., D.C.L., LL.D., Bishop

St. John's, Louisville—50th Anniversary

On Trinity Sunday afternoon, after Evening Prayer, the rector, the Rev. E. G. Hunter, read an interesting outline of the history of the parish. This was followed by a stirring address by the Bishop. The first rector of the parish was the Rev. S. C. Talbot, afterwards Bishop of Indiana, who organized it while he was yet in Deacons' Orders. The cyclone of 1890 destroyed the nave of the church and the rectory. The beloved rector, the Rev. Stephen Barnwell, and his infant son, were killed. The present church building was erected in 1891, in memory of Mr. Barnwell. A debt of $6,000 still remains on it, but the parish is hopeful that under the leadership of the new rector, it will soon be paid. The "Stephen Barnwell Memorial Association" was organized at the close of the service, for the purpose of raising the amount of the debt.

Fond du Lac

Charles Chapman Grafton, D.D., Bishop

The Twenty-fifth Annual Council

Was called to order by the Bishop, in Fond du Lac cathedral, on Tuesday, June 6th, at 9 A. M. After roll call, etc., the Bishop proceeded to a solemn high celebration of the Holy Eucharist. The Rev. L. W. Hopkins was re-elected secretary, officers made their reports, and the Bishop read his address, which dealt in a very able way with some current questions, from which we shall quote later. Referring to the diocese, he said there was continued cause for thankfulness for its developing prosperity. The parishes and missions have never been so completely filled as they are to-day. There are only two missions which are not supplied with regular services. During this conciliar year, the Bishop delivered 103 sermons and addresses, celebrated the Holy Eucharist 151 times, presided over about 22 meetings of different societies, wrote about 70 articles for publication, and visited, sometimes twice, all of the parishes and missions of the diocese; confirmed 311 persons. The cathedral Sunday school, numbering a little over 100 children, sent an offering of $73.34 for their Lenten work. The diocese only raised for diocesan missions last year, $763.93, including $300 raised by the Woman's Auxiliary. It raised for the Church at large the sum of $520.47. The special committee on archdeacons, appointed at the last annual council, made their report, and an amendment to the canons was adopted, dividing the diocese into three archdeacons, the archdeacons to be appointed by the Bishop, and to be ex-officio the clerical members of the Diocesan Board of Missions. The Bishop announced the appointment of the following archdeacons; viz.: the Rev. W. R. Gardner, D.D., of Algoma; the Rev. A. G. E. Jenner, of Ashland; and the Rev. R. H. Weller, Jr., of Steven's Point. The elections resulted in the re-election of Mr. E. J. Perry as treasurer of the diocese, and of all the members of the Standing Committee; viz.: the Rev. Messrs. W. Dafter, D.D., L. D. Hopkins, N. D. Stanley, and C. M. Pullen; Messrs. J. B. Perry, G. L. Field, and E. R. Herren. The Rev. D. C. Hinton and Mr. N. W. Salade were elected delegates to the Missionary Council.

Duluth

James Dow Morrison D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Fourth Annual Convocation

Held in St. Paul's church, Duluth, May 31st; 19 of the clergy on the rolls answered to their names; some were detained by sickness, and others prevented by the long distance and the expense of the journey. As it was, several had journeyed some five hundred miles to be at convocation.

The Bishop in his address gave a review of the work accomplished during the past year. There have been 239 Confirmations, and the Bishop has ordained two men to the diaconate, and advanced one to the priesthood. He has consecrated two churches, and has received the titles of Church lots in three places where new churches are in process of construction. An appropriation of $1,000 for Swedish work has enabled him to begin work among the Swedes at Duluth, as well as in several other places. He stated that he had under consideration a petition from some 50 Swedish families, asking that a mission should be established among them. In the Indian field, there were reported to him 1,071 baptized persons at our different Indian missions, and 561 communicants, 130 of whom he had himself confirmed within the two years and a half of his episcopate. During the absence of Archdeacon Gilfillan, the Rev. Francis Willis has been superintendent of the Indian missions, and has discharged his duties with marked ability. There are now under Mr. Willis seven Indian deacons, and one Indian catechist. Edward C. Hunter (Kah-O sed) is to be ordained to the diaconate, and stationed at Red Lake. There are many places where missions are needed among bands of the Chippewas in the vast forest region of Northern Minnesota; but the resources are insufficient to care for the missions which are now established; and mission chapels and parsonages are in need of repair, and there are no funds for the purpose. The Bishop asks for special offerings for the support and extension of his Indian missions. In reviewing the work of the Church in the white field, with a population of upwards of 500,000 people, scattered over a territory larger than the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware combined, the Bishop noted the steady advance of our missions, but spoke earnestly of the difficulty of securing suitable men for the work, and the great need of larger means, to enable us to overtake past arrears and to meet new opportunities. As illustrating some of the necessities, the Bishop mentioned a line of railway 240 miles in length, a good portion of it built within a year, on which there are already six or seven rapidly growing towns, where he has held services in the course of his visitations, and where he found communicants of our Church. On this long line of railway we have not a single missionary or a church building, and have no available resources, either to pay the salary of a missionary, or to assist in the erection of a single chapel.

The Bishop also spoke of the good work of St. Luke's Hospital, Duluth. It is our one institution of mercy in the district. It was established, and has been carried on for some years, by the Churchmen of the city of Duluth; and it is self-supporting, although without endowments of any kind. During the last five years it has cared for upwards of 5,000 sick folk, and it is the only hospital in Northern Minnesota with a staff of trained nurses and a school for the training of women for the nurses' profession. A new hospital is absolutely necessary for the success and permanence of this excellent work.

The business session of convocation was an earnest, harmonious, and enthusiastic one. Dr. J. E. Bowers was elected Secretary, and Mr. Wm. L. Bishop, Treasurer.

The Bishop appointed as the Standing Committee, the Rev. Drs. A. W. Ryan and F. J. Hamilton; Dr. J. E. Bowers, and Mr. F. W. Payne, sec'y.

The Board of Missions elected was: The Rev. Messrs. H. F. Parshall, Wm. Walton, E. C. Johnson, F. E. Alleyne; Messrs. T. Miles, W. D. McKay, and F. W. Payne.

The time of meeting of convocation was changed from the last Wednesday in May, to the Wednesday which occurs on or after the 20th day of June.

The session of convocation was concluded with an earnest missionary service in St. Paul's church, at which interesting and impressive addresses were delivered. The Rev. P. B. Peabody spoke on "Personal consecration as a power in missionary work"; the Rev. E. C. Johnson dwelt on the "Missionary power of the Prayer Book worship"; and the Rev. F. E. Alleyne described the successful work of St. Andrew's Brotherhood among the men and boys of his parish.

Iowa

Theodore Nevin Morrison, D.D., Bishop

Woman's Auxiliary

The 12th annual meeting of the Iowa branch, held in Davenport, May 23d and 24th, was by far the most successful of these gatherings. An unusually large number of parishes were represented. The former officers were re-elected, with the addition of Mrs. Theodore N. Morrison as honorary president. Pledges were made for the coming year, and a most helpful conference held on ways and means, in which Mrs. Hector Baxter, secretary and treasurer of the Minnesota branch, gave valuable information on the conduct of work in the sister diocese. The special committee, having in charge the furnishing of a room in St. Luke's Hospital, Davenport, as a memorial of the late Bishop and Mrs. Perry, reported the completion of its work, and was discharged with a vote of thanks. The room is handsome in all its appointments, and was much admired by the delegates who adjourned to inspect it. The general missionary meeting of Wednesday morning, held in Trinity church, was an inspiring service, attended not only by the women, but by a majority of the clergy and lay delegates of the diocesan convention. An encouraging and helpful address by Bishop Morrison, the president's address, the secretary's report showing excellent work accomplished during the six months it covered, another interesting talk by Mrs. Baxter, and one by the general missionary, the Rev. Allen Judd, on diocesan missions, comprised the programme. At its conclusion, all separated with great hopes for the future.

Marquette

Gershon Mott Williams, D.D., Bishop

The Fourth Annual Convention

Held in Grace church, Ishpeming, June 14th and 15th. The Bishop celebrated the Holy Communion. The Rev. James A. Boynton was the preacher. There were present during the sessions, 19 clergymen and 17 delegates, from ten parishes and missions. The Rev. R. W. Clark, D. D., was present as the representative of the Board of Missions. Reports of the condition of the diocese showed that the Bishop had visited 31 places in the diocese, delivered 182 sermons and addresses, baptized 14, confirmed 257, ordered three deacons and six priests. Three new churches have been opened, and one rectory. One church has been consecrated. The statement of the Episcopal Fund showed a capital of $26,500, and an income of $1,400. The Aged and Infirm Clergy Fund has $400 on hand. Disbursements for diocesan purposes appear to have been $5,800, including $1,200 from the General Board. A determined effort is to be made to add $25,000 to the Episcopal Fund before October 1st. Pledges for diocesan missions of $1,650 were made, in addition to what the Woman's Auxiliary pledged—about $250 more. The next convention will be held in Marquette. The Rev. Chas. D. Atwell, of Hastings, Mich., has entered upon the rectorship of Grace church, Ishpeming. The Rev. Frank W. Green, of Philadelphia, has accepted the rectorship of St. Stephen's church, Escanaba. With these additions, and the transfer of one clergyman now officiating under license, the number of clergy will be 24. The total number confirmed in three years, within the diocese, has been 826.

The Standing Committee for the ensuing year will be: The Rev. Messrs. J. E. Curzon, E. W. Jewell, and Wm. Johnson; Messrs. J. W. Stone, D. H. Ball, and L. L. Hubbard. The delegates to the General Convention are the same as last year; those to the Missionary Council are the Rev. E. W. Jewell and Mr. W. S. Pearce, of Dallas Bay. The secretary is the Rev. Lucien A. Spencer; treasurer, Mr. C. H. Call.

The Bishop's address counseled moderation in ritual pending authoritative action. He specified as illegal additions to the furniture of the church, tabernacles on the altar, and sanctus bells, and directed the Epistle and Gospel to be read facing the people. As to the use of incense, he said he could not license its use until he could direct how it should be used, which at present he was unable to discover from Anglican authority. He spoke of "reservation for the sick," as not justified by anything in the Prayer Book, but said that there might arise an extraordinary emergency justifying the breaking of the rubric on the subject. He believes such emergencies had arisen, and would arise, especially in a time of pestilence. No priest could be asked to celebrate more than a limited number of times in one day. Slavish deference to a general rubric, for general use, might beget a spiritual tyranny. But he recognized prescriptive rights in present ceremonial to a large extent. Usage had made right by general consent. He hoped to have limits of ritual defined by competent authority. The Bishop further cautioned his clergy that the appeal to ancient canons to show fasting communion of universal obligation, was dangerous, as a great many other practices, now obsolete, could be shown to be equally binding by similar authority, and he advised equal caution in the use and recommendation of private confession, which was nevertheless the privilege of the penitent, now as ever.

Colorado

John Franklin Spalding, Bishop

In Memory of Rev. E. A. Oliver

On the feast of the Ascension, the services at the church of the Ascension, Pueblo, were especially interesting. There were services at 7:30 and 10 A. M., and at 8 o'clock choral Evensong was sung by the Rev. Gustave Lehman, assisted by the Rev. E. P. Newton, both of Holy Trinity, Pueblo; the rector, the Rev. Wm. O. Cone, playing the organ. The sermon was in memory of the late Rev. E. A. Oliver who died while rector of this parish. Archdeacon Radcliffe, also a former rector, was the preacher. He alluded to the memorials recently erected in the church, and gave an interesting sketch of the life of Mr. Oliver as student and as priest, and concluded by bidding the prayers of the congregation for the repose and blessedness of the faithful departed. At this service, the rector, blessed the new reredos and font which commemorate the priesthood of Mr. Oliver. The reredos was given by the parish, and the font, by the relatives of Mr. Oliver, who live in Chicago and Canada.

Connecticut

Chauncey B. Brewster, D.D., Bishop

Annual Diocesan Convention

Met in Christ church, Hartford, June 13th. The Bishop of Albany preached the sermon, taking the thought of the collect for St. Barnabas' Day, and applying to the life of Bishop Williams some of the gifts and graces which marked the "Son of Consolation." It was a just and magnificent eulogy. Bishop Brewster was the celebrant at the Eucharistic office. The Rev. F. W. Harriman was unanimously re-elected Secretary.

A committee was appointed to make memorial of the fact, that in this church Bishop Williams had presided for the last time over a convention. Bishop Doane was graciously introduced by Bishop Brewster to the convention. In welcoming him the members rose to their feet, while the Bishop with pathetic voice said: "I am glad to have been able to pay my humble tribute to the man who did more than any one man to shape my life, except my father. I am glad to be here beside the one whom you elected to succeed him, and whom we of the House of Bishops, of all others, are glad you chose to succeed him." An interesting fact in connection with the report of the Prayer Book Society, which was read by the Rev. Mr. Beardsley, was that copies of the Prayer Book had been sent to the students of the Congregational divinity schools in New Haven and Hartford, and that the books had been most gratefully accepted. The Bishop of Albany, on behalf of the managers of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Church, made a plea for a better understanding of the facts about our mission work, for a healthier circulation of the life-blood of missionary enterprise, and for the establishment of a diocesan central committee which shall be in direct touch with the Board in New York.

Bishop Brewster's address began with an excellent estimate of Bishop Williams, dwelling on his personality, his gifts, and the principles for which he stood. He advocated the deepening and strengthening of the school of the prophets which the Bishop had founded, and said that no fitter memorial than this could be erected to the memory of the great primate, nor one nearer the cherished wish of his heart. Some record of the Bishop's official acts followed: Ordinations to the diaconate, 8; to the priesthood, 9; persons confirmed by Bishop Brewster, 1,262. Bishop Williams, on Dec. 19th, 1898, less than two months before his death, confirmed one person. The Bishop concluded his address with words which touched many hearts: "The courteous hospitality and kindness wherewith you have treated me, has been greatly appreciated. Let me ask again your charity and forbearance, your sympathy and your prayers. I do not expect affection, which may not rightly on short notice be asked or given. But I ask your recognition of my integrity of purpose to administer the diocese, so far as in me lies, without fear or favor, with endeavor to be impartially just to persons, and loyal at once to the honorable traditions of the diocese, and to the divine light and leading. I ask moreover, your co-operation in every good word and work, for the furtherance of the good estate of the Catholic church, for the salvation of men through Jesus Christ, our Lord, and for the honor and glory of God's Holy Name. May He be with us as He was with our fathers!"

The Standing Committee elected are: The Rev. Messrs Storrs O. Seymour, Samuel Hart, Wm. Andrews, John Binney, George T. Linsley.

The Rev. H. Lilienthal presented a memorial from the Hartford archdeaconry, asking that the towns of Mansfield, Union, Willington, and Stafford, of Tolland county, be transferred to the New London archdeaconry, in order to facilitate the transactions of the business of the missionary society. The towns of Columbia and Hebron were added to the list, and after a lively discussion the transfer was voted by the convention.

A proposed amendment to the constitution and canons relating to the depriving of lay representation of those parishes which fail to meet their canonical assessments, was voted down by a heavy majority. The salary of the Bishop was placed at $6,000, and $500 appropriated to provide him with a secretary. The secretary of the diocese was given a salary of $300. Assessments to meet these and other expenses of the diocese were levied.

In the evening there was a large gathering of the members of the convention, and prominent Churchmen, at the home of Bishop Brewster.

A resolution was passed that hereafter the business meetings of the convention should be held in a hall or other suitable place, and not in a church. Gen. Skiddy introduced a resolution which, under the rules, goes over until next year, that the Standing Committee of the diocese shall consist of four clergymen and three laymen. The Bishop's Fund now amounts to $93,925. The Aged and Infirm Clergy Fund has reached a total of nearly $50,000.

Maryland

William Paret, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Rev. J. Addison Ingle, son of the Rev. Osborne Ingle, rector of All Saints' church, Frederick, returned home on May 24th, accompanied by his wife and two children, from Hankow, China, where he has been stationed as missionary. He will remain at home about one year, when he will again return to the foreign field.

Emmanuel Church, Cumberland

The vested choir of 30 men and boys recently organized and trained by the rector, the Rev. Frederick B. Howden, has had a marked effect in increasing the congregation of the church; the number at the Sunday evening services has almost doubled. The chancel has been remodeled, and new choir stalls have been set in place. Specifications have been drawn for a new chancel organ, to cost about $3,000. The parish debt has been reduced from $9,000 to $5,300 in the last 18 months.

Death of the Rev. Wm. Scott Southgate, D.D.

The rector of St. Anne's church, Annapolis, died suddenly, May 21st, at his residence on Murray Hill, of heart failure. Dr. Southgate was born at Portland, Me., April 10th, 1833. He graduated from Bowdoin College in 1851, and from the General Theological Seminary in New York, in 1855. He was ordained to the priesthood in July of the same year, and for a year and a half was rector of the church of the Advent, Boston. He then went to Brattleboro, Vt., where for four years he was rector of St. Michael's church. The three years following were spent at Litchfield, Conn. His wife's ill health took him abroad for four years. He was called to St. Anne's parish, Annapolis, in 1869, and on the first of next October would have completed the 35th year of his rectorship. His was the longest and most successful incumbency of the 41 rectors who have been in charge of that venerable parish since it was established under the act of 1692, as Middle Neck parish of Anne Arundel Co. Dr. Southgate was well known throughout the State, and was esteemed for his profound learning and great ability. At the centennial celebration of St. John's College, in June, 1890, the degree of D. D. was conferred on Dr. Southgate, and the same day the same degree was conferred on him by his alma mater, Bowdoin College. For many years he was a member of the Standing Committee of the diocese, and at one time dean of the convocation of Annapolis. Dr. Southgate had been in poor health since 1895. He was buried May 24th in the city cemetery. The services were conducted by Bishop Paret, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. J. S. B. Hodges, S. T. D., J. Houston Eccleston, D. D., Robert H. Paine, and Joseph P. McComas.

Archdeaconry of Baltimore

The annual meeting was held at the parish house of the church of the Ascension, June 6th. The Rev. Thomas Atkinson was unanimously re-elected archdeacon, Bishop Paret concurring, and the Rev. Douglas Hooff was elected secretary and treasurer. The apportionment among the parishes, of missionary obligations, was a chief item of business. By a newly adopted arrangement, the amount is fixed at five per cent. of the contributions of the various congregations, for running expenses. A committee was appointed to report at the next meeting on the advisability of securing the services of a city missionary. By recommendation of Bishop Paret, the following amounts were distributed among stations of the diocese: Holy Evangelist, Canton, $500; St. John the Baptist, $300, under the supervision of the Rev. J. S. B. Hodges, S. T. D., of Old St. Paul's parish; Hampden and Roland Park, $200, on condition that the congregations unite, as recently proposed; Remington ave. mission, of the church of St. Michael and All Angels', $200; St. Andrews, $400, on condition that the congregation dispose of the old structure on High st., and secure a site at Harford and North aves., the amount to be paid when work on the new edifice is begun. The committee on a new church edifice at Canton was continued, and was instructed at once to place a contract for the erection of the structure. The missionary aspect of the meeting added zest to a discussion of the report of the committee on missions for the diocese.

Lexington

Lewis W. Burton, D.D., Bishop

The whole diocese, and especially the community at Beattyville and Proctor, and that at Lexington, were terribly shocked by the sudden death, on Tuesday night, June 6th, of the Rev. Hickman S. Simmerman, at Beattyville, Ky. He had gone into a deep pool of cold water to bathe, with a large number of the young men and boys of his mission, and of the town, by whom he was tenderly beloved, and over whom he had a splendid influence. He seems to have been taken with a cramp, and before his condition was discovered, he was sinking for the last time. The effort to rescue him was unavailing. A number of his people, young and old, accompanied his remains to Lexington, by the first train the next morning. Bishop Burton and Dean Lewis met the remains part-way down the road, where the trains pass. The widow had been visiting her mother, Mrs. M. D. Bagwell, in Gambier, O. Bishop Burton went to Cincinnati to meet them on their sorrowful journey, and brought them to Lexington. Mr. Simmerman had made so favorable an impression upon the Church people of Lexington, and so many of his old schoolmates from the Virginia Seminary were serving in the immediate neighborhood, that it seemed good to the widow that the mortal remains of her husband should be buried in the beautiful cemetery, not far from the tall shaft of the Clay monument. One of the loveliest spots in the cemetery has been selected for the diocesan lot. The services were held from Christ church cathedral, on Thursday evening, June 8th. Bishop Burton, Dean Lewis, the Rev. H. H. Sneed, and the Rev. W. C. Otte, conducted the services in the cathedral. At the grave, the Rev. R. L. McCready and the Rev. Edgar Carpenter assisted the Bishop. The vested pallbearers were chiefly from his old Virginia friends: The Rev. Messrs. F. E. Cooley, J. S. Meredith, F. A. Ridout, E. Carpenter, R. L. McCready, and Dean J. N. Lewis. Representatives from Mr. Simmerman's field of labor, and the vestry of Christ church cathedral, attended the services officially. The choir sang at the grave, with special loveliness, "I heard a voice." Bishop Burton says: "Mr. Simmerman was especially fitted for his field, and had begun to feel encouraged by the response to his efforts."

Pittsburgh

Cortlandt Whitehead, D.D., Bishop

The Prayer Book Society

The quarterly meeting took place at the Church rooms, June 1st, Bishop Whitehead presiding. Various donations of Prayer Books and Hymnals were made to missions and city institutions. Mrs. Bylesby was elected secretary, to succeed Mrs. E. D. Thaw, resigned. This society has just closed a very prosperous season, and during that time has distributed 1,000 copies of the Hymnal, and 2,286 copies of the Prayer Book. During the five years since its reorganization, it has scattered throughout the missions and small parishes of the dioceses, city institutions and hotels, over 17,000 copies of these books.

Western New York

Wm. D. Walker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Sunday School Festival

The annual Whitsunday festival of the Sunday schools of the Church in Buffalo was held in Music Hall, on the afternoon of that day. About 2,200 children, with their rectors and teachers, were present, though this number by no means represents the strength of the Sunday schools of the city. The service consisted of a shortened form of Evening Prayer and hymns, the singing being led by the vested choirs (150 choristers) of St. Paul's, Trinity, and Ascension churches, under Mr. Seth Clark, choirmaster of the Ascension, Messrs. Hendy and Webster, choirmasters of Trinity and St. Paul's, presiding each at a piano. "The Hallelujah Chorus", sung as an offertory anthem, was grand and effective. The Rev. Wm. F. Faber addressed the Sunday schools, on "The true meaning of the gift of the Holy Spirit." Archdeacon Bracon catechised the children, and then addressed them on the missionary work of the archdeaconry, to the support of which they contribute liberally, through mite boxes, during the Advent season. In reminding the children that Whitsunday was the birthday of the Christian Church, the archdeacon made a strong point by urging them to give light in the mission field, as candles in their own birthday cakes illuminated the family table. A birthday illuminated by 2,200 candles would be bright indeed. The Rev. George B. Richards, president of the Buffalo Sunday School League, introduced the speakers, and presented certificates to those teachers who had completed the year's course of instruction provided for teachers by the League. A similar meeting to this was held at the same time in Rochester, at which Bishop Walker was present.

Consecration of St. Paul's, Rochester

On Monday in Whitsun Week, this new and beautiful church was solemnly consecrated to the worship and service of Almighty God. Bishop Walker and the clergy marched in solemn procession from the parish house to the main entrance of the church, where they were met by the wardens and vestrymen, the vested choir of 40 voices singing, "O 'Twas a joyful sound to hear," etc. The request to consecrate was read by Mr. Nathaniel Foote, a member of the vestry, and the Sentence of Consecration, by the Rev. Chauncey H. Blodgett, the assistant rector. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Wm. S. Rainsford, D.D., of New York. About 30 of the clergy of the diocese were present, with the Bishop and the rector, the Rev. Murray Bartlett.

Woman's Auxiliary

The 19th annual convention of the W. N. Y. branch met in Grace church, Lyons, May 24th, Mrs. W. L. Halsey, of Rochester, president; 74 delegates, representing 21 parishes, were present. On Wednesday evening, the rector presented 20 persons to Bishop Walker for Confirmation. An address was made by the Rev. H. L. Burleson who had formerly been connected with mission work among the Indians in the diocese of Fond du Lac. On the following morning, the Holy Eucharist was celebrated at 9:30, followed by a business session and an address by Miss M. E. Hart, of Rochester. At the afternoon business meeting, Miss Enery gave an interesting resume of the work accomplished during the past year. Reports from parochial branches showed substantial advancement. The corresponding secretary's report furnished proof that the diocesan branch of the Woman's Auxiliary is not wanting in "courage and zeal in carrying into our new possessions that Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

Editorials and Contributions

IT was an interesting moment, at the making of Dr. Briggs a priest, when he declared that he believed the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be the Word of God, and to contain all things necessary to salvation, and then solemnly engaged to conform to the doctrines and worship of the etc. Church in the United States. And this was in writing, with his name affixed thereunto by his own highly critical hand. If there were any doubt, at that solemn moment, what was meant, or whether he meant what the Church means, by "the Holy Scriptures," in the judgment of charity we assume that as he engaged to conform to the doctrines of the aforesaid Church, he meant precisely what is set forth in the Sixth Article of Religion, wherein the Church announces her belief thus: "In the name of Holy Scripture we do understand those Canonical Books of the Old and New Testaments, of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church." Then follow the names and number of the Canonical Books of the Old Testament. Also, "all the books of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive, and count them canonical."

OF course such statements must have been qualified by such reservations as the following quotations from Dr. Briggs' book indicate:

Criticism . . . does tell every man to make up his own mind as to the authority of the writings which are said to belong to Holy Scripture. It endorses the right of private judgment in this matter as in all others. It makes the divine authority of the Canon, and of every writing in the Canon, a question between every man and his God.

We should maintain our own freedom to question and reject from the Canons such writings as do not justify themselves in the arena of criticism; and at the same time we should respect the opinion of those who think that they have evidence that we have thus far been unable to receive; and above all, we should be extremely reluctant to dissent from the historic consensus of the Christian Church in this matter, and especially the official deliverances of Holy Church. [Italics are ours.]

But then if criticism (meaning Briggs or any other man) should "make up his mind as to the writings which are said to belong to Holy Scripture," criticism, while respecting the opinions of others, and "extremely reluctant to dissent" from the Church, would have the right to reconstruct the Canon by striking out some books and bringing in others.

Query: What becomes of ordination vows?

CONTROVERSY is one of the unhappy conditions which we cannot altogether escape, so long as we live in this wicked world. It is as old as sin, and will last as long, unless sin be granted the undisputed right of way to all hearts and homes. We must fight the good fight of faith if we would lay hold on eternal life, or on that which is worth having in this present life. Yet there are timid souls who live in mortal dread of controversy, as the principal thing to be shunned. They go about as if they were treading on eggs and feared that a shell might be cracked. And they are not satisfied with this tip-toe style of peregrination for themselves only; they insist that every body shall dance to the same tune. Let no dog bark, lest the nerves of these neurotic degenerates be disturbed! The first and great commandment to them is "peace at any price." Controversy is a bog which makes their particular hairs to stand on end, especially if it occurs in the Church. They would not smite against the gates of hell even if their spiritual mother were in danger of being crushed. They belong not to the Church militant but to the Church dormant, to that part of it which sleeps while the enemy sows tares; and that seems to be in these days the larger part. "Hie thee to a nunnery!"

Recent Elections to the Episcopate

THE four episcopal elections for the West during the past year have resulted in the selection of Western men, or men whose work in the ministry has been chiefly confined to the West. Two of these received academic training at Racine College (now alas! closed), and one of these two, with a third, took a theological course at the Western Seminary in Chicago, while the other was educated at Nashotah. The fourth is a graduate of a Western college, but was trained for the priesthood at the General Seminary in New York; though his entire ministry has been spent in the West. These elections may be taken as indicating a growing feeling that Western men, other things being equal, are best fitted for Western work. Doubtless this is to a certain extent true. A man who has spent many years in the East, and has become accustomed to the ways of an older society and a settled state of things, may well find it difficult to adapt himself to changed conditions. A man is largely moulded by his environment. There have doubtless been cases of "misfit," where bishop and diocese have never been able quite to understand each other, and the work of the Church has languished accordingly. But adaptable men are not confined to the West, and there have been notable instances of most successful administration under men whose early life and experience had been confined to the region east of the Alleghanies. While, therefore, it is well that the tradition should be broken down which inclined Western people to look to the East too exclusively, it would be unfortunate if the opposite view should take its place.

SECTIONALISM has no place in the councils of the Church. If Western men are selected, let it be, not because they are Western, but because they are competent. It is certain that a bishop in going to the field to which he has been called in the most solemn manner, and which, for better or worse, is to be the work of his life, is bound to go with the determination to identify himself utterly with his people. The Church in the West is pre-eminently a missionary Church, and no one can accomplish anything who does not recognize that fact. Cathedrals and schools may come in time, but in the newer dioceses and jurisdictions the great business of a bishop must be to preach the Gospel. It would seem to be in the line of his vocation to know every corner of his diocese and the peculiarities, spiritual and moral, of every neighborhood. To know the needs of his people is the first step towards providing for those needs. There is no more exacting work, as there is none more important, in the Church of God, than that of a Western bishop.

— x —

A Roomy Church

THE Southern Churchman says: "No one wants to see the Church of England, or the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country, turned into a narrow sect. The fullest liberty to be allowed, so that its ministers teach not Unitarianism on the one hand, or Romanism on the other. Surely there is breadth enough within these bounds. But if Unitarianism is taught, the Church should have goodness and wisdom and power enough to stop it." Our contemporary has, by this time, heard of a case in New York, where a gentleman in Holy Orders has publicly stated that, while he believes in a Trinity, he does not believe in the doctrine of the "Tri-personality." This interesting person is obliged by his office to pray in the Litany, and in many prayers, to each person of the Trinity individually, and to speak of the "holy, blessed and glorious Trinity" as "three Persons and one God." By his adhesion to the Articles of Religion, he is bound to the statement of the very first of them, that "in the unity of this Godhead there be three Persons, of one substance, power, and eternity: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost," and yet he has the supreme assurance to inform all whom it may concern that he does not believe these things. He worships a different God. That he has no idea of leaving the ministry seems clear. Can it be that after such a distinct avowal of fundamental heresy, he will be allowed to continue with impunity to exercise the office of an approved teacher in the Church of God? Is this also a mark of "Catholicity"? If so, the situation will have come about which Bishop White thought impossible, and it will be established "that persons, differing in regard to the object of prayer, may be of the same Church or Communion." This utterance of Bishop White is one which we have already recently quoted. It occurs in his correspondence with Mr. Miller, the minister of King's chapel.

THIS Mr. Miller, under whom King's chapel became Unitarian, had, as we have seen, large ideas of the possible comprehensiveness of the Church. His imagination pictured a National Church which should be broad enough to include every kind of religious doctrine and practice claiming the name of "Christian," with the single exception of the system of the Roman Church. Arian and Athanasian were to agree to differ about such a little matter as the doctrine of the Trinity or the Divinity of the Son; the Unitarian lamb and the Episcopal lion were to lie down together. But with this they were not to be compelled to utter each other's test words. There was to be "no expression in the liturgy which could wound an Athanasian," while everything should be "left out which would hurt the conscience of a Unitarian." The conscience was to be considered. Men like Mr. Miller would have been glad to remain in the Church; they liked episcopacy and a liturgical service; but they had no idea of doing this at the cost of being obliged to profess with the lips what the mind and heart repudiated. To do this would wound their consciences. They were clearly of opinion that it would not be honest. Therefore, after endeavoring to get the Church to make a place for them, by dispensing them from such an obligation, they saw no way left but quietly to withdraw.

HAVE we changed all that? There are those who seem to think so. They have found a way out of all such scruples. They find themselves able, by a process not easily understood by plain people, to take any required vows and pledges, and to use any formulas which may be prescribed, and yet in their beliefs and teachings to set them aside without a twinge of conscience. This, we are led to suppose, is true Catholicity. The Church must not impose limitations upon thought or "stunt" the human intellect. The situation which we are called upon to accept, which we are narrow and "traditional" if we repudiate, is well illustrated by the case of Mr. Schermerhorn. "O Holy, Blessed, and Glorious Trinity, three Persons and one God," prays Mr. Schermerhorn on Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. "But in reality," he declares in the New York Tribune, "I do not believe in 'three Persons and one God.'" Little remains, unless it be, with Dr. Newton, to own that there is nothing in the Pantheism of "Christian Science" that is inconsistent with orthodox Christianity, and thus make it a thing indifferent whether there is in God any Personality at all.

— x —

Episcopal Succession vs. Papal Jurisdiction

BY THE REV. J. A. M. RICHEY

A PRIEST of the Roman Communion in the State of Iowa, taking up an article in a local paper, by one of our clergy, which cast reflections upon the followers of Ignatius Loyola, responded at length in a printed circular—no doubt quite extensively diffused—with the following heading: "Thirty-seven Questions for Episcopalians." "Do Protestant priests in the United States yet enjoy crown privileges?"

In turn, he reflects on Archbishop Parker's consecration. He does not bring the Queen in this time, but refers to the four bishops as "four unfrocked monks who had no more power to make him an archbishop than an archangel." Referring to the consecration of one of our bishops, he says: "Now that . . . he is consecrated, who will give him jurisdiction?" He makes out that Anglicans trace their jurisdiction to the crown of Great Britain, and says: "What! An American bishop in this year of grace enjoying jurisdiction here, traceable to the crown of Great Britain!" He says with emphasis, "The stream cannot rise higher than its source." He further says: "I am glad to see Protestant Episcopalians returning to the Catholic Church. We know there is only one Church. . . . This Church is the Gospel Church, and in order that every one may recognize this Church, has not Christ identified it with Peter for all time? Truly, then, may St. Ambrose exclaim: 'Where Peter is, there is the Church.' He says the schismatical Greek Church, together with the Roman, 'both agree to say anathema to your Church. So there must be something very wrong with your Catholicity.' He refers to the descent of the Holy Ghost as completing and sealing up the whole body of revealed doctrine and putting the Church in possession of the entire revelation, and then goes on to ask: "Who can deny her competency to declare in any of her councils since, what was contained in that deposit of faith?" He refers to one of our clergy as saying to his congregation: "We cannot give you an infallible Bible, for the Bible is not an infallible book." Throughout his long letter, he lays repeated emphasis, as we might expect, upon "Peter and the successors of Peter," and the necessity of affiliation with "the highest authority in the Catholic Church who has declared your Orders null and void, and who is the Vicar of Christ."

It would hardly seem fitting not to make some little response to a letter thus circulated among us, and representing so largely the Roman view of things.

Our Roman brother quotes numerous isolated individuals as representing the Anglican Communion, and reminds us that they are enjoying the privileges of "good standing." He needs himself to be reminded that in our Communion, as well as his own, the individual does not necessarily represent the corporate body. In my own hearing, a Roman priest said: "To hell with the Pope and his infallibility, I do not believe in it;" yet he was performing the functions of his ministry; he was a Roman priest considered in equal standing with his brethren, but this fact did not make his statement or private belief that of the Roman Church. Those on friendly terms with Roman clergy are not altogether unfamiliar with similar expressions, possibly in milder form. From all we hear and read, we may judge that there is the same "diversity in unity" in the Roman Church as in the Anglican Communion.

As to jurisdiction, was it ever claimed by any ecclesiastical authority in the Church that she obtained her jurisdiction from the sovereign of Great Britain? What would such jurisdiction consist in? Would it be the gift of Orders from the sovereign, and she a woman, according to the Nag's Head fable? Would it be the right, given by the sovereign, to exercise the functions of the ministry within the realm? Surely, the State cannot give jurisdiction in spiritual matters, and certainly the Church does not ask it. The episcopate possesses jurisdiction within itself. "Where the bishop is, there is the Church," and no sane man ever thought that the kingdoms of this world could give jurisdiction to the officers of the kingdom of Christ. It is the Roman doctrine of the "two swords" and the temporal power of the Pope, founded upon the forged decretals of Constantine, that have given the Roman Church this mixed idea of jurisdiction.

We may go to the root of the matter and ask where did St. James who presided at the council in Jerusalem, get his jurisdiction? Certainly not from St. Peter. St. James gave the decisions of the council: "Wherefore, my sentence is, etc.," and later, "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost and us"—not St. Peter. Where did St. Ignatius obtain his jurisdiction? Where, St. John? Where, even, the noted St. Gregory the Great, late in the sixth century? He acknowledged his brother bishop at Constantinople his equal, and disclaimed any exclusive right on the part of any bishop to give jurisdiction. "The Fathers gave the primacy to old Rome because it was the imperial city." It was primacy, not supremacy, and it was not connected with St. Peter but with the imperial city, and certainly the "successors of St. Peter" are his successors in no real sense at all. The idea of succession in the chair at Rome, either in the sacramental sense or in the vulgar sense, is a very disconnected idea, as well as succession. Bishops can create bishops, apostles can make apostles, and we believe that the apostolic office lives in their historic successors, but how can bishops create popes, if popes are any higher than bishops? Our Roman brother insists that the stream cannot rise any higher than its source, yet there have been numerous popes who did not receive their episcopal consecration and character even from a pope, much less a papal elevation to the office and rights of a pope. The so-called papal succession does not possess the incarnate nor the sacramental principle or nature which the united episcopate, and that alone, with all its inherent functions, possesses. Any person who is consecrated bishop obtains his jurisdiction through his consecrators, and the laws, whatever they be, which fix the limits to his diocese, do not, and cannot, give him episcopal jurisdiction within those limits, even should nobles and kings define them, and go through such detail of personal selection and formal appointment as might be conceded to them, which has been quite as extensive in Roman Church history, as in Anglican. The jurisdiction of any and every bishop is the authority of Christ: "Go ye into all the world," and the limits of any bishop's diocese is an ecclesiastical convenience which the Anglican Communion has pursued with as great unity and harmony as the Roman.

The Roman conception of jurisdiction is in some perverted way, which our "invincible ignorance" cannot grasp, connected with the pope. We cannot see how one pope can die, and after a lapse of time another pope can be created without our Blessed Lord—or, at the very least, St. Peter—coming to earth to convey to him the papal character, if there really be such, since the pope does not convey it himself. We cannot see, even according to their conception, how for weeks, months, and, sometimes, for years—as has been the case—when there is no pope, there can still be jurisdiction, or how pope and jurisdiction being lost, can be regained in any true sense or with any real character of papal distinction. By fables and distorted arguments, Romanists try to make our Orders appear invalid. By facts, and by meeting them on their own ground, we may exclaim: "Where is a valid pope!"

The Holy Ghost is the Vicar of Christ. "He shall take of mine and shall show it unto you;" "He shall guide you into all truth." Jurisdiction is from our Blessed Lord, by the operation of the Holy Ghost through the ministry of His Church throughout the world. Wherever there is power to consecrate, there is power to bestow jurisdiction, and "He gave some apostles, some pastors and teachers," but none the office of pope. Then episcopal succession, episcopal consecration and jurisdiction, are as high as can be obtained in the kingdom of Christ on earth. The Holy Ghost speaks through the united episcopates—"the Holy Ghost and us." So at Jerusalem, at Nicæa, at the ecumenical councils, and the pope can be nothing more than primate, "the first among equals," for, as the Romanist must still consistently maintain, "the stream may not rise higher than its source."

As to the deposit of faith, while the Church is the interpreter of Holy Scripture, she may not ignore it, and it is an entirely Roman doctrine which claims that the full deposit made complete at Pentecost may come to light gradually in scraps and bits at Roman councils in these latter days. Surely their accusation must rebound—"Your doctrine is not yet settled." The Church has no power to discover new truths necessary to salvation, but to testify always and everywhere to the old, and that is why we are not Roman, but Anglo-Catholics.

Not to comment on other statements made by our Roman brother, generally included under the idea of papal jurisdiction, we may draw attention to a living commentary near at hand upon his bland assertion, "I am glad to see Protestant Episcopalians returning to the Catholic Church." Many of us may reply: "I am glad to see English-speaking Romanists coming back to their own Catholic Church, or portion of it." The late Bishop Perry, of Iowa—a State with which our poorly informed brother must be best acquainted—says: "During my episcopate of eighteen years, there have been received into the Church in Iowa, from the Roman obedience, over seven hundred adults who have exchanged, intelligently and with a full knowledge of what they were doing, a false Catholicity for a true. In the same time we have lost to Rome, so far as I can learn, less than half a dozen individuals." "So," as the Roman brother said, we say to him, "there must be something very wrong with your Catholicity."

As Rome's foreign population in this country becomes more and more anglicized, it is glad to respond to a more enlightened and simple manner of presenting the Catholic Faith. They see that their Baptism and Confirmation are accepted, that they do not have to commit sacrilege, that they can worship God and their Saviour in a language they understand; that they can have all the Catholic Faith the Roman Church possesses, and they do not feel any loss in leaving behind them their rosaries, indulgences, Latin, and the "comfort and peace" of having one ecclesiastic make new and infallible utterances from time to time, to be denied by his successor in the chair, as is sometimes the case.

Letters to the Editor

MORE LIKE ST. BARNABAS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

St. Barnabas Day this year was emphasized by falling on Sunday. Its lessons ought to have impressed the laity as well as the clergy, with the missionary spirit of the Church. Our marching orders are, "Go ye into all the world," etc.

There is need of many priests, and laymen also, like St. Barnabas, of whom it is written, "He was a good man [in the Greek sense of good; i. e., noble, generous by nature], and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith"; one who first gave himself to the Lord, and then was ready to spend and be spent in the service of the Church. Many a Barnabas is needed to aid, encourage, the mission work of the Church, even in the province of Illinois.

A PRIEST OF ANTIOCH.

St. Barnabas Day, 1899.

A CORRECTION

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Your Los Angeles correspondent, in reporting the proceedings of our last annual convention, has, unconsciously, no doubt, done me an injustice. He made it appear that the amendment which I proposed to the canons, declared "that no person should be considered a commu-nificant of any parish or mission if he has not communicated within the preceding twelve months." I should be sorry to be the sponsor for any such law as that. Your reporter should have completed the sentence which he only partially quoted from my proposed canon. The sentence reads: "No communicant shall be considered as canonically connected with any parish or mission of this diocese who has not for the twelve months last past communicated in the parish or mission on whose register his name appears, unless he has given to his rector or clergyman satisfactory explanation for his absence from the Holy Communion." This is not the time or place to argue in favor of my proposed canon. Many clergymen will doubtless see numerous reasons for or against it. But I merely wish to point out the inaccuracy of your correspondent's report. B. W. R. TAYLER.

St. John's Rectory, Los Angeles, Cal. June 12, 1899.

INDIAN MISSIONS IN MINNESOTA

To the Editor of The Living Church:

I noticed recently certain statistics in regard to Indian missions in Minnesota, in the Romanist magazine, Catholic World (page 718, Feb., 1899): "Chippewas of the diocese of Duluth, classified respecting their religion":

Catholics.....	3,755
Pagan.....	3,346
Protestants.....	316

Totals..... 7,417

As the number of Protestants here given is less than the number of communicants in our Indian missions, as reported in The Living Church Quarterly (454), I wrote a letter of inquiry to the Ven. J. A. Gilfillan, archdeacon for Indian work. I take the liberty to quote from his reply in which he says: "We have about thirteen hundred baptized souls out of 5,000 population. There is a large French Canadian half-breed population who are almost universally Romanists, so that gives them a large number, whereas we had not one to begin with; have had, God helping, to make them all."

D. A. SANFORD.

BOOKS NEEDED IN ALASKA

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Feeling sure that many of our Church friends in "the States" would gladly aid us in a certain phase of our work here, did they but know of it, I take the liberty—and that with the full sanction of Bishop Rowe—of asking for a little space in your columns for a word in connection with this matter.

We are very anxious to collect either new or good second hand books for the use of the prisoners in the U. S. jail and our public reading-room. Many of the men in the jail are intelligent and fond of reading, and welcome anything in the way of good literature. They have no regular work to do, save hauling drinking water twice a day from the river for the officials, or doing a stroke or two of "police duty" about the jail (some are not even allowed these privileges), consequently the time hangs heavily on their hands; particularly as some of them are obliged to wait several months, sometimes six or more, before even standing trial, owing to the peculiar legal and business conditions of this country. We have already a nucleus of a library, but wish to add to it, not only to increase its usefulness, but to insure its permanency. All the jail work falls to the Church, and as men are sent here from all over the Territory—Sitka being government headquarters—we feel that we have a great responsibility on us, and ask you to aid us in bearing it.

As yet, we have no library at all in the reading-room, the literature being in the form of newspapers and magazines. This reading room is open every day in the week (on Sundays simply for reading and writing). We have most of the leading magazines and illustrated papers on file, besides several newspapers. The room was remarkably well patronized this last year, and certainly did much good among the men of the place. Our friends are perhaps not aware that during the winter and spring many men

"winter" in the town, waiting for the mines to open up; for practically all the mining is done in this region during the summer months. Many of these men live in little "shacks," as they are called, and have no place to go for social recreation but the saloons which thrive here, as they do all over Alaska. Hence our reading-room, well lighted and heated, and made as home-like and attractive as possible, has been a real boon to these men. They have manifested their appreciation in the past by personally making repairs on the building and giving two entertainments from which the room netted nearly seventy-five dollars. The men are allowed to smoke, and card and checker tables are furnished for those who do not care to read. Any standard works of history, fiction, science, poetry, or religion (the last to be unquestionably "sound," from the Church's point of view,) which any of our friends feel they could send us, would be fully appreciated. School books, I might add, would also prove acceptable. All books should be sent by mail, as all other modes of transportation are too expensive.

Hoping those who read this letter may see their way clear to sending us at least one book each, and thanking you for this opportunity of making the matter known,

WELLES MORTIMER PARTRIDGE.

Sitka, Alaska, June 7, 1899.

Personal Mention

The Rev. C. M. Armstrong and wife sailed from New York, 15th inst., on the steamer "Prinz Regent Luitbold," for Bremen.

The Rev. Wm. H. Van Antwerp sailed, June 5th, for Europe, on the Cunard steamship, "Aurania."

The Rev. Francis R. Bateman has accepted the rectorship of the church of the Good Shepherd, Scranton, diocese of Central Pennsylvania, and entered upon his duties.

The address of the Rev. Wm. Montgomery Brown, D.D., Bishop-coadjutor of Arkansas, will be Brownella Cottage, Galton, Ohio, from July 1st to Nov. 1st.

The Rev. Thomas Burry has been given the charge of the Hapville and East Point missions, which have just been separated from the cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Atlanta, Ga.

Bishop Clark's address, until further notice, will be Newport, R. I.

At the recent meeting of the trustees of Nashotah House, the Rev. H. E. Chase was elected to the chair of Pastoral Theology.

The Rev. Edward Cobbs, grandson of the former Bishop Cobbs, of Alabama, has accepted the curacy of St. John's church, Montgomery, Ala.

The Rev. John Davis, D.D., of the Japan mission, who is temporarily re-visiting this country, may be addressed at 10 Gramercy Park, New York city.

The Rev. P. F. Duffy has resigned the rectorship of St. Clement's church, Brooklyn.

The address of the Rev. S. Brainard Duffield is incorrectly given as Somerville, Mass. His address is Quincy, Mass.

The Editor of THE LIVING CHURCH will spend the months of July and August with his family, at Old Mission, Mich.

The Rev. J. Houston Eccleston, of Baltimore, sailed for Southampton on the American steamship, "St. Paul," June 7th.

The Rev. George Warrington Eccles has tendered his resignation as rector of All Saints' church, Bay Side, L. I., of which he has been in charge for three years.

The Rev. F. F. W. Greene who has been in charge of the church of the Redeemer, Philadelphia, for the past three years, has resigned therefrom and returns to Michigan, whence he came in 1896.

The Rev. John Graham who has acted as curate of St. Luke's church Brooklyn, the Rev. Dr. H. C. Swentzel, rector, for several months, has been forced to resign on account of ill-health.

The Rev. William Hirst Heigham, chaplain to the Bishop of Central Pennsylvania, and rector of St. Stephen's church, Catasauqua, Pa., has had conferred upon him, by the Northern Illinois College, of Fulton, the degree of doctor in philosophy.

The Rev. Chas. Albert Horne's address is changed to Lewiston, Idaho.

The Rev. Wm. B. P. Harrison has accepted the curacy of St. Luke's church, Baltimore.

The Rev. Fleming James, D. D., has taken summer charge of Christ church, Christiana Hundred, Del.

The Rev. Philip H. Linley has accepted a call to Hastings, Minn., and his address is St. Luke's rectory, Hastings, Minn.

The Rev. Geo. F. Langdon has taken duty at St. Ambrose church, New York city.

The Rev. Dr. A. G. Mortimer, with his brother, the Rev. F. E. Mortimer, sailed from New York on the 10th inst., per steamer "Ems," for Genoa. Dr. Mortimer will return in October.

The Rev. Newland Maynard, D.D., sailed for Europe on the French Line steamship, "Gascogne," June 5th.

Bishop and Miss McVickar, of Rhode Island, are to spend their summer abroad, and all letters for them, until the middle of September, should be addressed to the care of Brown, Shipley, & Co., London, England.

The Rev. A. J. P. McClure has been elected priest-in-charge of Epiphany chapel, Philadelphia, and also secretary of the Society for the Relief of Orphans and Widows of Deceased Clergymen, and of Aged, Infirm and Disabled Clergymen.

The Rev. J. R. L. Nisbett has resigned the rectorship of St. Barnabas' church, 3rd and Dauphin sts., Philadelphia, to accept the position of vicar of Christ church chapel in the same city.

The Rev. J. Alexander O'Meara, rector of the church of the Holy Saviour, Santa Clara, Cal., has received from the University of the Pacific, by a unanimous vote, the degree of D. D.

The Rev. G. J. Prescott will spend the summer in Europe.

The Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks has gone abroad till Oct. 1st.

The Rev. David Thomas Quimby who was ordained deacon by Bishop Littlejohn on Trinity Sunday, has been called to the church of the Messiah, Brooklyn, as assistant.

The Rev. C. E. Roberts has accepted a call as assistant at Grace church, Madison, Wis., and has commenced his duties there.

The Rev. Dr. Geo. W. Shinn will be in England for two months.

The Rev. Robert H. Wright has resigned the rectorship of the free church of St. John, Frankford road, Philadelphia, to take effect Aug. 1st.

To Correspondents

COLLECTOR.—We find ourselves quite unable to say how many of our American bishops have used "the ancient vestments of cope and mitre." The facts could only be ascertained by a considerable amount of correspondence. Perhaps James Pott & Co., New York, could put you in the way of obtaining photographs of the bishops of the Anglican Communion.

L. T. G.—The history of the adoption of the name, "Protestant Episcopal," for the American Church is obscure. It seems to have been used first at some local meetings of the clergy in Maryland, before the first General Convention. There is no record that this title was ever deliberately discussed and formally adopted. It appeared, however, on the title page of the Prayer Book and in the early drafts of the Constitution, and thus gained legal sanction. The word itself originated in Germany during the Reformation, and at first designated those who opposed the revocation of a resolution of the Diet of Spires. Later, the name, "protestant" was applied to those who opposed the Roman Church.

Ordinations

In Christ church, Indianapolis, June 7th, at the request of the Standing Committee of the diocese of Indiana, Bishop Boyd Vincent, of Southern Ohio, ordained Mr. William Charles Hengen, of Vincennes, Ind., to the diaconate. The Rev. De Lou Burke presented the candidate, and the Rev. Andrew J. Graham preached the sermon. The Rev. Mr. Hengen will be assistant at St. James' church, Vincennes.

On Monday morning May 29th, the Rev. John H. Dickenson, assistant minister of Christ church, Norfolk, S. Virginia, was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. A. M. Randolph. The sermon was preached by the Rev. C. B. Bryan. The candidate was presented by the Rev. F. G. Scott. In connection with his work at Christ church, Mr. Dickenson has charge of Emmanuel chapel, which has greatly prospered under his ministrations.

In Holy Trinity church, Middletown, Conn., June 7th, seven candidates for the diaconate—a striking coincidence with the first number ordained to this office—were presented, all graduates of the class of 1899 of the Berkeley Divinity School, and all from the diocese of Connecticut: Charles Grant Clark; William Henry Jepson; Albert Corey Jones, B. A. (Yale); Edwy Guthrie Pitblado, B. A. (Colo.); William Daunt Scott, B. A. (Toronto); William Atwater Woodford; Edward Blanchard Woodruff, B. A. (Colo.)

On the Feast of St. Barnabas, in St. Paul's church, Duluth, Bishop James Dow Morrison ordained to the diaconate, Angus A. Robertson, Edward C. Hunter, and Knut S. Tattermann. The candidates were presented by the Rev. Dr. Albert W. Ryan. Mr. Robertson is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and has for a number of years been a Congregational minister, his last charge being in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Tattermann was educated at the Gymnasium, Stockholm, and afterwards studied under the court chaplain, Dr. Bergman. He came to Bishop Morrison some two years ago, and has pursued his studies at Seabury Divinity School. He speaks Swedish, and the language of the Finns, and his work will be in Duluth and vicinity. Mr. Edward C. Hunter (Kah-O-Sed), is a full blooded Ojibway Indian. He has studied for three years at Seabury Divinity School, and has passed excellent examinations. His sphere of work for the present will be among the Indians of Red Lake. In the Indian missions of the district of Duluth, there are no less than 560 communicants, and their devout attitude in divine worship would be an instructive object lesson to many a white congregation.

A series of three ordinations to the diaconate have been held in the diocese of Lexington, Ky., by Bishop Burton. On Whitsunday, May 21st, in St. Peter's church, Paris, Henry Esten Spears was ordained. The rector of St. Peter's, the Rev. J. S. Meredith, was the presenter, and the Rev. D. D. Chapin preached the sermon, which was strong and interesting. Mr. Spears is a graduate of the University of the South, studied two years in its theological department, and graduated at the General Theological seminary in the class of '99. His early life was spent in Paris. He is an exception to the general rule, that a prophet is without honor in his own country. It was a great delight to his friends that in the Holy Communion, following his ordination, he administered the Cup. Mr. Spears is now temporarily occupying the position in Beattyville and Procter made vacant by the lamented death of the Rev. H. S. Simmerman.

Robt. Emmet Abraham was ordained in the church of the Ascension, Frankfort, Ky., on Trinity Sunday. He began his services as a youthful helper in the church at Ashland, Ky., under the ministry of the Rev. W. H. Hampton, and continued them under the Rev. A. Fleming. More lately he has been a lay-reader and assistant to the rector of the Ascension, the Rev. R. L. McCready. Here he has done most excellent work, being faithful and efficient. It was therefore appropriate that Mr. McCready should present him, and that Mr. Hampton should preach the sermon, which was suggestive and helpful.

June 11th, William Morrow Washington, Ph.D., was ordained in Trinity church, Covington, the rector, the Rev. R. C. Noland, being the presenter, and the Rev. Reverdy Estill, D. D., preaching the sermon, which was an able and telling discourse. Dr. Washington has been a student all his life, graduating first at the Church school in Lima, Ind., then at Centre College, Danville, and finally taking his Ph.D. degree at Columbia University. He will continue to serve where he has been the efficient and faithful lay-reader; namely, Calvary church, Ashland, and the missions in Grayson and Louisa. The service in each of the above instances was made more impressive and instructive by the Bishop arranging that the Preface to the Ordinal, and the Pledge of Conformity, should be publicly read, and that the latter should be placed upon the Holy Table by the Bishop. The final rubric in the service was publicly fulfilled, at the same time that the Certificate of Ordination and the license to preach were delivered.

Died

HARROLD.—Entered into rest on June 8, 1899, after a brief illness, Mrs. Sarah A. Harrold, wife of the Rev. Jas. A. Harrold, Washington, D. C., in the communion of the Catholic Church, in "the confidence of certain faith, in the comfort of a reasonable, religious, and holy hope."

"Eternal rest grant unto her, O Lord, and may light perpetual shine upon her."

KLINGER.—From her late residence in Detroit, Mich., the soul of Miss Almira Klinger went peacefully home to Paradise, June 7th, 1899, "in the comfort of a reasonable, religious, and holy hope." Burial, June 9th, at Plymouth, Ind., the place of her birth and long-time residence.

POOLE.—At Watertown, N. Y., on May 6th, 1899, in her 86th year, Jane S. Williams, wife of the late Calvin Keith Poole, of Cape Vincent, N. Y., and daughter of the late Judah Williams, of Utica, N. Y.

TAYLOR.—At St. Paul's rectory, Springfield, Ill., Thursday, June 15th, after a brief illness, Eunice Bessie, beloved daughter of the Ven. Frederick W. Taylor, D.D., archdeacon of Springfield. Aged 17 years.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Obituary

THE REV. WILLIAM SHIPP BYNUM

The following extract from the address of the Bishop of North Carolina, May, 1899, was adopted by the convention of that diocese, as an expression of its sentiments upon the death of the Rev. William Shipp Bynum, and copies were ordered to be sent to the family of the deceased.

"I shall ask your indulgence for the introduction of another name in this place, a name not on our clergy list since 1895, but of one whose whole ministry was associated with this diocese. Oct. 21, 1898, the Rev. Wm. Shipp Bynum, of Lincolnton, in the jurisdiction of Asheville, fell asleep. He was ordered deacon by Bishop Lyman, March 12th, 1876, and ordained priest six years later, and until his health failed in 1888 was most faithful and zealous in the work of his holy calling. He submitted with great reluctance to the advice of his physicians that he should cease work, and over and again he endeavored to take up the burden which he had no longer the strength to bear. In 1895 at my request he undertook the charge of two missions, but after a brief service was obliged to give up the attempt. After that time he had no charge, and was able to perform no regular service. His whole ministry, therefore, was spent in this diocese.

Mr. Bynum was a very remarkable man in both spiritual and intellectual gifts. In many respects he seemed to me the most brilliant man who has entered the ranks of the ministry in this diocese in my day, and one who gave the greatest promise of fruitfulness in his ministry. And until the failure of his bodily health he fulfilled that promise. His service was not long in any of the few places where he labored, but in all he left an impression upon the people which will not soon be effaced.

In 1882 he acted as evangelist, and traveled through many portions of the diocese, then embracing the whole State. Wherever he went he attracted large congregations by his earnest and eloquent preaching, and deeply impressed the people by the ardor and enthusiasm of his character. He was indifferent to ease, comfort, or personal advantage for himself, but unstintingly generous to others, and solicitous for the welfare and advantage of his friends. The Church commanded all that he possessed, whether of strength or worldly means, and he never turned his face from any poor man. It was my privilege at one time to enjoy his confidence and affection, and opportunities of frequent personal intercourse. I have never known a man of nobler qualities, or of a more attractive personality.

I wish to place on record in the proceedings of our convention, this evidence of my regard, and expression of sorrow for the loss to the Church of a life which promised so much, and which until touched by the hand of disease, so nobly fulfilled its promise. He rests in peace where no evil can touch him."

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the Rev. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

Church and Parish

A PLEASANT home in Episcopalian family for children of parents who may wish to travel. Kind motherly care. References. Address MRS. S. DAVIES, 7015 St. Lawrence ave., Chicago.

CLERGYMAN of New York city (university graduate), spending summer at Newport, R. I., will receive into his family, from June 15th to Oct. 1st, a few boys or young men preparing for college. Highest social and educational advantages. Terms for the season, $500. For further particulars, address G. W. K., THE LIVING CHURCH.

MUSICAL SCHOLARSHIP.—A full scholarship will be given a student to act as organist at Nasotah Seminary, Address: DR. WEBB, Nasotah House, Wis.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, June, 1899

- | | |
|--|--------|
| 4. 1st Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |
| 11. ST. BARNABAS, Apostle. 2nd Sunday after Trinity. | Red. |
| 18. 3d Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |
| 24. NATIVITY ST. JOHN BAPTIST. | White. |
| 25. 4th Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |
| 29. ST. PETER, Apostle. | Red. |

When ye see the south wind blow, ye say that there will be heat, and it cometh to pass.—Luke xxi. 55.

"The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright track of his fiery car
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow."
—Richard III.

June Holidays

BY MARGARET DOORIS

A holiday in June to wander free,
A holiday in June,
Through quiet country ways or by the sea;
Only the rhythmic tune
That nature's hand with skillful cunning makes,
Out of the silence swells and softly breaks.

Like giant organ pipes the great trees stand around;
How sweet to single out each mellow sound
The breezes waft beneath their pleasant shade,
The while we watch the clouds that come and go and fade.

The leafy branches have a music all their own,
A lonesome, minor chord of soothing tone.
Things that are past and things that are to be
Make up their melody.

The wild sweeps o'er the meadow far and wide,
And blossoming grasses, like a rippling tide,
Are moving wave on wave up to our feet,
With subtle notes of ceaseless music sweet.
In higher key the bees softly droning hum,
As to the wild-rose clustering blooms they hunger-
ing come;

The sparrows chirp, the robins joyous sing,
The meadow larks' and thrushes' glad songs ring,
We listen till the lingering sunset-beams
Have glowed and paled, that woo us into dreams.

Come, come again, sweet days, nor end so soon,
Sweet holidays of June;
Come, come again tomorrow, and your store
Of bliss unstinted pour,
Till new life throbs and thrills with cares' surcease,
And all forgot is weariness in peace,
As through the happy hours, by country side or shore,
Toll-free awhile we wander wide of earth's uproar.

London, Ohio.

—x—

"EVERY man to his trade." Even the serious business of a clergyman's life has its funny side, showing itself in most unexpected ways. For instance, here is a good answer given in a Sunday school class by a little widget some seven years of age. The lesson was on the Creation, and the question, "What came out in the morning?" drew forth the correct answer, "The sun." "Quite right; and what came out in the evening?" Up goes the little hand whose owner had used his eyes to good purpose, and whose answer was, "Please, teacher, sweethearts." Not so far wrong either. But, perhaps, weddings are the most prolific in producing a smile. It was only a few days since, in filling in the certificate after the wedding, that the bride's father described himself as a bachelor. I looked at him reprovingly, and his explanation was that his wife died ten years ago, which considerably cleared up the difficulty. "For a pure Irishism," continues our correspondent, "let me quote the following: I received an order to bury a pauper, and on arrival at the cemetery, found an Irish priest just about to do duty by the same corpse. I tried to argue out my claim to use the last offices, but was told that the corpse was a thorough Catholic who would sooner 'die' than be buried by a Protestant!"—Westminster Gazette.

—x—

Pen-and-Ink-lings

FEW authors can claim so large an output as 120 books—a small library in itself. Fewer still can boast of having restored a church, contributed £2,000 to a missionary college, and fitted out a missionary ship. This, however, is what Miss Charlotte Yonge is said by Black and White to have done. She is now, according to the same authority, in her seventy-sixth year.

A NERVOUS curate, the other day, announced from the reading-desk: "Here beginneth the second chapter of the Duke of Booteronomy." His vicar look severely at him, and the young man blushed, coughed, and repeated, "The Boot of Dukeronomy." There must have been germs of mispronunciation lurking in the air, for at a later period in the service the vicar read out: "I publish the mans of barriage," etc. The curate beamed with satisfaction, in spite of the solemnity of the occasion—Household Words.

ROSA BONHEUR whose fine pictures of animals all the world knows, has laid down her brush, and ended her work. She was the first woman in France to whom was given the Cross of the Legion of Honor. Despite her masculine attire and manish ways, no word of public or private reproach was ever brought against her, and few persons who have attained to fame have lived so retired a life. Even the ubiquitous newspaper interviewer has failed to secure stories and information as to her private life and doings. Her great masterpiece, "The Horse Fair," is in the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art.

A DISTINGUISHED Massachusetts clergyman tells a story at his own expense. He was on a tramp through the White Mountains, with another clergyman for a companion. One day they mounted the driver's seat of a stage-coach. As is often the case, the stage-driver was an interesting character whose conversation abounded in good stories. The three speedily became friendly, and it was with reluctance that they parted at the end of the journey. "I'm glad to have met yer, fellers," said the driver on leaving them; "yer see, I haven't seen a man this summer—only ministers."—Argonaut.

THE International Congress of Women, to be held in London from June 26th to July 5th, promises, Harper's Bazar says, to be a nine days' wonder among women's meetings. The programme announces over 230 papers, supplemented by hundreds of speakers who will take part in the discussions. The subjects have been grouped under five general heads: Educational, professional, legislative and industrial, political, and social. One of the most interesting features of the congress will be the participation of women speaking different languages. A knowledge of English, French, and German will be in demand.

IN these days of political corruption and low moral standards in public life, it is positively refreshing to hear any man of influence declare boldly, both by word and action, that he stands by the Ten Commandments. Governor Roosevelt, speaking May 15th, at a club dinner in Buffalo, said: "The worst thing they [the voters] can do is to choose a representative who shall say: 'I am against corporations; I am against capital'; and not a man who shall say: 'I stand by the Ten Commandments; I stand by doing equal justice to the man of means and the man without means; I stand by saying that no man shall be stolen from, and that no man shall steal from any one else.'"

EVERYBODY knows now who is to be the next president of Yale University, but not every one has heard all the little personal points of interest connected with Mr. Arthur T. Hadley. Here are two or three: A man of brilliant attainments, he is one of the few infant prodigies who ever fulfilled the promises of his youth. He is only forty-three, and is not only the youngest man ever made president of Yale, but also the first man not a clergyman who has occupied that position. One of the best testimonies to his character is the great love of the undergraduates for him; and still another of his advantages is a wife who is described as having "clear, keen perceptions, broad judgments, perfect integrity of character, helpful, amiable, gentle, endowed with a saving grace of humor, and that most excellent thing in woman—a low voice." The influence of such a woman must do much for Yale.

WE all, says Harper's Weekly, like to see such a prize in the teaching profession go to a professional teacher. "Besides that, no other candidate was talked about in public whose qualifications seem quite as comprehensive as those of Professor Hadley. He is a Yale professor, the son of a Yale professor, born in New Haven, in a blue house—Yale of Yale, bred in the bone, and blown in the glass. There couldn't be a Yaler man, as every person will admit who ever sorrowed over the elder Hadley's Greek grammar. He is forty-three years old—a very proper age. He has written a book about railroad law which enables him to qualify as enough of a business man to be a college president."

IN 1862 Mrs. Julia Ward Howe stirred the nation with her famous "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Thirty-seven years later, at eighty years of age, Mrs. Howe speaks in favor of peace, and has written for The Sunday School Times the following poem:

THE MESSAGE OF PEACE

BY JULIA WARD HOWE

Bid the din of battle cease!
Folded be the wings of fire!
Let your courage conquer peace,—
Every gentle heart's desire.

Let the crimson flood retreat!
Blended in the arc of love;
Let the flags of nations meet!
Bind the raven, loose the dove!

At the altar that we raise,
King and kaiser may bow down;
Warrior-knights above their bays
Wear the sacred olive crown.

Blinding passion is subdued.
Men discern their common birth;

God hath made of kindred blood
All the peoples of the earth.

High and holy are the gifts
He has lavished on the race,—
Hope that quickens, prayer that lifts,
Honor's meed and beauty's grace.

As in heaven's bright face we look,
Let our kindling souls expand;
Let us pledge, on nature's book,
Heart to heart, and hand to hand.

For the glory that we saw
In the battle-flag unfurled,
Let us read Christ's better law:
Fellowship for all the world!

— x —

How Hasse Wrote His Te Deum

THE beautiful Te Deum of Hasse, a native of Bergedorf, near Hamburg (born 1699), had the following singular origin: He had been commissioned by King Augustus III, to compose a new Te Deum, but having been for some time very ill, he was not disposed to study, and was unable to please himself. Meantime, the day it was to be delivered was near at hand; almost despairing of success, he took a walk on a fine Sunday morning in the Royal Park. A trusty peasant from Gruna, who going to a neighboring church, overtook him near the palace, addressed him cordially, and kept close to him, notwithstanding the cool answers he received. Vexed at being thus interrupted in his meditations, he was about to turn into a side path, when suddenly a ray of invention was kindled in his soul, and the leading idea of the Te Deum flashed across his mind. Not to lose it, he impetuously desired the peasant to stand still, ran into the gardener's lodge for a piece of chalk, and was about to draw a stave across the broad shoulders of the peasant. But the latter, already amazed at the command to stand still, grew quite angry at the chalk marks on his Sunday coat, and supposing Hasse to be mad, ran full speed towards the city, followed by Hasse, chalk in hand, who luckily caught him, and begging him for heaven's sake to stop, wrote the leading theme upon the black coat, and drove its owner before him, humming the notes as he went along, to the park gate. Here he obtained pen and paper, and copied the whole. With his treasure, Hasse hastened home, and the principal parts of the Te Deum were completed. On the following day, he went to Gruna, carrying a present of a new suit of clothes for the obliging peasant whose black coat had been such a service to him.

— x —

Book Reviews and Notices

The Complete Poetical Works of John Milton. Cambridge Edition. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Price, $2.

The admirable Cambridge edition of the poets, under the general editorial direction of Horace W. Scudder, needs no recommendation. The volumes are well established in public favor. The present one on Milton, by William Vaughn Moody, is worthy to be placed with its predecessors. The first thirty-seven pages are devoted to the personal life of the poet. It is one satisfactorily to be studied, because of the sharp division between its three main epochs—the sweet, sheltered youth, and its student ease; the life of fanatical service for the Puritans; and blind, old age, when the "organ voice of England" uttered the message which Milton felt it his mission to leave to his country. The editor's aim has been to clear up some of the difficulties that prevent the modern student from understanding Milton's real character. The grace and the lofty nature of his theme, which surrounds him with an atmosphere of traditional reverence; his active work for twenty years in a field so inharmonious with the love of poetry; the religious and political complexities of his time—have all stood between Milton and the modern reader who would know him personally. Part first comprises the English poems; part second, those in Latin. The subdivision of the earlier part is into eight classes, each with an introduction of unusual value. The notes and illustrations in the appendix fill nearly thirty pages, and there is an index of first lines, as well as one of titles. Altogether, there could not well be an edition of greater helpfulness and merit.

Letters of Thomas Carlyle to His Youngest Sister. Edited, with an Introductory Essay, by Charles Townsend Copeland. With portraits and other illustrations. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Price, $2.

Carlyle's well-known opinion of mankind in general as "mostly fools," his denomination of the world at large as a "dusty fuliginous chaos," are not calculated to allure the timid reader. But his admirers do not mind those "wild splutterings of genius," nor pay undue heed to the great writer's grotesque indictments. Carlyle was in the habit of being melancholy. It was not that he and England and the world were so amiss, but that his "Puritan spirit and Puritan digestion" were at fault. The reader is prepared by a knowledge of these facts, for a collection of letters totally different in character from those known in the history of literary correspondence. What Carlyle felt and thought he expressed always; and his utterances never lacked vigor. But for other reasons, too, these letters are noteworthy. First, as the editor points out in his admirable essay on Carlyle, the latter was, for interest and entertainment, a letter-writer among a thousand. Secondly, he was a "curious combination of mystic and realist." Most of the letters here given were mainly written to Mrs. Hanning, Carlyle's youngest sister, who died in Toronto, little more than a year ago, at the age of eighty-four. She was the last surviving Carlyle of her generation. The most interesting letters are those addressed to his mother. In time, they cover the period from 1832 to 1890. There is an engraved frontispiece of Carlyle, besides other illustrations—one of Ecclefechan, another of Cheyne Walk, and portraits of his wife, his mother, and his sister.

The Ladder of Fortune. By Frances Courtenay Baylor. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Price, $1.50.

How a poor foundling boy climbed the ladder of fortune, and what he felt and thought when he set his foot on the topmost round, this story describes vividly. It has a moral. Incidentally, there are several indictments brought against American life. The poor Western dressmaker who married the hero and aided him in rising in life, is an excellent characterization. After she has passed through several stages in her process of social evolution, we are given this description of her: "Nobody could have taken to the European system of domestic management more kindly than Mrs. Withers, and she did not graft upon it American notions, as she now called all distinctively American ideas, or dilute the fine old crusted port of feudal survivals with what she considered domestic ditch-water." Finally, she faces a frightful death, on the rack of constant pain, but she now knows "no other god than society, and to society she turns more earnestly than ever, though it no longer engrossed or, indeed, in the least, interested her." In a dim corner of his palace home, while a splendid ball is at its height, George Withers, now an old man, realizes the value of that for which he has neglected his soul, and murmuring: "A failure, my life, a perfect failure," leaves the last round of the ladder of fortune behind him forever.

The Theory of the Leisure Class. By Thorstein Veblen. New York: The Macmillan Company. Price, $2.

There is more solemn "rot" in this book than in anything we have lately read. The author is a Scandinavian pundit, probably an infidel, who calls Christianity "an anthropomorphic cult"; who has swallowed a dictionary, and unloads his ponderous words in equally heavy sentences. On the theory that the best proof of any pudding is tasting it, we furnish a few plums from the pudding, that the general reader may judge of its flavor: "The sporting or gambling temperament comprises some of the substantial psychological elements that go to make a believer in creeds and an observer of devout forms, the chief point of coincidence being the belief in an inscrutable propensity or a preternatural interposition in the sequence of events." Again, and equally delicious: "There seems to be no ground for disputing the claim that the desirable athletic material afforded by any student body in this country is at the same time predominantly religious, or that it is at least given to devout observances to a greater degree than the average of those students whose interest in college sports is less." Again, and this is the richest: "Devoutness is perhaps in all cases to be looked upon as a survival from an earlier phase of associated life, a mark of arrested spiritual development." After these examples, if any one wishes to read this book in any other spirit than that in which he would read Puck or Life, why, there is nothing more to be said.

Gems from the Fathers, or Choice Thoughts Gathered from their Numerous Works, and Arranged in Alphabetical Order. By the Rev. Edwin Davies, D. D. London: Samuel Bagster & Sons, Limited; New York: James Pott & Co. Price, $1.75.

The title of this work clearly indicates its scope. The purpose has been to select from the writings of men who lived in or near Apostolic times, "gems that sparkle with a radiance worthy of heaven." They vary from a thought contained in a sentence or two, to those covering half a page. The wise words of more than forty of the most saintly and noteworthy men of the early Christian days are recorded here. The alphabetical arrangement of the "thoughts" adds to the helpfulness of the work as a book of reference. The volume of nearly five hundred pages is tastefully bound in blue, and constitutes an attractive book for the general library.

The Jamesons. By Mary E. Wilkins. New York: Doubleday & McClure Company. Price, $1.

One of the leading literary magazines of a recent date had an article on Miss Wilkins that attracted much attention. The writer, while admitting Miss Wilkins' undeniable gifts, made it his main purpose to show her tendency to misrepresent, rather than justly to present, the life and characters of a New England village. He dwelt upon the narrowness, the intensity, the prevailing morbidity, and sought to find in the circumstances and training of Miss Wilkins' own life, the secret of the one-sidedness of her art. If this critic were to make the acquaintance of "The Jamesons," in their delightfully funny adventures in Linnville, he would soften his verdict that the New England novelist is capable of delineating only grim and sordid aspects of humor. It is a book to be read on summer piazzas, as it is about vacation life. The Doubleday & McClure Company have devised a new system for the accommodation of out-of-town-buyers. "The Jamesons" will be sent post-paid to any address on approval, to be paid for if satisfactory, or to be returned if not wanted. This volume will not be returned, we venture to predict, even by those who have seen it in its first magazine form, as they will find it an attractive little edition, with its colored pictures and the sedate binding so in keeping with the text.

The Two Covenants and the Second Blessing. By the Rev. Andrew Murray. New York, Chicago, and Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Company.

With all the excellent positive teaching of this little book on the relation of the Old and New Covenants, and on the spiritual blessings offered to man under each, we are in cordial agreement. It is the important matter omitted, and apparently unthought of, that amazes us. Think of a treatment of the New Covenant which has no word to say of the grace of Holy Baptism or of the other great sacrament of the union with God in Christ; which, in short, ignores the whole sacramental system and the Church as the mystical body of Christ, the very covenant body. And yet this half-Gospel is what we have in this volume. How much more complete, and in accord with the record of the New Testament, is the teaching of the Church catechism. The Rev. Mr. Murray comes so close to Catholic teaching at many points, that it is a thousand pities he should miss it altogether.

Tales by Tom Hall. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company. Price, $1.25.

The first thing to be noted regarding Mr. Hall's book, is that it deserves a better cover; paper and letter-press are all that could be desired. The tales are numerous and most varied in character; some, mere sketches, others, more elaborate; most of them are good, and some of them are excellent. It may be objected that murder and sudden death too frequently form the climax to the stories—one does tire of a concluding suicide in three consecutive tales—but much of the book is free from this fault, and the tales were originally written—possibly an extenuating circumstance—for periodicals of the entertaining, leisure-hour class. The stories will help one to pass a summer afternoon pleasantly.

The Gospel of the Atonement. Being the Hulsean Lectures for 1898-'99. By the Ven. James M. Wilson, M. A., Archdeacon of Manchester. London: The Macmillan Company. 1899.

We confess that we have experienced no small degree of amazement on reading these lectures. The author's object being to bring unbelievers and those who are indifferent, to a realization of the truth of the Atonement, he proceeds to do so by eliminating from the conception of the Atonement all idea of propitiation, sacrifice, ransom, expiation, and substitution; that is, though he cannot, in simple justice to the New Testament, deny the use of these words in relation to the work of our Lord Jesus Christ, he would "retain and purge them of the errors" which they connote. His method is wild enough and unscientific withal. Moreover, in his attempt to lower the Gospel of the Atonement down to the level of the unbeliever, he does not seem to see that he drops to the level of Socinianism himself. If he believes what he has preached, the mental and moral struggle which he must be undergoing in using the Prayer Book ought to be very exhausting.

Old Glory Series: Fighting in Cuban Waters, or Under Scley on the "Brooklyn." By Edward Stratemeyer. Illustrated by A. B. Shute. Boston: Lee & Shepard. Price, $1.25.

This is the third volume in the Old Glory Series—tales depicting the various events, on land and sea, of our late war with Spain. This book, like those that have preceded it, is timely, in sympathy with the patriotism of the day, and will not fail to hold the interest of boy readers. Mr. Stratemeyer has the knack of writing stories that appeal to boys, and that have yet an advantage from an educational standpoint. In the present tale he has fully sustained his well-earned reputation.

A Matter of Business, and Other Stories. By William Curtis Stiles. Chicago: Advance Publishing Company. Price, cloth, 75c.; paper, 25c.

Three little stories with morals, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say, three morals with little stories attached—the morals are much the strongest part of the tales. Mr. Stiles writes smoothly and easily, and his ideas in regard to practical religion are undoubtedly sound, but there are probably few who care to have the matter presented to them in the sugar-coated form of a little story. We are reminded of the contents of the "carefully selected" Sunday school library of forty years ago.

ONE of the prettiest books for children, and at the same time available for practice in reading, writing, and singing, is "The Hiawatha Primer," by Florence Holbrook. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston; price, 75 cents.] The poem is given partly in the original verse and partly in easy paraphrase, illustrated by drawings and colored plates, with writing exercises, and songs with music.

As next in value to the weekly Church papers, in a Church family, we should esteem the Church almanacs. They ought to abound in every parish, and the clergy could well afford to give personal attention to place as many as possible among their people. The cost is but a trifle, and a personal suggestion to a parishioner would nearly always receive a favorable response. Yet these valuable reminders of the Church Year and Church principles and usages, are seldom found in our Church homes. There is "The Living Church Quarterly" (Young Churchman Company, Milwaukee), "The American Church Almanac" (James Pott & Co., New York), "The Protestant Episcopal Almanac" (Thomas Whittaker, New York), and "The Church Calendar," (Church Calendar Company, 14th st., New York), all valuable publications from which to choose. Circulate the Church Annuals!

"NOTHING TO SPARE," is the title of a story in rhyme, "founded on fact," by the Rev. George H. McKnight, D. D., Elmira, N. Y. It gives an account of an experience in the early days of his ministry, when he "went East," begging for his parish. It is amusing, while it awakens one's sympathy and indignation. The writer found, as all who have gone on such errands have found, that "In the whirl of excitement and fashion

There is no sense of duty, no place for compassion."

There were some, however, "who wrote their names down in the little blank book," and the mission was not a failure. The parsonage was not sold, but the writer resolved that if he ever tried begging again,

"'Twould be certain proof I was driven insane."

Books Received

DODD, MEAD & CO.

The Garden of Swords. By Max Pemberton. $1.50.
Thoughts of and for the Inner Life. By Timothy Dwight. $1.50.

A. S. BARNES & CO.

America in the East. By W. E. Griffiths. $1.50.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

The Making of Hawaii. By W. F. Blackman. $2.

D. APPLETON & CO.

Imperial Democracy. By David Starr Jordan.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY

Our Sisters in India. By the Rev. E. Storrer. $1.25.
Border Lines in the Field of Doubtful Fancy. By H. Clay Trumbull. 75c.

Pamphlets Received

Notes on a History of Auricular Confession. By the Rev. P. H. Casey, S. J.

The Students' Challenge to the Churches. By Luther D. Wishard.

Annual Address of the Rt. Rev. Charles C. Grafton, S. T. D.

Catalogue of Miss Phelps' English and Classical School for Girls, New York.

Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions.

Some Aspects of the Race Problem in the South. By the Rev. R. F. Campbell, D. D., Asheville, N. C. 10c.

The Christian Soldier. By the Rev. Wm. Wilson DeHart, S. T. B., Tampa, Fla.

The History and Antiquities of the Collegiate Church of St. Saviour, Southwark. By the Rev. Canon Thompson, M. A., D. D. Ash & Co., 42 Southwark st., S. S., London.

Sixth Annual Address of the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D. D.

Red Book of the Parishes of All Saints' Church and Christ Church, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Opinions of the Press

The Churchman

NEMESIS.—There is something awesome in the roll of victims that General Mercier's crime has already claimed. Here are Henry, Lemerrier, Lorimier, dead by their own or another's hand. There stand Paty du Clam and Esterhazy, scoundrels unmasked by their own confession. Here is Cavaignac's ruined political future. Good men, too, have been sacrificed to angry justice. Here is Picquart, martyr to truth, forgotten in his cell. There is Casimir-Perier, who made what Dante would have called the "great refusal" of a presidency that he did not feel strong enough to hold with honor. Around these crowd three worthy professors, driven from their chairs, and six ministers forced in eighteen months to resign the War Portfolio, as though it were a blight to enter the upas shadow of the general staff. There has not been within our memory such witness to the power of conscience.

The Evangelist (New York)

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.—The demand must soon be heeded for uniform legislation throughout the land. The State is bound to protect the family, and nothing is more certain than that the present condition of law is intolerable. Where divorces are made easy they are made frequent. If the sanction of the Church upon remarriage could be secured only with difficulty, and given only to the aggrieved and innocent party, and if the practice of the ministry could be appealed to as uniform in its protest, reform in the law would not be long delayed. That a man and a woman can conspire to break up a happy home, make necessary a divorce upon the one indisputable ground, and then, in defiance of the decree of the court, at once themselves get married, with no fear of legal punishment, and but slight concern for social reprobation, is evidence of a condition of things that threatens the very existence of society.

The Church Standard

PEACE AND GOOD-WILL.—If Spain desired to cultivate sincerely friendly relations with the United States, as she undoubtedly does, she could not more gracefully have signified that fact than by sending the Duke d' Arcos, with his American wife, to represent her at Washington. The courteous consideration which was everywhere shown by the American officers to Spanish susceptibilities, and the chivalrous, almost fraternal treatment of the Spanish naval officers and seamen by the American victors, was too spontaneous to have the slightest smack of policy; and yet, had it been otherwise, it would have been a wise policy. In spite of her defeat, Spain seems now to cherish no rancorous ill will against her late enemy, and it is probable that there was never before quite so much good-will for Spain as there now is in America. In presenting his credentials, the Duke might have ignored the late war altogether. It was a braver thing to refer to it as an incidental breach in a long friendship which it was his mission to renew. Never again, we trust, will such a breach occur between the two nations.

The Outlook

THE FINDING OF THE LOST BABY.—Such a scene as this makes us realize that human brotherhood is something more than a name. A touch of sorrow makes the whole world kin. We do in very truth bear one another's burdens. A thousand mothers besides that one in the street, clasped their own little ones more closely to their breast when they first heard of the abduction, and cried to God for Marlon Clark's rescue; clasped them again more tightly to their breast when they heard of her recovery, and thanked God that she was found. It is more true than we are wont to think that no one liveth to himself, and no one dieth to himself. It is the custom in Paris for pedestrians when they meet a funeral in the streets to stop with uncovered heads while it passes by. This is but the outward and visible sign of a real respect for the grief of the unknown mourners. We feel the common sorrows but lightly, and it is well we do, for they are so common that otherwise we should be crushed by them. But all sorrows and all joys are ours. He is but a poor soul who does not in very truth weep with those that weep, and rejoice with those that rejoice. Wireless telegraphy has demonstrated to us that there are electric currents where there are no wires on which they can travel. So such a scene as this attests the fact that there are waves of human sympathy which run from home to home, and heart to heart, even where there are no connecting links of blood and friendship, or previous acquaintance.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XVIII.

MR. UNDERHILL'S family were allowed to remain in peace in Schenectady for a time, the clergyman having given his parole to the commissioner at Albany to keep within such and such limits.

Margaret Delafield was still a member of the household, whom none would willingly have spared, and yet her position among them was to herself a humiliating one, in spite of all their kindness. Was she not tacitly understood as belonging to Alan—to him who had never claimed her by word or by look? True, on the last visit, he had sought her constant sympathy; but what wonder, when his own people still regarded him with but half approval, or with cold confidence?

And Alan, on his side, had looked at Margaret with new questionings, and he had not again protested his love for Evelyn since the day when he had made such vehement defence against her accusations. And yet it was Evelyn who had done for him the last little sisterly offices before he rode away with his company of new volunteers to rejoin General Sullivan.

"Alan," she had said, as she winked away some obstruction to the threading of her needle, "while you are absent on this holy crusade against your own countrymen, mayhap you will think sometimes of your kindred here. Doubtless, when you return you will find us fled to Canada, unless, indeed," she added demurely, "we can give up Margaret as a hostage."

"I have no doubt that Margaret would gladly put herself in the hands of the Committee, could she but guard my father's safety. But why taunt me to-day with these perverse forebodings, in this last hour, even while your fingers work me kindest services? Oh, Evelyn,"—he seized her hands, which were trembling now,—"do you not yet forgive me the pain and disappointment I have unwittingly made you suffer?"

Evelyn tried to raise her eyes to his, but they faltered and fell before his steady gaze, while she turned her head, with its loose-bound hair, aside, as if to scan the effect of the darn just made in his coat. "Tis a very pretty one, I think," she said, irrelevantly.

"Evelyn," cried Alan, "I am suing for pardon; see!" and he dropped to his knee before her, still clasping her hand and speaking passionately. "I am pleading for your trust that I shall do nothing unworthy of my father, or of you, and you prate of patches!"

Evelyn looked everywhere save into the eyes of the suppliant—those eyes of which she knew the compelling power. She marked how the hair fell back from the high forehead, disclosing a scar from some sword-scratch, which might so easily have been a fatal wound that she shuddered as she looked. She compared the outlines of the features with the well-remembered ones of Griffith. This nose was less perfect in form; this mouth more stern; but somewhere lay the nobility of strong and upright manhood. Was it in the eyes into which she dared not look?

"Alan," she began, "'tis my best stitchery"—and then her playful tone broke, and she lost control of her always errant feelings. "Yes, yes," she said, while her tears dropped on his face, "I forgive you, and I crave your pardon. I have been hard and proud; not like your little friend of the old days—those days which can never return."

And so heartened, and yet baffled by something hid in the girl's reserve, Alan had gone.

Days and weeks passed, dark with the rumor of the sickening tragedies enacted by Brant and Butler in the fair Wyoming Valley—atrocities never excelled by Attila, the Scourge of God! Then came the report that the swath of desolation was to be cut northward through Cherry Valley. Aye, would it stop before it had reddened the waters of the Mohawk in its crossing?

Margaret came to Mr. Underhill with the horror of the news blanching still further her pallor. "Sir," she said, "this surely is not war. 'Tis carnage, butchery, the unlicensed work of men formed for assassins. The red men are hounded on by the passions of the white. Oh, sir, you can do much, for the people whom you have bathed in the waters of Baptism must love you still. Mayhap God has removed the candlestick of your Church to give you opportunity for a greater service to His children. Oh, go to meet the Indians on their bloody path, and strive to show them Christian warfare, if there be a warfare which is not of Satan."

"Gladly would I go, my daughter," replied Mr. Underhill. "This matter presses on my conscience night and day, as you can never know. I ask myself if the priest's unfaithfulness have caused the people's crime. But I have given my parole; it is a chain about my neck."

"Oh, then it shall be broken," cried Margaret. "I will go to Governor Clinton and put myself in his hands as surety for your good conduct. He can never refuse me this boon."

"Go, then, and the peace of the Lord go with you," replied the priest solemnly.

Margaret indeed prevailed with Clinton, as she had said, and Mr. Underhill was granted the permit to leave his bounds, and

ROYAL

Baking Powder

Made from pure
cream of tartar.

Safeguards the food
against alum.

Alum baking powders are the greatest
menacers to health of the present day.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

even furnished with a mounted guard to further him on his mission.

It was on the night of the ninth of November that the clergyman with his small escort arrived on the outskirts of the Cherry Valley settlement. Over their path still hung scattering, bare-limbed trees, the outposts of the dense forests of beech, maple, and wild cherry, through which they had just passed. In front, the hills rolled back from the little hamlet which they guarded, and away to the southward gleamed the light of a single watch-fire, doubtless that of a scouting party along the line of the Susquehanna. The last bend of the hills had just been rounded, and the company were riding now at ease, when a small band of perhaps ten or fifteen men seemed to arise out of the earth in the darkness. Before the soldiers of the escort had time to recover from their surprise, or to level their muskets, they were quite surrounded.

Believing himself ambushed by Indians, Mr. Underhill spoke in the Seneca tongue, proclaiming himself as a friend. To his surprise, he was answered in good Scotch-Irish.

THE DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTIC OF THE VOCALION IS ITS EXQUISITE TONE

THE VOCALION is remarkably well adapted for either the church or the private music-room. It is compact in form, occupying about one-third the space of a pipe-organ of equal capacity, and has a full, rich diapason tone-quality, which, together with great delicacy in the string registers, especially fits it to accompany the human voice.

We give here a description of our Style 22, to which we wish to call the attention of all lovers of organ music, whose correspondence we invite.

SEND FOR CATALOG G

SPECIFICATION OF STYLE 22

Compass of Manuals CC to A, 58 Notes. Compass of Pedals CC to F, 30 Notes.

GREAT ORGAN

1. Open Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 2. Melodia, 8 ft., 58 notes. 3. Dulciana, 8 ft., 58 notes. 4. Harmonic Flute, 4 ft., 58 notes. 5. Trumpet, 8 ft., 58 notes.

SWELL ORGAN

6. Stopped Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 7. Aeoline, 8 ft., 58 notes. 8. Violin Diapason, 8 ft., 58 notes. 9. Principal, 4 ft., 58 notes.

PEDAL ORGAN

10. Double Open Diapason, 16 ft., 30 notes. 11. Diapason Dolce.

MECHANICAL ACCESSORIES

12. Swell to Great. 13. Octave Coupler Swell to Great. 14. Swell to Pedal. 15. Great to Pedal. 16. Tremulant. 17. Wind-indicator. 18. Bellows-signal.

COMBINATION PEDALS

19. Forte Great. 20. Piano Great. 21. Forte Swell. 22. Piano Swell. 23. Balanced Swell Pedal. 24-25. Great to Pedal, reversible.

The Combination Pedals are double-acting. The blow-lever may be operated from either end of the organ by hand-power or connected with a motor.

Cases in solid quartered oak. Richly finished. Illuminated-pipe front. Dimensions: 7 feet 1 inch front; 10 feet 10 inches high; 41 inches deep.

Vocalions range in price from $275 upward.

THE VOCALION ORGAN COMPANY
No. 18 West Twenty-third Street, New York City
Chicago, Ill.: Lyon & Healy, Wabash Avenue and
Adams Street. Boston, Mass.: The M. Steinert &
Sons Co., 162 Boylston Street

FLEMING & CARRICK PRESS, NEW YORK

"A friend to them red divils, is it?" cried the leader of the band. "You see I know a good bit of Seneca brogue meself, and 'tis a good prize we shall have to take to the colonel at the fort."

"If you will take us to the fort, friends, it is all we ask," replied the clergyman, "for we are on our way thither."

"Your tongue is as smooth as a kirk meenester's," said the other, "but your fire must be muzzled, and the fangs of these, your fellows, drawn. Disarm them, boys."

"You shall suffer for this, as we are good patriots from the Mohawk!" cried one of the men, and there would have been resistance, but for the authority of the clergyman who preferred an ignominious conduct to his goal rather than a useless fray of arms.

Once at the fort, and their credentials shown, Colonel Alden made no difficulty about releasing them, and even offered lodging at the house where he himself was staying. He was as incredulous as to the success of Mr. Underhill's mission as he was concerning the near approach of Brant and Butler. Repeatedly did the inhabitants of the doomed region bring request to this Cherry Valley Gallio that they might be lodged within the fort, or their most valuable property be stored there, but both petitions were denied. Mr. Underhill was assured that as nothing had been heard from the scouts on the Susquehanna, Brant must still be far away. During the night of the tenth, a thick show fell, but gleaming through this crystal veil of falling flakes, two distant and unaccounted fires were visible. By morning, the storm had turned to rain, and the hills hung heavy with mist and fog, obscuring all approaches.

It was toward noon that a rider arrived post-haste from several miles below, declaring that the expected attack of the red men was at hand. Every man in the scouting party had been captured, and he himself had been fired upon and wounded. The colonel was still incredulous. "They are naught but stragglers," he said. But Mr. Underhill waited for no further testimony than the man's bleeding hand. Now was his time to act.

As he rode alone to the southward, he met the guard which the colonel had at last ordered in. They were the same who had given him their enforced company two days before. They had just halted to examine their firelocks, the powder being damp from the rain.

Scarcely had they saluted Mr. Underhill as he passed, when there arose the blood-curdling cry of the Indian war-whoop—the last sound which fell upon the ears of that doomed guard. Too late it was for the priest to find Brant or Butler; too late to do aught but make choice between his own safety and the almost hopeless hope of stemming the passions of those human tigers. The decision was made in the limit of the single clause of prayer uplifted from his heart.

The horde was in sight, rushing on like a mad whirl of browned leaves in an Autumn gale, filling the air with their fierce and horrid cries.

Rising in his stirrups in the open road, Mr. Underhill made the sign of benediction with which he had so often dismissed his "red children." As if at the signal, a dozen tomahawks were poised, ready to hurl at the bold figure in their path. Then, shaking their weapons furiously, as if in angry derision, the cruel band, hideous in their paint of war, swept by.

They had left the priest uninjured, perhaps with a superstitious fear of harming one who had dealings with the Great Spirit, perhaps turned aside by a direct intervention of Him in Heaven. But the mission had completely failed. There was no let nor hindrance to the evil passions of the raiders, and before the sun had touched the noonmark, the garrison at the fort, and all the helpless families without, were either massacred or taken captive. The doubting colonel paid the forfeit of negligence. His entertainers were heaped as bloody corpses at their own fireside. The aged pioneer priest whom all the valley loved, saw the hatchet buried in the brains of his dearest ones.

More hard than the rocks about them, and

(CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE)

A CONFESSION.

Says She Can Now Talk With a Clear Conscience.

"While attending the State Convention of the W. C. T. U. at Manville, Wyo., I was entertained by Mrs. Nina Higby. I am a temperance lecturer, and at breakfast Mrs. Higby handed me a lovely cup of coffee, with the remark: "Did you ever realize that it is not at all consistent for temperance people to continually advise others to avoid poisonous stimulants, and yet day by day drink such articles themselves. This is particularly true of coffee, which is one of the most powerful narcotics in existence, although its effects are not shown as actively as whiskey."

"I was rather surprised at her remark, but after thinking it over a moment, I realized that it was apropos. I had noticed many a case of nervous prostration that was directly traceable to coffee, for the individuals at once began to improve when they left off coffee, and I had found it so in my own experience.

"I had made several attempts to break away from the habit and had failed, much to my disgust, and oftentimes when addressing an audience on the evils of liquor drinking, I had in my own heart felt that I was very much like an old toper, the only difference being that I wanted coffee and he wanted liquor.

"Mrs. Higby went on to say: 'We have abandoned coffee entirely in our family, and are using the Postum Cereal Food Coffee made down at Battle Creek, Mich., and I think when you drink this cup, you will agree with me that it is in many respects a more delicious beverage than ordinary coffee, for it has a smoother, more fascinating taste, much like the very highest grades of mild Java.'

"I drank the cup slowly, and realized that her remarks were true, and I want to say to you that I gained no more valuable knowledge at that convention in Wyoming than that which I learned at the breakfast table where I had my first cup of Postum. I have since used it regularly, very greatly to my physical and mental advantage, and have found no difficulty whatever in doing away with coffee. No one can tell how glad I am to be free from its baneful effects. I can now make a temperance address with a clear conscience, and perhaps, I might add, a clearer complexion than formerly."

Nina D. Pettigrew, Spearfish, S. D.

"He That is Warm Thinks All So."

Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. This implies disordered kidneys, liver, bowels, blood or brain. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes "warm" because it gives all who take it perfect health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Lyrics of the The Living Church

A handsomely bound volume of poems which have appeared in THE LIVING CHURCH. A few hundred volumes were secured from the publishers at a very low figure, and although retailing at $1.50, we can offer a volume for 50 cents, plus 10 cents for carriage, in connection with a renewal of subscription for one year to THE LIVING CHURCH. As the plates were lost in the great fire which destroyed the publishing house of A. C. McClurg & Co., no new edition can be issued. Address, THE LIVING CHURCH, 55 Dearborn st., Chicago.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;
After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Damrell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lyckett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1826 F. st., N. W.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Subscribers should name not only the new address, but also the old.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

FOREIGN.—To subscribers in the Postal Union, the price is 12 shillings; to the clergy, 10 shillings.

EXCHANGE.—When payment is made by check, except on the banks in the great cities, ten cents must be added for exchange.

RECEIPTS.—No written receipt is needed; if desired, stamp must be sent. Change of label should indicate within two weeks the receipt of remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—A subscriber desiring to discontinue the paper, must remit the amount due for the time it has been sent.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marria Notices, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

less feeling than the sobbing tree-trunks, the Indians performed their fell work to the uttermost, while the white leaders filled up the measure of their iniquity. Well could Mr. Underhill exclaim with Margaret, "This is not war; 'tis the carnage of brutes."

His petition for an interview with Brant or Butler was indeed granted when too late to avert the present calamity, but he received only the most doubtful assurances for the future. Indeed, the clergyman himself was treated with scant courtesy, and was left to make his way back to the Mohawk country, through the opening winter, as best he might.

On his sad return from his fruitless journey, Mr. Underhill found that Margaret, again in ill-health, had been permitted to return to the glebe. Her host himself could almost have given way to tears at the sight of her sad eyes, the delicate transparency of her face, and her whole air of fragility. It was plain that though she honored the clergyman almost with the tenderness of a daughter, she was deeply disappointed in the result of his errand, and, for the first time, she seemed to despond of the issue of the war.

(To be continued.)

Admiral Watson's Bravery

REAR-ADMIRAL WATSON who has been sent to Manila to succeed Admiral Dewey, was a passed midshipman on the Hartford, in April, 1862, when Admiral Farragut ran by Forts Jackson and St. Philip, below New Orleans. A correspondent of the New York Sun thus describes admiral Watson's brave conduct on that occasion: "As the Hartford passed Fort St. Philip, a shower of grape from one of the big guns tore the foremast into matchwood, and seriously disabled the sail power of the ship. It was necessary to take in some sails and set others, but the blocks had jammed, and the Hartford was in danger of swinging about and running aground. The fire of grape aloft was so hot that the command 'Go aloft and clear blocks and tackle on main yard,' was not obeyed with that promptness that follows an order given by the commander of a man-of-war. But the hesitation was momentary.

"Come on, you fellows," yelled a young voice, and up the ratlines to the disabled rigging went a midshipman, followed by the watch. Running out lightly to the end of the yard, and standing sixty feet from the deck, with the grape clipping ropes and tearing great slivers of wood from mast and spar, young Watson gave the necessary orders as calmly as if he was at a practice drill. When everything was taut and in working order, following the 'jackies' down, Watson saluted the admiral and reported: 'All clear, sir.' Grim old Farragut simply seized the boy in his arms, and how the crew cheered!

"Had we ever got aground there the Confederate guns would have destroyed us in five minutes," said Fleet Captain Percival Drayton, of the West Gulf Squadron, as he told the story to Captain, afterwards Rear-Admiral, Bryson. 'Young Watson's ready appreciation of the danger, and prompt action saved the Hartford, in my opinion, and Farragut thought so too.'

Magistrate.—"If you were there for no dishonest purpose, why were you in your stocking feet?"
Considerate Burglar.—"I heard there was sickness in the family, your worship."

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY IZOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XI.

HER LADYSHIP DECIDES

NO more was said of Madge during the walk, for Nell was silent and thoughtful, and in spite of the president's opinion, Mollie clung to her old faith in her ladyship.

There were two hammocks swung on the veranda, and piles of soft rough-and-tumble cushions scattered around, with round Persian mats of fancy braided grasses. The girls promptly took possession of these, and a circle of merry-eyed, sunburned faces gazed up at Virginia and Eleanor, the two hammock potentates, like queer little second-class idols in attendance on the mighty ones.

"Let's not have any regular meeting," Virginia said, smiling around her. "I thought that it would be nice just to talk. Christine will be here with something to nibble on in a minute. If there is any business to discuss, we can talk it over informally."

"Splendid," Nell murmured absently, not paying any attention to what she was saying. Somehow her eyes would wander to where Mollie sat, and the glance which she received in return was very unsettling to her peace of mind.

"Were the boys nice to you?" asked Virginia.

"Fine," Alice said; "Bobbie Cherritt tried to frighten us with an old skeleton, but Tony Ferrall wouldn't let him."

"Who?" inquired Virginia, bending forward a trifle.

"Tony Ferrall, the new boy," replied Alice. "He's so nice. Don't you know him?"

Nell's eyes were downcast, but Mollie looked straight at Virgine, and waited for her answer. It was a long time coming. Christine made her appearance with cocoa and cake, and a great fancy basket full of grapes, purple, white, and red, and these took up the attention of the girls for a few minutes. After she had gone, Virginia said, breaking a bunch of Delawares in two with her slim white fingers:—

"I wonder why the boys ever took him into their club."

"Why?"

It was Mollie who asked the question with startling suddenness, and then she hurried on, before Virgine could reply.

"Because he's poor? Well, the boys don't

Natural Symmetry

A healthy, fully developed child is the result of proper feeding and sanitary surroundings. By proper feeding we mean, giving a food that is adapted to the needs and condition of an infant. Mellin's Food is that kind of a food; by varying the proportions of Mellin's Food and milk any modification may be obtained; with some foods it is only dilution,—more water, less food;—dilution is not modification. Mellin's Food is a true modifier of cow's milk; it makes the milk more digestible and makes it like the natural food.

Mellin's Food

I send herewith photograph of our baby, Mary Emily, who has been raised chiefly on Mellin's Food. She is the very "picture" of health, and like all others who have taken Mellin's Food under my observation, has grown rapidly and accumulated an abundance of flesh, every part developing with a natural symmetry. I have prescribed Mellin's Food for more than 4 years, and have reaped a happy harvest in each prescription. N. L. French, M. D., Wartburg, Tenn.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

EXCURSIONS VIA THE WABASH

Detroit, Mich., July 3 to 6, account Christian Endeavor Convention. Rate from Chicago, One Fare for the Round Trip.

A glance at this map will show you that the Wabash is the direct line from Chicago to Detroit. It is the only line running free reclining chair cars from Chicago to the East. Ask for tickets via the Wabash.

Send postal card for illustrated Wabash official C. E. Folder giving full information as to rates, routes, limits, attractive side trips, etc. Write us about any trip you have in view. We can assist you.

F. A. PALMER, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt.,
97 Adams St., Chicago.

A Gentle Purgative

such as the faultless Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient, is a whole medicine chest in itself. Its mineral and fruit salts cleanse the entire system and promptly relieve and cure all troubles arising from stomach disorders. Pamphlets on application.

TARRANT & CO., Chemists, New York.

think that it makes a bit of difference as long as he is a nice boy; and what's more, his sister's going to join the Sisterhood."

There was a quick, nervous little movement among the girls, and the refreshments were wholly forgotten as heads bent forward eagerly to hear what was coming next.

"The idea!" Evelyn murmured in her usual way, and Virginia asked quietly:

"Who asked her to join, Mollie?"

"I did!"

There was a danger signal in Mollie's gray eyes, but no one noticed it except Nell who was watching her anxiously.

"I don't think that you ought to have done so," Evelyn said decidedly, breaking the awkward silence that followed Mollie's defiant admission. "No matter how good and clean and respectable such persons are, it isn't nice to receive them on an equal social footing, mamma says; and she says, too, that it's perfectly right and proper for us to be kind and charitable to them, you know, but they mustn't expect to visit us, and associate with us, and all that, you see. Why, her mother does sewing, not real dress-making, but sewing around by the day at people's houses, and I know that she looks after Mrs. Osborne's twins, sometimes, and is paid for it.

"Oh, botheration!" Mollie's clear voice rang out scornfully, as she rose from her seat so that she could see everyone. "See here, girls, if this Sisterhood that we've started and worked for and loved and hoped so much from, has turned into a high-toned, exclusive social order, I'll quit right here and now."

"Mollie Gray," Eleanor began warningly, but Mollie never heeded her.

"Things have come to a pretty pass," she went on, "when a girl's snubbed just because she's poor and has to work for a living. Why, it doesn't change a person any inside because one happens to wear silk, and another one, calico," and half unconsciously she glanced at Virginia's dainty ecru silk dress, and thought of a forlorn little figure in black calico. "You can't have any more than one soul, try all you know, and you can't be any more than one person, if you own the earth. Social footing! Say, Evelyn, did you ever hear whether our Lord asked people about their pedigrees, or bank accounts, or great-grandfathers before He placed himself on a 'social footing' with them? I'm ashamed of you"; she paused, and looked from one face to another, "ashamed of every one of you because you've let this happen. Honest and true, won't you let Madge Ferrall join? Virgine, why don't you say something to help me?"

Slowly Virginia raised her eyes, and there was a puzzled look in them, as she answered in her gentle, easy tones:

"You are excited and unreasonable, Mollie, or you would not talk so. I really do not see any use in having her join. As I understand, the purpose of the club is to promote sociability and good comradeship among ourselves, and I think that we can fulfill that purpose without going to such an extreme as to invite every newcomer who happens to stray into Ottawa to join our club, when we don't know anything about them."

"I think so, too," Evelyn added soberly.

Mollie stood irresolute for a minute, her face flushed with excitement. She was hurt, deeply hurt, by Virginia's words, and at the looks of unmistakable approval among the girls. Only Laura smiled up at her and nodded encouragingly. Eleanor's head was bowed on her hands, and tears trickled through her fingers, so that altogether, Mollie saw that she would have to paddle her own canoe.

"Well, I don't think so," she said positively, "and as I remember Nell's words, there was another purpose to the club, and that was to try and persuade all the outside girls we could to join with us, so as to bring them into the Church; and, instead of that, we haven't done a single thing since we started, except to quarrel with the boys and make up, and have parties. I'm tired of it all, and I don't believe we're good enough to ask anyone to join with us"; she hesitated a moment, her eyes glancing wrathfully from face to face until they rested on her ladyship's. If the latter had spoken the merest word of friendliness, or even frank, kindly criticism, it would have changed everything, but she did not. She only looked up and smiled a careless little smile of amusement, that was to Mollie's spirit like the red flag in a bull fight. "I think," she went on hotly, "that you're horrid, Virginia Hardy, and I'm sorry that I ever asked you to come into the Sisterhood."

"Mollie Gray, come back here!" called Eleanor, as Mollie strode off the veranda; but she went on down the path to the street, her head erect, her hands plunged deep into her jacket pockets, with never a backward glance, and leaving consternation in her wake.

(To be continued.)

EVERY one can do something to add to the social life at the table. If one cannot talk, he can listen or ask questions and draw out others who can talk. Good listeners are as necessary as good talkers. Never argue at the table, but tell pleasant stories, relate or read anecdotes, and look out for the good of all. Sometimes a single anecdote from a paper starts a conversation that lasts during the entire meal time. A family table ought to be bright and cheerful; a sort of domestic altar, before which everyone casts down his or her offering, great or small, of pleasantness and peace; where, for at least a brief space in the day, all annoyances are laid aside, all stormy tempers hushed, all brief disputes healed; every one being glad and content to sit down at the same board, and eat the same bread and salt, making it, whether it were a rich repast or a dinner of herbs, equally a joyful meal. It is unpardonable for any one to sit glum and silent at the table, taking no part in the conversation, showing no interest in the good cheer, even casting a shadow on the gladness.—Forward.

Irritable Stomachs

make irritable people. A food that is nourishing and that does not cloy the appetite is

Somatose

Somatose is a Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative. It contains the nourishing elements of meat. Prepared for invalids and dyspeptics and those needing nourishment and a restored appetite. May be taken in water, milk, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists' in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City, selling agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

Health Soap

Don't let your skin take chances; better use pure, white, clean Wool Soap. Your skin likes it.

Swift and Company, Makers,
Chicago

CHURCH and CHANCEL FURNITURE
OF ALL KINDS
PHENIX FURNITURE CO., Eau Claire, Wis.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.
Church Furnishers and Decorators.
70 Fifth Avenue. New York City.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.
R. G. GEISSLER, X Marble and Metal Work.
56 West 8th St. (near 6th ave.) New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH LUTKE
ART-WORKER
FURNITURE EST. 10 E 16th ST. NEW YORK

Cox Sons & Vining.
70 Fifth Avenue, New York.
CHURCH VESTMENTS. Embroideries, and Fabrics.

We seek correspondence from contemplating purchasers, in the interest of our
"BLYMYER" CHURCH BELL
In it we offer at a very moderate cost, a guaranteed performance, that for volume, sweetness, and durability, fully measures up to the most exacting demands.
The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Please mention this paper.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1887.
THE E. W. VANDUZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES AND PEALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826. BELLS.
HAVE FURNISHED 35,000.
MENEELY & CO. PUREST, BEST, GENUINE BELL-METAL
WEST-TROY, N.Y.
CHIMES, Etc. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.
Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

Finance and Commerce

LOOKING at the surface of the business situation one might call it slow. Speculation is of small volume everywhere. Promotions are at a standstill. The public desire to buy something has abated. In Wall st. transactions are of small volume, and the market drags. Money is easy everywhere. Some gold is being exported, probably eight million dollars in the past fortnight. The balance of trade is still largely in our favor, but with a decreasing tendency. Exports are still in excess of last year, but show a decided falling off since January last. Exports of agricultural products are well under last year. European buying of grain in this country the past week has, however, increased materially, and the result will likely show in the clearances shortly. Exports of manufactured goods are most satisfactory, and this, too, notwithstanding the high prices which have obtained in the country. In the grain market, the past week has developed quite a little strength. In wheat, the severe drought in the surplus producing parts of Russia, has given a renewed impetus to foreign buying, which a really more serious damage in this country had previously failed to do. It is a notable fact that the serious damage to the wheat crop of the world this year has been in the two largest surplus producing countries, and the damage in these countries has been in the very provinces and States which are the surplus producers in these countries, i. e., the Black Sea and Danubian country, and the winter wheat States of the Mississippi Valley. With these conditions, more than usual depends on the spring wheat crop in the great Northwest. Should anything materially reduce the yield in that section, something almost unprecedented in the way of high prices would not be unlikely. The next three weeks will be fraught with great interest in that connection, and will be closely watched. At the moment, conditions in that territory are supposed to be almost perfect, and the spring wheat crop promises to be bountiful.

In other respects, too, agricultural prospects are favorable. The oat crop is in fine condition, and corn is fair, both on a large acreage. General manufacturing and merchandise business remains satisfactory. In iron, prices remain phenomenally strong, and in spite of increasing output in nearly all branches, stocks are depleted, and production does not gain on the demand. The cotton market is steady. In manufactured goods conditions are satisfactory. The activity which the early spring promised in real estate, has not materialized to any great degree, and sales are slow.

Exports for the Year

GOOD crops in all the world in the year 1898-'99, will probably make our export figures for the fiscal year about to end, a few million dollars less than those of the banner year, 1898. The figures covering the exports during the eleven months ending with May, which have been received by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, indicate that during the eleven months the total exports are about six million dollars less than those of the corresponding months of the preceding year, and it is quite probable that the total for the full year will be slightly below those of the great and unprecedented year, 1898. That they will be much in excess of any other year, however, is equally apparent. For the eleven months of the year 1899, the total exports are $1,130,629,572, while in no earlier year except 1898, did the total exports for the eleven months reach the billion dollar line.

GOLD DUST

THE BEST Washing Powder

A detailed study of the figures received by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, shows that the reduction in exportations is entirely in agricultural products, and indeed that the total exports of products of agriculture is nearly fifty-million dollars less than of last year. In 1898, it will be remembered, the crops in all parts of the world except the United States, were unusually light, and as a consequence the prices realized for farm products exported, were much higher than the average for many years, while in 1899, with good prices abroad, the prices which our exporters of farm products are receiving are consequently materially lower than those of last year, though in quantity the exports of agricultural products are in most cases as great as those of 1898. The average price of wheat exported in the present year so far as the details have been received, has been 74½ cents per bushel, against 93½ cents in the corresponding months of last year; flour also shows a reduction in value per barrel, while the average export price of cotton in the present year has been 5½ cents per pound, against nearly six cents per pound last year. In quantity, the exports of wheat in the ten months whose figures are completed was slightly in excess of that of last year, while flour in the ten months of 1899 exceeded by more than two million barrels the figures of the corresponding months of last year. In corn and oats there has been a decided reduction, indicating that the demand of other parts of the world upon us for these lines of our production, is still regulated to a considerable degree, by their absolute demands occasioned by their shortage in other lines of breadstuffs. In wheat, the reduction in value of exports in the ten months whose figures are completed, amounts to twenty-two million dollars; in oats, to ten million dollars, and in cotton to nearly twenty million dollars, there being a slight falling off in quantity of cotton exported, as well as in the value per pound. One curious feature in the reduction of our exportations relates to live cattle, in which the exportations of the year are twenty-five per cent. below those of the corresponding months of 1898, the total for the ten months being $24,484,823, against $32,352,838 last year. Consultation with collectors of customs as to the cause of this reduction, results in the suggestion that the improved business conditions in the United States, and increased wages, are leading to a much greater consumption of beef by our own people, and consequently an increased price, and that that increase in price is the cause of the reduction in foreign demands upon us for our beef cattle. While the exportation of farm products for the year will fall perhaps fifty million dollars below the total for last year, it does not follow that the farmer has failed to realize as much for his productions during the past year as in the preceding year. On the contrary, a study of the export figures indicates, that the prices which he has received for practically everything except wheat and cotton, are higher than those of the preceding year.

In nearly all articles of farm products aside from breadstuffs and cotton, of which there is a constant production in excess of home demands, the prices offered at home determine those at which exportation takes place, and a study of the figures of the year's exports of agricultural products, shows that in nearly every article aside from wheat and cotton, the export price per unit of quantity has been larger than in the preceding year. In butter, lard, fresh pork, bacon, canned beef, corn, corn meal, oats, oatmeal, rye, hops, sheep, tobacco, and other articles, the export figures of the year show increased prices, thus indicating that in practically all agricultural products aside from wheat and cotton, the prices received by the producers have been higher than those of last year, while on the other hand the increased exportation of manufactured articles has nearly offset the loss in exports due to the reduced prices abroad of the two great articles of our agricultural exports, wheat and cotton.

FROM NORTH CAROLINA.—“You ought to change the name of THE LIVING CHURCH to ‘Defender of the Faith,’ if its true character is to be indicated. It is a whole vigilance committee for the Faith once delivered.”

After Sunrise

And after Sunset, HIRE'S Rootbeer is the drink you should get.

During the heat of the day HIRE'S Rootbeer will keep your temperature below the danger point. After the work of the day it will refresh and invigorate you.

HIRE'S Rootbeer is used and endorsed by the best known advocates of temperance, who recognize in a beneficial aid to the great cause of temperance. A package makes five gallons.

HIRE'S Rootbeer

HIRE'S Rootbeer carbonated, ready for drinking, sold everywhere by the bottle and case. Write and ask how a boy can make from 40c to $4.50 a day.

A beautiful picture book of rhymes free.

The Charles E. Hires Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.

F. G. LOGAN

MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.

Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

The stomachs of dyspeptics, aged people, invalids, and convalescents are, in their way, as delicate as those of infants, and require food that is at once easily digested and nutritious. Mellin's Food contains the appropriate elements to repair waste, in an easily digestible and nourishing form, and actually assists the digestion of other food.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

The Original for food purposes.
IN USE ALL OVER THE WORLD.

This Elegant Rocker..

Is made of Quarter-sawn Oak or Mahogany finished, is finely carved, and has high back. It is full spring, upholstered and box seat, covered with silk velours in all the popular shades.

This durable Rocker is exactly like cut and is the best value ever offered to the public. Regular $4.50—our price for this sale ONLY $2.50 cash with order. Write for our 120 page furniture catalogue, free.

...Established 1878...

STOREY FURNITURE CO.
331-33 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.

Runs Two Solid Vestibuled Trains Daily

DIAMOND SPECIAL NIGHT TRAIN DAYLIGHT SPECIAL DAY TRAIN

between Chicago and St. Louis.

Free Reclining Chair Cars, Parlor-Café Cars, Pullman Buffet Open and Compartment Sleeping Cars. See that your ticket between Chicago and St. Louis Reads via Illinois Central Railroad.
It can be obtained of your local ticket agent.
A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., Ill. Cent. R. R., Chicago, Ill.

Best Line
to
Denver

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

RUBBER STAMPS.....

AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.
Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils, Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE THINK A SALAD IS NOT A SALAD UNTIL DELICIOUSLY SAVORED WITH

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL & GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE

WHEN BUYING, NOTE THE SIGNATURE-LEA & PERRINS ACROSS THE WRAPPER.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AGTS., NEW YORK.

Hints to Housekeepers

AN easy way to clean the horrid, sticky oatmeal kettle in which the breakfast porridge was cooked, is to drop a lump of washing soda in a quart of water and soak in the kettle on the back of the stove for half an hour. The glutinous crust can then easily be removed.

RICH cookie dough may be prevented from sticking to the baking board, by taking a piece of unbleached muslin, stretch it over the baking board so there will be no wrinkles, dust it well with flour, and roll out the dough.

STONING cherries is slow and delicate work, for to remove the stone and not break the fruit requires great care. A cherry-stoner is sold which presses the stone out without tearing the fruit. The machine is fastened to the table; the cherries are dropped into the small holes, and the stoner is brought down on them with enough force to drive out the stones, leaving an opening through the center of the fruit. The ordinary stoner prepares two cherries at a time. It may be worked very rapidly. One objection to it is that the receiver is of iron. It should be enameled. This stoner answers equally well for stoning olives. If one does not care to go to the expense of buying a machine, the following is a simple method for stoning the fruit: Pass a long, coarse darning-needle through a piece of cork, which will answer for a handle. With this needle, open one end of the cherry, and draw out the stone with the fingers. This is the method employed in France for stoning the cherries to be used for confections.—Ladies' Home Journal.

BEST WAY TO MAKE LEMONADE.—The best lemonade is made by boiling sugar and water together and adding the lemon juice after it is cold. Use one pound of sugar to each quart of water; add the juice of six lemons and the desired quantity of water at serving time. Pineapple lemonade may be made by boiling together one quart of water, one pound of sugar, and the grated rind of one lemon for five minutes. Strain; when cold, add the juice of six lemons, one pineapple pared and picked into very small particles, and either a quart of water or a quart of Apollinaris water.—Ladies' Home Journal.

NERVOUSNESS.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Strengthens and quiets the nerves.

Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

Gail Borden BEST INFANT FOOD. Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY. We are the largest Makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELLHART HARNESS & CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS, Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park New York.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889,
AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.
THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

"The Rest Cure"

exemplified best at THE PENNOYER, Kenosha, Wis. Send for booklet.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up to date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.
FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

... Bind Your Copies of.

THE LIVING CHURCH

By special arrangement we are able to supply the Emerson Binder, cloth, neatly lettered in gold, to our subscribers at the moderate cost of 75 cents. Address all orders to

The Living Church,

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"THERE IS SCIENCE IN NEATNESS."

"Be wise and use

SAPOLIO

The Living Church

H A de France 1899 N
905 Reed St

VOL. XXII. No. 9

CHICAGO, JULY 1, 1899

Chancel of St. Thomas' Church, Taunton, Mass.
The Rev. Morton Stone, Rector

Educational

CONNECTICUT

CONNECTICUT, Hartford.

Woodside Seminary for Girls.

Re-opens September 27.
Address for circular.

Miss SARA J. SMITH, Principal.

COLORADO

COLORADO, MONTCLAIR, Suburb of Denver.

Jarvis Hall Military Academy

Has no superior. Number of students last year double that of preceding year. $350 per annum. Catalogue.
REV. H. KAY COLEMAN, A.M., Rector.

ILLINOIS

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address.
REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1899. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

THE COLLEGE OF
MUSICSend for illustrated
catalogue to Joseph R.
Harker, Ph. D., Pres.

Jacksonville, Ill.

St. Agatha's School, Springfield, Ill.

The Springfield Diocesan School for Girls. Opens its fall term Sept. 14th. Academic, Primary, and Kindergarten department; Music, Art, Elocution, Physical Culture, carefully taught. Special attention given to training girls for the home life. French spoken at table—taught by a Parisian. For catalogue, etc., apply to
MRS. PHOEBE H. SEABROOK, Prin.St. Alban's Academy,
Knoxville, Ill.A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports.
A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

MAINE

Saint Catharine's Hall.

Augusta, Maine.

The Diocesan School for Girls.The instruction is of the highest grade, yet yearly expenses are only $500. Thoroughly
new and modern appliances. Pleasantclimate. General, college preparatory and musical courses. Address
The Rev. GEO. F. DEGEN.

MASSACHUSETTS

WHY THE LARGEST?

Forty-five years of constant and healthful progress has put theNew England
CONSERVATORY
OF MUSICof Boston, Mass., at the top (both in size and standing) of musical institutions in America. Comprehensive in plan, moderate in price, thorough in practice and famous for results.GEO. W. CHADWICK, Musical Director.
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager. Send for an illustrated catalogue.

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall.

Episcopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re opens, D. V., Sept. 18th, 1899. Apply to SISTER
SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Educational

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls.

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIPPLE,
Rector. Miss CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLIS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address
ST. MARY'S HALL, Faribault.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington.
Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. A beautiful school. Advantages of
N. Y. city. All departments. Endorsed by the
Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, Hon.
Chauncey M. Depew. For
Circular, circular address
Miss C. E. MASON, LL. M.

Training School for Nurses.

There are a few vacancies. Applicants must be over twenty-one; of sound health and good education. Apply to SUPERINTENDENT, St. John's Riverside Hospital, Tonkers, N. Y.

OHIO

Harcourt Place Seminary

A school of the highest class for girls. For catalogue and information, address
MRS. ADA I. AYER HILLS, Principal, Gambler, Ohio.

Kenyon Military Academy

A model school for boys, on a hill top 1,100 feet above sea level. For descriptive catalogue, address HILLS and WYANT, Regents, Gambler, Ohio.

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art.
Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH,

WASHINGTON, PA.

BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral singing and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalog, write to WM. W.
SMITH Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.Pennsylvania College for Women.This institution offers, at low expense, the efficiency of instruction and breadth of curriculum found in the leading women's colleges. Modern and ample equipment.
Situation and grounds of extraordinary beauty and healthfulness.Schools of Music and Art. All collegiate, general, and college preparatory courses.
Gymnasium and large campus.Catalogue and book of sixty views sent on request.Miss R. J. DeVORE, President,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

St. Luke's School Bustleton, Pa.

(near Philadelphia)

No boy prepared by us for coll. ex. examination has ever been rejected. A home school; number limited. Remarkably healthful situation. Campus of seven acres. Canoe-ing, swimming, skating, gymnasium. For illustrated catalogue address,
CHARLES H. STROUT, Principal.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls.
The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many.The school is first class in every respect.
Bishop Hare makes it his home.Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL,
Sioux Falls, S. D.CHANCEL CHANGESCorrespondence solicited as to proposed change or redecoration to Chancel or Church Interior.Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacationsSend for photographs of recent important work.J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St.
New YorkChurch GLASS AND DECORATING COEnglish Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN

President

3-5-7 W 29th Street

RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT

Vice President

NEW YORK

AMUSEMENTS IN THEIR RE-
LATION TO RELIGION.

BY THE

Rt. Rev. George F. Seymour, S. T. D., LL. D.,
Bishop of Springfield.8 pp $150 per hundred. Lots of two hundred or more, $125 per hundred. AddressTHE GAZETTE, Publishers, CHAMPAIGN, ILL.Trinity Church
Embroidery School

CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT, Trinity Parish House, 101 26th st.

Educational

VIRGINIA

Fauquier Institute for Young Ladies.

Warrenton, Va.

The thirty-ninth session begins Sept. 21st, '99. Situated in Piedmont region of Va., on Southern R.R., 53 miles from Washington. Number limited. For catalogue address
GEO. G. BUTLER, A.M., AND DAUGHTERS.

WISCONSIN

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes manly boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address
REV. ARTHUR PIPER, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St.
Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899.
References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee;
Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F.
Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address
THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

WITHIN A MONTH HORSELESS vehicle companies will inaugurate a campaign of equine extermination in Chicago. This city will be virtually the battle ground on which compressed air and electricity will struggle for supremacy in the matter of horseless propulsion. Already there are promises of reduced cab fares, and one company plans to rent vehicles at rates with which horses cannot compete at the prevailing price of oats. Not only will cab stands be located for public convenience, but lines of carriages will be operated on the main arteries of travel. It is something of a question if horseless vehicles can be operated as satisfactorily in Chicago as in large eastern cities, owing to the condition of down town thoroughfares, but the municipality will not be backward in making improvements. While the passing of the horse is doubtless many years in the future, the vehicle companies will have accomplished a great deal when the Fifth Ave. stage line of New York, and the carrette line, of Chicago, those two one-oat-per-horse-per-day institutions, shall have become things of the past.

— x —

THE CIVIC FEDERATION OF CHICAGO is making plans for a conference to be held the coming fall, at which trusts will be discussed pro and con. The meeting will be of national scope, and is expected to lead to important results, inasmuch as many delegates of prominence will take part in the discussions and throw a light on the subject sufficiently strong to enable people to form intelligent judgment. The purpose of the meeting differs entirely from that called by Governor Sayres, of Texas, in that the latter accepts as a foregone conclusion the necessity of squelching industrial combinations, and will endeavor to discover a means to that end, while the Civic Federation conclave will permit a hearing of both sides of the question, and the people will benefit by the information thus adduced.

— x —

THE RAPID DEVELOPMENT OF ALCOHOLISM in France has led to its recognition as a growing evil, and discussion of measures for its suppression. That France has awakened to such a danger, is a good omen. It is a surprising fact that in the country there is a cabaret to every eighty-five people, or every thirty males. A congress held recently was attended by statesmen, clergymen, socialists, and women's rights representatives, and the discussions attracted wide-spread attention. A bill will be introduced shortly in the Senate, supported by prominent organizations, to reduce the number of cabarets to one for every 300 people, and there is a likely prospect of its passage.

— x —

AFTER TEN DAYS, FRANCE HAS ANOTHER cabinet, the efforts of M. Waldeck-Rousseau having been successful. Previous efforts failed because of disturbed conditions, and an inability to agree on policies. The present body is incongruous, in that it is made up of men representing extreme differences of political opinion, but all are Frenchmen, and have the best interests of their country at heart, believing that in the present crisis minor issues should be laid aside. The personnel of the cabinet insures impartial action on questions which have disturbed the country. The people themselves appear, to a certain extent, to have tired of continuous agitation, and will support efforts to crush sedition. The real crisis will be reached when the question of prosecuting men in high places is reached. It is then that the real stability of the government will be determined.

— x —

UNPARALLELED MISERY CAUSED by famine, is said to reign in the seven provinces of east European Russia. Of the population of eleven million peasants, fully one-half are hungry, with no prospect of obtaining food except in meagre quantities, and that only when charitably dispensed by those whom fortune has preserved from want. The famine is reported to be much worse than that of 1891-2. The government is doing much in the way of relief, and several titled ladies have left their homes to go among the afflicted people and relieve distress. As fully one-third of the territory in the provinces affected is not under cultivation, the coming crop, even if bountiful, will not meet the necessities of the situation. The harrowing condition may be judged in one province, where of all the children born this year, not one is now alive.

— x —

IT IS GRAVELY ANNOUNCED THAT, contrary to custom of investigations, the report of the committee which looked into the embalmed food matter will not be printed. The announcement has created considerable surprise, for, if any official or contractor is deserving of censure, no departure should have been made. It is evident nothing more will be done by the administration, and the whole matter will be pigeon-holed unless Congress thinks differently. In the meantime, for some obscure reason, General Miles, head of the army and cause of the "scandal," tarries in Washington, while the army over which he is in command, has its hands full, and, from indications, is in a position where wise guidance from one sufficiently versed in military matters to occupy the position of commanding general would not come amiss.

— x —

THERE IS A GROWING SPIRIT OF discontent arising from conditions in the Philippines. It is not a question of expansion or anti-expansion, but rather a conviction that affairs are not being managed in a manner calculated to bring the trouble to a speedy end. Accounts given by returning soldiers and travelers vary somewhat, but agree in one respect, that the seriousness of the situation is not realized, and that many more troops are needed to hold captured territory, otherwise much patriotic blood will have been shed in vain. There should be something substantial in the way of progress to offset the continually growing list of casualties. It is simple for one at a distance of several thousand miles from the scene of action to theorize and criticise, but official records afford ground for the belief that vigorous measures are vitally necessary. If the rainy season bars increased activity, it does not prevent preparation for effectually suppressing the rebellious natives as soon as the unhealthy period comes to a close.

— x —

DELIBERATIONS OF THE PEACE Conference last week were largely taken up with discussions as to how soldiers should or should not be killed. It is unfortunate, though perhaps unavoidable, that in a civilized and enlightened age discussion should not be entirely upon measures which would obviate the seeming necessity of holding vast armies in readiness to rush at each other's throats, should occasion arise. Whatever result may be accomplished by the Peace Conference, and considering the attitude of some of the Powers involved, it may be doubted if many of the Czar's propositions will be accepted, it is certainly a step in advance when nations pause to consider if military burdens should not be lightened.

— x —

INDIANA IS FORCED TO FACE THE serious problem of a rapidly diminishing supply of natural gas. This is the natural and inevitable result of a long time policy which made no provision for preventing useless waste. For years after the discovery of the first well, one had but to ride by rail at night through the gas belt to appreciate the fact that millions of cubic feet of gas were needlessly consumed. Now, in spite of restrictive measures, the end is not far distant. Last winter many residences heated by gas were untenable because of low pressure. It is a question what will be the effect on industrial centres in the State dependent on gas for fuel. The State Statistician argues that contiguity to vast coal beds will enable factories to operate at slight increase of expenses. Some scientists claim that another natural supply of gas will not be generated, while others say that the process of generation is constantly going on.

— x —

KENTUCKY ENJOYS THE UNENVIA-ble distinction of having within her borders a county where a judge, fearing for his life, adjourned court and refused to proceed with a murder trial. This state of things was owing to a feud, an institution peculiar to certain sections of the South. As county officers are involved in the feud, the wheels of justice seem effectually clogged. There is talk of wiping the county off the map.

The News of the Church

The Church Abroad

The Church of Ireland Conference

At the forthcoming conference, to be held on Oct. 3d, 4th, and 5th, the subjects to be dealt with will include: The Church of Ireland, (a) Her progress during the past century; (b) her attitude towards other religious bodies. The duty of the Church in relation to (a) the homes of the poor; (b) intemperance; (c) gambling. Recent Biblical criticism in relation to faith, (a) Old Testament; (b) New Testament. Foreign missions, (a) improvement of our methods; (b) extension of our work. How can the Church more effectually promote the Christian life? (a) in the family; (b) in the school; (c) among young people engaged in business. The Psalms, the Lord's Prayer, and the Nicene Creed in relation to modern thought. Sermons are to be preached at the beginning and end of the conference by the Lord Primate and the Dean of Canterbury, respectively. The meetings of this conference, which promises to be of much importance, are to be held in the Rotunda Buildings, Dublin.

Commencements

St. John's Military School, Manlius, C. N. Y.

Held June 15th; they included a literary programme, a sham battle, reception, granting of diplomas, and awarding of medals, etc. The school is prospering under Col. Verbeck's wise management, and the 15 graduates this year will reflect credit on St. John's.

Trinity Hall, Washington, Pa.

The 20th closing day took place June 20th. At 10:30 the literary exercises commenced with recitations and essays. The presentation of prizes was made, and the annual address was then delivered by the Rev. Nathaniel S. Thomas, of St. Matthew's church, Wheeling, W. Va. Attractive calisthenic and military drills, and a hearty lunch, followed on the spacious lawn.

Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge

The annual Commencement took place June 21st. Morning Prayer was said at 8:30 A.M. The delivery of diplomas was given at the later service in the chapel, by the Bishop of Massachusetts. The following named graduates received the degree of B. D.: Frank H. Bigelow, Clifford F. Gregg, William F. Downes, Richard T. Loring, Malcom Taylor. The Bishop spoke briefly to the graduating class, and the Rev. E. Winchester Donald, D.D., preached the sermon. Luncheon was served in the refectory, and a social time was spent among the friends and guests of the occasion. At the annual meeting of the alumni, the Rev. James McB. Sterrett, D.D., preached the sermon.

Keble School, Syracuse, N. Y.

The Commencement at the close of the 28th year, took place June 15th. Brief reference was made to the exercises in our last issue. In addition, we may mention that diplomas were given to four graduates, and testimonials for a special course of study, to four others. Diplomas were also conferred upon five young ladies who had completed the Normal Kindergarten course. Bishop Huntington, in his usual happy manner, congratulated the class upon the completion of their course of study, and gave them some good advice. In accordance with the time-honored custom of the school, the exercises were concluded by the singing of Keble's evening hymn, "Sun of my soul."

Woodside Seminary, Hartford, Conn.

The Commencement exercises of this school for girls were held June 5th. The large and attractive gymnasium was beautifully decorated, and at an early hour was filled with old pupils and friends from many States. Prof. Flavel S. Luther, of Trinity College, addressed the graduating class, in earnest, thoughtful words. A feature of the evening was the singing of the class poem, written and set to music by a member of the class, for the class day exercises, which had been held in the morning. Miss Smith, principal of the school, presented the diplomas, lovingly expressing her hopes and wishes that the girls would be true to the high standard of life which the school upholds. The Rev. Ernest De F. Miel, rector of Trinity church, and the Rev. Herbert M. Smith, rector of the school, also took part in the exercises. At the reception which followed, Mrs. Herbert M. Smith received with the Misses Smith, principals of Woodside. Woodside is widely and favorably known as a school which takes but a limited number of pupils, giving to each special attention and training under the best teachers.

College of Sisters of Bethany, Topeka

Has closed its 39th year of work. Ten of its undergraduates were confirmed, and others are looking forward to the rite. The Rt. Rev. Dr. Brown, of Arkansas, delivered the baccalaureate address. The Bishop recognizes this school as one of his greatest missionary agencies, and has many times declared that the kind friends who helped him pay the enormous debt, have done a great missionary work in the 400 by 200 miles of country which the Church has put under his spiritual charge. The year just closed has been the most prosperous since 1893. The number of boarding pupils during the middle term had been 66; the total enrollment for the year, 203.

St. John's Military School, Salina

At its Commencement, and before, had six of its cadets confirmed, and the whole graduating class received the Holy Communion in a body. Chief-Justice Horton, the lay chancellor of the diocese, delivered the baccalaureate address, on "The opportunities of life." The young ladies of the College of the Sisters of Bethany presented to the successful company in the competitive drill, a beautiful flag, two honor undergraduates being their representatives by election, and one making an address of presentation to the company. Another pleasant feature was the public statement that 13 of the old cadets were officers in our war with Spain, one an ensign on the "Oregon." The Rev. I. S. Baxter delivered an oration on the subject, "Dare to go on."

St. Mary's School, New York City

The Commencement exercises, held on the first of June, were particularly interesting, the essays taking the form of a conference on the great republics of the world. The ideal republics, Greek and Latin, were discussed, and those of other races presented, and the general review was given by Miss Margaret Winslow Pearson whose literary ability was still further testified to by the Song of Praise (Laudate Dominum) composed by herself, which was a very unusual production. She is a grand-niece of the Bishop of Springfield. The honors and testimonials were awarded by Dr. Richey, of the General Theological Seminary, and chaplain of the school, and there were many distinguished guests on the platform. Regrets were received from the Rt. Rev. Leighton Coleman, of Delaware, the Bishop of Springfield, Bishop Potter, and others who were unable to be present. The exercises closed with the singing of the Magnificat by the school, led by Dr. Prentice, musical director in the church of St. Mary the Virgin. There is an atmosphere of home about St. Mary's that keeps the school very close to the hearts of the scholars, in whom the sweet, brave influence of the Sisters is never lost. Thorough scholarship has been shown by the pupils who have taken part in the exercises held at one time and another during the year. The resources which the school offers for thorough research are especially fine. The school has its own private library, one of the richest in the city, full of rare old art books. The scholars are taught to know and use the books which are most useful to them, and encouraged to carry their reference reading still further in Astor and Lenox libraries. The botanical laboratory displays very satisfactory results.

Bishop Bowman Institute, Pittsburgh

The annual Commencement took place at St. Peter's church, June 8th. The Rev. Dr. Ward delivered the annual address; the prizes were presented by the rector of the school, the Rev. Dr. Coster, and the gold medal to the member of the senior class having the highest record, by the Bishop of the diocese, whose gift it is.

Pennsylvania Military College, Chester

The 120 cadets have returned to their homes in 22 States of the Union and in Mexico. The 37th Commencement exercises began May 26th, when the First Cavalry Squad visited Baltimore, Md., and gave an exhibition drill at the Horse Show. May 31st, the annual competitive mounted drill for the John G. Bergfel's cavalry medal took place. There were six contestants, the medal being awarded to Cadet Tryon P. Edwards, of Maryland. The formal presentation was made on Friday, June 9th, which was "Military Day" at the college, by Brigadier-General J. P. S. Gobin (Lieutenant Governor of the State), who was present with his staff, of the Third Brigade, N. G. Pa. Bronze medals for superior marksmanship were presented to other cadets. The closing ceremonies were held June 14th. Degrees were conferred upon seven graduates. Military exercises were held in the afternoon, comprising infantry, artillery, and cavalry drill, the squad forming the latter being the best in the history of the college. Their riding was excellent. The infantry gave a dress parade, battalion drill, extended orders, and review. The emergency drill by the hospital corps won especial favor. The board of trustees of the college includes Hon. John Wanamaker (ex-Postmaster-General), president; Judge William A. Ashman, Hon. John B. Hinkson; (ex-Mayor of Chester), Rt. Rev. Ozi W. Whitaker, D.D., etc.

Shattuck School, Faribault, Minn.

The closing exercises took place June 14th and 15th. The prize speaking, the prize drill, the rector's reception, and the exercises for graduation were all of a high order, and betokened the work that produces such a degree of excellence. The advantages of military drill and discipline, when thoroughly done, are illustrated at Shattuck, not as a "war measure," but in manly bearing, self-control, earnestness of effort, and high standards, not only on the parade-ground, but in scholastic effort and in daily life. The drill is thus utilized, not as an end in itself, but a means toward an end. The graduation exercises were more than usually attractive, and when the venerable Bishop Whipple presented diplomas to 28 stalwart young graduates, there was the feeling that Shattuck was doing a great work for good. Honors in scholarship were awarded to 53 cadets, and honors in deportment to 78. The address to the graduating class was given by the Rev. J. Winthrop Hegeman, Ph.D., of Riverdale, New York city. Shattuck was never in more prosperous condition, and its capacity will be severely tested next year; 23 States are represented, extending from New England and New York to Oregon.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

St. Luke's Training School for Nurses

The annual graduating exercises were held on Thursday afternoon, the 22d. Nearly 40 entered the pretty little chapel at 3:30 p. m., singing a processional hymn. After prayers and the class hymn, the rector of Trinity, the Rev. W. C. Richardson, presented diplomas to the 14 who have completed their two years of training. The faculty address was read by Dr. Thomas J. Watkins, in which mention was made of the high percentage of marks obtained by the class at examination, ranging from 90 to 98. As the class of 1887 was the first, this last class of 14 is a slight increase over the average of 13, in a total of 168 graduates in 13 years. Mr. Richardson, at the altar rail, pinned on the neat nurses' badge, recently somewhat reduced in size and made more effective by a change in coloring, addressing each graduate with the usual formula, and made a brief address, reminding them that they were to be burden-bearers, and must cultivate the Christian grace of discretion. An opportunity was afforded the visitors who completely filled the chapel, to inspect the latest addition to its furniture, an exceedingly neat prayer desk the gift of old graduates and others trained there, bearing the inscription:

To the glory of God, and in loving memory of Katherine Lilla Lett, superintendent of nurses from 1889 to 1893. Entered into life Nov. 3, 1893. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Girls' Friendly Society

There was a great gathering of the members of the G. F. S. in St. James' church, at 4 P. M., of Sunday last. All the city chapters, and some of the rural ones, were represented to the number of 300. The chapters entered in procession after the choir, and each wore its emblematic flower. The service was choral, and an appropriate sermon was preached by the rector of Epiphany, the Rev. J. Henry Hopkins.

Diocesan Choir Association

At a meeting of the Executive, held in the Church Club rooms on Monday, the arrangements for the annual festival were advanced to the stage of fixing upon the day, namely, Wednesday, Nov. 22d—St. Cecilia's Day; and secondly, to have three separate meetings: one on the North, presumably in St. James' or St. Peter's; one on the West Side, in Epiphany, and one on the South Side, the churches available being Grace, Trinity, or St. Paul's.

Summer Vacations of the City Clergy

The Rev. E. M. Stires is at Lake Delavan, but comes to the city for his Sunday services; the Rev. D. W. Howard, of St. Paul's, goes to North Manitou Island this week, and on his return on July 19th, his rector, the Rev. C. H. Bixby, goes camping in Northeastern Michigan; the Rev. J. H. Edwards who has been slightly indisposed, leaves on Monday with Mrs. Edwards for Colorado, exchanging duty for a month with the Rev. V. O. Penley, of Calvary church, Golden, Colo.; the Rev. W. B. Hamilton goes to Minnesota for July and August; the Rev. Charles and Mrs. Scadding will spend August in Toronto, and at the Muskoka Lakes, the Rev. A. T. Perkins taking the Sunday duty in Emmanuel, La Grange.

Emmanuel Church, La Grange

We learn that one-tenth of the $10,000 debt on a plant estimated to be worth $76,000, will be paid off this week, a renewal for five years made on the balance of $9,000, and the annual interest reduced from 5½% to 5 per cent.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The New York Clericus held its final session for the season at Setauket, Long Island, where it enjoyed an outing.

St. Barnabas' Guild for Nurses

At the annual meeting held at the church of the Holy Communion, the Rev. Henry Mottet, D. D., resigned as chaplain, and was succeeded by the Rev. D. Parker Morgan, D. D.

The Actors' Church Alliance of America

Held its first public meeting, at the Berkeley Lyceum, on the evening of June 19th. Bishop Potter presided. The object of the Alliance is to promote closer relations of actors with Churches.

Chapel of the Messiah

The children made the first fresh-air trip of the summer on June 20th, thus opening the new recreation house of the City Missions Society. In the vicinity of Haines' Falls in the Catskill Mountains.

The Church of St. Mary the Virgin

Has decided to utilize for its fresh-air work of the present season, the provision made by some of the existing institutions and agencies, and will not open its own summer home on the seashore at Huntington, N. Y.

Church of the Epiphany

Has made an arrangement with Grace church, by which it secures control of the latter's former summer home, at Far Rockaway, N. Y., heretofore known as Grace House by the Sea. The fresh air excursions have already begun.

Bequest to Church of the Holy Communion

The bequest of $10,000 by Mrs. Caroline A. Cisco, is divided by the terms of the will into $2,500 to go to the endowment of the Sisterhood of the Holy Communion; a like sum to the endowment fund for the Home for Aged Women, and $5,000 to the endowment of the parish church.

Archdeaconry of Richmond

The June meeting was held at the church of the Holy Comforter, Eltingville. Bishop Potter celebrated the Holy Eucharist at the opening service, a considerable congregation being present. At the business session, reports of the missionaries were presented, and routine business undertaken.

Grace Church

The first party of 60 children and 20 women has just started for the new summer home at Stamford, Conn., to remain two or three weeks. They will be in charge of Deaconess Beard who has the appointment for the care of the new home. Most of the children are from the Grace Church Day Nursery.

Summer Homes for City Missions Use

The City Missions Society is fortunate this year in securing two summer homes. One is that offered free of rent by Mrs. J. Hull Branning, at Tenafly, N. J., and the other, a rented building, at an elevation of 2,000 ft., in the Catskill Clove of the Catskills, which takes the place of the former summer home, at Sound Beach, Conn.

Methodists Come into the Church

At Chichester, near Stoneyclove in the Catskill Mountains, a former Methodist congregation has come over to the Church within the past few months, and has been successfully trained in the use of the Prayer Book. During the summer, the church, which is a resort for tourists of this region, will be in the care of the Rev. A. W. Shaw.

Trinity Parish Schools

The school of Trinity parish held its closing exercises in Trinity Place, the headmaster, Mr. Geo. B. Towle, presiding. An address was made by the Rev. J. Nevett Steele, Mus. D., vicar of the parish church. At the graduating exercises of Trinity chapel school, held in the school house in the chapel yard, an address was made by the vicar, the Rev. W. H. Vibbert, D. D.

Church of the Good Shepherd, Newburgh

A fine new organ has been put in, a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rosell; and also a stone font, the gift of Miss Sarah G. Fife, in memory of Mr. and Mrs. David Perrott. The Misses Gordon have given an electric attachment for the organ. Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, acting for the Bishop of the diocese, lately blessed these gifts, and at the same time administered Confirmation to 15 persons, presented by the rector, the Rev. John Marshall Chew.

St Peter's Church, Westchester

Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, acting for the Bishop of the diocese, on Sunday, June 25th, administered the rite of Confirmation to a class presented by the rector, the Rev. F. M. Clendennin, D. D. The rector had a narrow escape from serious injury, June 17th. He was coming out of the rectory gate into the road on a bicycle, when a trolley car ran into him, throwing him under the car. Fortunately he escaped with a few slight bruises and the loss of his wheel.

St. John's Guild

Has erected a new seaside hospital at New Dorp, in the borough of Richmond, which has just been formally opened. Addresses were made by Messrs. Geo. W. Brush and John P. Faure, and refreshments were supplied to some 300 guests. The enlargement has cost the guild about $32,000. Four wards are provided, with 355 beds, combined in such a way with cribs, that sick children can be cared for by their mothers. The capacity of the institution is now 500 patients. The new edifice is supplied with all the latest conveniences, and has quarters for the staff, office, and bath rooms, an ordinary kitchen, a diet kitchen, a dining room, and an office.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Episcopal Academy, Philadelphia.

Extensive exterior and interior alterations are in progress. The work includes two new wings 22½x66 ft., three and a half stories high; new roof over the entire building, etc. The cost is estimated at $35,000.

New Parish House

The Northwest Convocation has purchased a lot 100x150 ft., at the N. W. corner of 25th st. and Lehigh ave., on which a parish house is to be erected at once. This parish is the successor of St. John the Divine, which is now holding services at 2625 Lehigh ave., in charge of the Rev. J. O. McIlhenny.

Marriage of the Rev. L. P. Powell

At the church of Our Saviour, Jenkintown, Pa., June 20th, Miss Mary Gertrude Wilson was married to the Rev. Lyman Pierson Powell, rector of St. John Evangelist's church, Lansdowne, Pa. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Whitaker, assisted by the Rev. Robert Coles.

Buttercup Cottage, Mt. Airy

The 11th annual donation day for this summer home for working girls, under the care of the Sisterhood of the Good Shepherd, New York, was observed on the 19th ult. A gratifying sum of money was received, in addition to a generous amount of groceries and provisions. The annual report of the treasurer shows receipts for the year, $1,048.66, and expenses, $873.12.

St. Luke's Epiphany Church

Important alterations and improvements are to be made during the summer months. The galleries are to be reconstructed, new oak pews put in, a brass panelling to the chapel rail, electric lighting, frescoing, and the front of the galleries ornamented with staff work. The cost of these improvements will be about $7,000. The Rev. Leverett Bradley, associate rector, and Mrs. Bradley have recently returned from their trip to Paris.

The Pelham Mission

Has made great progress since its inception in the spring of 1898. About 100 families have given in their names as members, and it is expected that preparations to erect a church edifice will not be long delayed. A piece of ground in the neighborhood, costing about $12,000, has been donated to the mission for this purpose. The Rev. J. Alan Montgomery, recently appointed priest-in charge by Bishop Whitaker, preached his initial sermon on Sunday morning, 18th ult.

Whitford Lodge, a Summer Home

In the spring of 1898, through the generosity of a friend, the use of a house (named later Whitford Lodge) at Waitford, on the main line of the Penna. R. R., was given to St. James' Guild for Girls, for a summer home. This spring, through the generosity of the same kind friend, and owing to the willingness of the members of St. James' Guild to share their good fortune with other clubs, the house was leased for five years, and placed at the disposal of the Pennsylvania Association of Working Women's Clubs.

Golden Jubilee of Rev. J. K. Murphy, D. D.

An informal, yet highly successful, reception in honor of the Rev. John Kemper Murphy, D. D., rector of St. Michael's church, Germantown, Philadelphia, was held on the 21st ult., in the parish house, under the supervision of the vestry of the church. The event marked the 50th anniversary of Dr. Murphy's taking Holy Orders. The reception room was elaborately decorated, and there was a large number of rectors and members of other parishes present. During the evening, the choir of the church rendered a number of selections. Dr. Murphy was the recipient of a series of complimentary and congratulatory resolutions by the vestry who propose, in the near future, to present him with a purse of gold. Dr. Murphy is a native of Philadelphia, where he was born in April, 1828. On June 15, 1849, he was ordered deacon, and served his diaconate at St. Luke's, Philadelphia. Advanced to the priesthood in 1852, he was assistant at St. Mark's, and later, rector of Calvary church, Rockvale, and St. John's, Concord. In 1868, he became rector of his present charge.

St. James' Church, Philadelphia

Of which the Rev. Dr. J. N. Blanchard is rector, is the "banner church" of the United States, in having contributed more than any one parish to the United Offering of the Woman's Auxiliary, 1893. This organization reports for the year ending April 30th, 1899, a contribution of $4,124.97, which includes 18 missionary boxes, valued at $2,499.99. The parochial report for year ending May 1st, 1899, shows: Baptisms, 49; confirmed, 31; communicants, present number, 920; marriages, 18; burials, 45; public services, on Sundays, 210, on other days, 691; total, 901; Holy Communion, 199; children catechised every Sunday; Sunday schools and Bible classes, 515; parish school and industrial school, 121; parish receipts, $51,687.02; Sunday school, $371.20; expenditures: parochial, $36,686.69; diocesan, $9,729.80; extra-diocesan, $9,331.25; total for all objects, $55,747.74. Estimated aggregate value of the property of the parish, real and personal, $367,719.41; Endowment Fund, $13,250.70.

Baptistry for St. Martin-in-the-fields

This church, at Wissahickon Heights, erected by the late Henry H. Houston, in loving memory of his daughter-in-law, is being further beautified by the addition of one of the handsomest and most costly baptistries in the country, erected by Mr. Samuel F. Houston, to the memory of his wife. Its cost will be about $25,000. It is located in the south transept, and forms five sides of an octagon, having a radius of 12 ft. in the interior. The exterior is of Chestnut Hill stone, with lime-stone trimmings, similar to the church, but much more elaborate in detail. The interior is of Virginia stone. There are five narrow windows, one in each side of the octagon, let into the wall after the manner of work in the English cathedrals of the 13th and 14th centuries. The floor is of marble, while the font, a splendid piece of work, is of Mexican onyx, presented to the church by Mr. H. H. Houston shortly before his death. The whole work, both interior and exterior, is covered with beautiful carving and tracery, a representation of an angel being placed at each angle of the octagon. It is hoped that ere the close of summer the work will be completed.

Western Michigan

George De Normandie Gillespie, D.D., Bishop

Woman's Auxiliary

At the annual meeting, held in Emmanuel parish, Hastings, the following officers were elected: Mrs. R. W. Butterfield, president; Mrs. W. Powers, vice-president; Mrs. T. J. O'Brien, secretary; Mrs. John T. Starr, treasurer. Touching reference was made to the death of Mrs. Melina E. Terry, late of Benton Harbor, who had so faithfully labored in the Lord's vineyard.

An interesting paper on Mormonism was read by Mrs. Norton Pomeroy, of Kalamazoo. Mrs. Austin, the retiring president, has pushed the work vigorously during the eight years she has been in office, and each year has seen some advancement. The report of the treasurer showed all pledges met for the year.

Ohio

Wm. Andrew Leonard, D.D., Bishop

Kenyon College, Gambier

On June 1st and 2nd, Dr. George Adam Smith lectured before the faculty and students of Bexley Hall. His subjects were "The moral teaching of the Book of Proverbs," and "The Spirit of Christ in the Old Testament." Rosse Hall, which was burned in 1897, is rebuilding. Externally it will be restored, as far as possible, to its original appearance, except that the porch will be rather more ornate. The main floor will contain a vestibule with coat room and custodian's room, and a large auditorium and stage. The auditorium will later be equipped as a gymnasium. It will be encircled by a gallery, hung from the ceiling. This will serve as a running track. When in use it will pass behind the proscenium arch and across the stage, but it is constructed so that this section of it may be raised out of sight. The basement will contain a base ball cage, bowling alley, boxing stall, locker, and bath rooms. The expense of reconstruction is met chiefly by the William and Mary A. Simpson Memorial Fund of $6,000, the gift of Mrs. Simpson, of Sandusky.

Southern Virginia

Alfred M. Randolph, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The 136th anniversary of Trinity church Sunday school, Portsmouth, was celebrated on Trinity Sunday, in the afternoon. The entire membership of the school was present, besides a large part of the congregation. The exercises commenced with a processional hymn by the choir, the children marching in procession bearing garlands of flowers and banners. The services were conducted by the rector, the Rev. James B. Funsten. A beautiful feature was the formation of a large floral design, which, when completed, showed the Ten Commandments. At the night service Mr. Funsten preached the anniversary sermon. Of the men who have been the rectors ever since its erection in 1762, one, the Rev. John Wingfield, did a noble and faithful work in the parish for over 50 years. Before his taking charge, in 1821, the church property was practically abandoned.

The Norfolk Convocation

Began its spring meeting May 24th, at Eastern Shore chapel, Virginia Beach, with divine service, followed by a celebration of the Holy Communion. The sermon was an able discourse by the Rev. C. B. Bryan. The Rev. Carl E. Grammer, S. T. D., read a paper on "The crisis in the Church of England." Reports were made by the different clergy on missionary and general Church work in their parishes, which were very encouraging. The night service was devoted to missions; able addresses on diocesan and foreign missions were delivered by the Rev. Messrs. J. B. Funsten and Carey Gamble. The second day's session was held at Galilee chapel, with sermon by the Rev. W. W. Walker. A large congregation was present at this service, with 18 of the clergy. The annual session of the Sunday school institute was held. At its close the members of the convocation were tendered a musicale at the Princess Anne Hotel. Another social feature of the convocation was a sumptuous dinner tendered the guests by the Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, dean of the convocation. All the officers were re-elected, and committees on finance and parochial missions appointed.

Woman's Auxiliary

The annual meeting was held in the church of the Epiphany, Danville. A Quiet Hour was conducted by the Rev. Robert Jett, which was largely attended. "Auxiliary Day" was opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion. The Rev. J. J. Lloyd preached the annual sermon. Forty delegates, representing 16 branches, responded to roll call. Miss L. L. Taylor, of Norfolk, presided. The annual report of the Junior Auxiliary, read by Mrs. John J. Lloyd, of Lynchburg, secretary of the Juniors, gave interesting statistics of the progress of the missionary spirit among the young people of the diocese. A luncheon was served by the ladies of the local branch, after which Mrs. Lindsay Patton, missionary to Japan, made an exceedingly interesting address, impressing the necessity for more women in the foreign field. A letter was read from Dr. Madley, a missionary in Japan, in which he asks for contributions for the work of preparing Bible scrolls for use of the missionaries. A letter was read from Miss Emery, making a special appeal for the mission of Sendai; in response to this the Virginia branch pledged $50. A pledge of $50 was also made to the orphanage in Cuba, which is proposed to be established by the Board of Missions.

Albany

William Croswell Doane, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Archdeaconry of Ogdensburg

One of the most interesting meetings held for some time convened June 6th and 7th, in the parish of Massena—a town recently risen into prominence by a projected water-power for generating electricity, the expenditure of which is estimated at more than five millions of dollars. The initial session occupied the evening of Tuesday, with an address by the presiding officer, the Rev. R. M. Kirby, D. D., relative to the missionary character, and present and future prospects, of the field comprised within the bounds of the archdeaconry. This was followed by an interesting sermon, delivered by the Rev. E. L. Sanford. The music was rendered at this and subsequent sessions, by the organist and a choir, highly satisfactory in its execution, of 16 or 17 boys and girls of the Sunday school. The Wednesday A. M. service consisted of the Holy Eucharist, a goodly number of the laity being in attendance. The ad clerum sermon was delivered by the Rev. A. G. Wilson. Business meeting immediately followed, at the rectory. Reports from the various parishes and missions were of an encouraging nature, and manifested successful work along the whole line. The venerable missionary of Ellenburg who had that day performed 20 years of faithful duty in the missions of Clinton Co., was present for the first time, the territory of the archdeaconry having been extended, by which he gained a representation. The area comprehended within the bounds of this archdeaconry comprises the largest county in the State, with a portion of Clinton and that of Franklin counties, which, with the extensive region of the Adirondacks, make it a field of gigantic labors and of great possibilities. This being the first meeting of this body held since the death of the treasurer of the diocese, Gen. Selden E. Marvin, action was taken thereon by the appointment of a committee for drawing up a suitable memorial. A sympathetic vote of condolence was conveyed to the rector of Waddington, referring to the early death of his son. The archdeaconry meeting proper closed at 1 P. M., second day, to meet in the autumn at Fort Covington.

North Dakota

Samuel C. Edsall, D.D., Bishop

Bishop Edsall has just concluded his visits to several points, which, being without a resident clergyman, have been under the care of Archdeacon Appleby who has visited them on an average of once a month during the past two years.

A Clergyman for Bismarck and Mandan

The Bishop found the work here greatly revived, and taking on a more hopeful look. Mr. Appleby presented two for Confirmation in Mandan, and 10 in Bismarck, and also has succeeded in raising funds sufficient to enable the Bishop to appoint a resident priest, the Rev. A. A. Joss who will take charge in June. At Wahpeton, a thriving county seat, the work has been similarly revived, and the Bishop hopes before long to send a resident clergyman.

St. John's Church, Larimore, Consecrated

The Bishop and archdeacon visited Mayville, Northwood, and Larimore, and on Trinity Sunday the consecration of the church at Larimore took place, and a class of eight was confirmed. The result of Archdeacon Appleby's labors in this field has been remarkable, not only in reviving the interest in the Church, but also in bringing about the payment of long existing indebtedness. The Bishop expects that the Rev. E. W. Burleson will take charge of Larimore, Northwood, and Mayville in July.

In order to keep open existing churches, and respond to new demands at growing points, the Bishop will have to be more generously helped by the Church at large. There is a golden opportunity just now for the Church in North Dakota, if a few hundred dollars more a year can be sent to Bishop Edsall for his work.

Maryland

William Paret, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Memorial of Rev. S. W. Crampton

Mrs. Isabella Crampton, his widow, has presented St. George's church, Perryman, with a very handsome memorial brass cross and retable, the base of the cross bearing the following inscription:

To the glory of God and in memory of Savington Warren Crampton, priest. Born Sept. 27, 1810. Died Jan. 19, 1898. Rector of Spesutie church, St. George's parish, from Nov. 1, 1845, to Nov. 1, 1872. "That with them we may be partakers of Thy heavenly kingdom."

Memorial Tablet for Mr. and Mrs. Perine

There has been placed in the church of the Redeemer, Baltimore, a very handsome antique brass tablet in memory of David M. Perine and Mary Perine, his wife, both deceased. The inscription on the tablet reads as follows:

In memory of David M. Perine and Mary Perine, his wife, who gave the ground on which this church stands, and the land attached thereto; who gave of their means to its erection, and of their time to the promotion of its work. Mary Perine died on the 29th of Sept., 1861, in the 65th year of her age. David M. Perine died on the 24th of Dec., 1882, in the 87th year of his age.

The metal plate rests upon a richly carved base of wood, upon which an inscription is carved: "The wood on which this tablet rests is from trees planted by David M. Perine on his country seat, 'Homeland,' adjoining where he resided for 83 years." In form, the tablet is, with a slight modification, that of a marble tablet discovered in the church of St. Giacomo de Spagnuoli, Rome, and removed later to Montserrat. The replica is from the studio of Messrs. J. and R. Lamb, New York.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D.D., Bishop

The rector of St. Thomas', Taunton, the Rev. Morton Stone, in addition to his many labors, has found time to officiate on Sunday afternoons at the County Jail, where his services are much appreciated.

The rector of Trinity church, Milford, is making a strong effort to have an endowment fund for the parish. The work at Mendon still continues under his charge, and is prospering.

St. Paul's, Hopkinton

A font of white marble has been presented by the Stone family, in memory of their parents. The new bell, weighing 500 pounds, was blessed June 11th. The Massachusetts Altar Society has given the parish a linen surplice.

Gifts to St. Luke's, Hudson

A solid silver chalice and paten were used in the church on St. Barnabas' Day. They are in memory of the Rev. F. L. Bush. The new altar is the gift of Misses Holden, of Brooklyn, N. Y. It is made of antique oak with decorated panels in Cardovan work.

Marquette

Gershon Mott Williams, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. Jos. McConnell, of Grace church, Menominee, has been granted a year's absence from his diocese by Bishop Williams, and will spend the time in England, Ireland, and Scotland. His resignation was handed in May 5th, but he will not leave for England before Aug. 1st. Abroad he will work under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. Mr. McConnell has done much to advance the interests of Grace church, having added 35 communicants to the congregation since last year. He raised several hundred dollars outside his own parish to paint the church edifice inside and out, built a new porch, and made other improvements.

Woman's Auxillary

The fourth annual meeting was held in Grace church, Ishpeming, June 13th. The Bishop celebrated the Holy Communion, and delegates from Marquette, Houghton, Calumet, Escanaba, and Bay Mills, were found to be present. Other branches sent in reports and pledges by their clergymen. A great deal of interest was manifested, and the promise of new work was as great as last year. Mrs. Jennie Eldredge, diocesan correspondent, reported considerable activity locally with the Church Periodical Club. The Rev. R. W. Clark, D.D., preached the annual sermon. The officers elected were: Mrs. E. B. Palmer, Marquette, president; Mrs. Wm. Sedgwick, Ishpeming, Mrs. D. M. McKenzie, Sault Ste. Marie, and Mrs. A. R. Gray, Houghton, vice-presidents; Mrs. J. F. Oliver, Escanaba, and Mrs. A. Maitland, Negaunee, domestic and foreign secretaries, respectively, and Miss Nina Stone, Marquette, general secretary. Mrs. Jennie Eldredge was re-elected correspondent of the C. P. C.

Vermont

Arthur C. A. Hall, D.D., Bishop

At St. James' church, Arlington, the Rev. Henry B. Ensworth, rector, important improvements are being made, affecting the nave, and particularly giving finish to the new chancel.

The 109th Annual Convention

Held in Trinity church, Rutland, on June 21st. The opening services were held on Wednesday morning, including two Celebrations. The Bishop presided. The Rev. W. F. Weeks (now absent from ill health), was unanimously chosen secretary, and the Rev. J. O. Davis, assistant secretary. Afterward E. L. Temple was chosen treasurer. Among the reports, that on Christian education was read by the Rev. W. H. Collins. The trust funds now amount to about $86,000. A new trust fund is the gift of C. R. Brewer, of Enosburgh, being his farm of 400 acres (with some conditions), and the income is to be for mission work. The Standing Committee was elected as follows: The Rev. Messrs. Dr. Bliss, Foster, and Weeks; Messrs. Briggs, Arthur, and Smith. The Bishop's address reviewed the state and statistics of the diocese, and dwelt especially on the history and prospects of the diocesan schools. He advised their suspension until endowments could be had for a more satisfactory basis. In diocesan finances he urged greater strictness and more business-like methods. He regretted the short tenures of clerical incumbency, and deprecated the exclusive use of the offerings for current expenses, to the detriment of mission offerings.

The Rev. Dr. Brown's proposed amendment to the Constitution, in favor of women voting at parish meetings, was referred to a committee to report at the next convention. The convention voted to meet at St. Johnsbury next year. The Rev. E. N. Goddard was chosen to prepare a suitable memorial on the death of the late Rev. F. W. Smith. The revised Constitution of the last General Convention was referred to a committee to report to the next convention, viz., the Rev. Dr. Bliss, the Rev. Mr. Johnson, and Messrs. Ormsbee and De Boer. Delegates to Missionary Council, the Rev. Mr. Atwill, and E. L. Temple. A deficiency of $1,000 in the Bishop's salary having been made up by four laymen of the diocese, they were thanked by the convention, and a resolution was passed to prevent any like deficiency in the future.

In the evening the usual missionary reports were read and accepted. From the treasurer's report, it appeared that the parishes and missions had raised the past year for diocesan missions about $3,268. The assessments for next year amount to some $3,400. The sum of $6,800 has been raised the past year from all sources for diocesan missions, and, including local contributions, has reached that of $11,200. The Missionary Committee chosen was as follows: The Rev. Messrs. Atwill, Sanford, Bliss; Messrs. Temple, Parker, and Ward. Amid the debates of the evening on missionary topics, several resolutions were discussed and passed. One was that of the Rev. Mr. Barr: "That missionary meetings be held once a year in every cure of the diocese, by clergy and laity, to promote and develop the missionary spirit and operations." Another was by the Rev. Mr. Bliss: "That it is the sense of this convention that the salary of each missionary or minister, should as soon as may be, be at least $800 a year and a house." And another was by the Rev. Mr. Alling: "That the Bishop and missionary committee be requested to assign to each clergyman a certain district over which, besides his own special charge, he shall have care, as far as may be, in the cure of souls."

Laramie

Anson R. Graves, D.D., LL.D., Miss'y Bishop

Death of Rev. Robert W. Oliver, D.D.

The Rev. Robert W. Oliver, D.D., late rector of St. Luke's church, Kearney, Neb., entered into life eternal on the 23d ult., at the Episcopal hospital, Philadelphia, where he had been a patient for 15 months. Dr. Oliver was of Scotch birth. When a young man he was tutor for an English family, who secured for him a lieutenancy in the English army, from which he soon rose to the rank of captain. About 1840 he was sent to Canada, where, after a short time he resigned his commission and became a Presbyterian minister at Butler, Pa. Some years later he was confirmed by Bishop Alonzo Potter, and took Holy Orders in the Church, becoming a missionary priest in Western Pennsylvania, building churches at various points, notably St. Luke's church, Altoona, of which he was the first rector. The University of Kansas, of which he was the first chancellor, was erected under his direction. He afterwards became archdeacon under Bishop Clarkson, of Nebraska, and was dean of the Divinity School at Nebraska City until he became rector of St. Luke's, Kearney, missionary district of Laramie. Dr. Oliver held a major's commission under President Lincoln, as chaplain, serving throughout the war and rendering distinguished services at the battle of Fair Oaks. The Burial Office was said on Sunday afternoon, 25th ult., in the hospital chapel, the Rev. David H. Lovejoy, M.D., officiating, after which the remains were taken to Broad st. station, and left, at 4:30 p. m. for his old home in Kearney. Dr. Oliver was 85 years of age at the time of his death.

Central Pennsylvania

Ethelbert Talbot, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Christ Cathedral, Reading

Has raised the amount of its deficit of nearly $5,000, which had accumulated during the past two years, and is now out of debt. This gratifying result has been reached mainly by the efforts of the treasurer, Mr. Edwin L. Moyer, who made a personal call on each parishioner.

St. Barnabas' Free Church, Reading

On St. Barnabas' Day, Bishop Talbot formally blessed the organ, which had recently been freed from debt. The rector, the Rev. J. F. Nicoll, presented a supplementary class of 11 adults, making 70 candidates confirmed within 13 months.

Rhode Island

Thomas March Clark, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Wm. N. McVickar, D.D., Bishop Coadjutor

Woman's Auxiliary

The quarterly meeting, held at St. Paul's church, Wickford, May 25th, was well attended. Over 250 went down on the train from Providence and vicinity, and other parts of the diocese were also well represented. Holy Communion was celebrated by the Bishop, after which the morning session was opened by the president, Mrs. Ames. Reports were made showing the work done in the different departments of the Rhode Island branch, both of the Woman's and Junior Auxiliaries. Bishop McVickar made an address, dwelling chiefly upon the importance of an itinerant missionary for this diocese. The Rev. Mr. Conrad, of Boston, told of his work among the Kafirs of South Africa. Luncheon was served in the parish house, and during the recess many availed themselves of the privilege of visiting the old Narragansett church, which was opened for the visitors. In the afternoon, the Rev. Henry Morgan Stone spoke of the practical effects of missionary efforts, as illustrated by some of the reports, and the Rev. Mr. Blunt made a stirring address on the spiritual side of the work of the Auxiliary. The annual report—$5,774.06 contributed in cash by 42 parishes, and boxes sent to the value of $2,900.47.

Newark

Thomas Alfred Starkey, D.D., Bishop

By the will of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Wells, legacies of $1,000 each are left to St. Barnabas' Hospital and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. After the payment of certain bequests to relatives, the residue of the estate is to go to St. Barnabas' Hospital.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew

The local assembly held a conference June 12th, at Christ church, Ridgewood. The subject at the afternoon session was "Personal work." In the evening addresses were made by Mr. John W. Wood, general secretary of the Brotherhood, and the Ven. Alexander Mann, archdeacon of Newark.

Colorado

John Franklin Spalding, Bishop

On Trinity Sunday, at St. Luke's, Montclair, the Bishop held a Confirmation service, when six students and one master from Jarvis Hall were presented by the Rev. Henry K. Coleman, the principal of Jarvis Hall, for the laying on of hands.

Trinity Memorial Church, Denver

Celebrated its 25th anniversary on Trinity Sunday, at 11 A. M. There was High Celebration, the Rev. John Wallace Ohl being celebrant, assisted by the Rev. Chas. Marshall and the rector, the Rev. Charles Y. Grime. Mr. Marshall was the preacher. Before the sermon the rector read a history of the parish, written by a priest of the diocese, as part of the history of the diocese soon to be published, in commemoration of the 25 years' episcopate of Bishop Spalding. Trinity memorial, erected in memory of Bishop Randall, was the second parish organized and church built in the city of Denver, and under its present rector, the first to abandon entertainments as means of raising money for necessary expenses.

The Annual Council

In addition to our former report we give the following items: The Rev. E. P. Newton although absent on a six months well earned vacation, was re-elected secretary, with the Rev. J. Wallis Ohl as secretary pro tem, Mr. Charles W. Boynton as assistant, and the Rev. Geo. Leslie as corresponding secretary. The Bishop delivered his address in which he dwelt at some length on the beginning of his work 25 years ago in his immense jurisdiction of Colorado, Wyoming, and New Mexico. There were then only 11 churches with seven clergy at work. He sketched the progress of the Church during the 25 years of his oversight, and now although Wyoming and New Mexico have been detached, and Western Colorado set apart as a missionary jurisdiction, there are 54 churches and chapels with 43 working clergy. The business sessions of the council were mostly of a routine character, with no agitation, no excitement. The council of conciliation held in St. Louis last February had done its work, and its judgment was observed to the letter. The officers of last year were all re-elected with but little opposition. The Committee on the State of the Church reported slow but steady, healthy growth.

The reports on the institutions showed St. Luke's Hospital to be in a highly efficient condition, but much in need of additional accommodations for the continually increasing demands upon it. Wolfe and Jarvis Halls, which were a year ago in a depressed condition, have, under new and independent management, been more prosperous than they have been for some years. At the close of the council an address was presented to the Bishop congratulating him on his 25 years' successful administration of his office.

A Clerical Retreat

Held from Tuesday, June 13th, to Friday evening, the 16th, at Evergreen, in the Associate Mission church of the Transfiguration. The Rev. W. E. Johnson, of New York, was the director, and gave the meditations to 11 priests and one candidate for Holy Orders. Mr. Johnson's subjects were the solitude of Christ in His ideal of righteousness and holiness; and the solitude of His priests in their aspirations after the righteousness and holiness of the Son of Man, the Son of God. Mr. Johnson dwelt upon "The social touch of Christ," and his communion with them, and the necessity of His priests being in touch with the people to be successful in uplifting them to a higher plane of life.

Pittsburgh

Cortlandt Whitehead, D.D., Bishop

The last meeting of the Clerical Union for the season of 1898-'9 occurred June 12th, at the Hotel Henry, beginning with luncheon at one o'clock. The Rev. Dr. White, of St. Andrew's, read a paper on "Cyrano de Bergerac."

On Friday, June 16th, the remains of the Rev. Dr. Purdon, which had been in a receiving vault since his death, in December last, were interred in the cemetery at Titusville, by the Bishop. Several of the clergy were present as a mark of respect to Dr. Purdon's memory.

Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses

St. Barnabas' Day, June 11th, was observed as the anniversary of the Pittsburgh branch. Bishop Whitehead, chaplain-general of the guild, in the morning, at St. Paul's church, preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion, and celebrated the Holy Communion. In the evening, at Trinity church, the annual sermon before the guild was delivered by the Rev. J. R. Wightman, at which time an offering was received in behalf of the Nurses' Sick Relief Fund. On Monday evening, at the residence of one of the associates, the annual social meeting was held, and was largely attended.

The Northern Convocation

The summer meeting occurred on June 14th and 15th, in St. John's church, Franklin, Bishop Whitehead presiding. The opening service was Evening Prayer on Wednesday, with addresses, "Reminiscences of the Puerto Rican campaign, the point of view of a chaplain; of an officer," by Captain Frank Barr and Captain Robertson, the latter of whom spoke most highly of the chaplain's work. On Thursday there was a celebration of the Holy Communion by the Bishop, at 7:30, followed by Morning Prayer at 9:30. There were addresses during the morning on "Why do no more than ten per cent. of the laboring class go to church?" by the Rev. Messrs. J. H. McCandless, G. S. Richards, and C. R. Messias; and "The Sunday question," by the Rev. A. E. Clay. At noon the prayers for missions were said, followed by luncheon. In the afternoon the Rev. Frank Spalding spoke of "The secularization of the Church," and the Rev. Messrs. A. R. Taylor and Geo. Rogers, on "Some noteworthy books of the day." In the evening the subject was, "The influence of habit on the determination and maintenance of belief," with addresses by the Rev. A. J. Nock and the Rev. S. M. Holden. The Bishop was present at all the sessions, and 16 of the clergy. The convocation was very spirited and interesting, and the visiting clergy were most hospitably entertained by the members of the parish.

Los Angeles

Joseph Horsfall Johnson, D.D., Bishop

St. John's, San Bernardino, Consecrated

By Bishop Johnson, Sunday, June 4th, assisted by the rector, the Rev. John D. H. Browne, the Rev. Dr. Easter, and the Rev. Messrs. C. C. Payne, M. C. Dotten, and B. W. R. Taylor. The preacher was the Rev. B. W. R. Taylor. In the evening, the Bishop gave one of his strong and stimulating sermons. The people of St. John's parish and their earnest and indefatigable rector are to be congratulated. Their former church was destroyed by fire in Christmas week, 1897. The new church, a thoroughly well arranged and Churchly structure, was opened for its first service—the Holy Eucharist, preceding a Woman's Auxiliary missionary meeting—in February of this year; and now just one year and five months after the fire, the new church, entirely paid for, is consecrated to God's service. And in the meanwhile, the spiritual upbuilding of the congregation has been as marked as its success in material things. The Rev. J. D. H. Browne, after 15 years of service on the Pacific coast, is to revisit the Atlantic. He will spend the summer in Nova Scotia, returning after the Missionary Council at St. Louis in October. During his absence, the Rev. John A. Harris will take his place at St. John's.

St. Matthias' Mission, Whittier

Since its organization three years ago, has used as its place of worship a vacant store fitted up as a chapel. May 13th took place the dedication of a very neat and Churchlike building, just completed. The service began at two o'clock with a procession composed of the officers of the mission, seven of the clergy, and the Bishop, reciting Psalm xxiv, followed by special prayers of dedication said by the Bishop. The Rev. W. H. Wotton preached a thoughtful and suggestive sermon. The church is built of wood and plaster, and is an imitation of the style of the old Californian mission buildings. The effect is very good, at a moderate cost.

Michigan City

John Hazen White, D.D., Bishop

A New Method of Raising Funds

The Rev. L. W. Applegate, Bishop White's appointed financial secretary for the diocese, is energetically canvassing the several parishes, going from house to house, and making acquaintance with every family, and also getting pledges for the support of the diocese in the "episcopal" and missionary work. This is under the new plan, which takes the place of assessments and apportionments, going directly to individual communicants instead of levying upon the parishes through vestries. This plan involves much labor on the part of the secretary, but the encouragements seem to be more in evidence than the difficulties. The experiment is working hopefully.

New Jersey

John Scarborough, D.D., Bishop

Marriage of the Rev. N. V. P. Levis

At St. John's church, Elizabeth, June 15th, the Rev. Norman Van Pelt Levis, rector of the parish at Westerley, R. I., was married to Grace Royal, daughter of the late Russell D. Tyng, of New York. The rector, the Rev. Otis A. Glazebrook, officiated.

St. Peter's Church, Freehold

Since the present rector, the Rev. W. E. Wright, took charge four years ago, the church has been greatly improved by the extension of the chancel and the erection of a side chapel. The services have been enriched, and the altar properly furnished, and the "six points" are all now in use.

Consolidation of Plainfield Parishes

The church of the Holy Cross, Plainfield, has decided to accept the invitation of the church of the Redeemer, in the same town, for a union of the two parishes, under the present rector of the church of the Redeemer, the Rev. W. Montgomery Downey. The consolidated parishes will worship in the church of the Holy Cross, the rector of which, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, lately resigned.

Duluth

James Dow Morrison D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Woman's Auxiliary

The third annual meeting occurred in St. Paul's church, Duluth, on June 1st. The opening service consisted of a celebration of the Holy Communion by the Bishop, with a stimulating sermon by the Rev. H. P. Nichols. Mrs. L. F. Hendryx, owing to the resignation of the president, acted as presiding officer. Roll call, which showed representation from five parishes, was followed by a short, earnest address by Mrs. Hendryx. The secretary, Mrs. Johnston, reviewed, in an interesting manner, the year's work, its discouragements and encouragements. Especially she approved of the experiment which resulted in a substantial district box, so many branches having united in the plan with enthusiasm. The treasurer's report showed a decided gain in this year's results over those of last year. Mrs. Morrison reported for the Junior Auxiliary, nine working branches, and that several Sunday schools had been induced to make missionary instruction a regular part of the weekly programme. She emphasized the obvious fact that if we expect or desire the next generation to be intelligent and conscientious in their gifts and activities for the Church, we must see that they are trained in the Church's methods now. She pointed out the fact that love of country was cultivated in every common school, by all means available, and that every victory in the last war was the victory of each school. Why, then, should not the Church's warfare be kept before the mind of the young, her victories be made theirs, her heroes their heroes, her needs the object of their solicitation? The secretary of the "Babies' Branch" reported a marked increase in membership during the past year, and that mothers have been brought into the Auxiliary through the influence of this band of little ones. "A little child shall lead them." In the absence of the secretary of the Church Periodical Club, a review of that work was read by Mrs. Page Morris. A great advance is noted over last year's results. At 12 o'clock, the Rev. H. F. Parshall read the "Noon Day Prayers." Officers for next year are as follows: President, Mrs. J. D. Morrison; vice presidents, Mrs. C. F. Hendryx and Mrs. G. V. Quillard; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. F. H. Barnard; secretary of Junior Auxiliary, Mrs. H. F. Parshall; secretary of Babies' Branch, Mrs. Henry Taylor. An earnest address was given by the Rev. Wm. Walton, for the Junior work. Able papers were read, on "The relation of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Junior Auxiliary," by Mrs. Quillard; and on "The Woman's Auxiliary in small parishes," by Mrs. Merchant, for Mrs. Morse. The subjects for discussion were: "Should 'raising money' be the first object of the Auxiliary?" and "Should domestic missions receive more attention from our society than foreign missions?" A unique feature of the afternoon meeting was an address in the Chippeway tongue by a woman of that tribe—Mrs. Louis Manypenny. Her husband interpreted it. It had long been in her heart to do something for God's work, but she knew not how, until some one told her of the Woman's Auxiliary. She visited the reservation at Twin Lakes, staying there for a week, and meeting the women every day. She organized a branch of the Woman's Auxiliary there, and then went on to Wild Rice River, where again she met the women, and told them how they might have a share in the good work. Here, too, she organized another branch of the Auxiliary, and as a result of these meetings she brought with her to the annual gathering the sum of $5.60. Bishop Morrison, in his address, expressed his appreciation of the work of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Milwaukee

Isaac Lea Nicholson, D.D., Bishop

Recent Confirmations in the diocese: Number last reported, 386; Pine Lake, 4; Christ church, Janesville, 9; Trinity, Janesville, 18; Mineral Point, 9; Kilbourn, 1; Tomah, 5; cathedral, Milwaukee (special), 2; St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, 14; Whitewater, 6; Elkhorn, 7; Hartland, 6; Delavan, 6; Portage, 8; Watertown, 10; Kemper Hall, Kenosha (special), 1. Total, 492.

Connecticut

Chauncey B. Brewster, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. George Buck, rector of St. James' parish, Poquetanuck, has resigned. As a monument of his successful rectorate, he leaves a handsome and well-appointed church.

Church Home for the Aged, Hartford

Bishop Brewster dedicated the new building, on June 14th. After the service, which was held in the pretty little chapel of the home, addresses were made by the Bishop and Dr. Nelson, of Geneva, N. Y. The new edifice is of colonial type of architecture, has a broad central hall, with reception rooms, and rooms for inmates on one side. On the other side is the chapel, in the rear of which is the large dining-room, with perfect kitchen and pantry appointments. The rooms are large, airy, and comfortable. The building is heated by steam, and has all modern sanitary appliances. It cost a trifle under $16,000.

Fairfield County Clerical Association

The monthly meeting was held in Derby, the members and some clergymen of New Haven Co. being the guests of the Rev. G. H. Buck, of St. James' church. Holy Communion was celebrated at 11 o'clock, and the Association then met for business at the rectory. About 25 were present. The subject of the meeting was, "How can the meetings of the diocesan convention be made more effective?" The Rev. L. N. Booth read an interesting paper on the question. At 1 o'clock dinner was served for the visiting clergymen in the Sunday school room, after which discussions of the subject followed. The Rev. Louis French, of Darien, president of the Association, presided.

Trinity Church, Bristol

On June 5th this parish held its 5th anniversary. The rector and his wife gave a reception to the parishioners and their friends, who kindly remembered him and his good wife, presenting them with a beautiful mahogany cabinet, and other gifts. Since the present rector, the Rev. W. H. Morrison, took charge two years ago, there has been a steady advance all along the line. The resources of the parish have quadrupled, and aggressive spiritual work has gone on. On the first Sunday after Trinity the rector inducted into the Order of the Daughters of the King, five women. The branch here now has a membership of 17. The mission at Forestville is also prospering. A lot has been given for a church by Mr. Welch, of that place, and the members have raised $800 for the building, which is called after the Apostle St. John.

Farewell to Rev. W. D. Scott

On the evening of June 8th, the people of St. Andrew's chapel, Middletown, tendered a reception to the Rev. W. D. Scott, who is about to leave to take up work under Bishop Leonard in Salt Lake City. The rector of the parish, the Rev. E. Campion Acheson, complimented

Mr. Scott on his three years' work, and stated that he had yet to hear an unkind criticism regarding Mr. Scott, or that he had been anything but an earnest Christian gentleman in his work in the parish. Mr. Acheson presented on behalf of the congregation a white stole, and on behalf of himself and Mrs. Acheson, a cassock and surplice to Mr. Scott. After a response by the latter, the congregation joined in singing "Blest be the tie that binds," and then knelt in prayer to ask that a blessing might fall upon this young deacon.

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses

The anniversary service took place at Trinity church on the evening of the Feast Day, June 11th. Evening Prayer was said by the rector, the Rev. Richard P. Williams, and an appropriate sermon was delivered by the Rev. Herbert Scott Smith. At the regular monthly meeting for business, on the following Wednesday, officers for the ensuing year were elected: Chaplain, the Rev. Alfred Harding; secretary, Miss Mason; treasurer, Miss Whittaker. There are now about 50 trained nurses belonging to the Washington branch, and a large number of lady associates. Most of the prominent physicians of the city are medical associates, and there are six priest associates. It is proposed to open a home for nurses, where comfortable rooms can be rented at a moderate cost, and where, in the intervals of regular engagements, a pleasant home and congenial companionship will be found, and it is hoped that from it nurses, when at leisure, will give part of their time to caring for the poor in illness. Members of the guild have already generously responded to calls of this kind.

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Grace Church-on-the-Highlights, Brooklyn

Extensive improvements are to be made, which are to cost in the neighborhood of $40,000, the amount being all in hand. In the meantime, services will be held in the chapel.

Holy Trinity, Brooklyn

During the summer a vacation school will be held in the Hall Memorial House. Arrangements have been made to take 200 children. The school will be under the management of a committee of men and women of the parish. During the summer the memorial gifts, organ, pulpit, altar rail, etc., will be put in place. With the exception of a Sunday or two, on account of the work, the church will, as usual, be open all summer.

St. Alban's Church, Canarsie

Held its patronal festival for two days. On the 17th there was a celebration of the Holy Eucharist, the Rev. Walter Irving Stetcher being celebrant. Morning Prayer was read at 10:30, and a High Celebration at 11 o'clock followed, the celebrant being the Rev. J. W. Hill and the Rev. W. W. Bellinger preaching. In the evening the sermon was preached by the Rev. H. C. Swentzel. On Sunday, the 18th, the preachers were the Rev. F. S. Griffin, and the Rev. Frederick Burgess. The church was tastefully decorated, and a special programme of music was finely rendered. The Rev. Edward Heim is rector.

Georgia

Cleland Kinlock Nelson, D.D., Bishop

The cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Atlanta, has recently been greatly improved by the decoration of its chancel. This work has been done through gifts of the Ladies' Aid Society, and is a beautiful and harmonious color scheme, bringing out and emphasizing the fine proportions and ornamental points of this part of the cathedral. A very handsome altar rail of oak and brass, the work of Geissler, of New York, has also been erected, and is a memorial of Mr. Quintard Peters.

Editorials and Contributions

THE N. Y. Churchman, noticing an article in another paper, says with apparent approval:

The writer voices the convictions, not of an individual, but of a multitude, when he argues that not by Creeds, which, with the single exception of the Apostles', have been universally divisive, but by use of the same forms in public worship and by co-operation in Christian endeavor, shall unity be promoted.

It is just such statements as this that disparage certain movements in the alleged interest of unity, and make us fear this Trojan horse which has been several times wheeled into the General Convention with partial success. We shall continue to be on our guard against it because under the banner of amiability it really covers the conquest of the Catholic by the Puritan, and the conversion of the Church of the English-speaking peoples into another Protestant sect.

THERE is no one who will traverse the statement in The Churchman that the use of the same form of public worship would promote unity, and we are far from bemoaning the growth of the liturgical idea, because its adoption represents the decadence and ultimate disuse of methods of worship (?) which the Church has never favored and which have had much to do with prevalent agnosticism and religious indifference. But it is quite another thing to talk of "co-operation in Christian endeavor" as likely to subserve the interests of unity, at least at present. The methods of external work in use among the non-liturgical bodies are all fashioned on the basis of individualistic worship, and have grown distinctly out of non-ritual habits of devotion and prayer. Should, for instance, the Christian Endeavor undertake to reconstruct itself on the lines of the St. Andrew's Brotherhood, the bodies it represents would soon discard it as an exotic, as certainly as that the Brotherhood would commit harikari should it make the Christian Endeavor the model of its corporate life. It would be quite contrary to universal experience to hope for unity of feeling as the result of quixotic efforts at unity of operation. The Church has everything to gain by dignified adherence to her own time-honored methods of work (as well as of worship), and everything to lose by gushing and childish co-operation with incongenial methods and endeavors.

AS to the divisive effect of the Creeds, we repudiate the suggestion, save in so far as truth always marks itself off from error, and will not cross the line to compromise with error, even though amiability and false liberality spur it on. There seems to be a singular disinclination in some quarters to recognize the words of our Lord, that He came not to send peace on the earth, but a sword. There is no peace save the peace which grows out of a common holding of truth, and antagonism in the interest of the truth is more according to the mind of the Master than peace at its expense. We are getting weary of this insensate gush about unity without reference to the established, eternal, and unchangeable verities; and the dangers which threaten the Church to-day largely spring out of this plausible, smiling, sweet-tongued effeminacy which some of our people affect.

THE Creeds of the Church are not divisive, but constructive, columnar, and conservative. The only separation they make is between belief and unbelief, and no one but a destructive or a sentimentalist would argue otherwise. The Creeds are the very bed-rock and raison d'être of all our worship and work, and to impugn them as divisive is to cast discredit on their origin, and on the Holy Scriptures upon which the Church has built them. We have shown in what sense they are divisive, and in that sense one might say the same of the Scriptures themselves.

— x —

Theology and Exegesis

THERE is a decided tendency in recent works on the Bible, and in the theological schools, to the exclusive use of methods of exegesis which can never yield the results most to be desired for the purposes of spiritual instruction. Yet it is the use of Holy Scripture for instruction in supernatural truth, for the building up of the soul in love, for the strengthening of hope in things eternal, for consolation, for warning, and for establishing the principles of a life pleasing to God, that makes it the Book of books, the Church's chief treasure. The method of which we speak is called the scientific method, though as it is used, it is often improperly so-called, and when it is used exclusively, it is entirely defective from the Christian point of view, as ignoring the supernatural. It is true that the critical study of the New Testament, including the careful, grammatical, and logical analysis of every sentence, phrase, and word, is essential to the appreciation of the profound truths contained in it, and Christian scholars all along, according to the scholarship of their times, have ever employed themselves in this study with keen delight.

BUT we have reference to something other than this, namely, the attitude of mind with which such study is approached, the impressions or beliefs—in other words, the previous assumptions. The theory of interpretation which is now widely accepted is that one may best approach the study of the Scriptures by divesting his mind of all ideas of spiritual or theological truth which he has hitherto held and which are the root principles of his religious life. This is called "impartiality." It is considered necessary that we should search the Scriptures "without prejudice." The extremest application of this method is familiar enough in the very common notion about the training of children, that the fundamental truths about God and man are not to be inculcated in them, but that they ought to be left to find them out for themselves. "There is only one hypothesis," says Canon Moberly, "which would save such a course from fatuity; and that is the hypothesis that the truths of the Creed are themselves unimportant conjectures upon subjects neither known at all, nor at all necessary to be known. And this, no doubt, is what the advocates of such a course do, in fact, either explicitly or unconsciously hold. But suppose for a single moment that the truths of the Christian creed are what they claim to be; and it would be, at least, as reasonable to leave children to shape out their own unguided experience as to principles about 'picking and stealing, evil speaking, lying and slandering, temperance, soberness, and chastity,' as about sin, and atonement, and love, the revelation of the Fatherhood of God in the incarnate life of Jesus Christ, or the transfiguring of personality by the presence and the power of the Holy Ghost."

WE are asked to approach the study of the Scriptures with all our old pre-conceptions placed out of sight. We are to study them as persons who know nothing of the Incarnation, who are not aware that the words of Christ are the words of a Divine Person, who have no previous clue to the doctrinal significance of St. Paul's Epistles, who have had no familiarity with the immemorial institutions of the Church, or the meaning of that word "Church" itself. This is the attitude of mind we must bring to this work and see what we can make of it! What this process has made of it is opened before us in more than one volume of recent date, and it is not reassuring from any Christian point of view. The method in question is called "scientific," but a method is not properly scientific which either disregards the setting or attendant circumstances in relation to the facts with which it deals, or ignores the necessities of the human mind. As too often handled, what are called the scientific methods of historical or exegetical study, are faulty in both respects. A little consideration will make our position plain.

THE books of the New Testament, beginning with the Epistles of St. Paul, were written one by one as exigencies arose. They were for the most part written to communities of Christians which had been in existence for a considerable length of time. They were called "believers," as being in possession of a body of doctrine. They had also an organization with its recognized officers, and they "obeyed those who had the rule over them." They had also ordinances of worship, and certain institutions which were considered to be of vital importance. To such a community, with its faith, its associated life, and its established rites and customs, comes a letter from St. Paul. He has, in fact, been its founder, either directly, or through his trained associates. How, then, is this letter dealt with? Is it not read in the light of the established order of things? Its phraseology, its technical expressions, its allusions to points of teaching, to religious rites and customs, to the institutions of the Church, are they not all interpreted by the previously existing faith and order? In other words, the readers brought to the consideration of the Apostle's words a large number of "presuppositions." It would be simply absurd to imagine anything else. Could it be for a moment supposed that the Christian brethren of Corinth, for example, were expected to say to each other, upon the receipt of the first Epistle to that Church, "Let us put out of our minds all the teaching we have received heretofore, let us forget the organization to which we belong, the religious rites we have been trained to observe, the sacraments which we have been accustomed to celebrate, and let us read this letter with impartial minds, just as if we had hitherto known nothing of the Gospel, and had never heard Paul, Apollos, or Peter, and see what we can make of it?" The supposition is a reductio ad absurdum of the method itself. It would only be a rational method in the case of documents without a history, unearthed from some ancient hiding place long ages after they were penned.

BUT we are concerned with documents which were written for a living society, and for a society which has never ceased to live, and their interpretation is wrapped up in the life of the society. At what precise time are we to suppose that this ceased to be the case? When was a new faith substituted for the doctrine of the Apostles? When was the original organization exchanged for another? When were the original sacraments done away, and others brought in in their stead? The Epistles of St. Paul and the other New Testament books continued to be read without a break, in a great society which continued to exist without a break. They were read with "presuppositions" at the outset, and they have been read with the same presuppositions, in the Church, down to this day. And we contend that to read them otherwise is to deprive ourselves of the true insight into their meaning. "It is the old ideas, common-places of the thought and faith of the Church, to which insight belongs." The notion or theory that it is possible to read without preconceived ideas is, furthermore, contrary to the laws of the human mind. It is not really a question between presuppositions and no presuppositions, but between true presuppositions and false or defective ones. And the results of our study will depend upon the mental convictions or presumptions with which we come to it.

THE thoughtful writer whom we have already quoted is more than justified in pleading that the interpretation of the New Testament should be throughout theological as well as exegetical; "or rather, that theological beliefs should be recognized as legitimately present in, and for, the exegetical processes." Since we believe all the articles of the Christian Faith as most certainly true and positively essential, and have the most profound conviction, resting upon the testimony of the Church from the beginning, that they are contained in the Scriptures, let us freely avow that when we read the Scriptures, we read them in the light of such beliefs and convictions. "Every action done by Christ, or every word spoken by His lips, requires for its perfect apprehension the realization of the Person whose word or act it was." And this, as well as other theological truths, "ought really to be present as a necessary and determining quality of the thought with which we apprehend the real significance of historical details in the Acts or the Epistles." "Spiritual narrative, as well as spiritual philosophy, is for the seeing eye and for the hearing ear; which means that something else is needed for discernment of their truth than the merely intellectual impartiality of the secular scholar or historian."

WE believe that we point to a very real danger when we deprecate the tendency which, it is to be feared, has made too much headway in some of our own schools, to erect an exegetical method which, in a subordinate and subsidiary way, may have its proper use, into a governing principle of all Biblical study. Trained on this method, the preacher has not learned to bring forth from Holy Scripture the deep things of God and the great truths of revelation for the spiritual good of souls and the edification of his hearers in faith and righteousness. The New Testament has rather assumed in his mind the character of an ingenious puzzle, a field for the construction of novel hypotheses, and the discovery of ideas and practices hitherto unheard of. He cannot convert these things into spiritual food, and if he be earnest to do good, he is tempted while using, through habit, a text from the Bible, to draw from other sources both his doctrine and his illustrations. It is a common remark that we do not hear so many "Gospel sermons" as we used to do in former days. In so far as this is true, may it not be largely traceable to the modern methods in exegesis?

The Growth of the Church

FROM THE ANNUAL ADDRESS OF THE RT. REV. D. S. TUTTLE, D. D.

THERE has been no little discussion of late, in the Church papers, about the statistics of growth of our Church in America. It is claimed that the rate of that growth is sadly diminishing; and that the time is fast coming, if it has not already come, for us to discover that we have too many ministers for the people, and too few people for the ministers. Well, I value statistics, and I think honest effort should be expended to make and keep them accurate. But the influence for good which the Church exerts, or which, at any rate, by her genius and history she is fitted to exert, along the lines of sobriety and stability and comprehensiveness and sturdy steadfastness of faith, with loving toleration of opinion, can not be put into statistics, nor counted up by statistics. Even were it true, then, that we have quit growing in numbers, it would not follow that we are failing in depth or breadth of right good work.

With regard to the question of room in the ministry, or overcrowding in the ministry, I am of the opinion that there is room, and that there is not overcrowding. By Whitaker's Almanac, we have 4,818 clergymen and 680,205 communicants. That is, there are 141 communicants to each clergyman. I submit that the ministry would not be overcrowded were there one clergyman for every one hundred of communicants. Last year, the clergy increased by 42; the communicants by 16,122. That is, 384 communicants to each clergyman. It appears to me that pastors and parents who love the Church should not allow themselves to be diverted by any outcry about overcrowding, but should be wide awake to turn the earnest attention of boys and young men to the ministry. For the young themselves, I do not for a moment believe that they will turn away from the ministry because there is no money in it, a whit sooner than they would refuse to volunteer for the flag because there is no money in it.

As for permanently unemployed clergymen, I think the list is really not large. In the two dioceses which I know—Missouri and West Missouri—there are none save those incapacitated by age or bodily infirmity.

Doubtless, in the 4,818 clergymen of the country, some incapacities exist other than from age or bodily infirmity. Counting out all those incapacitated by age or infirmity, or reasons indefinable and unmentionable but which any one of experience can readily divine and understand, the list, I claim, of the permanently unemployed clergymen in our American Church would be reduced to very meagre proportions.

The statement is made that our rate of growth is diminishing. It may be so. I am inclined to think that it is so. A pertinent remark may be allowed, that as a body increases in numbers its rate of increase may normally be expected to diminish. A parish of ten communicants, increasing to twenty, grows by 100 per cent. When from 100 it increases to 150, it grows only by 50 per cent.—half as much in rate. But the latter growth is likely to be actually in every way the greater.

Let us take a scrutinizing look at our own diocese in this matter. In the eight years since Missouri was divided, and of which we have the reports, our diocese has increased by 1,175 communicants. In the same time, 3,999 have been confirmed. I think it correct to count that the deaths of communicants are less than three per cent. of the whole number yearly. The confirmees each year are less than nine per cent. of the whole number of communicants. In a fair estimate, then, one-third of the confirmees should be considered as enough to make up for the loss by death of the communicants. That is, if the confirmees are at once entered as communicants on the parish register. I think they should be so entered. They are entitled to be communicants. They ought to be communicants. And they have a right to be listed as communicants. Other things being equal, then, the communicant list should grow by two-thirds of the number confirmed. But losses there may be by excommunication, lapse, and removal from the parish (and the diocese). Those under the first head may be counted inconsiderable. Those under the second, alas, are considerable, and bring sore feelings of discouragement to the hearts of faithful pastors. With regard to the third head, in such a State as Missouri, I think the removal of communicants out of the diocese would doubtless be equalled and offset by the removal into the diocese from other dioceses. In our country parishes, more go out than come in. But many that so go out come in to our St. Louis parishes. Only, sad to relate, not a few allow themselves, or are allowed by others, to drift and wander and become lost to any record or list, being without a pastor or a Church home.

Reckoning the diocesan removals, immigrant and emigrant, as offsets to each other, and if there were no sad lapsing, the communicant list ought to have increased by two-thirds of the number confirmed. That is, this diocese of Missouri should have grown, from 1890 to 1898, by 2,666 communicants. Instead, it grew by only 1,175 communicants. By our analysis, there has been a lapsing of 1,491 communicants. If this be the fact, or half-way the fact, our hearts are sorrowful, I am sure, brethren of the clergy, that so many have sadly turned their backs upon the precious and life-sustaining Feast of our Lord's Body and Blood. May God give them grace to return to loyalty and faithfulness. May He give us grace, unflinchingly and lovingly, to plead with them to return.

By the record, in 1897, our diocese had 6,472 communicants; in 1898, 6,406. Here is an actual loss of 66. And that, too, when 594 were confirmed in the year. After the manner of our calculation, that means 462 lapsed for that year. That is too sad to believe. I do not believe it. Examining the parish reports, I find one parish reporting 12 added and 134 lost during the year. Another parish makes this astonishing return: In 1897, 463 communicants; during the year, added 38, lost 9; in 1898, 300 communicants. That is, 192 communicants lapsed for the year. I can not credit such figures as expression of the lapsing account. The makers of the returns, perhaps in a spasm of virtuous disgust at what they may have called a dead list, must have run their hot pens of destruction through the figures. Statistics, therefore, scrutinized, may furnish their own corrections to some seemingly strange results.

—X—

Is There Room in the Ministry?

BY THE REV. FRED'K S. JEWELL, D. D.

I.

THE question, "Is there room in the ministry?" involves what may be fairly considered as an "up-to-date" subject. Recently launched by Dr. McConnell upon the turbulent bosom of newspaper discussion, it has been so tossed about and mishandled that it is all but fit to be abandoned as a hopeless derelict. In spite of its real importance, the number and varied ability of those who have taken part in its discussion, and the curious multiplicity of the views advanced, we are yet all at sea as to any satisfactory solution of the problem involved. Indeed, we seem water-logged with doubt both as to whether the question can be conclusively answered and whether there was any proper ground for propounding it at all; certainly "a most lame and impotent conclusion."

Under these circumstances, it becomes a question whether it is not idle, perhaps even presumptuous, to adventure anything further in the discussion of the subject; whether, in fact, anything is to be gained by casting into the bitter waters of this doubt and disagreement, another piece of the controversial tree; and, more than all the rest, whether, if the evil and its cure could be satisfactorily laid open, there is any possibility in the Church of applying the cure and correcting the evil. I say, more than all the rest, because there is no ecclesiastical body in Christendom in which, from the existence of so many, diverse, unreasonable, refractory causes, it is so impossible to correct any prevalent error or abuse, as the so-called Protestant Episcopal Church.

But to proceed with the subject: the first thing to be considered is whether the answer to the question, "Is there room in the ministry?" turns on the principles or the priests concerned; whether upon honest adhesion to the "Faith once delivered to the saints," as the Church holds the same, or upon the condition of those ministers who, while empowered to do the work of the Church according to their ordination vows, are provided with no designated field for its performance. These two lines of inquiry, while both important, are in both their field and value, quite different. The discussion which the subject has so far elicited, has concerned itself chiefly with the latter of these lines. This, however, has resulted in a mere strife of words and figures, which, as compared with any just contention on the former grounds, is a mere fluctuating and inconsequential war of outposts rather than a direct and decisive contention for the maintenance and defence of the Church's central citadel of Catholic purity and power. Recent events of a very significant and disturbing character, however, would seem to show that the imminent and imperative call to arms is rather for a mustering of forces on the field of Principle. The grand issue is not one concerning forms or conditions, it is pro Fide et ex fide bona, it concerns the Faith and good faith.

Now by this I mean that the plain Principle, and one with which the practical fact should unequivocally correspond, is that there is no room in the ministry for those who do not in good faith believe and intend to teach all the grand articles of the Catholic Christian Faith as the Church holds the same; who do not honestly, and with exclusive religious intent, take upon themselves the vows and obligations of their order, as set forth in the Prayer Book, and who, accordingly, do not endeavor to fulfill the same without equivocation. Not to deal in mere generalities, which always invite misconception, it may be said that those for whom on the basis of Principle, there is no room in the ministry, may be divided into four classes, as follows: 1st. Those who are spiritually deficient, who know nothing of personal religion or piety, and who consequently are personally indecent, formal, self-indulgent, and worldly. 2dly. Those who are ministerially scheming and dishonest; clerical carpet-baggers, men who seek the ministry merely because they look upon it as an easily obtained, respectable profession; who regard it as a happy means of attaining a higher social status, with perhaps well-to-do matrimonial possibilities in prospect, or who are ambitiously intent on the attainment of some easy, self-indulgent, self-aggrandizing parochial charge. 3dly. Those who are ecclesiastically weak and defective, holding semi-denominational views of the Church, ignoring or undervaluing the priestly office, and accepting the episcopate as a convenient agency in the Church rather than a necessary divine factor in the sacred ministry; and those who immigrate into the Church because of some disagreeable feature in their sectarian fold or some break with its authorities, or who are won to it by the æsthetic attractiveness of its ceremonial. 4thly. Those doctrinally and belligerently unsound, corroded by old errors, Arian, Sabellian, Universalian, or Humanitarian or critical free-lances, carried away with notional fads, evolution, the Higher Criticism, comparative religions, the new theology, public reforms, and political Christianity, "wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest," and that bring a tempest with them.

Now it is not improbable that this classification may raise the outcry that "it is too sweeping, that it is a piece of purist severity." But it is no more so than is the New Testament standard of Christian excellence. "But it is also clearly impracticable." No more so than any other standard of perfection in art, morals, or religion. "But the attempt to apply any such standard would result in unmitigated bitterness and strife." Yet the one Divine Teacher and Exemplar of moral and spiritual perfection, said: "I come not to send peace, but a sword." Moreover, the adoption of a perfect rule or standard does not involve its summary application as an ex post facto law. Its operative force is mainly prospective. The abuses of the past are largely beyond correction. Such as can be reached, must be tactfully touched. The tares may have to grow lest the wheat be rooted up. But this is no warrant for any further sowing or cultivating tares. To this may be added the objection so rife in the clamor of the times, "You allow one no liberty of thought, no right of private opinion." Liberty of thought there may be concerning those things not defined or set forth by the Church, but this does not involve an equal right to spread abroad publicly the results of that thinking. It must first be settled that such teaching does not compromise the Church in the mind of the Christian public, does not disturb the peace of the Church, and is not calculated to confuse the ideas and weaken the faith of believers. So long as neither the man nor the scholar can abstract himself from his priesthood, his relation to the Church and his vows as a priest must be paramount. Furthermore, there may be private opinions with regard even to matters which have been settled by the Church. But here still more than in the preceding case, private means private and neither openly nor covertly public, and for the same reasons as before, only all the stronger as they approach or involve antagonism to the Church, and a violation of one's vows as priest and preacher. "But is not this to force the man to play the hypocrite, to seem to believe what he denies, and preach that which he conscientiously holds to be a lie?" By no means, and to every frank and manly mind, plainly enough, the priest is not commissioned by the Church to preach all, or all kinds of truth. His is not a roving commission. He is detached from the ranks and detailed to do a specific work. He has no right whatever to avail himself of the powers and opportunities given him by that commission to do, according to his own interest or pleasure, anything counter to the Church's plain intent in giving him that commission. If he does this, he is either lamentably weak, covertly disloyal, or impudently false and treacherous. "But what if he cannot conscientiously do otherwise than preach the Faith as the Church does not hold it, or doctrines which she condemns as unscriptural, uncatholic, false, and injurious?" Let him retire, resign, abdicate. He was not compelled to take up the express work of the priesthood, he is no more forced to continue in it. Let him lay down the work and depart in peace. That any one can do otherwise and consider himself either a man or a Christian, is hard to comprehend. As a Churchman, his motto should be "Fides ex toto;" as a man it can be nothing less than "Vota involata." For any other than such men and Churchmen, there is no righteous room in the ministry.

(To be continued)

—X—

No Cause for Alarm

A SCRIPTURE that one could be alarmed about would not be one that a reasonable man could believe. We cannot apprehend the overthrow of God's power in the world. He must be true, though every man be a liar. They who think with Dr. Briggs that the Bible is God's Word only in a qualified sense, are the only ones who have reason to be alarmed. For in their opinion the parts which are inspired and those which are not, are inextricably mingled; the sense which is divinely inspired must be picked out by the extraordinary collection of people whom Bishop Potter calls "the best Christian scholars," and who seem complacently to accept the designation. Dr. Briggs is one of them. But, as yet, no assurance has been given that these exceptionally endowed men are immortal. When they die who is to pick out the nutritious meat from the extremely convoluted shell of Holy Scripture? For ages the Christian world groped on in darkness without any of these first-rate scholars. Those who read or heard the Bible took it just as it was, shell and all. Some of them drew near to God and were saved, no doubt,—but they had no such light as that which shines now. What if that light should leave us? We shall have learned that the Word of God is to be picked out of the Bible, but we shall no longer have any "competent scholarship" to make the selections,—nobody to keep our Polychrome Bibles up to date. There certainly would be reason for panic if we thought with Dr. Briggs. But we believe that God's Word is not yea and nay, but yea and Amen. Whosoever shall fall upon it shall be broken, and upon whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder. Therefore it would be the height of folly for us to have any fear. We do say, and let us continue to say, that there is no objection to any kind of investigation or any amount of it; but that previous to the investigation this much is settled by Revelation and expressly accepted by the whole Church of God—that the Holy Scriptures are inspired by God in a manner wholly different from all other writings, and so that they are "the infallible and undecivable Word of God," and whatever is contained in them is true.

Let us continue to say that the Church also is infallible, and that she, not "the best scholars," is the witness and keeper of Holy Writ. Let us continue to say that reason also is infallible. Nothing can be found in the utterances of the Church which is contrary to Holy Scripture; the law of the Church's being keeps her from any such utterance. Nor can anything be truly found in Holy Scripture which is contrary to the utterances of the Church. In like manner, and equally, nothing can be found in sound reason that is contrary to either Church or Scripture. Let us say that thus we agree with Dr. Briggs that there is a co-ordinate authority in these three, but with this radical difference, that we know their authority is infallible, whereas he believes in no infallibility that can speak to men.

The time has not come for us to cease saying these things, reiterating them, recurring to them, showing men the evidence for them; for there are many who are in love with what they call the scientific method; and that method, by a singular reversal of terms, now means the method by which nothing can ever be known with certainty to be necessarily true. Those whose reason and faith are either mangled or entirely destroyed by their devotion to this method, think it will help them in the study and defence of Holy Scripture; and of course they think that if this method is the right one the notion of infallibility must be discarded. Here is the root of the heresy. Let us therefore say, that while the scientific method, which is all we have for the investigation of material things, is very good for that pursuit, and has helped us to great advances in the temporary use of the world as we find it—yet it can have no fundamental or important bearing on the infallible oracles of God. This proposition does not "fetter the human intellect,"—it releases it from the slavery of dependence on material phenomena. To that slavery Dr. Briggs, and his kind, would reduce the mind of man; and they, for this reason, are thoroughly unfit for the priesthood. We must proclaim that things which are seen are temporal,—the things which are not seen, eternal; that "blessed are they who have not seen and yet have believed."—Catholic Champion.

—X—

Letters to the Editor

THE BUSINESS SIDE OF RELIGION

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In an article in your paper of June 17th, under the heading of "The Business Side of Religion," is found this expression: "The poor minister who, in accepting his position, was assured that he would be kept 'free from worldly cares,' has soon to face the truth that he is at the head of a great business enterprise, and that its success depends upon him alone." The questions naturally arise: Does, or can, any clergyman expect to be "free from worldly cares" because of his position?—is the ministry, indeed, such a privileged class that those in it can complacently close their eyes to the cares and responsibilities of their respective parishes, indifferent alike, so long as their salaries are paid, whether the expenses of the church are met, or whether the deficit grows continually larger and the burden heavier?

A clergyman, as rector of a parish, is in a position to know better than any one else whether his work is a success or a failure. If a success, the crisis you describe as that of the poor minister being invited to resign, never is reached; if a failure, then it rests with the individual himself whether his resignation must finally be asked for. In the latter case, could any self-respecting minister ask, or expect, to be carried along as a dead weight while his parish is sinking to a slow, but certain, death? Undoubtedly every manly clergyman in the land would answer, "No." For a clergyman to ignore such a condition and still insist upon the retention of his office and his salary, would be but making himself a pensioner upon the little nucleus which is found in every church, and by whose efforts the parish lives on through the administrations of strong and weak ministers, or with no ministers at all.

Without doubt, a minister must face facts, unpleasant though they be, the same as any other man or woman in the world. To do otherwise would indicate that his interest is simply a pecuniary one, and that he rests on his contract of employment. That such is the case, the writer does not believe, but unfortunately the actions of the clergy too often have that appearance. Vestries have frequently been severely criticised by the religious papers, and perhaps justly so, for the cold business view taken by their members, yet it would seem that the clergy are not altogether free from such a criticism, for frequently almost the first question asked by a minister in considering a call to a parish, even as a supply for a single Sunday, is, "What does it pay?" Such a question, when analyzed, means one of two things,—either that the preacher desires a promise from the parish to pay more than it is able to do, or else he is unwilling, without a promise beforehand, to trust the parish to do what it is able to do; neither of which has a tendency to arouse or promote sympathy between preacher and people, nor to dissuade the mind that the preacher's interest is a financial one.

Add to this the fact that the list of non-parochial clergy is a long one, while at the same time nearly, if not quite, every diocese in the country includes whole counties where the Church is not even represented, and the conclusion is inevitable that what many of these unemployed gentlemen want is not work, but salaried positions in organized parishes.

It is true a minister must live, and must therefore have the means to live; in this respect he is not different from other people; but how few of them, in considering a call, are willing to ask the simple question: "Can I live?" and be guided accordingly.

The writer is of the opinion that the churches are fair and honest, and their people are willing to meet their rector much more than half way, and that an earnest, sincere preacher of the Gospel, of only average ability, has nothing to fear. If a church can only afford a man a living, she will say so, and give him that; if she can do better, she will do so without any bargaining and dickering on the part of the clergyman. In other words, she will give her minister all she can afford; can he reasonably ask more?

VESTRYMAN.

VALUE OF CHURCH BUILDINGS

To the Editor of The Living Church:

From the last United States census can be obtained the average value of all the Church edifices of the land, as the census gives the number of edifices of each denomination, together with their value, and then foots the same up for the entire country. It is stated in a note attached to the census report, that under the head of "value" is included only the "worth of church buildings, their furniture, bells, etc., and the ground on which they stand"; no other class of church property being included in the case of any denomination is expressly stated. By taking, then, the value of all the edifices or church buildings in the case of each denomination as thus given, and dividing it by the number of edifices or church buildings which the census gives that denomination, of course the average value can be obtained, and the same for the entire country. All this I have done, and find that for the entire country, the average value of all the church buildings in the United States, at the time of the last census, was $4,775 each. And I also find that the average value of those of the Episcopal Church was a long way above the average for the country, and that it was above that of others, as the following table will show, leaving out the smaller denominations, most of them not being up to the general average:

Average value of each church building:—
Episcopal	$16,232
Roman Catholic	13,567
Congregationalist	9,150
Presbyterian	7,608
Lutheran	5,217
Methodist	2,866
Baptist	2,185

Now, as the Episcopal Church was shown in the issue of this paper of May 20th, 1899, page 68, to have increased in new organizations a little more than one for every three days during the thirty years between 1868 and 1898, and as nearly all of our organizations are shown by the census to have had church buildings, we can see from the above table of averages that the establishment of a new organization by us every three days means something.' L.

ATTENDANCE OF CHILDREN AT CHURCH

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Your comment on Dr. Williams' remarks as to Sunday schools, contains the words: "To require them (children) to go to both (Church and Sunday school), is to put upon them a burden," etc. This suggests the question: Need it be a "burden?" Can not Church services be made so brief and musical, and the sermon so short, simple, intelligible, and earnest, that children will enjoy attending Church as well as Sunday school? I wish some abler writer than I would take up this very important subject.

H. C. MAYER.

3618 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., June 20th.

Personal Mention

The Rev. Thos. Beeson has been transferred to the diocese of Western N. Y. Address Greenville, Mich.

The Rev. Percy Barnes, of Essex, Conn., has received the degree of Ph. D. from the Northern Illinois College, of Fulton, Ill., at the late Commencement.

The Rev. R. A. Benton, with his wife and daughter, has sailed for a three months' visit abroad.

The Rev. Otho Brant, D.D., has been appointed State chaplain of the Sons of Veterans of Pennsylvania.

At the recent Commencement of Northern Illinois College, the Rev. F. H. Burrell, having passed the required examinations, received the degree of doctor in philosophy.

The Rev. R. R. Claiborne, of Kalamazoo, Mich., delivered the address to the graduating class of the Training School for Nurses, at the Michigan Insane Asylum.

The Rev. W. Caney has changed his address to Oakmont, Pa.

The Rev. James H. Davet should be addressed at Conway, Fla.

The Rev. E. Winchester Donald, D.D., will spend the summer season at Newport, R. I. He preached the baccalaureate sermon June 18th, before the graduating class of Cornell University.

The Rev. Elijah E. Edwards, Ph. D., long time rector of Emmanuel parish, Lancaster, Wis., has resigned that charge, and removed to Hendersonville, N. C.

The Rev. Alfred L. Elwyn is to spend the summer at Oyster Bay, N. Y.

The Rev. Canon St. George will spend July and August at Nashotah, Wis.

The Rev. Percy Gordon has changed his address to 22 Centre st., Cambridge, Mass.

The Rev. Robert W. Grange has received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the University of Western Pennsylvania.

For July and August, the address of the Rev. A. J. Graham, rector of Christ church, Indianapolis, will be Cliff House, Kennebunkport, Me.

The Rev. S. W. Garrett has changed his address from London, Ohio, to Kane, Pa.

The Rev. W. A. A. Gardner has returned home from abroad.

The Rev. Geo. S. Gassner has been placed in temporary charge of the Seamen's mission (church of the Redeemer), Philadelphia.

Bishop Huntington's P. O. address, till further notice, is Hadley, Mass.

The Rev. B. V. K. Harris has resigned the rectorship of Zion church, Manchester Centre, Vt., to accept that of Christ church, Red Hook, N. Y., beginning his work next month.

The Rev. Arthur Hess has been appointed by the Bishop, in charge of Trinity church, Collingdale, Pa., and has entered upon his duties. Address Lansdowne, Pa.

The address of the Rev. W. F. Hubbard, chaplain U. S. A.; retired, is changed to 1007 S. Union ave., Los Angeles, Cal.

The Rev. H. M. Johnson and family are spending the summer at Whitmarsh, near Fort Washington, Pa. They should be addressed care Dr. Seymour, Fort Washington, Pa., until further notice.

The Rev. D. Kendig has gone for vacation to the Kittaning House, Delaware Water Gap, Pa.

At the recent Commencement of the New York University, the degree of LL. B. was conferred upon the Rev. Ralph Wood Kenyon, of the diocese of New York.

The Rt. Rev. Lucien Lee Kinsolving received the honorary degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology at the recent Commencement of the University of Pennsylvania.

The Rev. A. B. Kinsolving has gone for the summer to Huntington, on the coast of Long Island.

The Rev. G. W. Laidlaw has become rector of the church of Our Saviour, Middleborough, Mass.

The Rev. John S. Lindsay, D.D., has received the degree of LL. D.

The Rev. Vincent C. Lacey has been elected to a curacy in St. Peter's church, Freehold, N. J., and should be addressed there in care of the rectory.

The Rev. E. D. Moreno should be addressed at Lilian, Baldwin Co., Ala.

The Rev. F. B. Randall, deacon who for four years has most faithfully and successfully served the lower end of Christ church parish, Calvert Co., Md., has been appointed by Bishop Paret to the associated missions of the Archdeaconry of Annapolis, in Anne Arundel Co.

The Rev. A. S. R. Richards and wife have gone for a brief visit to their old home in England.

The Rev. Creighton Spencer sailed for Europe on the 17th inst., for a two months' stay.

The Rev. Cornelius B. Smith, D.D., has gone for the summer season to North West Harbor, Me.

The address of the Rev. Robert Scott, after the first Sunday in July, will be Beatrice, Neb., until further notice.

The Rev. Prof. Smith, of Nashotah, has gone to Montreal, Can., for the summer vacation.

The Rev. Frank Steed and wife and the Rev. L. F. Cole will sail on July 26th for a few weeks' visit in England.

The Rev. S. De Lancey Townsend, Ph. D., will spend the summer vacation among the Berkshire Hills, Mass.

The Rev. Wm. B. Thorn, late of Menomonee, Wis., has been transferred to the missionary district of Sacramento, and is settled as the rector of St. Mary's, Napa.

The Rev. John Totty, of St. George's chapel, Philadelphia, sailed for England June 20th.

The Rev. Burr M. Weeden has entered upon the charge of the church of the Redeemer, Watertown, N. Y.

The Rev. Elwood Worcester, D.D., Ph. D., has received the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology ad eundem, from the University of Pennsylvania.

The Rev. J. S. Wallace will spend vacation at the Hotel Lourey, Atlantic City, N. J.

The Rev. George R. Van De Water, D.D., has gone to his seaside cottage at Quogue, on the shore of Long Island.

The Rev. Samuel Ward has resigned the curacy of St. Michael's church, Germantown, Philadelphia, and accepted the rectorship of Holy Trinity, Lansdale, Pa.

The Rev. John C. H. Weills has resigned the position of chaplain of Sing Sing prison, N. Y.

The Rev. James R. Winchester, D.D., has removed from 5736 Vernon ave., to 5630 Bertram ave., St. Louis, Mo.

By an error in our last issue, it was stated that Kenyon College had conferred the honorary degree of D.D. on the Rev. A. L. Williams, coadjutor-Bishop elect of Nebraska. It should have been the Rev. Chas. D. Williams, of Cleveland.

To Correspondents

(1).—The legal Standard Bible of the American Church is an edition of the King James version, published by Eyre and Strahan, London, 1812. It was adopted by the General Convention of 1823. (2). We are not able to give any information about the Philadelphia Bible of 1789, but may do so later.

A. S. D.—The impression conveyed by the paper mentioned, as stated in your note, is undoubtedly incorrect. No such "correction" of the Gospels ever took place. The circumstances referred to involved no more than an attempt to make careful and accurate copies under competent authority.

Official

DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH

The Standing Committee organized on June 16th, with the election of the Rev. R. J. Coster, D.D., president, and the Rev. Amos Bannister, secretary. Mr. L. M. A. Haughawout was recommended to the Bishop for admission as a candidate for Holy Orders. Consent was given to the consecration of the Rev. Joseph Marshall Francis, Bishop elect of the diocese of Indiana. The request of certain parties in the diocese of West Virginia for consent to the election of a Bishop-coadjutor for that diocese was laid on the table.

AMOS BANNISTER.

Secretary.

Ordinations

At the church of the Holy Cross, New York city, on the Feast of St. John Baptist, Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, acting for the Bishop of the diocese admitted to the order of deacons, Mr. Edward A. Schleruter. The Rev. Fr. Sargent, of the Order of the Holy Cross, was the preacher.

June 22nd, in St. Simeon's memorial church, Philadelphia, by permission of Bishop Whitaker, the Rev. Edward J. Burk, rector's assistant at St. Simeon's, was advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey. The candidate was presented by his father, the Rev. Jesse Y. Burk, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. W. Herbert Burk, brother of the candidate. Mr. Burk is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, class of '95, and of the General Theological seminary, New York.

On the 1st Sunday after Trinity, in the church of the Good Shepherd, Corpus Christi, Tex., Bishop Johnston advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Samuel Thurlow who, for more than a year past, has been in charge of the missions at Rockport, Alice, and San Diego, and the Rev. E. H. J. Andrews who, for a like space of time, has had charge of the work at Runke and Boerne. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. T. Hutcheson, D. D., and the charge delivered by the rector, the Rev. A. J. Holworthy, who also presented the candidates.

Died

CARD.—May 29th, 1899, Nelson D. Card, junior warden of St. Peter's church, Bainbridge, N. Y.

HOLST.—At residence, No. 195 Union st., Memphis, Sunday, May 21st, 1899, at 1 o'clock P. M., Charles Quintard Holst, aged 36 years, son of Ellen F. and the late Julius C. Holst.

OLIVER.—On the 23d ult., the Rev. Robert W. Oliver, D. D., in his 85th year. Funeral services at the Episcopal Hospital chapel, Philadelphia. Interment at Kearney, Neb.

Obituary

CHARLES ROLLIN LARRABEE

At a late meeting of the vestry of St. James' church, Chicago, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, it has pleased Almighty God, in His wise providence, to take unto himself our friend and brother, Charles R. Larrabee; be it

Resolved: By the rector, wardens, and vestrymen of St. James' church, Chicago, that there be placed on record an expression of our appreciation of the long and faithful services rendered to this parish by Mr. Larrabee. For upwards of half a century he was a constant worshiper in St. James' church, and for a great part of that time served as vestryman and churchwarden. His demeanor, experience, and wisdom made him an efficient servant of the Church, while his beautiful character and consistent Christianity endeared him to the hearts of all our people. In him the several rectors of St. James' found a helper ever faithful, loyal, and devoted, and his fellow vestrymen, a friend, one with them both in furthering the welfare of the parish he loved so unselfishly, and also in gentle, sympathetic companionship. And now that he has entered into his rest, we thank God for the gift of such a man to the Church; and to his family and household who miss and long for his loving, helpful presence, we tender our earnest sympathy. "The righteous live forevermore; their reward also is with the Lord, and the care of them is with the Most High."

Resolved: That a copy of the foregoing resolutions be sent to Mrs. Larrabee, with an assurance of our affectionate esteem, and that a copy be inserted in THE LIVING CHURCH.

JAMES S. STONE, rector.

H. A. TOWNER,

CHARLES A. STREET,

WILLIAM D. KERFOOT,

HENRY BAUSER,

J. S. COCHRAN,

E. J. GARDNER,

GEORGE MERRYWEATHER

SAM'L J. WALKER.

Dated this 12th day of June, 1899.

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

Church and Parish

WANTED.—Locum Tenens for four Sundays in July, and all of August, in one of New York city's prettiest suburbs. Use of furnished rectory given in exchange for light Sunday duties only. Address: RECTOR, care of LIVING CHURCH.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, July, 1899

- 2. 5th Sunday after Trinity.
- 9. 6th Sunday after Trinity.
- 16. 7th Sunday after Trinity.
- 23. 8th Sunday after Trinity.
- 25. ST. JAMES, Apostle.
- 30. 9th Sunday after Trinity.

Green.
Green.
Green.
Green.
Red.
Green.

When the mist creeps up the hill,
Fisher, out and try your skill;
When the mist begins to nod,
Fisher, then put up your rod.

Christian (?) Science

BY G. G. H.

Oh, "God is so good,"
If we sit down and brood.
On the goodness and "Allness," within and without us,
We need have no fear,
Our crackers and beer
Will flow from the "Allness," and goodness about us.

Of course "there's no evil,"—
God's not so unevl!
To make us imperfect and send us to thunder.
"There's nothing but love!"—
In the heavens above,
The pockets of men, and the hearts that beat under.

"There can be no trouble!"—
The body's a bubble—
It's all a "mistaken belief," and a dreaming.
God made us to fool us,
'Till some one should school us
To see what we see to be only a seeming.

"We're nothing but spirit!"—
We really don't hear it.
Or see it, or taste it, or smell it, or feel it.
"There is no sensation!"—
Except the temptation
To think what we think, when we think we can't heal it.

'Tis quite a mistaken
Idea we have taken,
That there's but one method of race propagation.
A child now to bother
About who's his father.
Shows stubborn contempt for the new revelation.

"There's nothing but mind!"—
Though created so blind,
We're all of us nursing some little "delusion";
But friends by the score
(For a dollar or more)
Will kindly remove the distressing "illusion."

With best of intention,
The Lord failed to mention—
While healing the halt and the deaf and the blind—
The trick of His healing
Was simply revealing
A "mortal deception" of "immortal mind,"

And that these signs and wonders
Arose from the blunders.
The Father had made in creating mankind;
And, until He was ready
To send Mrs. Eddy,
The world must remain to His purpose blind.

— X —

IN view of the criticisms recently published in regard to the Rev. Pelham Williams and his address on Sunday schools, before the Church Club of the diocese of Long Island, Dr. Williams has written a letter, requesting that his position be made clear. After expressing thanks for courtesies tendered by the Church Club, Dr. Williams says: "I have no desire to engage in controversy, and no wish, surely, to air unhappy notoriety, and no willingness to give offence. Possibly this is due to me; viz., that it should be stated, very clearly, that I was invited for one purpose—to promote discussion by presenting the other side; that is to say, the unpopular side. I was asked to be the guest of the Club. One plain duty was before me. I was summoned to serve as the dull background which might reveal the more the brilliant arguments in favor of Sunday schools. With all kindness of heart, I was ready to serve as the target and to leave the advocates of the system quite in possession of their ground. Somehow it seems to be felt that I was chosen by mistake or by audacity, and that my coming was an intrusive discomfort. For this I am very sorry. If the times should soon come when this explanation can be suitably offered it might relieve me in a measure of this later obloquy."

— X —

Pen-and-Ink-lings

THE American Church S. S. Magazine is "glad to note that the ridiculous ceremony of 'christening' was omitted at the launching of the 'Oceanic,' the longest and heaviest vessel that has ever been built." Her extreme length is 705 feet, and she will cost more than £900,000. Besides considerable cargo, she will be capable of carrying 350 first-class, 149 second-class, and 1,000 third-class, passengers, in addition to her crew of 349.

AN English paper says that there was once in one of the great universities a mathematical tutor who boasted that he neither knew nor cared to know anything about poetry. It was all, he said, "a lot of unpractical rot." He had a friend, a brother-tutor in literature, who was very anxious to convert him to a liking for poetry. This friend thought he would begin with a poem which everybody must like, and gave the mathematician Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade" to read. The mathematician took it up and read thus:

"Half a league, half a league, half a league onward." Then he banged the book down on the table. "Bah!" he snorted, "if the fool meant a league and a half, why on earth didn't he say so?" The man of letters gave up the attempt to convert his friend to a liking for poetry.

NEARLY everybody has his "double," but that fact does not make people in general, and policemen in particular, less confident in swearing to identity. Dr. Thornton, the Anglican Bishop of Ballarat, was recently summoned and fined for an alleged furious driving over a street crossing in his cathedral city. The accusation was very improbable on the face of it, and it was protested on the Bishop's behalf that he was ill in bed at the time the constable saw him galloping over the crossing. The Bishop and his wife have now made a statutory declaration that his lordship never left his house on the day in question, while the constable at whose instance the Bishop was summoned, has responded with statements by two other constables and a leading merchant corroborating his testimony. It is altogether a very curious and instructive conflict of evidence.—London Daily Chronicle.

IT is interesting to learn from Harper's Magazine that the Koreans who have generally been regarded an ignorant people, have in fact, shown considerable enterprise in the line of inventions, they having been first in inventing the iron-clad battleships, movable type, the twisted cable, the bomb and mortar, and the suspension bridge. They, singularly, failed, however, to profit by their own ingenuity, or to let the world do so, except in one instance, for they used the invention merely for the immediate need which suggested it, and then let it fall into disuse. It would seem to indicate a lack of foresight and breadth of view, while encouraging one to believe them possessed of resources which only require development and cultivation in order to make them a progressive people.

KOREAN genius is also exhibited in the invention of a pure phonetic alphabet, not the first, but, nevertheless, entirely original. It was formed early in the fifteenth century. The only model available was in Tibetan books brought from China. This made the consonant the foundation of the language, and the vowel simply a bridge to span the interval between consonants. The Korean scholar, Song Sam-mun, recognizing this as an error, as the vowel is the basis of all articulate speech, divided the symbols into two classes—"mother" and "child,"—the vowel being the mother, the consonant, the child. This was not only absolutely original with him, but absolutely scientific, also.

THE Tibetan furnished the basis for the Korean consonants,—not the finished Tibetan of to-day, but the singular characters found in the Tibetan Buddhist books of Korea. For the vowels, they turned to the ancient seal character of China, and from its simplest radicals picked out six, which became the Korean vowels. The combination of the letters in the syllable was, so to speak, triangular. In simplicity, the Korean characters are unsurpassed. Tradition says that the inventor took them all from the Korean door which consists of a combination of horizontal and oblique lattice-work; and in truth this could be done.

'Twas a kind, benevolent Englishman,
Who said: "I have a most excellent plan.
I'm sure I love the Americans well,
But you know they have never learned to spell.
So I'll load a ship with a cargo of 'u's,'
And send her over and change their views;
For the 'u' should be, as every one knows,
In 'neighbour' and 'labour,' and words like those;
And our friends must learn and never forget
The accurate use of the alphabet."
So the ship arrived with its precious freight,
To bring orthography up to date;
And the Yankees stowed the letters away
For possible use on a future day;
And lest the ship should a cargo lack,
Filled her with "h's" and sent her back.
—Boston Transcript.

A STORY, recently revived, of King Humbert of Italy, is well worth repeating: Some twenty years ago the King and Queen of Italy were driving through the streets of Naples, when a peasant sprang on the steps of the carriage and with a drawn blade in his hand, tried to stab the King. The Prime Minister who was driving with them, interposed his own body and received the knife instead. The blood from the wound saturated the dress of the Queen, and it was many years before she recovered from the shock of the day's experience. The peasant was tried, and condemned to imprisonment for life. He died at the expiration of ten years. But the peasant all this time had an old mother living at Frascati, a sad old woman, of whom the neighbors knew little, except that she lived in comfort and no little luxury for one of her position. She died the other day, and then for the first time it was discovered that for twenty years, ever since her son had tried to kill his king, this old mother had been cared for by the King himself,* supported out of his own privy purse, no one, excepting the controller in charge of it, knowing a word of the matter. Magnanimity certainly has seldom been carried so far.

—X—

Notes From "Eaglesnest"

1.

VACATION DAYS have come, and the voice of rejoicing children is heard in the land! Those of older growth, too, are glad, for they will have an outing of some kind in July or August, and they will enjoy it in anticipation, be it ever so brief. The tide of summer travel and recreation rises higher and flows farther every year. It is not confined to the wealthy and pleasure-seeking, to people of "elegant leisure." It bears on its wave all classes and conditions who are not bound by hard conditions of poverty or duty. The summer vacation, greater or less, has come to be a necessity for all who are engaged in strenuous work.

But it is a medicine which must be taken "with a difference." One man's meat, in this case, may be another man's poison. One should carefully consider how he may do the best for himself and his family (if he has one) in the two weeks' or two months' vacation. Shall it be spent in the woods or on the water; in the sanitarium or on the sea-shore; in travel or repose, or with a moiety of each? It is not well to do the same thing every summer; to go to the same place, meet the same people, live in the same way. If one has a cottage by "the beached margent of the sea," he needs occasionally to go to the mountains, to cross the ocean, to sail the great lakes; or in some other way to vary the routine of his annual outing. Sometimes he may better stay at home for a summer, and go westward in winter to visit "our Italy" and our wonderful new islands beyond.

For my part, I like the great lakes, the deep blue seas of pure water, brooded over by skies as blue and air as pure. There one may have action or rest, as he prefers; solitude or society; a lodge in the wilderness of pine-shadowed shores, or a lodge in a summer hotel with the madding crowd. When I was younger, I loved most to cruise for a few weeks, with a small party, on a small sea-going vessel; sailing hundreds of miles, by day and night, finding the way by chart and compass, and often fighting for the right of way with wind and waves. But it was hard, all-night work, sometimes, and I came back tired. To younger men I now resign the wheel of the "Argo," the binnacle, the fog-horn, and the signal code, while I take my ease in my own inn under the pine trees by the shore of Old Mission harbor, in Grand Traverse Bay.

We call our cottage "The Eaglesnest" (or rather, I call it so; my wife objects, because we are not eagles!), for we had a real eagle's nest and two live eagles in our forest, when we bought the land, some fifteen years ago. The nest was near the top of the highest old hemlock on the tract, made of great sticks laid across the outspreading branches, as large as an ordinary dining table, and apparently as flat. We saw one of the eagles on the nest one day; and frequently they were both soaring in sight—graceful, powerful, silent masters of the world of wings. But the eagles did not stay with us long. Some bad boys climbed the tree and tore down the nest, and the big birds disappeared. Small birds, however, are more numerous than in former years. We are near the end of a peninsula twenty miles long and very narrow, and I fancy the birds do not like to come so far from the main land. Some are learning that it is a good place for summer vacation, and even the home-loving robin is finding his way out here. I heard one singing his evensong last night, when it was almost dark. He was hidden in the dense foliage of a great pine, but out of the gloom he poured from his full heart a melody almost as tuneful as that of the mocking-birds I have heard by moonlight in the South. It was not so varied and sustained, but it voiced the love of God as sweetly.

C. W. L.

—X—

Our National Hymns

IT is probably true that very few have any definite knowledge in regard to the origin of these spirited and soul-stirring melodies. "The Star-Spangled Banner" naturally stands first, since it embalms in song reverence for the national flag, that glorified emblem of our great Republic. No doubt a majority of native Americans, including a large proportion of the school children, could be depended upon to give off hand the name of the man who wrote these imperishable lines, although they might not be so certain of the attendant circumstances.

Francis Scott Key whose name will live forever as the author of this hymn which appeals so strongly to our patriotic impulses, was a Marylander, born in 1779. Possessing more than ordinary native talent, he obtained a fine education, studied law, and in due time became district attorney of the District of Columbia. In 1814, after the destruction of Washington by the British forces, Mr. Key was sent, with another commissioner, to the English fleet lying off Fort McHenry, to arrange for the exchange of certain prisoners. The English had planned the bombardment of McHenry as a menace to Baltimore, and, knowing that Key had observed their preparations, they refused to permit him or his companion to land. They were, therefore, involuntary spectators of the bombardment which occurred that night, Sept. 12th, 1814, and anxiously watched the flag on Fort McHenry through the glare of the bursting shells. Toward morning the firing ceased, and they were greatly distressed until "by the dawn's early light" they could see that "the flag was still there." These were the stirring conditions under which "The Star-Spangled Banner" was written, and just eight days after the battle the words were printed in The Baltimore American, bearing as a caption, "The Defence of Fort McHenry." The music to which the words were subsequently wedded, is generally ascribed to Charles Durang, an actor, but it has been commonly accepted as a distinct probability that the tune was adapted by him from some foreign source. Some of the commentators are of the opinion that it was arranged from an Irish melody, the argument being based upon certain peculiarities of rhythm supposed to be identical with Celtic methods of musical expression. However this may be, it is generally conceded that the melody is dignified and most appropriate to the words, although the musical progression involves so many notes and peculiar intervals that it is somewhat difficult for the masses to sing. As a band piece, however, it develops a massive and splendid tone, and its value is sufficiently indicated by the inspiration and enthusiasm always excited when the familiar melody is heard. From the day of its birth to the present time, "The Star-Spangled Banner"—words and music—has been considered the real battle hymn of the Republic, and the patriotic anthem as well, possessing a resistless power in all gatherings of American citizens.

"Hail Columbia," although ranking far below "The Star-Spangled Banner" in dignity and consequence, is endeared to the American public by many pleasing associations. It was written by Joseph Hopkinson in 1798, and was first known as "The President's March," the custom being to play it whenever Washington entered a theatre or appeared in any public capacity. The express purpose of the hymn was the cultivation of a patriotic spirit among the people of the Republic, and there can be no doubt that it has been effective in this particular on many occasions. John Hopkinson was twenty-eight years old when he wrote this hymn, an autograph copy of which was on exhibition at the Centennial in Philadelphia, and is still preserved, no doubt, in some collection of manuscripts. The words were first set to music by a German music teacher in Philadelphia named Roth who caught the appropriate swing of a national anthem without developing any special inspiration.

The Rev. Samuel Francis Smith was the author of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," a beloved anthem full of patriotic fervor and sentiment. Mr. Smith, a native of Massachusetts, graduated from Harvard in the same class with Dr. O. W. Holmes, and wrote these words in 1835, under an impulse which enabled him to complete his work at one sitting. As he arranged the words to the air of "God save the King," which has been put to similar use in almost every country, it is likely that the hymn was written for the express purpose of utilizing that familiar and attractive melody, the origin of which is usually ascribed to Handel.

Although "Yankee Doodle" has no place among the dignified patriotic anthems, it is, after all, a jolly, patriotic air which has served its purpose on many occasions, and will always be regarded as typical of a certain Yankee abandon. But neither the words nor the music can be claimed as American products. The words date back beyond the days of Queen Anne, and the tune is still older. "In the wars of the Roundheads," says Commodore Preble, in his book on the "Flag of the United States," "Yankee Doodle" was an epithet applied in derision to Cromwell." Professor Rimbault, a prominent London physician, wrote under this title the song directed at Cromwell. Dr. Schuchburg introduced the song into this country in 1775, when it was made use of in contempt and derision of the ragged and badly equipped colonial soldiers. But the royalists were again hoist by their own petard! At Concord and Lexington, when the British bravely advanced to the conflict, they marched to the strains of "God Save the King," but, broken and defeated, the continental musicians watched their retreat with great enthusiasm, and struck up "Yankee Doodle" as an echo of that derision to which they had often been compelled to submit. From that day, this jingle, borrowed from the enemy, was adopted into our song literature, and presumably nearly all American citizens of the present day imagine that both words and music originated in this country.

The Civil War excited great activity among the song writers, and the product was enormous. One large volume contains several hundred of these war songs, many of them beautiful and sentimental and stirring in melody, but of such a character that they were for the most part ephemeral. Nothing was developed to add to our short list of national hymns, although several melodies were produced which, irrespective of the words joined to them, have been adopted as permanent additions to our martial music. The most conspicuous of these songs that still live are, "The Battle Cry of Freedom," by Dr. George F. Root who passed away two or three years ago, full of years and honors, and "Marching Through Georgia," by Henry C. Work.

In view of a reunited country, the words of these songs need no longer be considered, although they were vital enough at one time, but the stirring rhythms and striking melodies of these compositions are immensely popular. Therefore bands play these war-time measures not to revive old animosities or recall the strife of other days, but because they are brilliant and popular. To the veterans of '65, "Marching Through Georgia" means more than that, since the strains are accompanied by tender memories of comrades fallen by the wayside; but even this sorrow is lacking the old-time bitterness.

Whatever the future holds in store of great and glorious music, it is impossible to believe that "The Star-Spangled Banner" will ever be relegated to second place in the affection of the people of these United States. We have a national hymn historic in value, and need not look for another.—L. B. G. in The Times Herald.

Book Reviews and Notices

The Teacher's Prayer Book. According to the Use of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America. By the Rt. Rev. Alfred Barry, D. D., D. C. L. With Introduction by the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D., LL. D., D. C. L.

This work is very well done, and is calculated to be of great use to both teachers and scholars. Nevertheless, we think Bishop Barry would have done wisely to entrust the adaptation of his book to the American Prayer Book to some competent American scholar. A number of oversights, or even positive misstatements, might thus have been avoided. The plan of the work includes a general introduction and special introductions to each service, while explanatory notes are given on alternate pages, opposite the text of the Prayer Book itself. The general introduction gives in concise, and generally accurate, form a history of the Prayer Book, its sources and revisions, down to the American revision of 1892. We do not think it is correct, however, to say that St. Augustine, "by the wise counsel of his superior, Gregory the Great, refrained from rigidly enforcing ritual uniformity within the sphere of his own influence." There is no reason whatever for supposing that the missionary would have proposed to the heathen Angles and Jutes whom he converted to the Faith, and who alone came under the "sphere of his influence," a choice between several rituals. Nor did St. Gregory advise anything of the kind. The names of the several Latin service books from which the Prayer Book was derived, are correctly given, but we think it would have been useful to point out the precise limits of each of these elements in the present American Book. Without going into too minute detail, we should like to know why the First Book of Edward is thought to be "a reformed Sarum Use." Turning over the pages of the book, we note a slip on p. vii., where it is said that one of the twenty selections of Psalms may "at any time" be substituted for the Psalms of the Day. The rubric states very clearly that this cannot be done when the Psalms are "Proper." In the notes on the Morning Prayer, there is much excellent instruction, though the divisions are not precisely the historical or scientific ones. The same is true of the Evening Prayer. There is an occasional infelicity of expression, as when, on p. 16, the unwary reader is given to understand that the first part of the Evening Office is modeled on that of the Morning, "except that the Ventil is omitted before the Psalms." It seems somewhat strange to speak of the Ventil as "omitted" in a place where it never occurred. The introduction to the "Holy Communion service" gives a condensed account of the Eucharistic worship of the Primitive Church, and is, on the whole, as accurate as could be expected. But it is hardly excusable to jumble together, as is done on p. 220 d, the Mass of the Catechumens and the Offertory under the one head of "The Preparatory Part of the Service." With the dismissal of the catechumens, the preparatory part ends, and the Offertory is the beginning of the action. After the same analogy, it is stated on p. 228, that with "the Church Militant Prayer, ends the Introductory or Ante-Communion service." This is true, so far as the English service is concerned, but it is not true of the American, as the rubric at the end clearly shows. This is one of the points in which our use distinctly differs from the English. We have returned to the primitive division, and this should have been noted. But Bishop Barry has first adjusted the parts of the primitive liturgy so as to bring it into accord with modern English usage, and then has proceeded to treat the American order as if it were the same with the English.

On p. 220 k, the assertion is made that "the most ancient name, the Holy Eucharist, is not found expressly in the Prayer Book." This, again, is true of the English Book, but in our own, it is found in the last rubrics of the Institution Office. We have marked, in like manner, a number of places where questionable statements are made, but space is lacking to specify them all. While we agree with Bishop Potter that, at least for the most part, the author has not allowed his special views to "color or warp what he has written," we do not think he has altogether avoided this danger. At p. 220 g, the "Declaration on Kneeling," added by royal authority, is described, and the crucial words are quoted, with the statement that they were "aimed distinctly at the doctrine of Transubstantiation, and the practical inference of adoration closely connected with it." But adoration is equally an inference from the doctrine of Consubstantiation, which the Archbishop of Canterbury has recently declared to be admissible in the Anglican Church, and from any doctrine of a Real and Objective Presence. It is obvious that the "Declaration on Kneeling" equally condemned them all; that is, in its earliest form in which any "Real and Essential Presence" was denied.

But what we are chiefly inclined to fault at this point, is the fact that on the next page, where the re-insertion of a similar declaration in 1662 is mentioned, the author simply says that there was a "significant change," but does not say what the change was, or of what it was significant. It would have taken but a line to state that the expression, "Corporal Presence," was substituted for "Real and Essential Presence," and that the significance was, as Cardwell says, that the Church could not be brought to deny the Real Presence. A similar indication of the author's position is seen in the remark on p. 236, that the expression, "creatures of bread and wine," indirectly repudiates the theory of Transubstantiation and cognate theories." He has forgotten that he had said, in the preceding paragraph, that the consecration, according to the American form, is not complete till after the Invocation. We do not accept this dictum, but, if it is true, then it cannot be true that the words, "creatures of bread and wine," have any bearing upon the doctrine in question, or its "cognates"—whatever they are. Though it be true that these words occur, as we hold, after the consecration is complete, they are no more a "repudiation" of any particular theory, than the expressions at the close of the Roman canon, in which the consecrated gifts are spoken of as God's creations. The Roman Mass, in fact, is as guiltless of the doctrine of Transubstantiation, or of any particular mode of Presence, as our own. In connection with this same subject, we may draw attention to an observation on p. 237, where it is said that "the provision for reverent consumption after the service, is significant of the sacredness attaching to that which has been consecrated 'according to Christ's Holy Institution'." Beyond this, its significance cannot be pressed." We do not know precisely what is to be understood by this last assertion. Is it that the effect of consecration has been withdrawn? Meritorious as this book is in many respects, and full of important information well expressed, we should yet desire to see it thoroughly revised in another edition. It is enough to say that it well deserves to be made as perfect as possible.

The History of the Reformation of Religion Within the Realm of Scotland. Written by John Knox. Edited for Popular Use by C. J. Guthrie, Q. C. With Notes, Summary, Glossary, Index, and Fifty-six Illustrations. London: Adam and Charles Black. 1898.

To read this history gives one a considerable insight into the character of the author whom most of us know only as he is depicted by historians who have a purpose to serve. We confess that we are more interested in the self-revelation of the author than we are in the details of his narrative, for the latter are familiar to all students of Scottish history. As a writer, John Knox was terse, vivid, and powerful, portraying events in few words, but with a strong grasp of the essential facts, and a keen appreciation of their purport. He had a homely, vigorous wit, which relieves his strenuous style, and illumines it with many a humorous sally. He did not mince his words, and his intense partisanship allowed him to see no virtue or goodness in his opponents. To him a Papist was the worst sort of knave. No wonder Thomas Carlyle admired him, a man after his own heart. But the history as written by Knox, is full of life and motion, worth any dozen of later narratives founded upon dry research into old documents, not perhaps, for its accuracy, but for its author's active sympathy with men and events. We are transported backward into the stormy days of Mary Stuart, and the turbulent social and religious life of Scotland, and we live in the very midst of it all, with one of the chief actors in that tragedy of life, and thus it is all intensely real. But what an escape the Church of England had when John Knox declined the bishopric of Rochester!

The book is well edited, with many excellent helpful notes, and good illustrations, and the summary and glossary of Scotch words add much to its value and usefulness.

The College Warden. By Henry A. Fairbairn, M. A., M. D. New York: Thomas Whittaker. Illustrated. Cloth: pp. 154. Price, $1.

The volume is a worthy tribute to the life and work of a sterling, enterprising Churchman and Church educator in an age that is now passing. Robert Brinkerhoff Fairbairn, the warden of St. Stephen's College, Annandale, has left the impress of a noble and brave life upon the quality of brain and heart of many a man serving in the sacred ministry of the Church to-day. The unpretentious work before us gives in simple style glimpses of Fairbairn's boyhood in New York city; in the odd little suburban college of Bristol, Pa., on the banks of the Delaware, a building which still stands as then, but no longer in its original use. Next we are given to see him as clergyman and parish priest, as school teacher, missionary, and chaplain of the 28th Regiment, N. Y. Then, as professor in the institution founded as a training school of liberal education for young men looking towards the Church's ministry, and in need of such preparatory tuition. The section on the Warden in his religious and educational views is replete with interest for all thoughtful readers; while the several sections following, which have regard to Fairbairn's position in his community at Annandale, and as companion and pastor, as author and scholar, and the three closing years of partial retirement in that singularly useful and well-spent life of devotion in his school of the prophets, will afford contemplations of absorbing interest to all Churchmen. The work of this volume, and its unique worth, are well completed by the closing pages which are occupied with the sermon preached by the Rev. Geo. B. Hopson, D. D., acting-warden, in the chapel of St. Stephen's on last Septuagesima.

Exposition of Christian Doctrine. By a Seminary Professor. Intermediate Course—Part II. Moral. Authorized English Version. Philadelphia: John Joseph McVey. 1899. Price, $2.25 net.

This is one of the manuals of instruction employed by the Christian Brothers, a well-known Roman Catholic teaching order. It is published with the approbation of the Bishops of Maurienne and Tarentaise, France. It has its merits, the chief of which is a definiteness and lucidity of statement as regards principles of moral science, and very useful summaries and analyses at the end of each chapter. The method pursued is that which is common to Roman schools, especially those under Jesuit influence. But the examination of such a book leads us to regret that our own schools are not supplied with manuals of moral theology and practice of similar excellence, and we wonder how much longer the want will remain unheeded, when it is so plain and persistent.

A Soul's Pilgrimage. Being the personal and religious experiences of Charles F. B. Miel, D. D. Philadelphia: George W. Jacobs & Co.

Dr. Miel consented to write these memoirs of his own life at the request of many friends. He is a priest of the Church, and his pilgrimage commenced in the Church of Rome in which he was brought up and ordained to the priesthood. The story of his experiences is one of great interest. To those of our people, priests and laity, who have such a deep affection for the Church of Rome, this book is commended as an antidote to any Romeward tendencies. Mr. Miel does not rail against the Church, but tells the story of his life in a simple, straightforward way, regretting, rather than otherwise, that he is compelled to expose the Church of his fathers in its true colors.

Heart of Man. By Geo. Edward Woodberry. New York and London: Macmillan Company. Price, $1.50.

This is the rather far-fetched title of a sheaf of well-written essays a la Pater. The idea of the author is to illustrate how poetry, politics, and religion are "the flowering of the same human spirit, and have their roots deep in the common heart of man." The author is a devout and serious man, with a superior style, and the volume is stored with fine thoughts. How true this specimen is: "How often at the master-stroke of life has some text of Holy Scripture which lay in the mind from childhood almost like the debris of memory, illuminated the remorseful darkness of the mind, or interpreted the sweetness of God's sunshine in the happy heart."

"BOOKS I HAVE READ," is the title of a unique volume published by Dodd, Mead & Co., New York, designed as a record book for the reader who wishes to make notes for future interest and convenience. There are printed headings on each alternate page, under which may be entered title, author, publisher, page, references, etc. The opposite page is left blank for comment and quotations. An alphabetical index is provided. The book will doubtless prove a convenience and help, especially to young readers. There are 222 record pages Price, $1.25.

Periodicals

The Fortnightly Review for June contains a notable article on "The Declaration of Paris," by J. G. Butcher, M. P., which is very opportune, in view of the deliberations of the Peace Conference at the Hague. There is an interesting paper on "Russia's Great Naval Enterprise," the canal connecting the Baltic with the Black Sea. The marvelous development of Egypt under English rule and administration is the subject of an article on "Egypt after Omdurman," by J. Lowry Whittle. Another timely and valuable article is that on "The Transvaal Crisis; a Voice from the Rand," by Uitlander, who demands a firm policy on the part of England if she does not wish to lose her hold altogether upon South Africa.

The Nineteenth Century for June opens with a rather sad article, "The Cry of the Villages," by the Rev. Dr. Jessopp. We fear there is no remedy for the decay of village life. The great cities and every great thing of our times tend to become greater, and joyous rural simplicity is only a fancied condition for wealthy folk in vacation time. Dr. Arabella Kenealy returns to the charge, in "Woman as an Athlete; a Rejoinder," but cui bono? If woman wants to be athletic, she will any way, and argument is a waste of brains and ink. She is everything else, and why not an athlete? The article on "Beneficent Germs," by Dr. Henry S. Gabbett, is good. Ecclesiastical matters receive attention in two articles: "Erastianism," by the Rev. J. Llewelyn Davies, and "The Falling off in the Quantity and Quality of the Clergy," by the Rev. Anthony C. Deane, who argues that if you want a good class of clergy you must pay them a living stipend, which is true.

Opinions of the Press

The Outlook

THE NATIONAL DUTY.—It is the duty of the American people, if they wish to be true to the principles of the Declaration of Independence, to establish, wherever they have the authority, government for the benefit of the governed; so to administer that government as to secure to the people under it the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; wherever government has become destructive of these ends, to alter or abolish it; and, wherever they either frame a new government or administer it when it is already framed, to do so on such principles and in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect the "safety and happiness" of the people. Self-government is one means to this end—to be used when it will accomplish this end; not to be used when it is destructive thereof.

The Guardian

THE ENGLISH CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.—We have in the Prayer Book a variety of directions, some of which are exceedingly obscure, while the most recent is more than three centuries old. The natural procedure would be for the Church to replace them by plain and unmistakable rubrics adapted to present use. But to do this would be to give a decided victory to one or the other party in the Church, or to set up a compromise equally distasteful to both. On the other hand, the logical solution—a revised Prayer Book—would almost certainly mean disruption, and so long as the Church remains established, no measure carrying with it this tremendous possibility is likely to be attempted. Consequently, any alteration of the Prayer Book being out of the question, we are thrown back upon a just and liberal interpretation of the Prayer Book by competent courts. Those blessings can only be reached through the establishment of courts which the High Church clergy will recognize as deriving spiritual jurisdiction from the Church, as well as coercive authority from the State.

N. Y. Evening Post

HEROES IN FRANCE.—Now that the Dreyfus battle has been fought through, and we all complacently feel ourselves victors, we should not forget those heroic men who in France flung themselves without apparent hope against the fury of a maddened nation. First among those we should place Col. Picquart who, from the very ranks of the army, in the name of which such crimes had been committed, rose up to confront and expose forgers and lawless officials. From him the impulse passed to M. Scheurer-Kestner, president of the Senate, who became convinced that a terrible error had been made, and did all he could, first to clear himself from all complicity in it, and then to have it undone. But it took a sterner and more audacious challenge than his to really rouse the country, and this was blown on Zola's horn. His bold attack upon those guilty of a monstrous injustice, must, in all fair minds, suffice to cover a multitude of novels. It was not long before men of light and leading—like M. Pressensac, of the Temps, and Prof. Seignobos—came rallying in great numbers to the cause. It was then only a question of time when it should be triumphant. But we who see the satisfying end of the long struggle should not withhold our tribute from those who entered upon it with no reasonable prospect but scorn and failure.

Harper's Weekly

THE LIQUOR EVIL.—There is a movement in France, which promises to become vigorous, against alcoholism, and it presents some interesting material for reflection to our own fellow-citizens who are engaged in the effort to solve the liquor evil. France is becoming, if it has not already become, the hardest drinking nation in the world. Why this is so, Frenchmen find it difficult to say, but they freely admit the terrible consequences which have followed from the increased consumption of spirituous liquors—consequences which have been a veritable curse. Not to go minutely into details, this abstinence-drinking people are losing physical, mental, and moral virtues which they once possessed, and are bringing into the world not only fewer children, but smaller children, and children deformed and crippled in both mind and body. The extent of the evil is so great that an anti-alcoholic convention has been recently held at Paris, and the most serious newspapers of the city have devoted many columns to the discussion of the problem. What ought to be chiefly interesting to some of our American philanthropists who are seeking to solve the problem—a task at which prohibitory legislation has evidently failed—is the fact that the French possess and practice naturally, by inheritance, many of the remedies which are suggested here as possible cures for drunkenness. They are drinkers of light wines. Indeed, wine is their native beverage, and there is not a peasant in the vine-growing districts of the country who does not cultivate the grape for the wine which it will produce, and which is as essential a household supply as is the winter's store of pork to many American farmers and working men. It is clear that wine drinking makes the step of spirit-drinking an easy one to the person whose tendency is toward overstimulation. Again, the Frenchman never lacks opportunities for amusement. He is not driven to the cabaret or the buvette, as we say in New York, for example, that the American workingman is driven to the saloon. The Frenchman has better opportunities, and he improves them fully. All these things being so, no remedy for the evil which is afflicting the country is thought of except total abstinence. And this is what the drunkard must make up his mind to, wherever he exists. The man who loves to drink for the drunkenness that follows, must submit to a war between his tastes and his will, and he can only be saved by the victory of his will. Diverting amusement may console him, but he must win his fight alone, suffering much pain in the process. Neither the law nor dominoes can cure him.

The Household

Church Attendance

BY THE REV. WILLIAM C. SHEPPARD

St. Paul came back to earth one day;
'Twas Sunday, and he made his way
Up to some house of God, altho'
'Twas ninety in the shade or so.

Another Sunday St. John came;
A rainy day, but just the same,
Within God's house he bent the knee
To Him who ruleth land and sea.

St. Peter visited our sphere
A certain Lord's Day, and, how queer!
Instead of reading Sunday's sheet,
He went to Church his Lord to meet.

What cranks these men, how foolish they;
And doubly foolish you will say
When I relate—who will believe?—
They went to church both morn and eve!

I thought that I was done, but no;
Another Sunday guest, and lo!
'Tis Judas who remains away
From God's abode the livelong day.

Cleveland, Ohio.

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XIX.

CAPTAIN MCKAYE, too, was again back in the familiar valley, and had already done many kindnesses for his old neighbors. There was a design on foot to re-establish a garrison at the fort where he had so long held command under King George, and he who knew the ground so well was sent to report upon the plan.

It was but the evening after Mr. Underhill's return, that Evelyn, going to fetch another-taper from the kitchen, where there was now no Letty, was followed by the captain. "Do you remember," he asked, "our talk on the bleach-ground on the day of my first departure? You would not then bid me farewell, but your present kindness, and your uncle's trust, give me new courage to say what I have long waited to speak."

"I have learned something since those days, mayhap, when I was a conceited maiden enough, and you have done much for us all." The girl's voice faltered, and her eyes fell before the clear, brown ones of the officer. He was looking at her with his whole manly soul speaking in his face.

Vexed at herself for her own confusion, Evelyn drew a quick breath, which accidentally extinguished the candle she carried. The captain, in the fire-lighted room, might easily have possessed himself of the one little hand; nay, such a gallant as Dalton would surely have tried to encircle Evelyn's waist, but honest McKaye, true gentleman as he was, made no step nearer. "Tell me," he said hoarsely, "care you still for him—for Master Griffith?"

Shielded, and yet chaperoned by the flickering light which leaped upward from the logs, Evelyn answered decidedly, "No, I care not. I think I never cared as woman does. 'Twas but the passing fancy of a silly girl."

"Thank God!" exclaimed the captain, involuntarily, and then he added: "I crave your pardon, but he was not worthy of you."

A moment's silence. Evelyn nervously fingered the tinder-box which she had needlessly sought on the high shelf. Then the captain said, in tones which trampled strangely for one who had seen service under fire ever since a lad in the French wars, "I cannot but ask now the question which you would not hear before at parting. Is there then a glint of hope for me? I know 'tis not a lover-like wooing. I know my speech is cold and faltering; but could you see my heart—"

He broke off, and bent his head almost as if to ward off a blow.

"Captain," said Evelyn, almost passionately, though she laid her hand gently on his shoulder, "I would to God there were, but there is not. Nay, it is not for your principles. It could be no otherwise were you King George's foremost friend."

The captain raised his head, and the fire-light, leaping up, fell across his face. It was changed and pallid. He had received the expected blow.

In silence he took the candle from the girl's unsteady hands, and lighted it at the hearth. The tears were welling to Evelyn's eyes, but she could not utter one of the words of sympathy which should have sprung to her lips.

The news of the terrible calamities to the southward aroused the people of Tryon county to the highest pitch of fury against the Tories. Mr. Underhill found his position, dangerous before, now almost insupportable. His efforts to stem the bloody tide in those devoted regions having proved fruitless, naturally recoiled to his prejudice, and he was regarded almost as the instigator of these outrages. If it had not been for the protection afforded by McKaye who was now busy with the defences of Fort Hunter, the situation of the clergyman's family would have been still more intolerable. It counted for nothing with their neighbors that Alan was at this very time with General Sullivan in his work of punishing the Indians for their late atrocities. But with Evelyn the thought of Alan engaged in this expedition against these people, Waharie's brethren, lingered, and again her heart hardened against him.

But the next news which followed was from Alan's own colonel, telling of a serious breast wound which the young man had received from a poisoned arrow. Then it seemed as though the same barb had touched the young girl's being. She wandered restlessly about the house, unable to find consolation in her ordinary duties, or furtively watched Margaret as the two sat over their needlework, both seeing, perhaps, the same vision of a cheerless camp, in which Alan lay ill and suffering.

But Margaret, too, on her part was watching. She saw the anxiety which was daily leaving its mark on the beauty of the girl, and guessed that the trouble was all the deeper because it was dumb. At last it came in the older woman's way to have a word alone with Captain McKaye.

"I speak to you," she said, while McKaye listened, wondering, "because I believe you are of stainless honor, and because you have long known those on whose behalf I crave your service. Nay, do not protest against my estimation of yourself, which is that of all the household. It is of Evelyn and of Alan Underhill I have a word to say."

The captain started slightly, but inclined his head to her statement.

"I have learned," continued Margaret, "that these two are truest lovers, and have been so since childhood. A girl's foolish fancy separated them for a time, and then this terrible cloud of war, which shadows even the nearest hearts with mutual distrust. But now it is I who am another obstacle."

"You?" inquired the captain, raising his sad eyes in astonishment.

"Yes, my brother, dying, has commended me to Alan's care and love. I know not how he has regarded the fulfillment of that pledge, save that he has never compromised his honor by token of affection, aught than brotherly. But his family, Evelyn, have misunderstood. It is part of the wretched cloud which has grown between them since this war, that their hearts have not been more open to each other. But for myself, no true woman could longer accept my position; it has become intolerable." Her eyes flashed as she met those of the captain, and she continued: "You must tell him of the mistake to which he is so blind, which stands between him and his love. You may speak it from me; I cannot, must not, for myself." Her white fingers closed upon themselves convulsively, and a strange agitation trembled in her voice. McKaye knew as he acceded to her bidding that her part in this strange coil was not less hard than his.

Captain McKaye was busy enough in these days, in establishing a garrison at the fort, watching against surprise from the east, where Brant was ravaging the counties of the Hudson, or from the west, where the Onondagas were rising to avenge their kindred whom Sullivan had punished. Nevertheless he found time for a private word with Alan, when the latter was so far recovered as to be sent home invalided, before he had reached the end of his journey at Schenectady.

Alan hardly looked like a happy lover receiving joyous tidings of his lady. He was pale and emaciated almost beyond recognition, and his old vigor of speech and quaintness of humor were lacking. He had indeed seen sights which age a man, all the faster perhaps when he looks upon them in the emotion-tide of youth. It is true that his eyes brightened at the message from Margaret, but he only said: "I must see for myself; I must judge for myself. No man can take such matters at second-hand." And the captain acquiesced.

But in spite of his reserve of speech, Underhill was deeply stirred. The questionings of the past year came back upon him with redoubled force. Had Margaret thought, as did the others, that he was tacitly pledged to her? That and that alone could make a difference in his purpose. True, his love for Evelyn had already burst its bonds in

ROYAL Baking Powder

Made from pure
cream of tartar.

Safeguards the food
against alum.

Alum baking powders are the greatest
menacers to health of the present day.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

speech, but he believed that the girl herself had not yet been won, perhaps could never be. At any rate, he must satisfy himself that he was free to woo.

But Margaret, as has been intimated, was a clever woman, and Alan found her entirely mistress of the situation, as far as he was concerned. She stopped him when he made some blundering attempt to find out how far the misconception of her people and of his, coupled with his own reserve, had committed him. "I have the greatest affection for you, my brother and friend, as I shall always think of you," she said, "but this misunderstanding of our relations must cease, or I shall be obliged to separate myself from those I hold so dear."

It was a tender threat, entirely vague as to her own feelings, but there was no doubt of its finality, and Alan knew now that he was free to woo, if not to win. It was a certainty which went far to rekindle the light of his eyes, and to knit up his enfeebled limbs to new strength.

It was just at this very time that there came sad tidings from across the sea, news of the death of Griffith's unknown wife the Lady Mary, and of his little son, with the one dread malady, diphtheria. Griffith himself wrote in broken-hearted sorrow, but there was a ring of true manhood both in his grief and in his acceptance of it, which went more to his father's heart than had any word of his for years.

God is just, he wrote, and I had little right to hope for comfort in my home, which was founded in disloyalty. Until that Blessed Day comes when I shall be reunited with my dear one, what care I for the earthly Ease and Honor for which I was once willing to sacrifice most sacred duties? I have given up my appointment here, and shall return to my native land. Possibly I can still be of some comfort to you, my parents, in your days of darkness. Ah, could you but have seen my little Thomas, so brave, so bright, with his grandfather's noble fidelity in every line of his winsome face! I love to remember him thus and not as in those last agonized hours. I cannot think it wrong to believe that he is comforted now in his mother's arms, and I thank God that she slipped away to Him who keeps her babe, with less of suffering.

Mrs. Underhill, grieving for the grandson she had never seen, was not the only one whose tears dropped upon this letter. The sorrow of the first-born was that of all the household, and every thought spared from present needs was given to the anticipation of Griffith's home coming.

Time passed, and Griffith again wrote, proposing that he should sail for some Canadian port, where his parents might join him. Why should they longer expose themselves, he asked, to the perils of the valley?

Mr. Underhill shook his head. "The perils by the way are great," he said, "and I have yet hope of a restoration from these evil days. Margaret could not bear the journey, and Alan is not yet strong enough to be our escort." So the decision was deferred, but from that time the thoughts of the dispossessed family were directed toward Canada as their last refuge. In the meanwhile, Alan's opportunity for a certain long-desired understanding came through a strange channel.

One morning a very unaccustomed visitor rode up to the door of the Underhill's poor lodging in Schenectady. It was Katrina Myndert, and a funnier figure was perhaps never seen on horseback. Her hard-bitted steed had galloped on over rough roads without regard to headgear, mantle, or kirtle, which were all awry, and her voluminous petticoats were puffed with a license which only their exceeding weight was able to restrain. Add to this her gasping, heated, choking condition, and you have as odd a picture of a damsel in distress as ever knight-errant was called upon to succor!

"Oh, yes, I have a heart," she managed to utter. "I care not if he be Tory or English, or even the devil himself! And Dirck will never know, for he is up in the valley at Fort Schuyler. And he asks for the domine and the Juvrouw constant, and I have come, for I have a heart, oh, yes!"

Translated into intelligible language, her tale was that several Tory spies had recently been taken in the vicinity and jailed at Johnstown. One of these had escaped, though not without receiving a wound. At dusk of the day before, he had appeared at Katrina's door, and had begged her for concealment. She had recognized him at once as Captain Dalton, of Sir John's Highlanders. Finding denial impossible, he had owned the truth. He told her also that there were matters on his mind which he must communicate to Mr. Underhill and to Mistress Darcy, and begged her, as she valued salvation for herself, to deliver his message. He gave at the same time his assurance that he was a dying man, and could make no effort to escape.

Evelyn, shocked at such news of one whom she had known as the incarnation of careless gaiety, hastily prepared to follow the messenger. Alan accompanied the two, while Mr. Underhill who was ministering to some needy souls in his former cure, was to follow later.

The astonishment of the little party may be imagined when, upon arriving at the house, no trace of the dying officer could be found! And not only so, but Katrina's Sunday petticoats and best bonnet had gone with him, the debonair captain being somewhat small of stature, and Dutch women supposed not overmodest as to their length of skirt! The rage of the simple Katrina at this loss, and that of her brother's best horse, was indescribable, and we draw a veil

Result: Above are samples of "Soft Soap" or "Soap Paste" made with PEARLINE, and with two of the leading powders which are claimed to be "Same as" or "Good as" PEARLINE.

The bottle to the right contains a solid mass of pure, white "Soap Paste" or "Soft Soap," made with PEARLINE—thick enough to stand alone.

The bottle in the middle is one of "Same as" and contents is one-quarter poor, thin, mushy soap—balance (three-quarters) discolored water.

The bottle to the left is a poorer "Same as," and contains simply discolored water, with a sediment (not soapy) at bottom. The middle and left-hand bottles are fair samples of the many powders offered in place of PEARLINE. Try the experiment yourself—directions on back of each package.

Some powders are worthless, some inefficient, others dangerous. Pearline is the standard. The Millions of Packages of PEARLINE used each year proves

Pearline Best by Test

Note.

The difference in price between Pearline and the most worthless Soap Powders is nominal. A year's supply would not equal the value of one ordinary garment ruined.

For Nervous Exhaustion

there is no remedy equal to
Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

over her voluble Dutch oaths and her purple-faced fury!

Pinned to the bed where the pseudo-dying one had lain, was a bit of paper addressed to Mistress Darcy:

It grieves me to have troubled you, he wrote, but it was the only way to get rid of this puffing Dutch angel who carries more canvas than a full-rigged Sloop. I really have besides a Message for you. It is that I did Mr. Alan Underhill grave injustice, when I represented him as an incendiary and a Ladies' Gallant. My Devotion to yourself must be my plea for repeating ungenerous slanders, which I never credited. My wound may not be serious, but my Conscience is the lighter for this confession, when I recall the perfect Candor written in your eyes. "Farewell!" I can not say, even were my fate certain. Let it be au revoir, here or hereafter.

Evelyn on the homeward ride was unusually silent, and she still crumpled in her hand the little note, half-flippant, half-pathetic, of the somewhat disingenuous captain. Perhaps this fact gave Alan spur to embrace his opportunity.

(To be continued.)

JOSIAH FLYNT is authority for the statement that there are about seven thousand boys in the United States who live exclusively a "tramp" life. Every winter there are at least five hundred in New York City alone. Mr. Flynt's account of the process by which the boys become tramps is significant. Almost invariably, he says, they are enticed into this life by a man. Professional tramps have been quick to discover that it is much easier for a boy to excite sympathy than for a man to do so. They therefore systematically endeavor to entice boys to become their companions. They are always on the lookout for an opportunity of getting into conversation with a promising looking boy, whether rich or poor. They tell him interesting stories, work upon his imagination, picture the freedom of the life they lead, and finally persuade him to "try his lot on the road." Once the step is taken the life of these boys is practically a slavery. They are compelled to find meals, clothing, and lodging money for the men who have enticed them—or "jockers" as they are called. Failing to do this satisfactorily, they are subjected to all sorts of abuse—sometimes, loaned, traded, and even sold. The burden has to be borne until the boy comes to that age when he can no longer pass for a boy, or is strong enough to best his "jocker." By that time the tramp life has been so ingrained into him that his only thought is of continuing it, and of persuading some other boy to serve him. Systematic efforts like these to mislead boys call for equally systematic and determined efforts on the part of Christian men to help them to live straight.

A WESTERN paper recently invited the surviving Union and Confederate officers to give an account of the bravest act observed by each during the Civil War. Colonel Thomas W. Higginson said that, at a dinner at Beaufort, S. C., where wine flowed freely and ribald jests were bandied, Dr. Miner, a slight, boyish fellow who did not drink, was told that he could not go until he had drunk a toast, told a story, or sung a song. He replied: "I cannot sing, but I will give you a toast, although I must drink it in water. It is, 'Our Mothers.'" The men were so affected and ashamed that some took him by the hand and thanked him for displaying courage greater than that required to walk up to the mouth of a canon.

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY IZOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XII.

TONY LEARNS A SECRET

ARTHUR sat on the side fence delivering an impromptu oration on the subject of girls' clubs in general, and the S. D. S. in particular, while an admiring audience of four hung on his words with breathless interest. There was Tony Ferrall, perched up in the apple tree so that he could shake it easily, and in the grass below, Dave, Jerry, and Bobbie lay at full length.

"Girls are too silly and fussy, anyway," Art. was saying emphatically, "to keep up a club. Why, they get mad if some other girl's got on a new dress and they haven't, and they fight like cats over the craziest little things!"

"The Tabby Club spoils Mollie all right," Dave interrupted. "She used to be the truest, best girl; never cry or tattle or anything."

"Used to chum right in with us," Bobb echoed dolefully; "and to-day she called me a tiresome boy because I dropped a spider down her neck; a 'tiresome nuisance'! don't it sound just like her ladyship?"

"Yes, that's what I say," continued Arthur. "They get fussy over little things. Mollie thinks Virginia Hardy's the whole circus, and the rest of the girls are only side-shows. She says Virgine won't come to our candy pulls and pop-corn rallies because she's fastidious."

"Fastidious!" Jerry kicked up his heels like a colt, and burst into a shout of laughter. "The Fastidious Tabbies. Isn't that elegant, though?"

All but Tony joined in the merriment. His eyes looked round and solemn as he said:

"Perhaps that's why she wouldn't speak to me—too fastidious."

The other boys stopped laughing abruptly, and Dave's fist clenched.

"I wish she were a boy," he said; "we'd duck her in Black Creek and soak some of the nonsense out of her."

"Hello, Mollie," shouted Dave at sight of the sturdy little figure tramping across the lawn. "Home early, aren't you?"

She turned her head quickly at the call, and seeing the three boys, she tried to hurry on, but Art. called her back. "Wait a minute, we want to see you about something, Mollie," he said, so she came slowly towards them.

"What do you want?" she asked, giving

Something to Eat

It often happens that a baby is thought to be sick when he only needs something to eat; by something to eat we mean food that he can digest and assimilate; food that satisfies his hunger and makes him grow. Many babies take large quantities of food but get little to nourish them. Mellin's Food is digestible, entirely soluble and when mixed with fresh milk it is like mother's milk. Mellin's Food is really "something to eat."

Mellin's Food

Nothing in the way of artificial food agreed with my poor little baby and I was very much troubled about her, when at the suggestion of a friend whose babies had been raised on it, I put her on Mellin's Food. The change was magical. In 24 hours she was free from all indigestion and perfectly well in every way. In 3 days she had fattened visibly, and now, at the end of 5 weeks, she hardly looks like the poor, thin, fretful little baby I was grieving over. Mrs. Julien Gracey, Clarksville, Tenn.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.
FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

The Ideal Resting Place

Is the PENNOYER SANITARIUM, at Kenosha, Wis. Write for booklet.

Lea & Perrins' Sauce

The Original and Genuine Worcestershire.
Known the world over. Take no substitute.

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY.
We are the largest Makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELKHART HARNESS & CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS,

Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park New York.

You Can Always Rely On

Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient for curing sick headache, biliousness, constipation and derangements of digestion. It meets more wants as a family medicine than any other one remedy. Pamphlets on application.

TARRANT & CO., CHEMISTS, NEW YORK.

her cap a sharp pull over her eyes, but not before her secret had been discovered.

"What have you been crying about?" asked Dave bluntly.

"Nothing," Mollie began, and then all at once a lump came up in her throat, and she felt as if she must tell or cry, so she chose the lesser evil. "It's about Madge Ferrall," she added, and before she knew it, she had poured forth the whole story, never dreaming of the little figure in the apple tree, or of the pain she was causing Tony Ferrall.

"I said there'd be a caterwauling," Dave said grimly when she had finished.

"It's a shame," little Bobbie declared. "Madge is the nicest girl! You ought to have seen her the day I nearly cut my finger off when Tony and I were building the water mill."

Tony! At the name all the boys remembered, and of course they all immediately stared up at the tree, and so gave the whole thing away.

"Oh, I didn't know you were there, Tony," Mollie said miserably. "Don't tell Madge, please, please don't."

Tony slid to the ground, and when he replied with his ready smile, no one would have guessed how hard it was for him to keep the tears back. "Madge wouldn't care a bit about a little thing like that, only I won't tell if you don't want me to."

"What are you going to do, sis?" practical Dave asked, and at the question Mollie "fired up," as Bobbie called it.

"Do? I'm going to start a new club on my own account, and do some good with it, and have Madge belong."

"Great idea!" cried Jerry, "Tabby Club Number Two: President, Miss Gray; vice-president, Miss Ferrall; secretary, Miss Gray; treasurer, Miss Ferrall; active members, Miss Gray; passive members, Miss Ferrall; committee on—"

"Jerry Edsall, you stop your nonsense!" Mollie said severely.

"Is Nell against you, too?" and this time there was a trace of genuine anxiety in Jerry's tone.

"Half and half," Mollie replied. "Nell's between the mill-stones this time."

"Whew!" whistled Jerry. "Wait till the wheels go round."

"Where are you going, Tony?" called Arthur, as the new boy moved away from them.

"Home," Tony said uneasily. "I've a little work to do before dark."

"Tell Madge that I'll be over after school Monday, sure," Mollie told him, and he nodded brightly and passed on down the street.

"He doesn't mind," Bobbie said, looking after him thoughtfully. "If it were my sister, I'd want to smash something."

"So does he," answered Dave quietly, "inside!"

But even Dave, with all his good-natured, kindly liking for the little stranger whom the Excelsiors had received so readily, could not fully understand how Tony felt as he ran homeward that Saturday afternoon. Dave and Arthur Gray loved their sister as a jolly comrade and playmate, but Madge was all that and more, too, to Tony. In the old days when their father had been alive, and they had lived in their own home, it was always Madge who had been the ambitious one. She would study so hard so as to be able to help Tony with his lessons, and build gorgeous air castles for him. Never was a grander career planned for prince of royal blood than Madge dreamed of for Tony as they sat in the pretty sitting room, over their books after school. The little mother, as she moved to and fro with soft foot falls, preparing supper, would glance in at the two bowed heads, and smile to herself, while she listened for the merry voice at the door without, and the warning tap on the window pane, "when father came home."

And then in the midst of all the air castles and happiness, there had come one terrible night when they had watched and listened in vain, and Madge had clung closely to her mother, kissing her pale face again and again as she whispered that father would come sure. Tony crouched by the window, watching, watching for the dear tall form they were never to see come up the garden path again, and so it was Tony who saw them bringing him home—Tony who tried to keep Madge and his mother from the window, but it was no use, and so he was brought home, all crushed and mangled by the cruel wheels; and hard times began for the little family left behind.

Tony thought of all this as he hurried home to-night, with hot tears filling his eyes so that he could scarcely see the way before him, and his loyal, loving heart full of shame and sadness. "So they wouldn't have his Madge," he thought, "wouldn't have her in their old club, just because she was poor, and minded Mrs. Osborne's twins for pay. If they only could know how good she was, how mother called her the little household brownie, the good fairy who was never cross or troublesome, or too tired to mend Tony's jacket, or help the little pale-faced mother! If they only knew—" The tears were coming fast, and there was a big lump in his throat, but he had reached the bridge road, now, and far off in the gathering gloom he could see the twinkle of the light in the kitchen window of the little old green house, so he brushed away his tears on the back of his coat sleeve, and swallowed back the lump bravely. No matter how badly he felt, he must not let the dear ones at home know. Of course, as he had told Mollie, Madge had lots and lots of grit, and she would not care, but it was best not to let her know at all.

(To be continued.)

VALUE OF CREAM.

As Compared With Meat

One of the most valuable items in one's dietary is good, rich cream. The remark is frequently made that "cream is too expensive to use freely." Such people think they must have meat every day at 10 and 25 cents per pound, and do not realize that 5 cents' worth of pure cream for breakfast will do more to put on flesh than 25 or 30 cents' worth of meat.

An ideal portion of breakfast is that obtained from, say, four teaspoons of Grape-Nuts and a little pure, thick cream.

Made by the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich.

This is one of the most delicious dishes imaginable, and is served without cooking or trouble of any kind, and cannot be equalled in point of food value for the human body.

The Grape-Nuts, consisting largely of grape-sugar, have passed through processes similar to the first act of digestion, and are, therefore, most easily digested, and in combination with cream, they render the cream itself easy of digestion.

Grocers sell Grape-Nuts.

HOT-WEATHER DYSPEPSIA

Thousands Suffer From it at This Season of the Year.

Hot-weather dyspepsia may be recognized by the following symptoms: Depression of spirits, heaviness and pain in the stomach after meals, loss of flesh and appetite, no desire for food, bad taste in the mouth, especially in the morning, wind in stomach and bowels, irritable disposition, nervous weakness, weariness, costiveness, headache, palpitation, heartburn. It is a mistake to treat such troubles with "tonics," "blood purifiers," "cathartics," "pills," because the whole trouble is in the stomach. It is indigestion or dyspepsia and nothing else.

All these symptoms rapidly disappear when the stomach is relieved, strengthened, and cleansed by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They should be taken after meals and a few carried in the pocket to be used whenever any pain or distress is felt in the stomach. They are prepared only for stomach troubles.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are indorsed by such physicians as Dr. Harlandson, Dr. Jennison, and Dr. Mayer, because they contain the natural digestive acids and fruit essences which, when taken into the stomach, cause the prompt digestion of the food before it has time to ferment and sour, which is the cause of the mischief.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are pleasant to take, and unequalled for invalids, children, and every person afflicted with imperfect digestion. It is safe to say they will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, full-sized packages at 50 cents. A book on stomach troubles and thousands of testimonials sent free, by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

A HEALTHFUL DRINK FOR HOT WEATHER

This is the twenty-first season for that famous and healthful drink, Hires' Rootbeer. The campaign has opened. The war against thirst is on, and of course Hires will reign supreme in an undisputed realm of its own. In all of these years it has stood proof against imitation and counterfeit, and now in its strength of full growth rises far above any serious competition. Summer and Hires Rootbeer are associated in our mind as things inseparable. We look forward to that as a summer beverage as we look for the rising of the sun. It has been of inestimable value to thousands of people, supplying them at once with a delicious, healthful, and thirst quenching drink, occupying the same place at the family table as tea or coffee.

Its growth has been rapid and remarkable, long since reaching proportions never dreamed of by its proprietors. One of its remarkable features is its trifling cost, one package may be converted into 5 gallons of this delicious, sparkling temperance drink, containing medicinal properties of well-known virtue.

ABOUT WASHING COMPOUNDS

In calling the reader's attention to the Pearl-line advertisement on page 212 of this issue, let us quote the renowned Mrs. S. T. Rorer on the subject of Washing Compounds. The following is from Table Talk, Philadelphia, Pa.:

"The art of washing has not progressed as rapidly as other household employments, and if the introduction of a good washing powder will in any way ameliorate the conditions of our domestics and make washing a pleasure, I should be glad to see such enter every house in the land. It is a well-known fact that two table spoonsful of washing powder will do more good work in one hour than a strong woman and board in three. Many housekeepers object to these 'quiet workers,' on the plea that they rot the clothing. This is, of course, not true, unless you purchase cheap powders, and even then I doubt if the 'everlasting' rubbing, which one can hear to the very top of the house, does not do by far greater injury."

Finance and Commerce

THE most noticeable if not the most important event of the past week, was the exportation of four million dollars in Gold. This brings the exports of the last three weeks up to nearly 13 millions.

There are noticeable efforts in the press to explain away these exports of gold, by saying they are loans to European bankers, or that there is something mysterious about them, or rates of exchange do not justify them, or make them profitable. These things are all nonsense. Gold goes abroad because it pays to ship it. If the nominal rate of exchange does not justify it, the actual rate does. Europe has sold back to us hundreds of millions of the debts we previously owed, consisting of stocks, bonds, mortgages, etc., of every description. Our boom of six months ago, and the prices we have paid for these securities since has brought them home. There has been an increase in our exports of manufactured goods to partly compensate for this, but on the other hand our exports of agricultural products have fallen off, and these latter are the most important items in our foreign trade. What is the good of deceiving ourselves? We are exporting gold because we have been buying abroad more than we have sold. Many weeks ago we foretold that the period of gold exports was approaching. There is nothing alarming about it. If the monetary policy of the country were settled on sound principles, it would never reach a harmful degree. As it is, we can spare a good many more millions without pinching ourselves, and it now looks probable that we will have to spare them. In some lines of manufactured goods the export demand continues good, but the sharp advance in prices in this country cannot but restrict foreign buying of many standard commodities, while our purchases abroad show no diminution. From the present outlook, the crops of all the importing countries of Europe promise bountifully, while last year's unprecedented yields have left full reserves. Add to this the fact that counting the spring wheat crop of this country as secure (and its maturity is weeks off yet), and granting it equal to the largest ever grown, and even then we will not have an average surplus of wheat for export. It is almost safe to say that the real balance of trade for a year to come will be against us, and at intervals gold will continue to go out.

Money continues easy everywhere. There was another considerable decrease in reserves in the New York bank statement, partly due to loss of gold, and partly to increase in loans. There was during the week a moderate increase of bullish speculation in Wall st., which accounts for the increase in loans. Generally speaking, the business of the country is satisfactory, and the volume is in no wise abated. Advance in wages has not kept pace with the uniformity of improvement elsewhere, and dissatisfaction and increased demand is the tendency, but in most cases satisfactory concessions are made, or compromises are reached.

Prices have declined for cotton and wheat, mainly due to plentiful immediate supplies for both commodities. The price of copper, too, is on the down grade. Real estate exhibits only moderate activity.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.
F. G. LOGAN
MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.
4 B'd Trade, Chicago.
Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.
Church Furnishers and Decorators.
70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.
R. G. GEISSLER, X Marble and Metal Work.
56 West 8th St. (near 6th ave.) New York,

United States Ahead

THE remarkable growth in the exportation of manufactures has led to the preparation by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics of a series of tables, showing the value of each class of manufactures exported in each year during the past decade, and the amount of each class sent to each country. By this process it is practicable to determine the trend of our foreign trade in manufactures, both as to the class of manufactures most demanded abroad, and the countries which are proving our best customers. That this subject is one which justifies a careful study is apparent in view of the fact that the exportation of manufactures has more than doubled in the last six years, more than trebled since 1880, more than quadrupled since 1870, is more than eight times as large as it was in 1860, and in 1898 and 1899 for the first time in our history exceeded the importation of manufactures. The exportation of manufactures in the fiscal year about to end will average more than one million dollars a day for each business day of the year.

A study of the figures which cover the details of the ten years' exportation of manufactures shows that the total value of our manufactures exported has increased 110 per cent. in the decade, while an examination of the exportation of manufactures by other countries fails to show any considerable percentage of increase in any of them during the same period. Great Britain's exports of manufactures show no increase since 1890, the earliest year at which a separate statement of manufactures exported is attainable, while her total exports of domestic products (of which manufactures form about 85 per cent.) shows no increase in value in the decade 1888-97. From France the exports of manufactures show an increase of but 10 per cent. in the decade 1887-96, Germany 13 per cent., Switzerland 6 per cent., Netherlands 3 per cent., and Austria Hungary and Russia a loss, while, as above indicated, the exports of American manufactures in the decade 1889-98 show an increase of 110 per cent., and in the year 1899 will be about three times that of 1879.

Swift's
Silver Leaf Lard, Premium Hams, Premium Breakfast Bacon, Beef Extract, Jersey Butterine, and Cotosuet, are made in purity, prepared in mechanical cleanliness in open-to-public and sanitary workrooms, all under U. S. Government inspection, and are foods you are sure are pure. Sold everywhere.
Swift and Company, Chicago

FURNITURE

Of All Kinds

FOR

CHURCH AND CHANCEL.

Write for our new catalogue.

Special designs and prices made on application.
Correspondence solicited.PHOENIX FURNITURE CO.,
Eau Claire, Wis.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

Do
You
Advocate
Temperance

Then you should advocate everything that advances the growth of temperance. HIRE'S Rootbeer is strictly a temperance drink. It is helpful to the cause of temperance because it takes the place of stimulating beverages.

HIRE'S
Rootbeer

is not a stimulant. It is a pure, delicious health giving drink for home making and home drinking, as harmless as pure spring water. A package makes 5 gallons.

HIRE'S Rootbeer Carbonated, ready for drinking, sold everywhere by the bottle and case. Write and ask how a boy can make from 40 cents to $4.50 a day. A beautiful picture book of rhymes free.

THE CHARLES E. HIRE'S CO., Philadelphia.

CHURCH ARCHITECT,
JOHN SUTCLIFFE,
218 La Salle Street, - Chicago.

Cox Sons & Vining.
70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS, Embroideries, and Fabrics.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1887.
THE E. W. VANDUZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES AND PEALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826
HAVE FURNISHED 35,000 BELLS.
CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER.
MENEELY & CO., PUREST BEST
WEST-TROY, N.Y. GENUINE
CHIMES, Etc. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

CHURCH BELLS and CHIMES
Best quality on earth. Get our price.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.

Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.
$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;
After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Damrell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lyckett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marriages, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage

KINGSFORD'S STARCH

"PURE" AND SILVER GLOSS
FOR THE LAUNDRY.

OSWEGO
CORN STARCH
FOR THE TABLE.

"West Michigan Ry"

FAVORITE ROUTE TO
DELIGHTFUL MICHIGAN RESORTS

Bay View Petoskey Omena
Lake Harbor Neahtawanta
Charlevoix-the-Beautiful
Ottawa Beach Harbor Springs

Cool Lake Michigan Breezes, freedom from dust and mosquitos—refreshing nights, etc., are some of the agreeable characteristics of these resorts. Send for illustrated folder issued by the General Passenger Department, C. & N.W. R'y, Grand Rapids, Mich.

THROUGH SLEEPING CARS FROM
CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS TO PETOSKEY—BAY VIEW
commencing June 19th and continuing until Sept. 25th (via Ill Cent. R'y from St. Louis). Your home agent can sell you through tickets at reduced rates.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889,
AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.
THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

RUBBER STAMPS.....

AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.
Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils,
Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

Best Line
to Denver

Burlington
Route

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

HAS NO EQUAL

GAIL BORDEN
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK.

SEND FOR "BABIES" A BOOK FOR MOTHERS.

AS AN
INFANT FOOD. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., New York

Useful Suggestions

WHEN one has separated milk and butter from cheese and fish, she thinks she has done her whole duty; but, in point of fact, she has only begun the necessary keeping apart of food stuffs. Almost all kinds absorb flavors to a greater or less degree. Tea, cocoa, chocolate, flour, eggs, and cereals are almost as susceptible to the influence of neighboring foods as are milk and butter. Bananas, for example, particularly the highly flavored Aspinwall variety, will spoil an open jar of tea or cocoa or a tin of flour. Onions, salted fish, smoked beef, and scores of other foods, are similarly perverse in their flavor. This asorption of odors and aromas is so well understood that it is often taken advantage of to produce a certain condition. In English dairies freshly cut grass is shut in with fresh butter to impart the flavor of new mown fields. The French cooks, too, according to Miss Parloa, keep a vanilla bean in a box of sugar to secure a delicate flavor in an economical way. A thoughtless housewife, hearing that camphor was good to dispel ants, recently put lumps of this substance along her kitchen-closet shelves, with disastrous effect on the supplies that were shut in with them. When a domestic science course is part of every girl's education, some of this kitchen chemistry will be better understood.

A NEW REMEDY FOR SEA-SICKNESS.—Not long ago, a prominent physician living in one of our midland cities was a member of a party taking a trip up the Great Lakes. As is usually the case on choppy Lake Erie or rough Lake Huron, many of the number were ill. The doctor, however, was not among these, and this fact and the sickness of his companions, gave him an opportunity to experiment further with a remedy which he had given something of a trial, and which he now believes to be valuable in the case of the distressing illness known to most people who have traveled by water. The remedy is one of the simplest to be found in the great pharmacopoeia of nature. It is simply raw tomatoes eaten without salt or any other accompaniment. On the occasion to which I have referred, this medicine was used with unqualified success. An hour after the doctor began his ministrations to his suffering friends, these people for whom life had seemed to have lost all charm, were walking about, and chatting in the best of spirits, as well as able to eat a hearty dinner. Raw tomatoes eaten in this manner are also a remedy for faintness and nausea, and especially for that disagreeable sickness of the stomach which one experiences when a lack of appetite has kept him from breakfasting in a satisfactory manner.—Good Housekeeping.

PLEASANT LAKE TRIP

"All that Lake Champlain had been to us was Lake George—and more. There were the same mountain-capped shores, crowned with the green of the pines and the silver and red and gold of the sun as the day passed the meridian and dropped down behind the western hills. But here the great mounds were nearer and more majestic. They frowned down upon us as we ran in shore, seemingly warning us away. They cast long reflections in the pathway of the little steamer, and mirrored their beauty in the quiet water behind the boat's wake."—From "WE AND OUR TOUR ECONOMIC." Copy sent free, on application, or by calling at City Ticket Office, 180 Clark St., Chicago. F. M. BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago; A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland.

Trial Package Free!

If any reader, suffering from rheumatism, will write to me, I will send them free of cost a trial Package of a simple and harmless remedy which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 40 years' standing. This is an honest remedy that you can test before you part with your money. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 208 Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

Your Summer Outing.

Unite health, rest, pleasure and comfort on the handsome, luxurious

Steel Steamship MANITOU

Exclusively
for Passenger
Service.

First-Class
Only.
Tri-Weekly
Sailings.

Between Chicago, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Bay View, Mackinac Island, etc.

Steamers of our Lake Superior Division make weekly sailings between Chicago, Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette, Hancock, Duluth and intermediate points. Descriptive reading matter, giving particulars about the voyage, terms and reservations sent free.

JOS. BEROLZHEIM, G. P. A.,
Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Trans. Co.,
Rush and N. Water St., CHICAGO.

ROUND WORLD, ORIENT. CRUISE, etc.—Party leaves Oct. 17, round world; Feb. 1, grand $400 Mediterranean cruise, the cheapest and most attractive trip leaving the U.S. next year. F. C. CLARK, 111 Broadway, New York City.

Somatose A perfect food for the invalid, the dyspeptic, or the baby. Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City.

The healthy child should have Mellin's Food, because it will keep him healthy, while the sickly child should have Mellin's Food because it is nourishing and suitable, and gives strength and vitality.

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"A Hand-Saw
is a Good Thing, but not to Shave With."

SAPOLIO

Is the Proper Thing for House-Cleaning.

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous
Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.

The Living Church

VOL. XXII. No. 10

CHICAGO, JULY 8 1899

RACINE COLLEGE GRAMMAR SCHOOL

"The School that Makes Manly Boys."

It aims at a symmetrical development of the mind, body, and morals. Thousands of old Racine boys all over the country occupying positions of trust and honor attest its success. Here is a group of the older boys:

Graduates enter any university.
For information address

Rev. H. D. ROBINSON, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Educational

CONNECTICUT

Greenwich-on-Sound, Conn.

A select boarding and day school for girls. Re-opens Oct. 2, 1899. Send for catalogue.

THE MISSES CORWINE, Principals.

COLORADO

COLORADO, MONTCLAIR, Suburb of Denver.

Jarvis Hall Military Academy

Has no superior. Number of students last year double that of preceding year. $350 per annum. Catalogue.

REV. H. KAY COLEMAN, A.M., Rector.

ILLINOIS

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address,

REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1899. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore Ill.

Art and Elocution.

Students wishing to make special study of Art or Elocution should attend the Illinois Woman's College.

These subjects may be pursued exclusively or with music or literary studies. Courses lead to diploma. Send for illustrated catalogue to Jos. R. Harker, Ph.D., Pres.

Jacksonville, - Illinois.St. Agatha's School, Springfield, Ill.

The Springfield Diocesan School for Girls. Opens its fall term Sept. 14th. Academic, Primary, and Kindergarten departments; Music, Art, Elocution, Physical Culture, carefully taught. Especial attention given to training girls for the home life. French spoken at table—taught by a Parisian. For catalogue, etc., apply to

MRS. PHIBE H. SEABROOK, Prin.

IOWA

DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Saint Katharine's Hall

A Diocesan Boarding and Day School for Girls. College preparation. Fall term opens Sept. 20th.

MISS MARY FRANCES BUFFINGTON, Principal.

MAINE

St. Catharine's Hall,

Augusta, Maine.

The diocesan school for girls. Thoroughly new and modern appointments. Pleasant climate. General, college preparatory, and musical courses. Lowest prices consistent with superior educational facilities. For catalogue, address

The Rev. GEO. F. DEGEN.

MASSACHUSETTS

A tree is known

by its fruit, and we are willing that the

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

should be judged by its graduates. Many—very many—of the leading vocal and instrumental artists in the public eye to-day were instructed here.

GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Musical Director.

Send for our catalogue to

FRANK W. HALE, Gen'l Mgr., Boston, Mass.

The Highland Military Academy.

Worcester, Mass. 43d year. A First-Grade Preparatory School. Modern Sanitation. New Athletic Field. Generous Table. Live Teaching. Small Classes. Visitor: The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D.D.

Head Master: Joseph Allen Shaw, A.M.

Bradford Academy.

Founded 1803. For the higher education of young women. Classical and Scientific course of study, also Preparatory and Optional. Year begins Sept. 20th, 1899.

Miss Ida C. Allen, Principal, Bradford, Mass.

Educational

MASSACHUSETTS—Continued

Rogers Hall School,

For Girls. Certificate admits to College. Apply to Mrs. E. P. UNDERHILL, Lowell, Mass.

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall.

Episcopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re-opens, D. V., Sept. 13th, 1899. Apply to SISTER SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MICHIGAN

MICHIGAN, Ann Arbor.

University School of Music.

Albert A. Stanley, A.M., Director. Unusual Advantages from connection with the University of Michigan. For Calendar and detailed information, address the Secretary

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls.

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIFFLE, Rector. MISS CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLIS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address ST. MARY'S HALL, Faribault.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Phillips Exeter Academy.

The 117th year begins Sept. 13, 1899. Eighty scholarships awarded to students of high standing. Six important buildings added since 1886. For Catalogue and Illustrated Supplement, address

HARLAN P. AMEN, Principal, Exeter, N. H.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

THE CASTLE, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. A beautiful school. Advantages of N. Y. city. All departments. Endorsed by the Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. For illus. circular address I. MISS C. E. MASON, LL.M.

Training School for Nurses.

There are a few vacancies. Applicants must be over twenty-one; of sound health and good education. Apply to SUPERINTENDENT, St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, N. Y.

St. Mary's School.

Boarding and Day School for Girls. Collegiate, Preparatory, and Primary Classes. College Preparation; Advantages of New York. Address SISTER SUPERIOR, 6 and 8 East 4th St.

OHIO

Harcourt Place Seminary

A school of the highest class for girls. For catalogue and information, address

MRS. ADA I. AYER HILLS, Principal, Gambier, Ohio.

Kenyon Military Academy

A model school for boys, on a hill top 1,100 feet above sea level. For descriptive catalogue, address HILLS and WYANT, Regents, Gambier, Ohio.

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

St. Luke's School

Bustleton, Pa. near Philadelphia

Instruction careful and individual. No boy prepared by us for College examination has ever failed to pass. Buildings attractive, homelike, and perfectly sanitary. Grounds comprise a campus of seven acres, and beautiful shaded lawn. Swimming, canoeing, and skating. Healthfulness remarkable. No one connected with the school has failed to improve in health.

"The sort of a school to which sensible people desire to send their sons."—Bishop Whitaker.

CHARLES H. STROUT, A.M., Principal.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St. New York

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN President 3-5-7 W 29th Street
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice-President NEW YORK

Trinity Church Embroidery School

CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes, maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.

MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT, Trinity Parish House, 101 26th st.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.
Church Furnishers and Decorators.
70 Fifth Avenue. New York City.

Educational

PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH, WASHINGTON, PA.

BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral Morning and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalogue, write to Wm. W. SMITH, Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls.

The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many.

The school is first class in every respect.

Bishop Hare makes it his home.

Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL, Sioux Falls, S. D.

VIRGINIA

Fauquier Institute for Young Ladies.

Warrenton, Va.

The thirty-ninth session begins Sept. 21st, '99. Situated in Piedmont region of Va., on Southern R. R., 55 miles from Washington. Number limited. For catalogue address GEO. G. BUTLER, A.M., AND DAUGHTERS.

WISCONSIN

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. J. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. G. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address, THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

LABOR TROUBLES IN DIFFERENT sections of the country indicate a spirit of unrest within the ranks of labor, which, however, is not likely to have serious or widespread results. In Cleveland, street car employes are battling for increased wages. There are indications of strikes at steel manufacturing centers and packing plants, but in the former, compromises have in some instances been effected. Tin plate mills are closed, and, it is announced, will not be re-opened except on wage scales dictated entirely by stockholders. The cause of this unrest is probably to be found in the fact that industrial combinations have not granted an increase in wages proportionate with increased prices of finished product. Many wage scales are those put into effect at a time of financial depression, and now that orders are plentiful and times more prosperous, workmen justly feel they are entitled to share the benefits of prosperity. Many large concerns are entitled to credit for having voluntarily advanced wages.

— x —

NEBRASKA'S WOMAN LABOR LAW became effective July 1st, and caused considerable commotion, particularly in Omaha, where the effect of its operation will be principally felt. The law restricts the employment of women to ten hours per day, or sixty hours per week, and seats must be provided for them when not engaged in active duties which preclude their use. Department stores were chiefly concerned in adjusting conditions to comply with the law, as Omaha has not outgrown the custom of having stores open evenings. To sales girls particularly, the law will be a boon, and by closing evenings, department-store keepers will not lose in the end, as the public will doubtless become accustomed to purchasing its "98-cents-reduced-from-$1" items, before 6 o'clock P. M.

— x —

OF THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-seven laws enacted at the recent session of the Illinois legislature, one hundred and forty-three went into effect July 1st. Three of these measures are of conspicuous importance. Laws governing the practice of medicine are amended in a manner to render illegal the vocation of "faith-healers." Practitioners must have a certificate from the State Board, and a diploma from a reputable medical college is necessary in order to obtain one. State employment bureaus are provided for, the same to be under State supervision, and applicants for work are not required to pay a fee in case situations are secured. Private agencies are required to pay $200 for a license, and furnish a bond of $1,000. Another measure provides for the establishment of municipal pawnshops, and the rate of interest which unfortunates must pay for loans is limited to one per cent. per month. A pledge may be redeemed at any time within one year. This will have a tendency to squelch the Chicago pawn shop evil, which has enabled usurers to grow opulent at the expense of the poorer classes.

— x —

WOMEN OF ENGLAND WHO BELIEVE members of the sex occupy a more inferior position in affairs of life than conditions warrant, have been in session to discuss the matter. Their deliberations have been greatly assisted by such American veterans in the cause as Susan B. Anthony, Sarah Hackett Stevenson, and Mary Wright Sewall, and others. The affair was international, representatives being present from almost every country where women fill a sphere other than entirely domestic. The question of franchise was simply incidental, the meeting being one of practical, business-like women in sympathy with everything pertaining to advancement. The subjects covered a wide field, embracing a woman's relations to science, art, education, journalism, professional pursuits, etc. In her opening address, Lady Aberdeen, the president, deprecated the idea of sexes being arrayed against each other, but argued that men and women should work together for better things.

— x —

ACCORDING TO DISPATCHES FROM Marshalltown, Iowa, the financial, rather than the spiritual, side of the Gospel is sometimes the chief consideration. For years, denominational preachers of Marshalltown have filled the pulpit at Sunday services held at the Iowa State Soldiers' Home, receiving as compensation, from five to eight dollars per sermon. Recently, the Board of Control decided this scale to be exorbitant, and reduced the price to three dollars per sermon. Whereupon the ministers formulated an agreement to preach for not less than five dollars. This figure the Board of Control refused to accept, and as a consequence, ex-Governor Larrabee will occupy the pulpit next Sunday. It may be the Board reasons that as many of the ex-soldiers are old and infirm, and prone to de-ex through divine service, three dollars is sufficient for that portion of a discourse which is listened to attentively.

— x —

THE GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE American Church Missionary Society reports that the money is in hand to buy and equip an orphanage in Matanzas. The executive committee have ordered its purchase and its inauguration, and we may expect in a few weeks to see this institution of the Church, the first of its kind in Cuba, in active operation. The money is in hand for the purchase and the equipment of the orphanage, and a margin of $1,200 is already had for its maintenance. There is every reason to believe that future contributions will be adequate to the continuation of this much needed institution.

— x —

PULLMAN PALACE CAR PORTERS have become infected with the trust contagion. Articles of incorporation, it is reported, have been taken out by the Pullman Palace Car Porters and Colored Employees' Mutual Benefit Association, an organization having as its aim united action in an endeavor to obtain reasonable wages whenever necessity arises, and also the intellectual improvement of its members. The incorporation of this "trust" is in some respects a menace to the traveling public. It is horrible to contemplate the result should these knights of the upper and lower berth conclude that the present schedule of tips is too low, and consequently unreasonable. If the association, however, will confine proposed assaults to the treasury of the Pullman company, the public will not be disposed to grumble, but will even see a ray of hope in the prospect that increased wages may have an effect of producing a "thank you sir," at a reduced cost.

— x —

SECRETARY ALGER IS AGAIN A MOST prominent figure in the public eye. The cause this time does not arise from disease-producing army rations, or campaign mismanagement, but because of an offensive and defensive alliance with Governor Pingree, of Michigan, whereby it is aimed to give the Secretary a seat in the United States Senate, and retire the present incumbent, Senator McMillan, to private life. Governor Pingree apologizes for the connection by announcing a declaration of Secretary Alger, that the latter is opposed to trusts and favors the election of United States Senators by popular vote. There are those who wish election by this method obtained in Michigan. As the term of Senator McMillan does not expire for two years, there is no cause for immediate excitement. In the meantime, rumors are thick that Mr. Alger will resign his cabinet position, but the gentleman suavely disclaims any such intention.

— x —

IT IS A SINGULAR COINCIDENCE that while representatives of nations deliberate at the Hague measures calculated to reduce European military pressure, announcement is made that the Russian government has virtually completed preparations for spending $80,000,000 on field artillery, ammunition, and mounts. If this be true, Russia occupies a paradoxical position, similar to the highwayman who, having a section of lead pipe up his sleeve, facetiously besought a solitary pedestrian in a lonely spot for a "little change," with which to get something to eat. Or perhaps the Czar is making an attempt to "bear" the war market, in the belief that a show of power will be a healthy argument in favor of peaceful measures. It is said that of the total Russian expenditure, one-fourth will be placed with American manufacturers of war material, thus causing an industrial stimulus, and proving the truth of the adage that "it is an ill-wind which blows nobody good."

The News of the Church

Consecration of the Bishop-elect of Boise

OFFICIAL STATEMENT OF THE
PRESIDING BISHOP

ALL the canonical arrangements for the consecration of the Rev. James B. Funsten, Bishop-elect for the missionary jurisdiction of Boise, had been completed, when, at his request, the service was deferred for a time, as there were several bishops who questioned his right to withdraw his declination of the office to which he had been elected by the General Convention. It was thought best to make this delay, in order to give time for careful consideration of the matter at issue, and I then addressed a letter to all the bishops, in order that opportunity might be given for those who objected to the consecration, to express their opinion.

Up to the present time there are in all, eleven bishops who have indicated their disapproval of the immediate consecration of Mr. Funsten. Some of those who originally protested, have withdrawn their objections and desired that there should be no further delay. One of this number who has had long experience in the House of Bishops, and whose opinion in all matters of Church canon and usage is usually regarded as having the force of law, writes as follows:

Your statement in the matter of the order for the consecration of the Rev. James B. Funsten, of date April 17th, is received. I plainly perceive that with no evidence laid before you that the declination of the Rev. Mr. Funsten had been received or acknowledged or noted, that you could not act upon printed statements, and that there is nothing left for you to do but to comply with the request made by resolution by the House of Bishops at Washington, "that the Presiding Bishop take order for his consecration." I beg leave hereby to withdraw anything that may have seemed, in any preceding communication of mine, like a protest against such "taking order" by the Presiding Bishop.

These words are justified by the fact that all the official information that I have in regard to Mr. Funsten's case, and all that is known to exist, is contained in the letter addressed to me, expressing his readiness to accept the office assigned to him by the General Convention, inasmuch as the difficulties which, at first, seemed to interfere with his doing so had subsequently been removed.

The following papers will show with sufficient clearness the grounds which justify the action which I am pursuing, and I begin with a legal opinion which appeared in The Churchman some months ago, written by the Hon. John H. Stiness, of the U. S. Supreme Court, a well-known member of the House of Deputies:

The case of the Rev. Dr. Funsten raises a pure question of law. Can a bishop-elect, after declining to accept the election, withdraw his declination, and file an acceptance before anything is done with which such acceptance would conflict? One cannot resign what he does not have. Hence the legal force of a declination can only be the notice of an intention to refuse to serve, and thus to make a vacancy when the time for service shall come. Undoubtedly such a notice may be acted upon, so as to have one ready to fill the office, and if anything is done to create new rights, the person declining will be deemed to have waived his rights, and to have been concluded by the notice. But only in this respect does a declination differ in principle from a resignation to take effect in future.

By the rule of the cases cited, and I know of none to the contrary, the refusal to accept a civil office may be withdrawn before new rights intervene. Applying it to the case in hand, is there anything in the Canons to lead to a different conclusion? The electing body is the House of Deputies, on nomination of House of Bishops; and if the House of Bishops consent to the consecration, they may take order to that purpose.

The House of Bishops consented to the consecration of the Rev. Mr. Funsten, and requested the Presiding Bishop to take order therefor. The Presiding Bishop has no power to accept a declination. His only duty in other cases is, on notice of his acceptance, to take order for the consecration; "on notice of acceptance," therefore the Presiding Bishop must proceed. Why should he not? No new right has intervened. The Bishop-elect thinks at one time that he ought not to accept, and he so states to the Presiding Bishop. On further thought, and on further information, he changes his mind, withdraws the declination and accepts. His election is clear, and his right to consecration seems to be equally clear. Suppose it had been the other way, and the Bishop-elect had accepted; would any one hold that he could not afterwards, under a sense of duty, withdraw the acceptance and decline?

A bishop elect has a right to time for consideration. He may have successive different opinions as to his duty. If he announces an opinion at one time, there is nothing in the nature of the thing so definitive as to preclude another and final notice.

It may be said that the Presiding Bishop made the act conclusive, by trying to call a meeting of the bishops for a new election. If the House of Bishops had actually convened, or a meeting could not have been prevented, I am not prepared to say whether such a state of facts would be inconsistent with the withdrawal. But such is not the case. There has been no meeting, there is no call for one on this account; except for the fact of a declination, the matter stands as it did upon the election; if then the declination is revocable the case is clear.

I have heard, but I do not know the fact, that a similar case has occurred, and the bishop elect was consecrated. If so, we have an ecclesiastical precedent on the line of the plain rule of the civil law.

The letter of the Bishop of Maryland which follows is substantially in the same line with that of Judge Stiness, and must be familiar to all who read the Church papers. I wish, however, to call special attention to the following extracts from that letter:

The Rev. Mr. Funsten was in October, 1898, by unanimous vote of clerical and lay deputies, elected as the one to be consecrated Missionary Bishop of Boise. The House of Bishops thereupon voted its consent to his consecration, and requested the Presiding Bishop to take order for the same. And, unless some very serious bar to action prevents it, the Presiding Bishop is in duty bound to do as directed, and carry to completeness the wish so clearly declared, of the constituted authorities of the Church. Is there any canonical bar? It is conceded that there is none. No provision is made by the Canons, in any way, for failing to carry out the Church's demand.

The person elected declined to be consecrated as bishop. And if he had persisted in so declining, that, though not named in the Canons, would have been an absolute bar. He could not be consecrated unless with his own consent. But the reasons which led him to decline ceased to exist, and he thereupon withdrew his objections, and expressed to the Presiding Bishop his readiness to accept the office. The fact stands that he was and is the only person elected to be Bishop of Boise; that his choice, made by the unanimous vote of the electing body, has not been revoked. There is no evidence that any one of the dioceses, or members voting for him, has changed its purpose. He is to-day the person chosen to be Bishop of Boise; no canonical bar to that choice exists. He is the man whom the Church wishes as Bishop, and the only obstacle to the fulfillment of that wish was simply his own unwillingness to take the office. That unwillingness was in his own mind and will. It has been removed. He is Bishop-elect still. He is the choice of the Church still. No act or word of the law of the Church has in any way overruled the Church's command as declared in October, 1898—the Church has declared its wish to have a Missionary Bishop of Boise; it had named the Rev. Mr. Funsten as the man for that duty. That choice has not been taken back; it stands clear to day. It has decided that he be consecrated. Shall the express will of the Church be thwarted? Shall the missionary work of the Church be stopped, because of a technicality for which not a shade of foundation can be found in any Canon of the law? The true and sound interpretation of all law, the true use of all authority, is not to obstruct, but to set forward—to help the work, and not to hinder it. Not a line or a word of the law of the Church, not anything of its intention, would be violated by carrying out what it commanded in the General Convention of 1898.

I have received other letters of similar character from prominent clergymen and laymen of the Church, and among them the following from the Bishop of Southern Virginia, which deserves to be carefully read:

The circumstances leading to the postponement of the consecration created upon me, and I think upon Mr. Funsten, the impression that it was meant to be temporary, in the interests of peace and with the hope that the bishops protesting would withdraw their objection upon a fuller knowledge of the facts and a more intelligent consideration of the issues involved in the case. It did not occur to me that the consecration was postponed with the view of submitting the whole question to the House of Bishops, at the meeting called for October, in the city of St. Louis. As far as I can see, that meeting, if held, would have no power over the question; all that it could do would be to discuss and give informal expressions of opinion. It would have no power to annul the order for the consecration passed by the House in General Convention; for that could only be done upon the clear recognition of the existence of a canonical bar to the said consecration, and it is not contended that such canonical bar exists. If, therefore, the House is not competent to rescind the order, it would leave it in force and obligatory upon the Presiding Bishop.

Again, it might be competent, in the special meeting, for the House of Bishops to express an opinion upon the single question in controversy as to whether a presbyter, elected to be a missionary bishop, has a right to change his mind with relation to the acceptance or rejection of the office before other rights have arisen, which determine his original decision as final. He may accept and then withdraw the acceptance. There is no doubt upon that proposition; but upon the correlative, may he decline and then withdraw the declination, the controversy arises. I have no doubt that a large majority of the bishops would be of the opinion that a bishop-elect has the right to change his mind and accept after he has declined the office, provided other rights have not arisen to intervene as a bar to his acceptance; but that would only be an opinion which could have no legislative or judicial authority, and it would leave the protesting bishops where they stand to-day. In view, then, of the obvious facts that no rights of the protesting bishops could be invaded by proceeding at once with the consecration, and that most important rights would be denied if the consecration is indefinitely postponed, namely, the right of the presbyter, elected to be a bishop, to be consecrated; the right of the General Convention to have its will carried out and its mandate to consecrate obeyed; the right and the need of the jurisdiction of Boise to have the Bishop who has been elected; the right of the whole Church to have its missionary work provided for. In view, I say, of these facts it seems to be a clear duty to proceed with the consecration.

On the other hand, the only course open for the parties protesting would seem to be that, in the absence of all legislation upon the subject, they should take steps to provide for what they regard as a need and against that which they imagine to be fraught with evil; that is, they should propose in the next General Convention a measure embodying the principle upon which their position stands, namely, that a refusal of office is, in its nature, a finality as soon as it reaches the Presiding Bishop, and that a bishop-elect ceases to be such the moment of his declination of the election. (I might say, in passing, that an evident confusion arising from the use of the title, bishop-elect, without definition of its meaning, has vitiated the reasoning of the protesting bishops. Bishop-elect can only mean the person elected to be a bishop. He remains the person elected until an election confers the rights which he has waived, upon another. Election, of course, means all the steps taken by the House assembled and organized. A notice of the Presiding Bishop asking bishops to meet is, in its nature, tentative, and is without legal or canonical force creating a positive obligation upon the bishops to meet; and until they meet, it is a tentative unreality.)

The proposition above suggested as the course for the protesting bishops to pursue, would, in my judgment, secure only a very small minority of votes in either House of the General Convention. I think the doctrine upon which your action is based would prevail, namely, that a person elected to be bishop has a right to change his mind and to accept the election after he has declined, provided no new rights have intervened as a bar to his claim to the office. That is a rule in civil government, and there is no reason why it should not apply in ecclesiastical government. It is clear that if Mr. Funsten had the right to change his mind, you, as Presiding Bishop, would have no right to say that he should not do so. It is contended by the protesting bishops that you have no right over the declination of office. It is equally clear that you have the right and the duty upon receiving the acceptance of the person elected, to proceed with the consecration. You could not consecrate him against his will, but you are obliged to consecrate him, provided there is no canonical bar in the way, if he claims the right of consecration, which he does by his acceptance. These are my views upon the case.

I think it must be evident that I am no longer at liberty to impede the consecration of the Rev. Mr. Funsten. I trust that the considerations so ably urged by men learned in both ecclesiastical and civil law, will satisfy all who objected to the action I have taken, and that the Bishop of Boise will be warmly welcomed and heartily encouraged in the good work to which he has now devoted the remainder of his life.

THOMAS M. CLARK,
Presiding Bishop.

Newport, R. I., June 29, 1899.

THE following notice was received later:

NEWPORT, R. I., July 1, 1899.

The consecration of the Rev. James B. Funsten as Bishop of the missionary jurisdiction of Boise, will be held in Trinity church, Portsmouth, Va., on Thursday, July 13th, at 11 o'clock.

THOMAS M. CLARK.

—X—

Canada

Diocese of Huron

The synod of the diocese of Huron met June 20th. The preacher for the occasion was the Rev. Henry Waters, from South Carolina. The Bishop held a Confirmation at St. Matthew's church, London, June 18th, and at Christ church on the evening of the same day. An interesting military service was held June 4th in the camp on Carling's Heights, near London, where a number of the volunteer regiments are going through their annual training. A number of matters interesting to the Church at large were discussed at the archidiaconal conference for clergymen, lay workers, and Sunday school teachers, which was held in St. John's church, London Township, lately. An excellent paper was given on "Pastoral visiting," and one on "Church growth and expansion." Bishop Baldwin gave an address on "The Person and Offices of the Holy Spirit." A meeting for men only was arranged, to be held in London in the synod week. Addressess were promised by a number of the clergy, and help would be given by the London Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and the Y. M. C. A.

Diocese of Toronto

The Toronto synod commenced its sessions June 20th, by a celebration of Holy Communion in St. James' cathedral, Toronto, at 10 A.M. The synod service in the evening was held in St. Alban's cathedral; preacher, the Rev. Canon Sweeney. Bishop Sweatman expects to leave for England early in July. A meeting of the Deanery of Toronto was held in St. James' school house, June 5th. A plan to make some provision for the spiritual needs of foreigners, by establishing a mission in Toronto for them, was discussed at length. The wharf services which have been held for years by the clergy of St. James' cathedral, were resumed June 18th. Four candidates from the Deaconess' training house were "set apart" by the Bishop, in a special service at St. Phillip's church, Toronto, June 7th. All four expect to go out to the mission field shortly. Several candidates passed their examination for the degree of B. D., at the meeting of the board of examiners for degrees in divinity, held in St. Alban's cathedral Toronto, June 7th, the Bishop of Toronto in the chair. The Provosts of Trinity and Huron and the Principals of Montreal and Wycliffe colleges were present.

Diocese of Niagara

The preacher at the opening service of the Niagara synod, June 7th, in Christ church cathedral, Hamilton, was the Ven. Archdeacon Dixon. Bishop Du Moulin in his charge said, that within the eight months since the last synod in October, he had held 48 Confirmations, and confirmed 785 persons. The Bishop has ordained two deacons and three priests in the same time. He spoke in commendation of the Sunday school conventions he had attended in the deaneries of the diocese, and with great earnestness of the sad neglect of the Sunday becoming so prevalent. Among other reports read before the synod, was one recommending that steps be taken with a view to holding a Church congress in October next, or later. The report on the state of the Church stated that there was an increase in the Church population of the diocese of 2,592. The whole Church population is 30,250. The business of the synod was concluded in two days. Bishop and Mrs. Du Moulin held a reception at the See House for the delegates and their wives, on the evening of the last day.

Diocese of Ottawa

Bishop Hamilton laid the corner stone of the new All Saints' church, Ottawa, June 7th. There was a large attendance at the Confirmation service at Balderson's Corners, held by the Bishop recently.

Diocese of Quebec

The diocesan synod, after the usual two years' interval, was opened at Quebec, June 7th. The new Dean of Quebec, the Rev. Lennox Williams, preached the sermon. Holy Communion was celebrated at 7:30 in the morning. At the business session a number of resolutions were brought forward of more or less importance. There was one to make the parochial returns of statistics of more practical value to the diocese than hitherto; another to remove some of the limitations in regard to those who are eligible to vote at vestries. On the evening of the second day, the report of the committee on religious needs and progress of the diocese was considered. The Hamilton memorial fund for Bishop's College, Lennoxville, is making good progress. The students and professors have united in making a contribution of about $700. The Bishop held an ordination in Quebec, June 4th, for priests. He has been holding Confirmations in the country parishes in the eastern townships, in the latter part of June, and holds an ordination in Quebec the first Sunday in July.

Diocese of Montreal

The Bishop has been making his annual visitation in the country parishes all through the month of June. His first visit was to Trinity church, Christieville, on the 4th, where he held a Confirmation. Although Bishop Bond is in his 85th year, his sermons and Confirmation addresses show no lack of vigor. St. Martin's church, Montreal, will celebrate its anniversary of a quarter of a century in December next. It is hoped that the first rector of St. Martin's, Bishop Du Moulin, of Niagara, will be present, and preach on All Saints' Day. The closing exercises of Dunham Ladies' College were held June 20th. The Bishop preached the sermon. Principal Hackett, of the Montreal Theological College, gave an address.

Commencements

Ogontz Seminary, Ogontz, Pa.

Commencement week began Sunday evening, 11th ult., at St. Paul's church, Cheltenham; the sermon was preached by the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins. There were 19 graduates this year.

Howe School, Lima, Ind.

The closing exercises were of an interesting character. The year has been, in all respects, the best the school has ever had. The new Board of Trustees were largely present, and took hold of the work before them with energy. They made provision for extensive improvements which will greatly increase the efficiency of the school in the future.

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

The annual Commencement exercises took place June 4-8th. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Bishop in the cathedral, Sunday evening. Monday evening, there was a musical, vocal and instrumental; Tuesday, during the day, an art exhibition of kindergarten work, drawing, and painting, and in the evening, a cantata and a play composed by two of the pupils; Wednesday, the art exhibition continued, and in the evening, a concert and an address by Chancellor Woolworth, of Nebraska. Two graduates received diplomas and the silver crosses which are the badges of the school. The attendance of pupils during the past year was larger than usual, and the examinations and graduating exercises showed that All Saints' has been continuously attaining a higher standard of excellence. The value of the benefits and blessings which its pupils have carried to the homes of South Dakota cannot be overestimated.

The Episcopal Academy, Cheshire, Conn.

Celebrated its 105th anniversary June 15th. There was a large delegation of visitors present from New York, Hartford, New Haven, and other places. There were six graduates, and several prizes were awarded. After the Commencement dinner, a bronze bust of Prof. Woodbury, the work of the sculptor, William Ordway Partridge, was unveiled. Prof. Phillips, of Yale, making the presentation speech. The Rev. W. A. Beardsley and Edwin P. Taylor were elected members of the Board of Trustees.

Cathedral School of St. Paul, Garden City

The Commencement was held in the new gymnasium June 21st. In the morning two memorials were dedicated, one a baptismal font in the chapel to the memory of the late Mrs. A. N. Littlejohn, wife of the Bishop; the other, a bronze tablet in the library of the school to the young men of St. Paul's School, who were in the Spanish-American war. It bears the following inscription:

To honor the names of her sons who served in the Spanish-American war, the alumni and students of St. Paul's School have erected this memorial.

The Commencement exercises opened with music by the Glee Club, and the valedictory, followed by an address by Mr. Augustus S. Downing, A. M., and the presentation of the class picture. The Very Rev. Samuel Cox, dean of the cathedral, presented the Steinway gold medal for the best progress in German. The medals and prizes for the championship track games for 1899 were next awarded, and the prizes to the students for class standing were presented by the Bishop, who also delivered the diplomas, and made an address. In the evening a dance was given by the graduating class, which was largely attended.

Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Va.

The 60th Commencement exercises were held at Liggett Hall, on June 21st. Certificates of graduation were conferred on the two first graduates of the school, certificates of graduation never having been awarded before.

Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.

The 74th annual Commencement, just celebrated, attested the high standard of culture maintained in that historic school of letters. The address of the honorary chancellor of the college, the Rev. W. R. Huntington, D.D., D.C.L., was delivered June 21st. His theme was, "The American college a breakwater against plutocracy." The sermon before the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the Hobart chapter of the Students' Missionary Association was by the Rev. Charles F. J. Wrigley, and the baccalaureate by the Rev. R. M. Converse, D.D., D.C.L. At the social gathering of the alumni the subject which excited the liveliest attention was the explanation by President Jones and the ex chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Converse, of the inception and present status of the movement for the erection of the proposed Bishop Cox memorial hall, a building designed for the general uses of the college. At the Commencement dinner, questions of the value and mission of collegiate culture were freely and ably discussed. James C. Smith, Jr., class of '78, of Detroit, Mich., recently elected president of the Associate Alumni, acted as toastmaster. Much interest was manifested in the report read by President Jones, of the result of the inter-collegiate contest, for valuable prizes offered by the Association for Promoting the Interests of Church Schools, Colleges, and Seminaries. The record made by Hobart men was felt to be just matter for congratulation. Four members of the graduating class were honored with election to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. The honorary degrees conferred were as follows: LL.D.—Hon. Judge William H. Adams, Canandaigua; Ezra J. Peck, Owego; T. Guilford Smith, C.E., M.A., Buffalo; William Keith Brooks, professor of Biology at John Hopkins University. D.D.—Rt. Rev. Frederick R. Graves, Bishop of Shanghai, China; Rev. Stephen H. Synnott. L.H.D.—Rev. W. R. Huntington, D.D., LL.D.

Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

The closing exercises began June 21st, the Rev. W. A. Barr delivering the annual mission sermon. On the 22d, the exercises commenced with the alumni meeting. After a short service conducted by Bishop Whittle, an essay was read by the Rev. R. W. Forsyth, followed by those of the graduating class, after which Bishop Gibson delivered an address to the graduates. The alumni dinner was a most enjoyable occasion, Bishops Whittle, Gibson, Peterkin, and Penick being present, with a number of the prominent clergymen of Virginia. On the morning of the 23d, the ordination sermon was preached by Bishop Peterkin. Three candidates from Virginia were ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Gibson, six deacons by Bishop Whittle; six deacons were ordained by Bishop Randolph, for S. Virginia, and one by Bishop Peterkin, for W. Virginia. Of these deacons, six will enter the missionary field, going to Japan, China, and Brazil; three to Nevada, and three to S. Virginia, none of them remaining in the diocese of Virginia.

Akeley Institute, Grand Haven, Mich.

A large number of friends from Chicago, Grand Rapids, and other places filled the chapel during the impressive morning service. Bishop Gillespie made a short address, in which he spoke of the unusually prosperous school year just drawn to a close, and of the bright future in store for Akeley. To the inestimable fidelity and courage of Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson, the Bishop gave a touching tribute which was deeply appreciated by those present. The Rev. Dr. Stone, of Chicago, was unable to be present to deliver the address to the graduates, and the Rev. John N. McCormick took his place. The graduates received their diplomas from the Bishop's hands, after which they were presented with the gold cross of honor by Mrs. Wilkinson. Luncheon was served in the dining hall, the Bishop, being toastmaster. Mrs. Kelsey, president of the St. Cecilia Society, Grand Rapids, spoke of her pleasure in finding such a high musical standard at Akeley. Miss Dorothea Nurse, in behalf of the alumnae, made the presentation to Dr. Wilkinson of a beautiful gold cross, as a token of their love and regard for him, and of their appreciation of his services as teacher and friend. An impromptu programme given by members of the school and of the alumnae and a service in the chapel at 4 o'clock closed the Commencement exercises of 1899.

Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio

On the 3d Sunday after Trinity, the baccalaureate sermon was given by the Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, Bishop of Chicago, in the college chapel, the church of the Holy Spirit. Bishop McLaren was present at the Kenyon Commencement for the first time, as a member of the Board of Trustees of the college. The other services of the day were a celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 A. M., at which all the members of the senior class of the college were communicated, and the ordination service at 10:30 A. M., recorded elsewhere. Wednesday, June 21st, the 71st annual Commencement was held. The college alumni address was given by the Hon. Talfourd P. Linn, of the class of 1872, and was a strong, urgent, and thoughtful appeal to the educated man to do his duty in politics. The Bexley alumni orator, the Very Rev. Charles D. Williams, '84, dean of Trinity cathedral, Cleveland, spoke very forcibly on the reconciliation of conservatism and progress in the life of the nation, the Church, and the individual. The graduates of the college numbered six, and the graduates of the theological seminary, five. Among degrees were: Doctor of Laws: Andrew Squire, Esq., of Cleveland; Doctor of Divinity: the Very Rev. Charles D. Williams, of Cleveland, and the Rev. George F. Smythe, of Bridgewater, Mass. Announcement was made by the president that the college had just received a check for $30,000 from the executor of the estate of Mrs. Bedell, and that considerable gifts had been received for the restoration of Rosse Hall, the largest ones being, $6,000 from Mrs. Simpson, of Sandusky; $2,500 from Mr. Samuel Mather, of Cleveland, and $2,000 from Mr. James P. Stephens, of Trenton, N. J. Mr. Mather has also contributed sufficient money to provide Bexley Hall, the theological seminary, with steam heat, and to make some necessary repairs and improvements. A guest of the college in whom every Kenyon man felt the deepest interest, was the Rev. Dr. James C. Wheat, of Lynwood, Va., who was making his first visit to Gambier since his graduation, 68 years ago. Bishop McLaren who in early boyhood had been a pupil of Dr. Wheat, introduced to the audience on Commencement Day, the venerable man who is the oldest living alumnus of Kenyon. At the alumni luncheon, Bishop Burton, of the class of 1873, presided as toastmaster; 120 men were present. Speeches were made by Mr. William P. Elliott, of Chicago, president of the Alumni Association; the Bishop of Chicago; the Hon. James D. Hancock, '59; the Rev. Dr. James C. Wheat, '31; the Rev. Alfred Blake, '62; the Hon. J. Van Vechten Olcott, of New York; the Rev. President Peirce; the Rev. Dr. Jones, and Charles Ransom Ganter, '99. Other interesting events of the week were a lawn party given by the Bishop of Ohio and Mrs. Leonard, at their beautiful country place, Kokosing; a play, "Our Boys," given by the Students' Dramatic Club; a tennis tournament; a faculty reception. Five men were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa at the annual banquet. The week closed with a very pretty dance given by the senior class.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

All Our City Churches Keep Open

It is somewhat to the credit of our hard-worked city clergy, that while they earn and take their summer vacation, no church or mission is closed on Sunday. Those larger parishes, whose rectors have an assistant, such as St. Peter's, St. James', Grace, and St. Paul's, are easily arranged for. In others the services are kept up either by a system of alternating, using the co-operation of the non-parochial clergy, or by invoking the aid of lay-readers, of whom some fifty are licensed in the diocese. The following changes have been made since our last: The rector of Trinity, the Rev. W. A. Richardson, leaves this week with his family for the Wisconsin lake district, his duty for July and August being taken by a Southern clergyman. The Rev. T. D. Phillips takes Calvary for July and August. Last Sunday, being that preceding the "glorious Fourth," the services in our churches were of the patriotic order, national hymns finding their place in the musical portions, appropriate sermons being preached, and in many the flag was carried next to the cross in the choir procession.

St. Peter's Guild for Women

The 29th ult., the day of their namesaint, was enthusiastically observed by the women of St. Peter's. After divine service in the church, and a luncheon in the parish rooms, the guild with a strong attendance of nearly 150, was addressed by the rector, the Rev. Frank Du Moulin, who congratulated the members on the harmonious year they had passed through, which had resulted, outside of the "casual advantages" of their social meetings, in their netting $400 from needlework done at the weekly gatherings. At the election which followed, little change was made in the officers for the ensuing year.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

At St. Michael's church, the Penny Provident Club had 165 depositors last year, the amount of their deposits reaching $450. The money is constantly withdrawn for larger saving, when it reaches sufficiently large amount.

The teachers of the Sunday school at St. Agnes' chapel, of Trinity parish, have presented to the Rev. C. A. Hamilton, one of the retiring curates, a fine gold watch.

Church of the Messiah, Rhinebeck, has just been consecrated by Bishop Potter, assisted by the Ven. Archdeacon Prescott Everts. The Bishop preached. The Rev. Ernest C. Saunders is rector.

Training School for Deaconesses

Is to have a new home adjoining St. Faith's. Friends who have purchased the building, which is of four stories, and very well adapted for its purpose, have arranged that it be immediately put in shape for the work to begin there next autumn.

Church of the Holy Trinity, Harlem

The Rev. Chas. E. Freeman will have charge pending the entrance of the new rector, the Rev. Harry P. Nichols, upon his duties. The Rev. Alexander Cummings, Jr., who has had charge since the death of the Rev. Dr. Bridgman, sailed on July 1st, for a tour of Europe.

Presentation to the Rev. R. M. Kemp

The Sunday school and members of the congregation of St. Paul's chapel of Trinity parish, have just presented to the Rev. Robert Morris Kemp, a handsome loving cup of silver, in affectionate recognition of his having completed ten years in the curacy of the chapel. The presentation took place at the close of the annual service of the Sunday school, Sunday, June 25th. The cup is inscribed with the date, and the words: "Prepared unto every good work."

St Stephen's College, Annandale

The alumni association has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, the Rev. Samuel Upjohn, D. D.; vice-president, the Rev. T. B. Fulcher; secretary, the Rev. J. M. Blackwell; treasurer, the Rev. Frederick Campbell Steinmetz; necrologist, the Rev. W. F. Steinmetz; executive committee, the Rev. Dr. Upjohn, and the Rev. Messrs. T. B. Fulcher, A. R. B. Hegeman, J. M. Blackwell, and F. C. Steinmetz.

Grace Church Charities

The charity work of the Benevolent Society supplied nearly 4,000 garments the last season. During the present summer, 50 women are kept employed in this work, and in the winter season the number will be three times greater. The treasurer of the coal fund has supplied 71 tons of coal to working women, at about cost rates. The society has expended nearly $4,000. Grace parish laundry has employed the past season 37 women weekly.

Death of Mr. Edward Quintard

The father-in-law of Bishop Nichols, of California, Mr. Edward A. Quintard, died June 26th, after a brief illness. He was born Dec. 27, 1827, at Stamford, Conn., and was a near relative of the late Bishop Quintard, of Tennessee. He was an active worker in the church of the Transfiguration, was a member, and at one time president, of the St. Nicholas Club, a member of the Union League club, a director of the Home for Incurables, at Fordham, and of many business corporations.

Calvary Church House

The new house in E. 22d st. is an important step in the effort to approach the thousands who crowd the east end of the missionary territory assigned to this parish. A club for working girls has been put in operation, in which to teach them to make their clothes, trim their hats, and understand domestic economy and management; two sewing clubs for younger girls, several clubs for boys of various ages, classes in calisthenics and gymnastics, and social organizations for all grades. The plans contemplate also a reading-room.

Useful Work at St. Thomas' Church

The Church Periodical Club of this church has regularly circulated 57 periodicals during the year. It has sent 150 magazines to Sing Sing prison, five new and complete commentaries, and 20 volumes of classical and standard literature to different clergymen. To mission stations in the West, a considerable number of Hymnals, with music, have been supplied for choir use. The Boy's Auxiliary sent 354 magazines and 2,245 copies of Sunday school newspapers. The receipts were $130.07.

Fresh-Air Work

Trinity church has commenced its fresh-air work for the season at Islip, N. Y. The summer home of St. Agnes' chapel has gone into active operation at Catamount, on the Hudson river, near Sing Sing. Grace-Emmanuel church will conduct its fresh-air work at Pleasantville, in the Catskill Mountains, on a farm very nicely adapted for such use. The church of the Holy Trinity, Harlem, will share in the benefits, and send parties of children from time to time. The Orphans' Home and Asylum, under the control of the Church, has arranged for a summer home for its inmates at Riverhead, on the sea coast, at the extreme eastern end of Long Island.

The City Mission Society

Held, last year, 4,347 services, with an aggregate attendance of 265,858. The Eucharist was celebrated 401 times in public, and 382 times in private, and 10,530 Communion were made.

There were 45 adults baptized, and 351 children, and 181 candidates confirmed. The marriages numbered 40, and the burials 147. The missionaries made 83,195 visits, and distributed 125,468 papers and 38,192 books. The Sunday schools had an aggregate attendance of 2,404 teachers and 29,886 children. The day schools were attended by 13,352 children, the kindergartens by 16,610, and the industrial schools by 11,410. St. Barnabas' House temporarily sheltered 1,355 women and children, and 23,631 lodgings were furnished. At St. Barnabas' House and God's Providence Mission, 101,008 meals were supplied.

Good Work by Church of the Heavenly Rest

A remarkable work of public benefaction is doing by the Kind Word Society which provides domestic work for young women who have labored in stores and factories, and who, when trades are dull, do not know where to go for other employment. A number of broken-down servants who saw nothing between them and the almshouse, have been sent to over-worked farmers' wives who gladly welcomed them, and gave them a home and small wages in return for the services such women were still able to render. The society last year provided for 303 women; 47 women, each having a child dependent upon them; 12 men, one boy, one man and wife. Within the six years of its existence, this society has thus cared for nearly 3,500 girls and women, nearly one-eighth of whom were deserted wives or widows with young children.

Actors' Church Alliance

Berkeley Lyceum was crowded Tuesday evening, June 27th, the occasion being an election of officers for the recently organized Actors' Church Alliance. The Rev. Walter E. Bentley, chairman of the joint committee of the C.A.I.L. and the Actors' Society, presided. Bishop Potter was unanimously elected president of the organization. Two vice-presidents were elected, as follows: F. F. Mackay, Esq. (who is president of the Actors' Society), and the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church. The Rev. Walter E. Bentley was unanimously elected secretary, and Geo. D. Macintyre, (secretary of the Actors' Society), treasurer. A council consisting of 20 members, 10 from the Church at large, and 10 from the dramatic profession, was also elected. The next public meeting will be held in the parish house of St. Chrysostom's chapel, on Wednesday evening, July 19th, at 8 A. M. Arrangements for services in different churches will soon be made. Clergymen willing to serve as chaplains of the Alliance are urged to send their names and addresses to the secretary, 624 E. 179th st., New York.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Rev. C. Campbell Walker who has been for some years past rector of Zion church, Philadelphia, preached his farewell sermon to that congregation on Sunday evening, 25th ult. He leaves to assume pastoral charge of a church in New York.

St. Mary's guild of St. Thomas' church, Whitemarsh, presented the congregation with a litany desk, which was used for the first time on Sunday morning, 25th ult. The gift was gracefully accepted on behalf of the parishioners, by the Rev. Samuel Snelling, the rector.

Since the retirement of the Rev. Edward Riggs from Christ church chapel, the services have been in charge of the Rev. L. C. Baker. After the first Sunday of the present month, services will be discontinued until Sunday, Sept. 3d, when the new vicar, the Rev. J. R. L. Nisbett, will assume permanent charge.

Church of the Holy Comforter, Philadelphia

On June 15th occurred the 25th anniversary of the laying of the corner stone. There was a celebration of the Holy Eucharist at 7 A. M., and at 8 P. M., a choral festival service was held, at which addresses were made by the vicar, the Rev. W. H. Graff, the Rev. G. Wharton Mc-

Mullin, Mr. John Reese, and Bishop Whitaker, followed by a parish reception. The church, built by the late Mrs. Margaretta Lewis, is renowned for the good work it carries on.

Fall of Tower of Trinity Church, Ambler

About 20 feet of the tower of the new church fell without warning on Monday afternoon, 26th ult., completely wrecking a large part of the tile roof and everything else beneath it. Two workmen had very narrow escapes. This is the second accident which has happened to the building. Last summer a gale of hurricane proportions blew part of the walls down, and wrecked the heavy trusses which supported the roof. The church is the gift of Dr. and Mrs. R. V. Mattison, as a memorial of their deceased daughter.

House of St. Michael and All Angels'

This is the first known work of mercy devoted to crippled children of the African race in this country. In its pretty assembly hall, on the morning of St. Peter's Day, was assembled a large number of the friends to witness the public closing exercises of the school. The programme which was begun with a brief devotional service, included a number of essays and recitations by the pupils, interspersed with several patriotic songs, and short addresses by the Rev. Alden Welling, chaplain, and the mission Sister, Sister Ivaline Margaret, of the Sisterhood of St. Margaret.

Holy Trinity's Holiday House

Conducted by the church of the Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, for several years past, was reopened, at Sellersville, for the season, on Saturday, 24th ult., the rector, the Rev. F. W. Tomkins, conducting the service. The house provides for the comfort of needy, tired, sick, and worn-out persons of the parish who have not the means to visit the seashore or country. The Fresh-air Committee of Holy Trinity provides about $2,000 each season for the maintenance of Holiday House, which is delightfully situated on the edge of a wood. Last season, 345 guests were entertained.

Legacies for Church Purposes

On the 28th ult., Judge Ashman of the Orphans' Court, in the estate of Emilie A. Mathieu, deceased, awarded to the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the P. E. C., a balance of $5,061, being the residuary estate. In the will of Elizabeth A. Burns, probated 29th ult., estate valued at $7,300, are the following bequests: to the wardens of the church of the Redemption, Philadelphia, $800; to the same church, $300 for the placing of a memorial to her husband, Richard A. Burns, and herself; to the Rev. Thomas R. List, rector, the sum of $500, and to the same, $300, to dispose of as he sees best. The balance of the estate is to go to the Sunday school of the same church. In a codicil, a portion of the estate is left to the P. E. City Mission.

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The South Side Clericus met recently, when the Rev. F. James R. Smith read an essay on "The work of the Church in Newfoundland." Six of the clergy were present.

Consecration of St. Luke's, Sea Cliff

Took place on the morning of June 29th. The articles of donation were presented to the Bishop by the senior warden, William L. Hind, and the service of consecration followed. The sermon was by the Rev. Lindsay Parker, Ph.D. The music was finely rendered, entirely by female voices, the regular choir being assisted by a girls' choir, organized and drilled for this special service. A number of clergymen and distinguished laymen were present. St. Luke's, the Rev. Geo. C. Groves, rector, has a communicant list of 115. Three lay readers assist the rector. The church organizations are: St. Luke's Guild, with a membership of nearly 100; the St. Luke's Athletic Club, the Woman's Gymnasium Class, St. Luke's Chapter Daughters of the King, and the Altar Guild. Following the service, a luncheon was served to visitors and members of the parish at the Lyceum.

Church Charity Foundation

The co-workers of St. John's Hospital have had the chancel of the chapel covered with a flooring of oak, in ten-inch squares, with a border of oak and mahogany, and have also had a strip of handsome carpet laid from the foot of the altar, the entire length of the chancel and nave. The complete result is beautiful and satisfactory.

Connecticut

Chauncey B. Brewster, D.D., Bishop

The Church Army

A post of the Church Army has been established in Bridgeport, under the supervision of Capt. Jackson. At the opening services, the rooms were filled, and earnest addresses were made by Major Stansfield and others from New Haven, and by the Rev. Messrs. Herbert D. Cone and G. A. Robson. The outlook for successful work in this city is in every way encouraging.

St. John's, Warehouse Point

The Rev. Arthur H. Wright, archdeacon of Hartford, having accepted a call to Newburyport, Mass., the present rector, the Rev. William J. Brewster, was called from his successful work in Northford to this parish. During the brief interregnum a friend of the parish paid for the repainting of the church, and the improvement and enlargement of the rectory. The latter building has been admirably equipped with all modern conveniences, and made a comfortable abode for the rector and his family.

Consecration of Grace Church, Norwalk

For years the congregation have been striving for the goal which they have now reached. The present rector and his predecessor, the Rev. S. H. Watkins, deserve a large share of the credit for the happy consummation of their hopes. At 11 o'clock, June 20th, the Holy Communion was celebrated by Bishop Brewster. Bishop Talbot, of Central Pennsylvania, was the preacher. After the service, the rector, the Rev. J. McClure Bellows, entertained his many guests at luncheon in the rectory.

The Archdeaconry of New Haven

Held its annual meeting in the parish house of St. Thomas' church, New Haven, on June 20. There was a fair attendance of the clergy and a sprinkling of laymen. Archdeacon Wildman presided. The Rev. W. A. Beardsley was elected secretary and treasurer. The Standing Committee selected for the ensuing year are: The Rev. A. T. Randall, Rev. Stewart Means, Mr. Thomas L. Cornell, of Derby, Mr. Frederick C. Earle, of New Haven.

St. John's Church, New Haven

This handsome specimen of 13th century Gothic was consecrated by Bishop Brewster on June 21st. There was a large attendance of clergymen from all over the State. All the members of the Standing Committee of the diocese were present with one exception. Bishop Brewster celebrated the Holy Communion. Dr. Baker, of Trinity church, New Haven, preached the sermon. After the service, the guests of the parish were entertained at the Lawn Club, where the congratulations of all were tendered to the rector, the Rev. Stewart Means, and his able assistants on the accomplishment of their object. There is great promise of development in this part of the city, and the Church is destined always to have a strong support. The building itself is a very handsome architectural structure, presenting with its massive square tower and low broad roof, a reminder of some of the ancient churches of the motherland.

The Church Club

The spring meeting was held in the Ansantawae Club house at Savin Rock, West Haven, June 21st. There was an attendance of about 70 members. The president of the club, Hon. Burton Mansfield, presided. The guests of the club were the Rev. Dr. Hart, the Rev. Dr. Baker, of New Haven, the Rev. Dr. Binney, and the Rev. R. H. Gesner. Dr. Hart, as the special speaker of the evening, spoke on "What shall we do with our Sundays." He gave some very striking instances of the way in which the disregard of Sunday was affecting congregations and Sunday schools. "While granting that the laboring man must have some recreation," the speaker thought it was a time for "earnest, strong, self-denial," and urged the prominent laymen before him, for the sake of the influence of their example, to refrain from unnecessary recreations on the Lord's Day. Dr. Baker told of his experience with the continental Sunday in Ohio. He spoke with strong reprobation of the habits of those business men who compelled their clerks on Sunday morning to open and answer the firm's mail, and of that class who by spending the day in golfing and other amusements, set an evil example before the class which had far less leisure for amusement. Dr. Binney urged the laymen of the Church to select first-rate men, men of spiritual perception, intellectual force, and sound common sense, as candidates for the ministry, and showed how much depended on the laity in this important matter. By a rising vote, the resolutions in memory of Bishop Williams were unanimously adopted. The club is in a flourishing condition, and numbers about 110 of the leading Churchmen of the diocese.

Horseneck Chapel—150th Anniversary

The celebration of the 150th anniversary of the erection of Horseneck chapel, Greenwich, began on Sunday, June 18th, by a service at Christ church, at 7:30 o'clock. The church was crowded at 11 o'clock, when Bishop Brewster delivered the sermon. A jubilee hymn, written specially for the occasion by the Rev. D. J. Evans, of New York, and set to music by Prof. Parker, of Yale University, was sung at this and the succeeding services. The jubilee service for the members of the Sunday schools of Christ church, Calvary church, of Round Hill, St. John's chapel, of Byram, and St. Paul's, of Riverside, was attended by about 250 children and teachers. Among the hymns sung was one composed for the occasion by Miss Emily Stuart Weed. Archdeacon Booth made the address, and the children were given an opportunity to make their first offering for the new church fund. At 8 o'clock, probably the most interesting service of the day was held. Many of the clergy from neighboring towns were present. The music was especially well rendered. Two historical addresses were given, the Rev. Samuel Hart dealing with the occurrences up to 1838, when Christ church parish was organized, and the rector, the Rev. M. George Thompson, speaking of those of more recent date.

On Monday evening, a parish reunion was held. The exercises consisted chiefly of music and addresses. The Rev. W. W. Kirkby, D.D., spoke pleasantly of the relation of the Rye church to Christ church. A brief address of good will and congratulation was made by Schuyler Merritt, of the Stamford church, followed by an interesting address by the Rev. L. N. Booth, of Bridgeport, the archdeacon of the diocese. A. Foster Higgins, representing Christ church, spoke of the progress made by the church, and especially during the ministrations of the Rev. M. George Thompson. The Bishop spoke of the early history of the Episcopal Church in Connecticut, and referred to the fact that the Rye church was one of his earlier charges. The Schubert Club and a part of the Orpheus Club sang the beautiful chorus, "List the Cherubic Host," from the "Holy City," with piano and harp accompaniment.

Sunday night, a delightful musical service was held at the church, by the organist and choir, assisted by the Orpheus Club and other friends. The regular choir was increased to about 30 voices, and under the training of Mrs. Carl Martin, gave a number of selections from the best musical works. Mrs. Anna Burch, of New York, gave the oratorio solos, "The marvelous works," from the "Creation," and "Rejoice greatly," from the "Messiah," with fine musical taste and faultless execution.

In 1748, the Rev. Ebenezer Dibble who had been ordained by the Archbishop of Canterbury, was appointed missionary to Stamford and Greenwich. Under date of Sept. 29, 1749, he wrote: "I preach at Horseneck the second Sunday in each month, about six miles from Stamford; have had some converts to the Church there, and the people have zealously exerted themselves to build a small chapel, of about 36 ft. in length and 25 ft. in breadth, to accommodate our assembly at these times, which they have enclosed and glazed. And if they could be favored with a Bible and Common Prayer Book for that church, it will be a very welcome present." This is the event commemorated at this time. In 1799, a century ago, his ministry closed with his life.

Minnesota

Henry B. Whipple, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
M. N. Gilbert, D.D., LL.D., Bishop-coadjutor

The Rev. J. E. Dallam who sailed for the Philippines a year ago with the 13th Minnesota regiment, received an honorable discharge early in April, and returned to Minnesota in May. He resumed his parish work at Excelsior and Shakopee the first Sunday after Trinity, and received a hearty welcome home by his parishioners.

Virginia

Francis M. Whittle, D. D., LL.D., Bishop
Robert A. Gibson, D.D., Bishop-Coadjutor

Slaughter Parish

Bishop Gibson confirmed six persons in Emmanuel church, Rapidan, June 18th, and eight persons in All Saints' chapel, Cedar Mountain, the scene of the great battle, June 19th. The Bishop was assisted by the Rev. Messrs. John Hansbrough, F. S. Ribble, Geo. S. Somerville, and the rector, the Rev. P. Le Bas Cross. The sermons by the Bishop were strong and practical. The service at the chapel was preceded by a "week of services," under the direction of the Rev. George S. Somerville whose sermons made a deep impression.

Church of the Epiphany, Barton Heights

The new parish house has been completed, and its dedication and formal opening took place June 22nd. The junior warden, Mr. Ruffa, in a few words explained the object of the meeting, and was followed by the rector, the Rev. W. P. Chrisman who dedicated the building to the glory of God and the increase of His Church. Mr. Groser, the senior warden, made an address, after which refreshments were served by the ladies of the congregation. The parish house contains a commodious hall, seating 160, with a large platform, and three rooms for the use of the church organizations. The total cost of the building was about $1,000.

South Dakota

William Hobart Hare D.D., Bishop

The Eastern Deanery

The Bishop visited Chamberlain June 12th. Services were held in the evening; the Bishop preached and confirmed four persons, two of them being pupils from the government Indian school located there. The next day he started on a tour through the reservation, expecting to travel 150 miles by wagon and 200 by rail during the ensuing week. Vermillion was visited by the Bishop June 21st and 22d. Wednesday Evening Prayer was said by the Rev. F. N. Tummon, and a sermon preached by Dean Cornell. Thursday morning, Mr. Jay Scott Budlong who has served faithfully and acceptably as lay-reader at Vermillion during the past 14 months, was made deacon, as recorded elsewhere. The church was filled at all the services. The music was well rendered by a large choir, under the direction of Mr. Frederick G. Bruschweiler, the professor of music in the State University at Vermillion, who also composed an anthem for the occasion. The cathedral chapter holds a very valuable property in trust for the Church at Vermillion—five acres of land near the university, a church and a rectory, all paid for and in good condition. It is hoped that a hall may some day be erected for the accommodation of our Church students who attend the university.

Niobrara Deanery

May 22d, the Bishop started from Chamberlain to visit the missions on the Rosebud Reserve. Heavy rains and deep mud made camping out not very agreeable, and progress very slow; so much so that he made only 55 miles during the first three days. It was almost impossible for him to meet his engagements, but he visited St. Mary's Indian boarding school, where the exercises showed marked progress on the part of the pupils. Then he visited a number of the congregations in the Rev. Mr. Clark's cure, and reached home in time to take part in the closing exercises of All Saints' School, and in meetings of the chapter and the Standing Committee. June 18th to 16th, he visited the missions at Lower Brule and Crow Creek agencies, preaching often and confirming many candidates. June 26th, he began a ten days' visitation of the missions at the Cheyenne River and Standing Rock agencies.

Texas

George H. Kinsolving, D.D., Bishop

Progress at Bryan and Navasota

These parishes are making great strides under the able rectorship of the Rev. Dr. Bowers. In Bryan, St. Andrew's church has been thoroughly restored and lighted with electricity, the rectory improved; there is a Woman's Auxiliary, consisting of 36 members, an altar society of 24, and an increased number of communicants. A vested choir of 25 members has been formed in Navasota, and the outlook for the future is very bright. There is no debt on either church.

Colorado

John Franklin Spalding, Bishop

New Window and Vessels for the Cathedral

On March 31 some one broke into the cathedral and destroyed the sacred vessels. Dean Hart appealed for their replacement, and Sunday, June 18th, a handsome new set, consisting of two flagons, the glass cut specially in the pine-apple design, a bread plate, and two chalices and two patens, made of Colorado silver, and gilded in Denver with Colorado gold, was dedicated. The work was completed by the Gorham Mfg Company.

On Sunday, the 24th, the 21st stained glass window was unveiled in the Denver cathedral. It came 16 months ago from the studio of Mr. Frampton, London. It is given by Mrs. Husted, in memory of her father and husband. Mr. G. W. Hall was the patriarch of Georgetown, a 32d degree Mason, and a man of great probity and hospitality. The window is on the north side of the nave, and represents Abraham receiving the three angels, to emphasize the existence of our Lord previous to the Incarnation. The upper light of the window is filled with masonic emblems. During the construction of the window, the Dingley Bill was passed, which puts the exorbitant and unjust duty of 45 per cent. on church windows. Dean Hart, therefore, allowed the window to remain in bond until the Custom House authorities sold it by auction last week, when the Dean bought it in for less than half the duty.

On Thursday, the 22nd, the corner-stone of the Young Women's Christian Association was laid by the president, Mrs. Grant. Dean Hart presided. Twelve years ago the Association was commenced by Sister Ada, a Mildmay deaconess, who came over to help the Dean; 13,000 girls have passed through the institution, and an average of 50 a day passed through the employment bureau. In order to accommodate the class of girls who earn not more than $5 a week, a Girls' Friendly Club was inaugurated by the Dean's daughter, Miss Agnes Hart, at which accommodation and board is given at $3 a week. This institution is self-supporting.

Western Michigan

George De Normandie Gillespie, D.D., Bishop

The Standing Committee organized by the election of the Rev. R. R. Claiborne, Kalamazoo, president, and the Rev. R. H. F. Gairdner, Grand Rapids, secretary.

St. Alban's Mission, Dowagiac

The interest in this new mission continues, which makes the work very encouraging to the priest, the Rev. H. P. Vicborn. In spite of the approaching hot weather, and easy facilities for Sunday pleasures, the congregations are increasing in number. The choir has made wonderful progress under the painstaking and faithful leadership of Mrs. John L. Parker, with Mr. Otis Bigelow, organist, to whom the mission owes much for their interest in this part of the work. On the evening of the 2d Sunday after Trinity, the whole choir, with many of the congregation, accompanied the priest to Cassopolis, 10 miles distant, also under his charge, and assisted in the service.

The Bishop's Eightieth Birthday

On June 14th, the 80th anniversary of Bishop Gillespie's birth, his friends were received informally at the episcopal residence. Numerous gifts of beautiful cut flowers and plants were sent in by friends. The members of St. Mark's church, Grand Rapids, remembered the Bishop with a number of richly-bound volumes, a gold-headed cane, and a handsome silk umbrella.

Grace Church, Traverse City

Is slowly, but surely, taking its rightful place in the community. A number of improvements have been made in the church building during the year, and the congregations steadily increase. The rector was invited to deliver the sermon before the graduating class of the high school.

Quincy

Alexander Burgess, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Bishop writes from St. Albans, Vt.: "I report, as heretofore, no distressing symptoms, but no increase of strength. I hope to go, in a few days, to the seaside, if strong enough to travel."

Dr. and Mrs. Rudd are spending a few weeks in Canada; Dean Moore's family has gone to Wisconsin; Dr. Sweet will spend a part of July with Dr. Leffingwell, at Old Mission, Mich.; Col. Noyes and family are camping out at Clam Lake, Mich.

Michigan City

John Hazen White, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. Louis A. Arthur, of Detroit, officiated the 4th Sunday after Trinity at St. Paul's, La Porte. The parish was deeply impressed with his earnest ministrations.

St. Andrew's mission, Kokomo, has renewed its efforts to revive its work, with much encouragement. The Bishop has placed in charge for the summer as a lay-reader, Mr. Albert C. Thomas, a senior at Seabury Divinity School.

The activities of the diocese are coming into shape very nicely, and give promise of a bright future. The Bishop has personally taken charge of the cathedral, and will care for its work until the first convention of the diocese, which will be held in November. The Bishop spent the 2nd Sunday in June at St. John's, Elkhart, celebrating the Holy Communion at 8 A. M., preaching at the 10:30 service, and in the evening confirming a class of 14.

Clerical Marriages

On Monday, the 26th, the Rev. Elias Boudinot Stockton, the retiring rector of St. James', Goshen, who has removed to Vermont, was married in his late parish church to Miss Caroline Abbott, of Goshen. On Tuesday, the 27th, the Rev. Walter Jay Lockton, rector of Trinity church, Logansport, was married in the cathedral to Miss Nellie Hamrick, of Michigan City.

The Woman's Auxiliary

Are actively at work enlisting the various parochial branches in the work of sustaining one missionary in the diocese. As soon as his support is assured, it is the purpose of the Bishop to appoint him with residence at Delphi, to work from that point to Hammond, along the line of the Monon road. Trinity church, Peru, is the first to be heard from with a remittance, the Auxiliary of that parish sending a check for $25, unsolicited, to the treasurer, on the very day the cathedral branch held its annual meeting. Under the inspiration of this remittance, the cathedral branch pledged itself for $100. The last named gave a reception to the branch of St. Paul's, LaPorte, which was a delightful occasion in bringing together some 50 women of the two parishes for an exchange of social courtesies and conferences on future work.

Appointment of an Archdeacon

The Bishop has appointed the Rev. Lawrence T. Cole, Ph.D., as archdeacon. He will make his home and headquarters at Marion, and from there have charge of the work in the seven south-eastern counties, where a very large work ought to be done in the near future.

East Carolina

Alfred Augustin Watson, D.D., Bishop

Bishop Watson visited Christ church, Elizabeth City, on Sunday morning, June 4th, preached and confirmed five candidates.

St. Thomas' Parish, Beaufort Co.

The home church of this parish is in the ancient village of Bath, a brick building erected in 1734. At Yeatesville, seven miles away, a neat frame chapel has been built, and on Monday, June 19th, was consecrated by the name of St. Matthew's chapel. The Bishop was assisted in the consecration by the deacon-in-charge, the Rev. F. Joyner, and the evangelist of the convocation, the Rev. F. B. Ticknor, who preached the sermon. During the service four adults and two infants were baptized and seven were presented for Confirmation. The building is neat and Churchly, costing about $700, and is the result mainly of the hard work and self-denial of the Rev. Mr. Joyner and Mr. John Tankard, junior warden of the parish. That night services were held in St. Thomas' church, at which five were baptized and seven confirmed. Tuesday a visit was made to a new mission at Long Acre, where two were confirmed. Mr. Joyner has worked faithfully for several years in what seemed to be a most unpromising field, and has a strong hold upon the affections of the people.

Iowa

Theodore Nevil Morrison, D.D., Bishop

Miss Emma A. Rice, principal of St. Katharine's Hall, Davenport, was married recently at Grace church, New York, to Mr. J. J. Richardson, proprietor of The Davenport Democrat. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson sailed for Europe on the "Campania." Miss Rice deserved and won great credit for her able management of St. Katharine's diocesan school for girls. Under her administration it has prospered. Mr. Richardson is one of the most prominent and active Churchmen of Iowa.

Alabama

Richard Hooker Wilmer, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
H. Melville Jackson, D.D., Bishop-coadjutor

Grace Church, Oakdale

After many delays, the building is so nearly completed that the Church services and Sunday school are held in it. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew conduct the services. Grace church is the only Church building in Oakdale, and nearly all the money and material for the building have been gifts from the Churchmen of Mobile, and a large part of the labor has been voluntary. In its unfinished condition it is valued at $650.

Editorials and Contributions

THIS is the age of sickly sentimentalism, and not one of heroic devotion to truth. Indeed, there is a set of men whose new Gospel, or new interpretations of the old Gospel, belong to the region of gush, rather than of intellect and sound sense. They will have their day. But it hardly seems fair to cry "persecution" because some one shows up their weak points and aims the shaft of satire at their folly. It is not persecution to denounce error. It is not persecution to accentuate the inconsistencies of some of the higher critics, and to expose their monumental self-conceit. It is not persecution to insist that when men subscribe to formularies which they believe only by putting their private interpretations upon them, they are guilty of false pretence and dishonesty.

ANY ONE who is familiar with the tactics of certain gentlemen in recent times, will have seen the duplication of the artful dodging of the old Arian heretics. The poison of heresy lies in its two-facedness. How men can dare to differ we understand, but how they can conceal and lie about their errors, we cannot understand. The Church Times, some years since, pointed out how the heretic hides himself behind the complaint of persecution, referring to the Puritans: "If the crew of a ship in her Majesty's service showed mutiny, put the captain to death, and set the officers adrift in a boat, took possession of the vessel and set out on a pirate cruise, and then, when overhauled and captured, instead of being strung up at the yard arm, should be offered the privilege of continuing in her Majesty's service in the same ship, only on condition of signing the articles of war, this would represent exactly the case of the Puritans in the rebellion, and the restoration of 1660. They murdered the king, forcibly drove out the bishops and clergy to the number of eight thousand, not allowing them to use the Prayer Book, or even to teach school for a living, and then, when offered to retain their positions, thus gotten by force and robbery, on condition of conforming to the 'Act of Uniformity,' they called it persecution, and tried with all the cant and hypocrisy of sectarian cunning to have it go down to history in that shape."

THEY were the real persecutors, and the policy which dealt gently with them was precisely the policy of mercy which the Prayer Book inculcates. But they belonged to that intolerant race which still abides within the fold, which thinks itself the pure favorite of heaven, commissioned to wipe out those who differ by the sword of old Judaism. These are they who denounce us as persecutors (!) because we are not willing to see the Gospel of the Kingdom go down in the ruin of Calvinism and other degenerate types of 16th century religion, and not willing that destructive critics, mad with the mania for overturning things (the veritable spirit of political nihilism!), shall maké light of the Holy Scriptures, and overthrow the very fundamental truths of the Christian religion.

THE era of sickly sentimentalism has about come to an end. We are weary of it. Better all the fires of contention than an inglorious indifference and a cowardly withdrawal from the defence of assailed truth. We warn these gentlemen of the new interpretation, that unless they hide their heads they will one day hear the people—the lay people who believe—sing the "Marseillaise."

THE venerable Bishop Huntington, of Syracuse, in his convention address, speaks of the evident truth that a revelation must include a divine and human element, existing without mutual destruction, enmity, or fatal contradiction, and that the points requiring revision in the Holy Scriptures are mostly literary or linguistic. In recognizing these facts, as reverent and wise believers have done, there has been "no shock to veneration," and "no distrust of a divine inspiration, no distressing doubt of the heavenly Record, no scandalous rumor of defection, on any noticeable scale, need have been felt. The apparatus of just criticism would have been kept in its right place, and only when a step in revision, or altered translation, or explanation, had been so demonstrated as to be beyond dispute, would it have been advertised, and then proposed by the lawful guardians of discipline and doctrine." In another column we give in full this striking and eloquent passage from the Bishop's address.

THIS whole matter of the Briggs' style of criticism, resolves itself into a question of good sense. Why must the men who see flaws rush out and fill the air with their panic shrieks, as if what was known before they were born as to discrepancies and problems, and things hard to understand, were a sufficient reason for their silly hullabaloo. True scholarship is humble, quiet, self-depreciatory. It is the self-conceited babbler who does more to discredit the Bible than its alleged discrepancies.

—x—

"Senseless Opposition"

THE Rev. Dr. Hall Harrison has expressed himself with considerable fervency on the subject of the opposition to the ordination of Dr. Briggs. It reminds him of the "senseless opposition" to the consecration of Dr. Temple as Bishop of Exeter in 1869. That opposition was based, as every one knows, on Dr. Temple's part in the notorious "Essays and Reviews." It might be perfectly true that his own particular paper was not open to serious objection, but its general intention was inevitably judged by the drift of the book of which it formed a part. All the disclaimers in the world could not disabuse the public mind of the conviction that his essay would not have been admitted by the editors unless they had considered the author to be in sympathy with their views and aims. Besides this, in so far as the name of Dr. Temple, headmaster of Rugby, aided the sale of the book, to that extent he was actually responsible for the dissemination of the views of the book as a whole. Up to the time of his nomination to Exeter, Dr. Temple had not publicly differentiated himself from the other contributors to the obnoxious volume. He still stubbornly refused to reassure the anxious members of the Church of England on this point, although so well balanced a man as Dean Church was of opinion that something of this nature was properly called for. Dr. Temple undeniably has "the defects of his virtues." His sturdy independence of public opinion, in itself worthy of all admiration, may sometimes degenerate into mere obstinate refusal to satisfy even a reasonable demand. It was so in this case. The result was, that he was in the position of forcing his way to the episcopate with the aid of the civil authorities, and, persistently refusing to disown connection with the views of the condemned volume, his action had the force of compelling the acceptance of those views as tolerable in an authorized teacher and guardian of the Faith. To this day the presence of Dr. Temple in the See of Canterbury is triumphantly cited as a proof of the ascendancy of the school of which "Essays and Reviews" constitute a manifesto.

SO far from being "senseless," we regard the opposition of Dr. Pusey and other prominent men to the consecration of Dr. Temple in 1869, as entirely justified by the situation of affairs at that time. Dr. Harrison's single argument for the groundlessness of that opposition is that now, thirty years later, both England and America unite in respecting and honoring "the great Archbishop." We yield to none in this homage to a man whose career and present position have marked him as far above the common herd, but we fail to see that it has any logical bearing upon the case in hand. It is a method of argument little short of childish. A man is a candidate for the priesthood or the episcopate. To many people of no mean capacity he seems to be implicated in false teaching dangerous to the Faith of the Church. He refuses all explanation or justification, but by favor of those who possess the requisite power, he is ordained. In the course of time it transpires that he was not the dangerous teacher he was supposed to be, or his views undergo a change. The evil which was feared, and which there was reason to fear, does not take place. It is plain, however, that this is not because false teaching is not evil, but because it either did not exist or was in the course of time corrected.

ON the strength of such a case, it is now seriously argued that there ought to be no opposition to anybody on the ground of false teaching. The result in one case turned out satisfactorily; the fears which were felt were dispelled. Therefore we are to assume that every such case will turn out well, and that such fears ought always to be treated as groundless. In fact, to entertain any fears, or to object to any teaching, however difficult it may be to reconcile it with the Christian religion as we have received it, is to be set down to mere panic. It is "senseless." No harm came of the former experiment, why suppose any harm will come now? Let us not engage in "heresy hunting," but ordain anybody who is willing to sign the requisite formularies, and take the required vows, no matter if, in any ordinary or even extraordinary interpretation of the English language, they seem utterly inconsistent with his published utterances. To put the matter in the briefest compass, the position we are considering appears to be this: A man was once ordained or consecrated in spite of the fact that he seemed to be a heretic. He turned out not to be heretic, or he changed his teaching, or he died. Thus no harm ensued. In future, therefore, let us freely ordain heretics.

Theology and Religion

IT has become a sort of fashion in certain quarters to insist pointedly upon the distinction between theology and religion. The aim seems to be to assure people that while religion is necessary, theology is only a matter of the schools. Only be religious, and you need not disturb your mind about theology. Clearly there is a distinction. Religion may be considered as involving the subjective convictions and the emotions together with activities through which the spiritual nature strives to express its sense of the reality of a spiritual world and of the obligations which such reality brings. Theology is the statement of the divine and heavenly things known, or considered to be known, upon which religion is based and which mould and control its character.

THUS stated, it is evident that while religion and theology may be distinguished, they cannot be separated. If the theology is false, the religion will be false also. If it be imperfect or corrupt, the religion will be affected accordingly. A pagan religion is false because its theology is false. As soon as it is asserted that there are "gods many," we have a theology, and all the ideas and practices of religion will necessarily be shaped by this fundamental conception. Within the realm of Christian influence, it is an absurdity to say that so far as religion is concerned, it is all one whether the underlying theology asserts that Christ is the Eternal Son of God, of one substance with the Father, or that He was a mere man. To eliminate the Incarnation is to alter essentially the theology of Christianity, and surely it needs no proof that the whole character of the Christian religion is altered with it, and so far altered that it is no longer the same thing.

IN the valedictory remarks of The Church—the Boston organ of the more extreme "Broad Church"—the failure of that paper to attain the position at which it aimed, is partly attributed to the lack of interest in theology on the part of the laity. It is suggested that there is no considerable body of them "who care to think about things more or less remote from practical or pictorial matters." We should hardly have looked for such a reflection upon the intelligent laity of Boston. Can it be true that a community which was nourished in the traditions of the old intellectual Unitarianism, whose religious leaders were Channing, Theodore Parker, Freeman Clark, and Edward Everett Hale, who drank in the teachings of Transcendentalism and sat at the feet of Emerson, and who, in the present generation, look with eagerness for the latest utterances of John Fiske on "The Idea of God" and "The Mystery of Evil," should, so soon as they become Churchmen, cease to care for these things, and become addicted henceforth simply to the "pictorial and practical"?

MAY it not be that it is not theology in itself which fails to arouse interest, but the special kind of theology which it was the business of The Church to propagate? We venture this explanation with all deference to the profound thinkers who presided over the editorial department, and we do not deny that, to some extent, the wish may be father to the thought. It has seemed to us that this "new theology" was so flagrantly inconsistent with the teachings of the Prayer Book, the Creeds, and the Articles, that no amount of ingenious interpretation could bring about a reconciliation which would be satisfactory to a mind of the normal type. Men grow tired of the attempt to bring in "another Gospel" under cover of the old formularies, and, at bottom, they do not want another Gospel.

BUT why should the slur be cast upon the laity, that they are not interested in theology? Is there any foundation for it, and, if so, what is it? In the first place, there is, and always will be, a sufficiently numerous class of persons who are not capable of much depth of thought. Of such it may justly be said that they are not interested in theology or in any other subject of a serious character. Such people must, no doubt, be taught, but anything of a didactic character repels them. Besides this class, it is true of people generally that they do not like dullness. So it comes to pass that if a sermon is dull, it is supposed to be because it is "theological." Another sermon may be equally theological but because it is attractive or eloquent, it is set down as "practical."

THE patent fact is that there never was a period in which so great a number of people were vitally interested in the problems of theology. Not only the more important reviews, but the popular magazines, devote an amount of space to such subjects which can only have one significance. Further than this, if, as has been recently noticed, certain religious newspapers have become more or less secularized, the secular papers exhibit an increasing interest in everything connected with religion, and this certainly not to the exclusion of subjects distinctly theological. These are facts which show clearly enough the attitude of the public mind. In such matters there is a clear relation between supply and demand. It cannot be contended that Churchmen possess a lower average of intelligence than other cultivated people, or are less interested in the most vital of all questions. In fact, it is the experience of many of the clergy that multitudes of people are yearning for something permanent in religion; they seek, in short, for a strength and stability which can only be found in a true theology.

Destructive Criticism

FROM BISHOP HUNTINGTON'S CONVENTION ADDRESS, 1899

NEEDLESS public occurrences have lately done a deplorable injury to the great cause to which we all alike owe our supreme allegiance. Since the first few generations after Pentecost, the power, the extension, the doctrine, the worship, the work, the defence, of the Christian Faith, have been inseparable from the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as a book. The proofs of this fact, as they appear in every department of Christian learning and literature, from the beginning, in systems and treatises, in corporate and personal religion, in institutions of education, charity, and the preaching of the Gospel, in missions and reforms, are too plain and too all-pervading to be named here. I suppose it is not too much to say, not referring now to what the Church has owed to these writings before they were formally brought together in the canon, that it is impossible to see how the Church could have kept its integrity, its authority, its unity, its practical force in the living world, without them; i.e., how Christianity could have survived.

Consider, what the scholarship and the libraries of Christendom very well know, that on the authenticity and genuineness of this Book, in its various particulars of evidence, an ample share of the best intellectual faculty of the several periods and languages has been expended against critical assault and contention. Consider also, that in a volume of such great dimensions, such a vast variety of topics, kinds and times of composition and of human authorship, the range of illustration, reference, and allusion, with the difference in language and dialect, with the influence of natural objects and human personalities and local events on the writers and what is written, according to any conception we can frame of a revelation of the mind and will of God to mankind, a divine and human element must co-exist without mutual destruction, enmity, or fatal contradiction. Consider that in the thinking and reasonable part of the world this has been for some time well understood and acknowledged without a serious disturbance of the foundations or the authority of the Faith in the Church, but rather with a strengthening of them, the points requiring such revision being mostly only literary or linguistic.

It is my conviction that this providential course, guided by reverent and wise believers in the orders of the clergy, and by self-oblivious laymen, might have been so conducted that this "greater confirmation of the faith" in Holy Scripture could have gone steadily on. No shock to veneration, no distrust of a divine inspiration, no distressing doubt of the heavenly record, no scandalous rumor of defection, on any noticeable scale, need have been felt. The apparatus of just criticism would have been kept in its right place, and only when a step in revision, or altered translation, or explanation, had been so demonstrated as to be beyond dispute, would it have been advertised, and then proposed by the lawful guardians of discipline and doctrine. Then an unshrinking attempt by any ordained minister, to fix terms of contempt, ridicule, incredulity, upon the matchless and singular volume which has declared itself through ages, without effectual dispute, to be the Word of God, which has been handled with awe in the highest seats of law and courts of judgment, which has been pressed with adoring gratitude to the breasts of martyrs, saints, statesmen, and seers, which has saturated litanies, missals, Prayer Books, altar anthems, and august obsequies with its unearthly spirit, and glorified them with its grandeur, could have been only offensive by its impertinence, and amazing by its audacity. Then it would not have recklessly been put in the power of the skeptical who seek excuses for disbelief, of the hard-hearted who hate to hear of the holiness of heaven and are impatient of warnings of retribution, of the frivolous, the self-indulgent, the profane, the sensual, the prayerless whom we can only pray for, the worldly to whom we try to proclaim the kingdom of God, to say back to us: "Oh, your own Bible is pulled to pieces, your own witnesses discredit it, your own priests and prophets tell us it is not the commandment of God, but the guesses and fables and fancies of mistaken men, and nobody tells us where delusion ends and reality begins." No. This need not have been said. Truth did not demand it. Nobody supposes that the Christian religion is to make its way effectually among men against established facts. Its real issue with science is as to what the facts are. That being finally settled, if it ever is, the two revelations, in nature and in the Bible, will be mutually adjusted, God being one God. "Any religion that is true must be difficult in many respects to believe, only it must be in many more and greater respects, difficult to disbelieve."

My friends, I say this to you because I must. I say it with hesitation, because the saying costs much, and yet because I cannot in my place and with my promises, say less. My reference is as free from personality or prejudice as I can make it. Nothing can persuade me that any bishop of the Church of God can be compelled to lay ordaining hands for the Christian priesthood, by any known law of God or the Church, on any man he deems unworthy of the office and its sanctities, the Church continuing to pray, at the Ember season, for all bishops, that they may "faithfully and wisely make choice of fit persons to serve in the sacred ministry of the Church." What kind of men would accept the office if there were such compulsion?

— x —

Is There Room in the Ministry?

BY THE REV. FRED'K S. JEWELL, D. D.

II.

THE second phase of the question, that touching the clerical conditions, or employment for the clergy we have, has, until the recent ordination imbroglio in New York, been the more especial subject of contention. Numerically considered alone, have we or have we not too many ministers for the fields to be occupied and the work which should be expended on them? Whichever it may be, the answer reveals evils alike serious, and, it is to be feared, alike remediless. For if the supply be so much too great as to give just occasion for the recent outcry, it implies a condition of things tending to produce clerical lapses and depositions, secularization, and distressful non-employment, an evil "without a redeeming quality." On the contrary, if the supply be none too great, and there is the alleged difficulty in securing proper ministerial employment in parishes or missions, then there must exist either a sad amount of priestly incapacity or some grievous neglect or mismanagement on the part of the Church authorities, both evils greatly to our injury and discredit. Thus we are here confronted by a sort of King Lear dilemma:

"Thou did'st shun a bear!

But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea!"—

And with small gain in choosing the bear alternative.

Stripped of all considerations of principle and character, the answer to the question is a mere matter of numbers. The resort, then, must be to Church statistics, and these are confessedly unreliable. Unlike the collected bones of an extinct animal, you can not, from the data they afford, reconstruct the desired form of the actual fact. But taking them as they are, we find in the United States a sum total of 4,754 clergy and 6,294 parishes and missions, an excess in the latter of 1,541. On its face, this looks like abundant room in the ministry for all we have, and all we can get from all our varied sources of supply. But as some of these parishes are not self-supporting, and for many of these missions, much the larger part of the whole, the Church provides no visible means of ministerial support, they cannot be considered open field, and must be subtracted from the sum total of excess. How much this will lessen that sum we have no means of knowing; but even if we suppose it to amount to two-thirds of the whole, there would still remain an excess of parishes and missions, so that we may still say, "and yet there is room."

But there appear to be some whose more immediate observation has led them to an opposite conclusion. This might easily be the case with those especially conversant only with the older and more populous dioceses of the East, such as Massachusetts, Connecticut, Long Island, New York, Newark, and Pennsylvania. In these dioceses, statistics make the number of clergymen 1,339, while that of parishes and missions is only 1,148, an excess of 191 on the part of the former. How much this excess might be reduced by subtracting the number of those who, as disabled or superannuated, cannot be regarded as a part of the working force, it is impossible to tell. But whatever it may be, there would probably still remain an excess of ministers as compared with the parishes and missions. Here then, numerically considered, there appears to be a case where there is no room in the ministry.

But, if there is in these dioceses a real lack of room arising from their surplus of ministers, it is well to look at the causes which tend to produce that surplus. For if it should appear that these causes are distinctly local, their existence here, rather than elsewhere, will go far to show that the evil deplored is itself local, rather than general. This inquiry is also the more important, because the alleged lack of room in the ministry has, with singular haste and unreason, been charged to the extension of the so-called free-church system and the exploiting of the priestly idea. How utterly wild this charge is, may be seen from the facts that they are not of common occurrence throughout the Church; that the free-church system, while on some accounts justly faulted, is not so extensively adopted as to exert any such large influence on the fortunes of the unemployed clergy, and that the very dioceses where the priestly idea is generally maintained are those where this want of room, or ministerial employment, is less common or severe. This much is also certain—these causes are not specially operative in the six dioceses under consideration. The real causes which lead to this congregating of supernumerary clergy in these dioceses, are the increasing drift of population toward the great centres of life and activity; the larger opportunities for the incidental employment of those without regular charges; the more abundant openings in institutions of learning for clerical scholars and specialists in science as instructors; the disposition of those who graduate at eastern seminaries to seek for situations in the larger and more luxurious parishes of the East, rather than in the new and ruder fields of the West—a tendency already attracting the attention of western bishops and inciting them to more strenuous endeavor to provide an adequate home-training for their postulants; and, for clergymen of easy dispositions, ample means, and cultivated taste, the more varied, accessible, and delightful means of gratification and improvement—advantages of their kind more attractive to such minds than the multiplied calls, labors, and harassments of parish life. It is certainly not hard to see how strong in this direction must be the influence of the great centres of the Atlantic slope to increase the number of the resident ministry over that of the parishes and missions; nor how inapplicable to the Church in general any conclusions drawn from this local condition of things must be. This inapplicability may be further seen by simply noticing the fact that in the remaining seventy-one dioceses and districts, we have reported 3,347 ministers, as against 5,247 parishes and missions, giving an excess of the latter of 1,900; and that in twenty-one of these dioceses and districts the number of the parishes and missions in each is double that of its ministers. Considered, then, in the light of comparative numbers alone, there is already room enough in the ministry, not only for all the ministers we have, without deducting the disabled or superannuated, but also, as there are reported but 725 candidates and postulants, for all those we are able to produce; the total excess of parishes and missions over all being 1,175.

But, in spite of all this, it still appears to be the fact that there are those in the ministry who are desirous to do the work for which they were ordained, who cannot find this room; in other words, who either find it difficult, or altogether fail, to secure the just ministerial place or field in which to do it. Of course it is impossible to tell how many are unfortunately thus situated; but from the startling list of non-parochial clergy found on our diocesan rolls, and from applications for employment known to be made here and there to bishops and other clergy, the number must be considerable. I have myself received, and from widely separated points in the Church, appeals—some of the most moving character—for information and aid in this direction, and I can but believe that other clergymen far more favorably situated as to position and influence than myself, could tell of a much larger experience of this kind. But aside from this, the very origin of the discussion which, so to speak, has raged around this subject, broached as it was by so prominent a divine, and argued by him with so much earnestness and force, is ground sufficient for believing that the evil does exist; that there is, on the part of not a few of the worthy unemployed, a difficulty in obtaining proper place for the performing of the work to which they were ordained, which ought not to exist; and that in consequence no little suffering is caused where enough otherwise occurs, and no slight discredit and damage are done to the Church herself.

(To be continued)

— x —

Personal Mention

The Rev. W. A. Beardsley and wife have sailed for Europe, to spend vacation.

The Rev. Wm. J. Brewster has accepted the rectorship of St. John's church, Warehouse Point, Conn.

The summer address of the Rev. Geo. Biller will be Beleville, N. J.

The Rev. John C. Eccleston, D. D., will spend part of the summer in Canada.

The Rev. Geo. C. Foley has received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, from the Philadelphia Divinity School.

The Rev. Henry R. and Mrs. Gummey, with several friends, all of Germantown, have gone abroad, and will spend a portion of the summer traveling through Europe.

The Rev. R. H. Gesner will take summer charge of the chapel of the Transfiguration, Norfolk, Conn.

The Rev. Frederic M. Garland will have summer charge of Grace church, New Bedford, Mass.

The Rev. H. C. Goodman will continue to remain in charge of St. John's church, Dubuque, Iowa, until a permanent rector has been appointed.

The Rev. A. B. Hunter, principal of St. Augustine's Colored School, Raleigh, N. C., with his wife, have been given a vacation in Europe, through the kindness of a friend of the school, and will remain abroad until September.

The Rev. Chas. E. Hutchison has accepted the rectorship of Grace church, Avondale, Cincinnati, diocese of Southern Ohio.

The Rev. Horaio W. Pell Hodson, M. A. (Hobart), has received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, on examinations, from Northern Illinois College.

The Rev. Leslie E. Learned will spend the summer in England and Scotland, with a brief visit to the continent.

The Rev. John S. Lindsay, D. D., received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, at the recent Commencement of Washington and Lee University.

The Rev. Arthur Selden Lloyd has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity, from Roanoke College, Virginia.

The Rev. J. A. Montgomery's address is changed to 4806 Green st. (near Carpenter Lane), Germantown, Phila.

The Rev. B. F. Matrau has sought rest at Newton, Mass.

The Rev. J. D. McConkey has resigned the rectorship of the church of the Nativity, Lewiston, Idaho.

The Rev. Dr. J. Philip B. Pendleton will spend the month of July in the Adirondacks. His address will be Maple Lodge, Blue Mountain Lake, N. Y.

The Rev. C. M. Pullen has resigned the rectorship of Christ church parish, Green Bay, Wis., to take effect on or before the first day of October, 1897.

The Rev. C. E. S. Rasay is to make a summer tour of Europe.

The Rev. Dr. James S. Stone's address, till Sept. 1st, will be care of Union Bank of London, 2 Princes st., London, Eng.

The Rev. C. J. Shrimpton has withdrawn his resignation of the rectorship of St. John's church, Athol, Mass., by request.

The Rev. E. B. Schmitt sailed for England June 24th, to be absent two months.

Bishop Tuttle, of Missouri, has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, from Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

The Rev. H. Van Allen should be addressed at Bath-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

The vestry of Trinity church, San Jose, Cal., have elected the Rev. J. B. Wakefield, D. D., who, in consequence of impaired health, has resigned the rectorship, rector emeritus.

The Rev. C. Campbell Walker has resigned the rectorship of Zion Church, Philadelphia, to accept that of St. John's church, Clifton, borough of Richmond, Greater New York.

The Rev. Lucius Waterman, D. D., has accepted the rectorship of Trinity church, Claremont, N. Y.

The Rev. F. W. White is temporarily in charge of the cathedral at Davenport, Iowa. Address 821 Brady st.

To Correspondents

THE Aitken Bible was published in Philadelphia in 1782. A leaf between the Old Testament and New Testament states that William White and George Duffield, chaplains to Congress, had examined it, and that Congress approved of the undertaking and recommended this edition. There is a copy in the Congressional Library at Washington, and another in the Whittingham Library, Baltimore. Information about this and other editions is to be found in "Early Bibles of America," by the Rev. John Wright, D. D., of St. Paul, Minn.

COLLECTOR.—If you will send us your name and address, we can now inform you where you can obtain a complete collection of photographs of the bishops of the Anglican Communion.

PERPLEXED.—Aubrey Moore's "Science and the Faith" might partly meet your needs. It is a book of high value. There are several excellent volumes on the S. P. C. K. list touching such subjects, such as "Some Modern Religious Difficulties," "Miracles" (by the Rev. E. A. Litton), "The Story of Creation as told by Theology and Science" (Ackland), "The Origin of the World According to Revelation and Science." The existence of 'man' before Adam does not disprove the existence of Adam. Prof. Fiske has not "conclusively shown" that the story of Adam and Eve came in after the captivity; he has only assumed it. If the theory of evolution be ever so true, it does not disprove the "Fall of man." There are various kinds of evolution. There is degeneration as well as progress. Goldwin Smith's objection to the Incarnation is at least as old as the Nestorian heresy. There is no relation of the Divine with the human or of Infinite with finite being which does not present similar difficulties. It could not be otherwise.

Ordinations

On St. John Baptist's Day, Bishop Gray advanced to the priesthood, the Rev. A. E. Jensen, in St. James' mission church, Tampa. The sermon was preached by Archdeacon Weddell, and the Rev. W. W. De Hart presented the candidate.

The Rt. Rev. W. H. Hare admitted Jay Scott Budlong to the sacred Order of Deacons, at Vermillion, S. Dak., June 22d. The candidate was presented by the Rev. R. Doherty, S. T. D. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dean G. H. Cornell, of Sioux City, Iowa. The Bishop was celebrant at the Holy Communion.

On St. Peter's Day, in the church of the Nativity, Maysville, Ky., the Bishop of Lexington officiating for the Bishop of Tennessee, the Rev. John Ashley Chapin, deacon, son of the rector of the parish, the Rev. D. D. Chapin, was advanced to the order of the priesthood.

In the church of the Holy Spirit, Gambier, Ohio, on the 3rd Sunday after Trinity, the Bishop of Ohio ordained to the diaconate his candidates from the senior class of the theological seminary: Robert Le Roy Harris, Ph. B., Harry St. Clair Hathaway, Thomas R. Hazzard, and Charles Wesley Neumann, B. A. The preacher was the Rev. Cassius M. Roberts.

On Wednesday, June 21st, in St. Thomas' church, Bath, E. C., the Rev. Francis Joyner, deacon-in-charge of the parish, was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Watson. The Rev. Dr. Drane and the Rev. Messrs. N. Harding, L. L. Williams, and F. B. Ticknor, assisting in the service. Dr. Drane presented the candidate, and Mr. Harding preached the sermon.

In the church of the Holy Communion, Charleston, S. C., the Rt. Rev. Ellison Capers, D. D., Bishop of the diocese, advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Messrs. John Henry Brown, Harry Judah Mikell, and James Cash Waring. The Bishop preached the sermon. The Rev. Drs. A. Toomer Porter, John Johnson, and Robert Wilson, and the Rev. Messrs. John Kershaw and A. E. Cornish, assisted in the service.

In St. Paul's church, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, on the 4th Sunday after Trinity, the Rt. Rev. W. A. Leonard, D. D., Bishop of Ohio, advanced to the priesthood the following deacons: The Rev. Charles W. Baker, David W. Thornberry, John H. W. Fortescue-Cole, William E. Hull, and E. Livingston Wells. The first three are graduates of Bexley Hall, the theological school of Kenyon College. The Rev. Mr. Hull who was formerly a Lutheran minister, is rector-elect of St. Paul's church, Mt. Vernon. The candidates were presented by the Rev. Dr. D. F. Davies, of Bexley Hall. The preacher was the Very Rev. Charles D. Williams, D. D.

In St. John's church, Jacksonville, Sunday, June 25th, Bishop Weed ordained to the diaconate Mr. John Chipman and Mr. Samuel Alston Wragg. Morning Prayer having been said at an earlier hour, the services consisted only of the ordination, litany, and celebration of the Holy Eucharist. After the processional and opening prayers, the Bishop preached a powerful sermon on the Apostolic ministry and its threefold character, ending with a most impressive charge to the candidates on the duties, obligations, and privileges of the office to which they were called. The candidates were presented to the Bishop by the rector of the parish, the Rev. Van Winder Shields, D. D. The Rev. John Chipman is to take up work in the diocese of Georgia, under Bishop Nelson, while the Rev. S. A. Wragg who is a graduate of the General Theological Seminary, will work in the diocese of Florida, probably going to Palatka.

Married

JONES-BURTT.—On Wednesday, June 23, 1897, at the cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, N. Y., by the Bishop of Long Island, Florence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Burtt, to the Rev. James Clarence Jones, both of Brooklyn.

NELSON-WELLES.—On Wednesday, June 21, 1897, in St. Paul's church, Waterloo, N. Y., Pauline Fuller Welles, daughter of the late Edward Randolph Welles, Bishop of Milwaukee, to Edward Holden Nelson, of Brooklyn, New York.

Died

LOCKWOOD.—Entered into rest, at midnight on June 16th, 1897, at her residence, Ridgefield, Conn., Harriet Jones, widow of the late Edmund Warren Lockwood, in the 89th year of her age.

HAMILTON.—Entered into rest, at Bellevue, Ohio, on June 16, 1897, Mrs. Mary Woodward Hamilton, widow of the late Rev. Moses Hamilton, in the 68th year of her age.

"The strife is o'er, the battle done?"

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the Rev. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

LET me make an appeal for contributions towards the erection of two little mission halls in the towns of Kingman and Williams, in the missionary district of Arizona. We have several Church families at these two points, but no building of our own in which to worship. One thousand dollars would solve the problem for us. Our people are poor, but they are doing their best in contributing to the missionary's stipend. If God permits us to erect these two little buildings, they will be the only ones of that kind in an interval of 200 miles. This is a grand opportunity for those who would like to help the Church in this missionary diocese.

ROBERT RENISON,
General Missionary.

The Rev. Mr. Renison is doing most excellent work in the growing towns along the Santa Fe Pacific R. R. in Northern Arizona and New Mexico. We must have these churches, if our work in Kingman and Williams is to go on. These are cases of absolute necessity. We have not had much help in my time to build churches out here. I do hope that friends will come to our relief.

J. M. KENDRICK,
Bishop of New Mexico and Arizona.

THE little mission church at East Tawas, Mich., has been partly destroyed by fire; the entire interior of the building, including all vestments, books, pipe organ, and chancel furniture, is a total loss. The Finance Committee ask the help of Churchmen in their efforts to raise two hundred dollars for altar and vestments. The people are doing all in their power to restore the building. Gifts of money, material, or Prayer Books, will be most gratefully received and acknowledged. Address.

WILLIAM OGDEN EMERY,
Tawas Bay Lumber Company,
East Tawas, Mich.

THE church at New Richmond, Wis. (St. Thomas' church), was totally destroyed in the tornado which nearly wiped out that town, on June 12th. Nothing whatever remains, excepting a hole in the ground, and a mass of wreckage about it. Altar, vestments, seats, and everything, hopelessly gone. Nor was there any tornado insurance. We ask for help to rebuild, and begin our work anew. Money can be sent to the missionary-in-charge, the Rev. W. A. HOWARD, JR., Star Prairie, Wis. (P. O.), or to the BISHOP OF MILWAUKEE, Milwaukee, Wis., who has been on the ground, has seen the awful destruction, and who will guarantee this appeal.

Church and Parish

PEOPLES' WAFERS, 25 cents per hundred; priests' wafers, one cent each. The Sisters of All Saints, 801 N. Eutaw street, Baltimore, Md., also invite orders for ecclesiastical embroidery.

EXPERIENCED teacher desires position as tutor in school or family. Latin and English. Unexceptional Maryland references. Address TUTOR, 1200 McCulloh st Baltimore, Md.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, July, 1899

2. 5th Sunday after Trinity. Visitation
B. V. M.
9. 6th Sunday after Trinity.
16. 7th Sunday after Trinity.
23. 8th Sunday after Trinity.
25. ST. JAMES, Apostle.
30. 9th Sunday after Trinity.

Green.
Green.
Green.
Green.
Red.
Green.

If clouds look as if scratched by a hen,
Get ready to reef your topsails then.

"Christ Within Me"

(After the Mission)

BY MRS. R. N. TURNER

There's a Voice of Love that calleth,
"Come up higher, child of Mine,
Make your sacrifice with gladness,
Live with Me the life divine!
Purer worship, holier praise,
Unto God, thy Saviour, raise!"

Heart of Mercy and Compassion,
Lift me up with strong desire!
Quicken Me, O Holy Spirit,
With Thy sacred, living fire!
Lead me in Thy way alone,
Make my will to be Thine own.

Hushed are all the sounds alluring
That once led my soul astray!
Shattered are my earthly idols—
Christ hath called me—I obey!
I will walk where He shall guide,
Ever near His wounded side!

On the altar of our worship,
There I lay my sacrifice;
Offered now with that Pure Offering,
May my true oblation rise!
And the sweet reward be mine,
"Christ within me," Lord Divine!

— X —

Pen-and-Ink-lings

IN a Presbyterian parish, not very far from Chicago, noted for its frequent, and not always voluntary, change of pastors, a new victim was installed last week. The anthem sung on the occasion was marvelously appropriate, being Mendelssohn's "O Jerusalem that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee."

HARPER'S Round Table gives some amusing instances of typographical errors. In Philadelphia a printer turned the expression, "from Alpha to Omega," into "from apples to oranges," and conveyed the impression that somebody had set the Delaware River on fire, by calling ferry-boats "fiery hosts." A cooking school called the "New Century," was cruelly made to appear as the "New Cemetery," and doubtless the same pessimistic typo changed the "Masque of Pandora" into the "Morgue of Pandora." A diver who had found two old bells in the Delaware went before the public as a "driver" who had found "two old bills." The Scripture allusion to the leaven that "leaveneth the whole lump," was perverted into the startling agricultural announcement that the leaven had leavened "the whole turnip."

BISHOP DOANE addresses his colleagues with whom he is on especially familiar terms, by the names of their dioceses, instead of their surnames, and in correspondence frequently makes use of his own and other titles. It is related that on one occasion he wrote a letter to another bishop, and in signing it, used the term, "William of Albany," instead of his name. His correspondent promptly replied to the letter, and in his answer said: "It is really too bad, Bishop, that you are not of the western diocese of your State instead of Albany. If you were, you might very appropriately sign yourself, "Buffalo Bill."

INSCRIPTIONS of Biblical texts are sometimes found on old houses and other buildings. The Quiver gives some interesting facts concerning them. One of the most remarkable instances is to be found at Castle Ashby, the magnificent mansion of the Marquis of Northampton. It was commenced in 1584 and completed in 1624, by the famous architect, Inigo Jones. Everywhere there is evidence that its builder was of a deeply reverent character. Around the coping of the mansion are a number of Latin inscriptions, the translation of which is as follows: "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." That on the north front and partly on the west side was added much later—in the year 1827—and it reads thus: "Blessed are all they who fear the Lord and walk in His ways." Over the facade of the entrance is, "The Lord guard thy entering in." Then around the wall, dividing the gardens from the park, are texts in English, constructed in the masonry. These are: "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the Word of God standeth for ever," and the oft-quoted text, "Consider the lilies of the field," etc.

AT a recent picnic given to the Sunday school of one of our churches in Iowa, a member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was dispensing lemonade to the thirsty youngsters. It so happened that a denominational Sunday school was enjoying an outing near by, and the Brotherhood man had a suspicion that not a little of the lemonade was going to members of the neighboring school. Being unable to distinguish among so many, and alarmed at the rapid disappearance of the beverage, he decided that immediate steps were necessary. Knowing that the intruders would not be versed in the catechism, he proceeded to catechise each applicant. No catechism, no lemonade. The plan worked admirably, and the young man is being chaffed for applying religious tests in a free country.

DR. G. H. HEPWORTH, in his volume, "Through Armenia on Horseback," says:

Americans do not appreciate their missionary service. In a far-off way we may admire these men and women whose lives are full of self-sacrifice, but if we could once look into their homes and get a glimpse of the awful isolation in which they live so cheerfully, we should see to it that they wanted no comforts which money could buy. They have too small salaries, and yet the world is full of gold. They spend themselves, and also what they can spare from their slender incomes—more than they can spare—for the relief of the poor who are all around them. No man can resist the impulse to empty his purse when he sees such depths of misery as even I, in my short sojourn, have beheld; and I can only say that the Western world ought to double its generous gifts to those whose lives are saddened by their ceaseless ministrations to the wretched creatures, widowed and orphaned, who knock at their doors for a word of encouragement or a crust of bread.

FOR the first time in the history of Berlin University, a degree in course has been conferred upon a woman, the recipient being Fraulein Neumann, to whom the degree of Ph.D. was given at the recent graduation exercises. In India, permission to practice before the High Court at Allahabad has been withheld from Miss Sorabji who took the degree of LL.B. at Bombay University, and afterward studied with marked success at Oxford, her purpose being to practice the profession of law in her native land.

A MOVEMENT, called in Boston the Home Library, and which is managed well, though slightly differently, in Chicago, brings books directly to the tenements. A tenement house is selected in Boston to be the neighborhood library for two or three months. A number of good books and children's magazines are taken there and lent, and once a week a "person of sense," as Dr. Hale has put it, meets the children and talks the books over. When the time is up, the library is passed on to another place. In several cities there are libraries in the public schools. At Buffalo, where ten schools were so provided this year, the libraries are under the direction of the public library. A thousand books are put in a library, and three times a year there is a transfer between the schools, so that the pupils in each have access to 3,000 volumes during the year.

— X —

Notes From "Eaglesnest"

II.

THE old eagles and their nest disappeared, but we built a "nest" under the pines on the shore, where we have spent many happy summers with our children. The youngest was an active infant when we came here. She was often tethered to a tree near the door, where she frolicked on all fours like a kid, for hours at a time, until she came to "the end of her rope" by getting it wound around the tree. Then there was music in the air until relief was found.

The child was lost once in the woods, when she was a toddler two years old, and we know something of the terrible apprehension and torture of suspense that father and mother feel when a child is stolen. The sun was not more than two hours from setting when we missed the baby, and there was no sight or sound of her near the cottage. No neighbors were near to help in the search. She was found within an hour, nearly a half mile from home, crying in the dense bushes, quite worn out with her travel and bewilderment. An older member of the family was lost in searching for the lost, but got in before dark.

The "baby" is with me now, grown to young womanhood, and looking very like her mother at seventeen, when I fell in love with her. We are "keeping house," or the house is keeping us, for a week or two, while the family gathers from East and West. We are the first "summer coons" (that is what the natives call us) of the season, and we enjoy these cool, quiet latter days of June when a steam whistle disturbs our peace but once a week, and there is not a sound of human voice or step within a mile of us. We have "lots of fun" in our domestic as well as literary pursuits. After experimenting with various kinds of rations, we are convinced that bacon and eggs is best. I say is best, not are best, for they come out of the frying pan in the singular number. Eggs have a singular tendency, and a decided affinity for bacon.

I have forgotten what the poet said about "a day in June," but I am sure he could not have pictured anything so fine as this. It is not spring, and it is not summer, but a gentle mingling of both; a delicate, delicious blending of clover blossom and wild-rose perfume; a sort of aerial sweet sixteenity, when the girlhood of the year comes with reluctant feet to the place where brook and river meet. The air is very quiet; scarcely a leaf moves, but the tall grasses swing their plumes as if of their own motion; and there is a little murmur, a faint purring in the high tops of the pines, to which the rhythm of the small waves on the beach supplies a tender undertone. The beach is but a stone's throw from my door. Near the shore, where the sand gleams through, the color of the water is dull gold: further out, it changes to sea-green, then to violet. The foreground, in these first days, is untrodden and unmarred by passing feet and picking fingers. I can see blue-bells, coreopsis, tiger-lilies, red clover and white, wild roses, and a great variety of grasses and shrubs. Oak and pine, hemlock and maple, are the trees in sight. Across the harbor are homes and farms, and over the bay, several miles in the opposite direction, gleam the white buildings of Elk Rapids, where are mills and furnaces and a railroad. The busy, noisy world is not far off, is not quite out of sight, but I am glad to be away from the sound of it for a time. Yet trouble and temptation come even here. The poison ivy grows by the side of the wild-rose and the winter-green.

C. W. L.

— x —

The Fine Art of Words

BY C. W. LEFFINGWELL

FINE ART includes all methods of aesthetic expression; word methods; line, color, dimension methods; tone methods; movement methods. The province of all Fine Art is to embody in suitable form the emotions of the invisible spirit of man. By means of Form, one soul speaks to another and makes itself understood. Ordinary phases and processes of human thought are expressed by language as ordinarily spoken; our daily intercourse, our discussions and recreations, are carried on by words used as arbitrary signs, without attention to Art-Form; but emotions which are exalted and intense naturally seek for their expression something more than the arbitrary signs. They break out into sobs or laughter, transform the face by lines of wonderful significance, impel the whole body to suggestive attitudes and movements. Sometimes they join to speech the melody of tune and utter themselves in song; or abandoning altogether the arbitrary sign, they burst forth into the captivating harmonies of music.

Yet words are sometimes more than arbitrary signs; they become so by artistic arrangement. They may be moulded into true Art-Form, and to the value of their grammatical meaning, may be added the inherent and subtle expression of Fine Art. Such use and arrangement of words we call poetry, though many of the finest elements of Form in Words may be found in masterful prose composition.

It is the work of genius, of the most exalted and cultivated imagination, to discover or invent the form which corresponds to, and expresses, the ideal. The artist, the musician, the poet, must not only be capable of thinking high thoughts and feeling profound emotions, but also he must be able to perceive and construct the form which will embody his thought and feeling. So, he who would interpret a work of art must not only be able to entertain the ideal of the master, but also must have such knowledge of art construction as will enable him to appreciate the subtle methods by which the effect is produced. Hence it is, for example, that many intelligent people fail to derive satisfaction from the works of great musicians; not because they are naturally deficient in musical ability, but because they are unable to grasp the form, to follow the complicated harmonies and movements, by which the theme of the master is unfolded. The Art Form of music is especially difficult of apprehension. It passes so quickly, it is so complicated and obscure, that special training and keen observation are needed for its adequate interpretation. It is not so plain that he who runs may read; it is so elusive that he who would read must run! Other forms of art give opportunity for more deliberate study, and the elements of their structure are more easily perceived. Yet even in the Art-Form of Words, with the material of which all educated people are familiar, there are subtleties which escape the most of us. It is to be feared that few readers appreciate the fine points of a great poetical composition, though the meaning of every word is easily understood. The charm of it is felt in a general way, but the keen enjoyment of full insight is seldom experienced.

For the adequate appreciation of an artist's work with words, as well as with other materials, we must know something of the principles of construction under which he works. We must be able to analyze the process, have a keen perception of the fine points of composition, know what to look for in the graceful labyrinth of his lines, note the exquisite skill with which he makes the stubborn element of words serve the purpose of his art, and the magical touch by which he moulds them for ornament and use. Only by such preparation can we grasp the Art-Form of Words and adequately comprehend the ideal which they enshrine.

One of the first points to be emphasized in entering upon this theme is that in the study or creation of Language-Forms we are dealing with sounds and not with printed signs. The spoken words and not the printed page are the materials out of which this Art-Form is constructed. It is addressed to the ear, not to the eye. One who would be a critic in this realm of art must have the ability to reproduce mentally, if not with vocal organs, the sounds which the printed words and phrases represent. Reading with the eyes alone will not convey to the mind the perfect form which the poet has evolved from his imagination and incorporated in tones. Most people need aid in this first process of poetical analysis. Small progress will be made until we learn to read into the poem the sounds of which the printed words are the signs. In this respect poetry is like music: the printed score must be transformed into the sounds which the notes signify, before a clear idea may be obtained of the master's composition.

When I say we must learn to read sounds and not signs, I mean that we must learn to read them in their structural relations, and not as standing alone. The finest musical composition would have no interest if each note were sounded by itself without any relation to other notes. It is not the separate tones, but the harmonized and modulated phrases that charm the ear. The structure of poetical form is similar to that of music. Indeed, they are so closely related that their association in operatic composition has given to the world the greatest Art-Form which man has produced.

With this primary condition of the Art use of words established, namely, that they are to be treated as sounds in structural relations, let us proceed to consider some of the simple elements of Art construction. Since Art is expression by means of form, it will be helpful if we can ascertain the leading principles which determine the character of Art-Form. These are very simple in statement, but intricate and subtle in use. They are the same for all kinds of Art-Form, so that the study of one will help us to the mastery of others. What, we may ask, is the difference between form and chaos? The former has order, arrangement, unity; the latter has not. The one word, "unity," may be taken to express the first element of form. But this is not enough. There must be something more than order and purpose indicated by the form which shall be the adequate embodiment of human sentiment. It must manifest not only intelligence (a straight line is sufficient for that), but also spontaneity, freedom. Form becomes interesting and is expressive of feeling, only as it has variety. Unity and variety, then, are the two basic principles of Art-Form, whether the material of the composition be intricate lines, or sculptured marble, or modulated words.

Again, these simple elements of unity and variety may be subjected to analysis; we may have the unity of proportion, of intensity, of harmony; we may have variety as to masses, as to details, as to ornaments. As we begin to study and apply these principles we see how far-reaching and important they are.

In Word-Form we secure a certain kind of unity by grammatical construction. This is the unity of prose. But the unity of Fine Art is higher and more pleasing. In music and poetry we add to mechanical unity the unity of proportion in time, and so this Language-Form responds to a profound condition of our being. It becomes rhythmic, and flows on in unison with our own rhythmical nature, in unison with the music of the spheres.

"There's not the smallest orb that thou beholdest,
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still chiding with the young-eyed cherubim."

Rhythm is the largest element of unity in poetical composition. It pervades the whole mass and penetrates every part. It is the thread of gold which runs through all changes and connects all details. Rhythm is the heart beat of the living ideal, the throbbing pulse of the Art-Form of language. It arranges words in similar groups, securing a regular recurrence of accented syllables, long and short in alternation or other sequence, reducing the irregularities of ordinary prose to admirable order and systematic construction. With all its unifying value it adds, at the same time, an element of variety which is artistic, for its pulsations are not mere repetitions. It has, as it were, its overtones, its delicate touches and decorations, as well as its constant variety in the order of syllables and grouping of phrases. Note in this simple stanza how the mechanical structure of the rhythm is wrought into an intertwining melody that ripples musically through the verse:

"Hear the sledges with the bells, silver bells!
What a world of merriment their melody foretells!
How they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
On the icy air of night,
While the stars that oversprinkle
All the heavens' seem to twinkle
With a crystalline delight!"

The arrangement of rhythmical divisions in lines of equal or proportionate length, is also characteristic of poetical composition, and serves both for unity and variety; the uniformity of the division being frequently broken, when the rhythm of the phrase extends beyond the division and includes the following line, or a part of it. We have an example of this in the verse above: "While the stars that oversprinkle all the heavens, seem to twinkle."

We have another pleasing reinforcement of unity in the alliterative arrangement of words, by which an unexpected recurrence of sound is secured. Note, for example: "What a world of merriment their melody foretells!" The most obvious alliteration is in "merriment" and melody;" the "l" of the latter appears again in "foretells;" while the "t" of the latter repeats, nearly, the sound of "d" in the last syllable of "melody." The "r" in "world" is also echoed in the word "merriment." Not least, in this simple line, is the alliteration at the beginning—"What a world." Alliteration of vowels is even more striking, sometimes; as in the line:

"From the molten, golden notes,
And all in tune."

In all great Art-Forms of language, such examples may be found in which the lines and words are so linked and intertwined by, alliterations, that not a syllable can be changed without marring the unity of the whole. Caution is needed, of course, in the use of this as of other devices of construction, that it is not carried so far as to be obtrusive. The more subtle and unexpected the alliteration, the more will it enhance the beauty of the work.

Passing over some minor elements of unity, such as repetitions, refrains, etc., let us note one of the most striking features of poetical form, which enhances both the unity and the variety of the composition, namely, rhyme. It takes nothing from our estimate of the value of rhyme to admit that the grandest poems of ancient and modern times are written in rhymeless verse. The masterful expression of the sublime may dispense with this charming accessory. The artist who paints the ocean tossed by storms, need not load his palette with pigments suitable for sunny landscapes. For the perfect expression of the beautiful, in English words, rhyme seems to be most helpful. At least we may say that only genius of the highest order can succeed without it.

Rhyme, as all know, is the repetition, generally at the end of a line, of a word having the same terminal sound as a word similarly placed, preceding it, and marking the close of a rhythmical division. Rhythm is intensified, is more easily perceived and followed, when its divisions are marked by rhyme. The recurrence of the sound at regular or proportional intervals, serves as a link in the structural unity, and holds the attention through the entire phrase, of which it is, as a rule, the completion. While it strengthens the unity of the work, it also adds to the variety, since rhymes are not identical. A word does not rhyme with itself. It rhymes with another word having the same terminal sound. In the verse I have quoted, the repetition of "tinkle" has a pleasing effect, but it is not rhyme. "Twinkle," in the second line below is a perfect rhyme for "tinkle." There is a variety in this unity, and it is artistic. If the poet had written "oversprinkle" for "oversprinkle," he would have missed the mark of unity which we were looking for; he would have disappointed us. Every imperfect rhyme is a discord, a disagreeable surprise to the reader, an evidence of weakness on the part of the writer. It shows that he is not perfect master of his material. On the other hand, when he displays great skill in bringing about a consonance of unusual and unexpected rhymes, we are surprised and pleased. In verses of free construction, the poet frequently makes use of this method of introducing unexpected rhymes to heighten the effect of his lines. Take another group of lines from "The Bells:"

"Oh, from out their sounding cells
What a gush of euphony voluminously wells!
How it swells! How it dwells
On the future! How it tells
Of the rapture that impels
To the swinging and the ringing of the bells."

But I have time only to indicate some of the most simple and obvious uses of rhythm, alliteration, and rhyme, in securing unity and variety to the Art-Form of words. Simple as they are, their analysis is of first importance to all who would enter with appreciation into the study of poetical composition. This is not to say that the understanding of form in art is of more importance than the perception of the idea which underlies the form. But in order to get at the idea, we must have an adequate knowledge of the form. It is only through the latter that the former can be apprehended. The first step in the mastery of any art, is to study the material and principles of which its form is constructed.

— x —

Book Reviews and Notices

Zoroaster: The Prophet of Ancient Iran. By A. V. Williams Jackson, Professor of Indo-Iranian Languages in Columbia University. New York: The Macmillan Company.

This work is described by the author in his preface, as dealing "with the life and legend of Zoroaster, the prophet of Ancient Iran, the representative and type of the laws of the Medes and Persians, the master whose teaching the Parsees to-day still faithfully follow." It is attempted to bring the figure of this famous founder into the full light of history. It is not a part of the author's plan to treat of the teachings of Zoroaster, a subject which he reserves for a future volume. It must be confessed, however, that the rather rigid adherence to this distinction deprives the work of a certain measure of interest. It is difficult to separate the teaching of a "prophet" from his life. But doubtless even the briefest exposition of the "creed" which was revealed to Zoroaster in his first vision, and which King Vishtaspa was required to accept in order to obtain the restoration of his "favorite black horse," would have occupied too much space in a volume which is devoted to the exhaustive examination of every legend and tradition relating to the life. It is a work for the learned, rather than for the general reader. For those who are entering upon the study of Parseeism from original sources, it cannot fail to be of the highest value. The student will find not only a bibliography of the most valuable treatises bearing upon the subject, but in the foot-notes, numerous additional authorities are cited and references given to articles in reviews and magazines. The successive chapters deal with the name, Zoroaster; his ancestry; youth and education; the revelation; the triumph; the conversion of Vishtaspa and his court; the spread of the religion; its development; religious wars; the death of Zoroaster; and the subsequent spread of his teachings. In six appendices, a number of special questions are treated with the most exhaustive industry. The reader closes the book with a feeling of surprise that so little can be ascertained of the actual life of so great a teacher. Notwithstanding the dictum of a recent writer, warning Christian apologists not to make too much of the monstrosities of heathen religious legends, on the ground that our own sacred books are too vulnerable on that score, we do not think any one need fear to compare the fantastic stories associated with the life of Zoroaster with those passages of the Holy Scriptures where the miraculous element comes out most strongly. The difference between the extravagance of the one and the sobriety of the other is world-wide. The least happy feature of Professor Jackson's valuable work is the straining after analogies between the stories of Zoroaster and the narratives of the Bible. The parallels are anything but evident. The book is a credit to American scholarship, and the Macmillan Company have done it full justice in the outward garb with which they have adorned it. A noteworthy feature is the excellent map of Persia and Afghanistan. The plates, representing several pieces of ancient sculpture, are also elegantly executed. The printing, equal to the best that is seen in English books, was done by the Norwood Press, Norwood, Mass.

The Redemption of Africa; a Story of Civilization. By Frederic Perry Noble. Chicago and New York: Fleming H. Revell Co. Price, $4.

Mr. Noble has conferred an invaluable benefit on all who take any interest whatever in the history of Africa. His book is an encyclopedia in its range of subjects, and, so far as we can judge, correct in its information; thoroughness characterizes it. Beginning with the earliest history of Egypt, the author traces down to the present day the various attempts that have been made to civilize and, latterly, to Christianize the Dark Continent. There are many problems worthy of consideration in the review of a work of this kind; many subjects suggest themselves as important enough to find a place in the book. Scarcely one of these is missing from the many topics treated of by Mr. Noble, and he grasps the situation with a clearness and readiness that convinces the reader of the wisdom of his conclusions. Africa is a large enough field for every Christian Church to do its share in evangelization, and from the list of missions here given, there does not seem to be any lack of missionary enthusiasm among the Churches. If, according to Mr. Kipling, the white man has a burden to take up, surely it can be found nowhere so pressing as in Africa. The blush should suffuse the cheek of any one who, failing to remember the generations of slaves transported from Africa's shores, yet refuses now, when the great door and effectual is opened, to send the message of salvation and freedom to the oppressed of the ages. It would be impossible to enumerate the mission stations about which Mr. Noble tells so much, but to any one interested in the redemption of Africa, his suggestions and rapid pen pictures, as he travels from north to south, are graphic enough to lead to further study and research. While space forbids Mr. Noble to give as much information as our readers would like to have of our own and the Church of England missions, he nevertheless tells, with an impartial pen, the story in which all have done so much. We commend the book heartily for many other reasons. His tables, illustrating the prevalence of different diseases in varying localities, are interesting. His style is attractive, and the carefulness with which the mass of information has been gathered and classified, makes the work most valuable. The book is in two octavo volumes, containing 856 pages. It is the fullest and most important work on Africa hitherto published, at least to the student of Christian missions and their influence in civilizing the heathen world.

Theologia Pectoris. Outlines of Religious Faith and Doctrine, Founded on Intuition and Experience. By James Muscutt Hodgson, M. A., D. Sc., D. D. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, importers, 1898. Price, $1.40.

The title of this book reveals its root fallacy. Intuition and experience "appear to the writer to be the true foundations. . . . of religious faith." He discards from consideration "the conception of any purely objective authority to which, in the first instance, appeal must be made in support of that which is accepted as true and good and divine. But the subjective origin and warrant of faith in God, and of belief in Divine Revelation and Inspiration being recognized, the guidance of inspired writers may be gratefully accepted, and the truths they teach will, it is believed, be found to commend themselves to the intelligence and to the moral and spiritual faculties of sincere and earnest thinkers. . . . On the method here pursued, some of the propositions of traditional and orthodox doctrine may fail to establish their title to a place in our belief or our formulated thought," etc. Of course a rationalistic method, and the above-described method is rationalistic, must result thus. Revealed truth has for its first and last basis of certainty, the fact that it is revealed. We need to test the evidence as to its being revealed by rational methods. But the contents of revelation can neither be ascertained by reason beforehand, nor, in many instances, can be shown to be true by reason after they have been revealed. The root condition of faith is trust in revelation. Much that is there contained may seem reasonable—i. e., plausible—but much so far transcends reason as to be absolutely baffling. It is one thing to show that such truths cannot be shown to contradict reason. It is quite another, to ground them in reason; i. e., in intuition and experience. The book is necessarily very imperfect. Some thoughtful suggestions are given, but there is absence, not only of proper method, but of really strong writing. The traditional and dogmatic faith is but imperfectly conceived by the writer. The book is not of sufficient importance for us to show this in detail.

A Tent of Grace. By Adelina Cohnfeldt Lust. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Price, $1.50.

"A Tent of Grace" is an exceedingly interesting book. It is the story of a young Jewish girl who is presented to the reader in the first chapter, as she plies her trade as a wandering peddler of kid and goat skins. She is set upon by some ruffianly boys of the little German village where the scene of the story is laid, and so battered and bruised that she is left for dead. The good old village pastor finds her and takes her home, and she becomes a member of his household. The chapters that deal with the life in the German pastor's family are delightful, but the brutal horror and tragedy of the close almost make one forget the "sweet peace that goodness bosoms ever," which is the atmosphere of the earlier part of the story. It seems a pity to use such a gruesome incident twice, although justifiable in the first chapter; if, later, both the ethical and the aesthetic needs of the story demanded the heroine's death, it would have better been brought about by a means less revolting to the reader. It is the only fault to be found with a thoroughly readable book.

Jesus Delaney. By Joseph G. Donnelly. New York: the Macmillan Company. Price, $1.50.

The name of this book would condemn it if every traveler in Mexico and South America did not know that "Jesus" is as often used there for a Christian name as John or Peter. The book is probably intended to show the poor results of Protestant missions in Mexico, and that is not hard to show. There seems to be, however, an ulterior design, and that is, a sneer at all earnestness and all true devotion. There is a great deal of "damn" in the book, and some vulgarity, and the author has the bad taste to air his imperfect Spanish on every page.

The Word Protestant in Literature, History, and Legislation, and Its Introduction into the American Church. By the Rev. William Henry Cavanagh. Philadelphia: George W. Jacobs & Co. Pp. 188. Price, $1 net.

In view of the unsettled state of mind largely existing in the Church in the United States today concerning its titular word, "Protestant," the perusal of this little volume on the long-mooted question of its historical propriety, or its unfitness, will be of timely interest to every Churchman. The title "Protestant" has been borne upon the Prayer Book more than a century of time, and while admitting that even under it this Church has increased in numbers and in national influence, there can be little room for doubt, as the author convincingly shows, that in many instances it has retarded our work and done hurt to our rightful historic position before the Christian world. Greeks and Roman Catholics must look with suspicion upon the meaningless hybrid that has been so long associated with heretics, and question not only our principles, but our regula fidei, to make us uncomfortable and odious as possible before the rest of Catholic Christendom. Mr. Cavanagh, in his argument from history, strongly and reasonably aspires, now that a new century is about to dawn, towards our propitious deliverance from "this narrow, bigoted, vindictive, unhistorical title, 'Protestant,' on the title-page of the large-minded, ancient Catholic heritage, which we call our Book of Common Prayer."

Mistress Content Cradock. By Annie Eliot Trumbull. New York: A. S. Barnes & Co. Price, $1.

A Puritan novel, and so very Puritan. Mistress Content Cradock is a highly respectable and religious young woman who is being courted in a highly proper manner by Mr. Reserved Archer, also most respectable and religious. She wants to ask him something, and she says: "Were it fitting that my inexperience assumed the position of questioner, this is what I would ask." Could anything be more proper? There are plenty of "methinks" and "prithees." The book is an admirable one to put in the library of a young ladies' seminary, but it is—dull!

Periodicals

One of the most interesting features of Scribner's Magazine for July is the article entitled, "The Foreign Mail Service at New York," with illustrations. One realizes, as never before, what an immense undertaking the postal system is. An insight into the real man is gained in "The Letters of Robert Louis Stevenson." There are indeed some beautiful revelations of fine thought and feeling. An attractive account of the work of John La Farge is lavishly illustrated. There are some good poems in this number, especially one by James Whitcomb Reilly. "The White Blackbird" and "Anne" are short stories, each beautiful in showing the strength and power of a true love.

None of the contents of the July Harper's Monthly are very serious or solid in character, probably as being better adapted to summer reading. Short stories occupy considerable room. Israel Zangwill contributes "Transitional," a touching story of how a little Jewess renounced her Christian lover for her father's sake. "The Wrath of the Zuyder Zee," by Thomas A. Janvier, is in many respects the best of Mr. Janvier's short stories. Frederic Remington is both the author and the illustrator of "The Honor of the Troop." "Matilda's Address Book," by Margaret Sutton Briscoe, is one of the most entertaining features of "The Drawer." Jessie Van Zile Belden contributes "Not on the Passenger List," and Wolcott Le Clear Beard tells a pathetic story of a telegraph operator in a rough Western town.

Opinions of the Press

Chicago Times-Herald

CEYLON TEA.—To receive such a greeting in foreign waters, fourteen thousand miles from home, could not fail to touch the heart of the hero of Manila Bay and the hearts of the brave crew that fought under him. The exceptional cordiality of the welcome gave it a deeper and wider significance than attaches to a formal exchange of naval courtesies. It was intended as another marked demonstration of the truth of the theory that "blood is thicker than water." Over a hundred years ago the rebellious subjects of the government that now rules Ceylon, signaled their displeasure with the tyrannical course of King George by dumping a large quantity of tea into Boston harbor. On this occasion, her Majesty's subjects in Ceylon testified to the complete restoration of comity and good will by presenting Admiral Dewey and his crew with a thousand pounds of tea and a silver casket. As a partial recompense for the tea we were obliged to throw overboard in Boston harbor, because we did not like the stamp duties imposed thereon, the gift to Dewey and his crew will be gratefully regarded by the American people. It will also be taken as a token of comity and friendship, the good effects of which are destined to outlast the silver casket and the chest of tea.

The Church Standard

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS.—England has escaped the plague of the Sunday newspaper, and a happy escape it is. No one knows that half so well as newspaper men who have to read the Sunday papers, and who know what weary trash most of them contain. The best of them are bad, if not in their contents—and in that respect the best are not bad—still in their effect upon their readers. No country in the world is so affected—we might say afflicted—as this with the newspaper habit. Men are so befuddled with it that they cannot bear to think their own thoughts even on the way to and from their daily business. They must have "the paper" on their breakfast table, on the street-car, at their luncheon, on their way home, and in the evening. The wonder is that they can sleep without it. And then, on Sunday, when they might at least be clearing their brains of cobwebs, they buy a hundred pages of stuff for a dime or more, and set in for a good long newspaper debauch, filling what is left of their jaded minds with bushels of indigestible trash, and laboring under the fatuous delusion that they are keeping themselves well informed. We regard the recent exclusion of the Sunday newspaper from England as a sanitary measure of the highest merit, and we are perfectly serious in saying so.

The Interior

STEAD'S BIBLE.—Mr. William T. Stead has published a translation of the New Testament into what his critics call "newspaper English." It has fallen flat upon the market. Whatever may be the archaisms of the accepted version, the people prefer it to a translation into colloquial forms. Few persons realize that any great language, like the English, is made up of twenty vocabularies which meet at the edges but do not deeply overlap. The English of the shop is not the English of the drawing-room, and the English of the street is not the English of the pulpit. The preacher who uses without discrimination what appear to be synonymous terms, will often cause his hearers to wince, because he employs the vocabulary of one class to express the ideas of another. The true scholar is known not so much by being able to call a yellow dog "in seven languages," but by his being able to introduce the same dog by seven equivalents in the same language, according to the uses to which he intends to put his dogship. The minister who uses precisely the same vocabulary in which to give out his notices, to preach his sermon, and to formulate his public prayers, has a most important lesson yet to learn; and he may learn it as Mr. Stead has learned it, by failure.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XX.

"EVELYN," he said gently, "fear not for the captain. Doubtless by this time he is far on his way northward, riding as no Dutch juvrouw ever rode before."

"Evelyn turned on him quickly her ever responsive smile. "Must it not be passing ludicrous," she asked, "to see the high-born English captain habited in Katrina's Lord's Day bravery? And how the little woman sputtered her dreadful Dutch oaths!"

"Yea, and when Myndert returns I mis-doubt if all the Babel dialects of this valley will suffice for his profanity!"

"Ah, Katrina will no doubt keep a most discreet silence, and the loss of Dirck's horse will be quite unaccountable to her. Because a woman is a gossip, 'tis no sign that she turns inside out all the pockets of her mind."

Alan could not but believe that Evelyn was now in the best of spirits, and he was about to introduce the subject always in his thoughts, when Evelyn herself, pulling in her mare to a still quieter walk, forestalled his speech.

"Alan," she said, riding very close to him, "if the captain's letter made me just now a thought silent, do not misunderstand the cause. He has shown himself as the dwarf who masquerades in the giant's robe, but he has recalled to me the fact that I too have wronged you, have judged you harshly."

"Nay, if you at one time lost faith in me, you had sore provocation."

"But I think I did believe in you always, but I was vexed and disappointed that you saw not as I saw."

"Dear one, your heart was ever intensely loyal; what wonder if you deemed me the foulest of traitors! Nay, I know not if I have kept my honor quite unspotted."

"You speak in riddles, Alan."

"See, Evelyn, there is a sheltered spot beside the river where we may rest our horses. Let us dismount, and I can tell you all."

So it was under the shadow of a warm brown rock, upon whose lichened head the sun had laid its blessing, that Alan spoke of his love, his unchanging passion.

"I have loved and waited for you always," he said, "through the time when Griffith had first claim, and when McKaye, too, offered his devoir. Nay, I know you did not care for him, nor for this Dalton, and yet my tongue was tied. You would not let me speak, and in that time of cruel mistrust and doubt, I saw not so plain as now. Time but sundered us the farther, and even my duty to Margaret Delafield became as a chain about my neck,—Evelyn, turn not from me! Tell me if you love me but a little, and give me courage to go on!"

"Alan, what is this?" cried the girl who had been pulling off loose pebbles from the placid rock to cast toward the rippling river, of which they fell short each time, "am I to tell you that I care, and when you think two maidens are pining for you, will you weigh and measure their claims at your leisure?"

"Evelyn," said Alan, humbly, "my blindness makes but poor excuse for what seems my dishonor, but if I have been in fault, it is that I have not sooner seen the wrong I might have wrought another. Turn your eyes upon me, and let me read them while I tell you that never have I loved any other woman, never shall I while the life-blood throbs in my heart. Dearer I hold you than aught else, save my honor and my faith—nay, God in His mercy forgive me! I fear I hold you first of all!"

As his impassioned words fell upon her ears, Evelyn slowly turned her eyes upon him. Waiting in intense suspense, he held himself in check to meet her glance, though his eyeballs were beating, and a hundred pulses knocked at his throat. At last he met her full glance. There must have been some happy revelation in it, for Alan, with a cry of joy, clasped her in his arms, while the afternoon sunlight spreading over the river smiled in sympathy.

"Alan," said Evelyn as they remounted, "let there not be any formal pledge betwixt us; it must not be without the sanction of your parents, and do not ask it yet."

"What, Evelyn! does you faith in me fail so soon?"

"Nay, Alan, 'tis not that, but there are Margaret and Griffith to be thought of. Oh, let us not flout them now with our happiness!"

"So be it," said Alan, simply. "At least I shall have the sweet confession of your love to carry with me. O fair Mistress Myndert, I owe you much that you have ridden as my messenger of love!"

"Alan, Alan, you are beside yourself," said Evelyn laughing. "Ride nearer and tell me if you see that clump of trees yonder up the far river bank." She shielded her eyes from the sun with one hand, and let the other fall loose on her bridle rein.

Alan's hand covered hers protectingly, while he too peered up the river. "What see you, dearest?" he asked, anxiously.

"Naught but the trees by the Fort Hunter rift. Do you remember the night when I came back alone from tending Dirck with his broken bones, and you found me at the ford? Do you remember our pledge then?"

"Aye, Evelyn, and God willing, we will yet take up the work in the valley together. The time may be long delayed, but who

ROYAL

Baking Powder

Made from pure
cream of tartar.

Safeguards the food
against alum.

Alum baking powders are the greatest
menacers to health of the present day.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

knows what sore division in the Church this separation from the mother country shall cost us, and the first fruits of liberty are not all to be desired."

And so the two rode homeward, happy in their mutual understanding.

The news of the escape of Captain Dalton, and of his thefts, which Katrina was not clever enough to keep from the knowledge of Dame Cairnewas, caused Mr. Underhill to be regarded with fresh suspicion. It came to be generally believed that the doughty captain had been spirited away by his endeavors, if not actually concealed within his own dwelling. Next came the rumor that Sir John Johnson himself was on the war-path. Mr. Underhill, knowing intervention hopeless, and how precarious would be the situation of his own family after the expected invasion, applied to Governor Clinton for permission to retire to Canada. This was accorded him, but on condition that he should give four hundred pounds security that he would send back a prisoner in exchange for himself, and that he should pay another hundred pounds for the privilege of taking with him the slave boy Philo.

It was of course impossible for the clergy-

THE DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTIC OF THE VOCALION IS ITS EXQUISITE TONE

ORGANS BUILT on the Vocalion system are pre-eminently fitted for church services. They have a full, rich, diapason tone and a peculiar delicacy in the string registers, which make them of inestimable value as an accompaniment to the human voice.

The method of tone production is radically different from all others. It gives the pitch as a fixed quality, free reeds being used for the purpose. In connection with each reed there is a pipe or chamber through which the tone passes and which determines its quality. By this means the reed is given a smooth, fluty quality of tone as well as resonance and remarkable power.

The distinctive features of the Vocalion are

Tonal superiority;
Compactness of form in proportion to capacity.
Variety of registration;
And price.

We wish to call the attention of all church societies contemplating the purchase of an organ to our Style 22, a full description of which we shall be glad to furnish upon application. Send for Catalogue G.

Vocalions range in price from $275 upward:

THE VOCALION ORGAN COMPANY

18 WEST TWENTY-THIRD ST., NEW YORK CITY.

Chicago, Ill.: Lyon & Healy, Wabash Avenue and Adams Street
Boston, Mass.: The M. Steinert & Sons Co., 162 Boylston Street

man, plundered of property, defrauded of tithes, and wrung with extortions, to raise any such sum. But Alan by pledging his pay, was able to obtain remission of a part, and Margaret insisted upon being allowed to bear a portion of the rest.

"Am I not to share your home?" she asked, for Margaret had decided to go with those who were now her dearest friends. "I shall, return some day, please God, to find my country free and at peace," she had said.

"Perhaps you shall," responded Evelyn, laying her flushed cheek against Margaret's pale one, "and perhaps and perhaps," and with this riddle she left the room, for if the happy girl had any castle-building in her head in which Margaret and another expected from over seas bore a part, she was wise enough to keep it to herself.

By the middle of May all arrangements for departure were concluded, and Mr. Underhill, already dispossessed of church and flock, found himself practically banished. Naturally a man of indomitable will and courage, and possessed of rare versatility of expedient, he was now much broken by sorrow and hardship, and it was with a feeling akin to despair that he looked forward to the future of the Church and State. Alan was to accompany his people a little way on their toilsome journey, and then would come the sad parting, which boded no near reunion.

The eventful day came. The air was balmy and the earth warm and moist, ready for the seed which there was none to sow. A veil of golden mist hung over the river, so brightly transparent that one could still see objects on the farther shore, if indeed one's eyes were not blinded with another mist of tears.

There were, too, other rays of warmth in the loving tokens of sympathy and respect shown by some of those who had known the exiles long. Katrina Myndert and the good John Aberdeen who had come all the way from Albany, were among these, the former quite dissolved in copious tears.

The party were to travel by wagon up the valley as far as Fort Hunter, thence northward until they reached the Sacandaga Creek. From this point the journey would proceed by water to the head waters of the Hudson, from whence there would be portage to Lake George, and again to Lake Champlain. It was a hard and tedious route, almost impassable in winter, but at this season of the year the chief difficulty would be in the swollen condition of the water highways.

And now the cart was loaded, the start made, and the great town of Schenectady left far behind. The little chapel of Fort Hunter was in sight, and toward it Mr. Underhill turned a lingering look. Alan, riding close to the creaking wagon, spoke a word of cheer, while his eyes devoured every lineament of Evelyn's face as if to make it indelibly his own. The last bastion of the fort was still pushing its gray shoulder toward them, when Captain McKaye appeared in the road in front. Although equipped for riding, he was not mounted, and he held between his fingers a fresh plucked bunch of violets.

"They are the last," he said as he divided the flowers impartially between the ladies, but Alan thought it was with a special tone and touch he offered Evelyn's, while his eyes sought hers to say farewell.

"Dear blossoms of the valley!" exclaimed Evelyn. "They shall stay with me always," and she bent her face to their sweet breath. As she did so a few of the lovely clasped flowers fell to the ground, and her last sight of McKaye was of his bowed figure in heavy riding gear, hunting in the dust of the road.

It was upon this very night that the bloody scourge so long looked for descended on the valley! Johnson had himself taken the route which Mr. Underhill's family were now pursuing in the opposite direction, and must have passed in the darkness a few miles to the westward of the outlying Tory settlements, where the travelers found refuge for their first night in the wilderness. His own division of the cruel horde proceeded directly southward to the Caughnawaga district, while another band of the motley ruffians made a detour to the east, and struck the river near the Lower Castle. Here the work of butchery and arson began, which slackened not until the devastation was well-nigh complete. Many who had taken part in the meeting at Vreeland's Pond, met the fate they had then so dreaded, while the only man who might have stood between them and their danger was exiled by their own act. There were, too, many innocent and unoffending families, some of whom had been personal friends of the cruel baronet's honored father, who were slain or carried captive. If any member escaped, to carry through life the mark of the scalping knife, it was from no good-will on the part of the brutal savages or their cold-hearted leader.

When the work of destruction had been carried far enough to glut the greed for blood, Johnson retreated to his forsaken home; there he remained long enough to regain possession of some slaves, with some plate and other valuables long hidden. Then he swept northward again as he had come. As he had come? No, stained and polluted with the crimes which have made his name infamous as any in the annals of time!

It was Red Wing, the Indian scout secured as guide, who in the early morning came stealing into the Perth settlement with the first rumor of the evil news. His hideous and grotesquely painted countenance was distorted into a horrible grin.

"My red brothers are in the forest," he announced. "Before the sun is overhead to-day, there will come a smell of blood from the shores of the Mohawk to the nostrils of the Great Father."

Mr. Underhill shuddered. The remembrance of Cherry Valley was still strong with him. "You speak not as a follower of the Great Father, my red brother; it is better that we here pray for these our Christian

Pale, Thin, Delicate

people get vigorous and increase in weight from the use of

Somatose

A Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative.

It is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, prepared for the nutriment and stimulus of weak systems. May be taken in milk, water, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists' in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City, selling agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

LONGMAN'S, GREEN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

UNITY IN DIVERSITY;

Five Addresses delivered in the Cathedral Church of Christ, Oxford, during Lent, 1899, with Introduction.

By the Rev. CHARLES BIGG, D.D., rector of Fenney Compton, formerly Senior Student and Tutor of Christ Church. 8vo, 80 cts.

THE CHRISTIANITY OF ST. PAUL.

By the Rev. S. A. ALEXANDER, M.A., Reader of the Temple Church. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

TRUE LIMITS OF RITUAL IN THE CHURCH.

Edited by the Rev. ROBERT LINKLATER, D.D., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Stroud Green. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

THE ROMAN PRIMACY, A. D. 430-451.

By the Rev. LUKE RIVINGTON, D.D., Magdalen College, Oxford. 8vo, $2.50.

"This is one of the most valuable contributions made in recent years to the historical argument for the Papal Supremacy and the Papal Infallibility. The argument is conducted with a weight of learning wielded so easily as not to impair the interest of a narrative which details the story of incidents decisive of the history, not merely of the Church, but of civilization and its moral ideals. The book will be widely read, not merely by Catholics, but by all interested in the vital questions of which it treats."—Freeman's Journal.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.,
91-93 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Health and Rest,

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE, and BATHS, at The Pennoyer, Kenosha, Wis. Booklet free.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD

Chicago & Alton R.R.

PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

CHICAGO AND KANSAS CITY,
CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS,
CHICAGO AND PEORIA,
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY.

Through Pullman service between Chicago and

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., DENVER, Colo.,
TEXAS, FLORIDA, UTAH,
CALIFORNIA AND OREGON.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

JAMES CHARLTON,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

brethren, even if they be of those who love us not."

And so before the sun smiled on the tender leaves and grasses of that spring-time morning, fervent supplications had gone up from the little band of pilgrims for those who in the valley would never rise again. Then Alan had slipped away quietly, as the others were starting, and leading his horse to the eastward, struck out on the Johnstown road. He hoped it might not be too late to carry the alarm in one direction or another, according as the savage raiders had passed east or west. But Philo whom he left to tell the others of his going, was almost white with fear.

(To be continued.)

Winter in Alaska

FROM Circle City Dr. Watt writes in a letter only recently received: "In the latter part of August we look for frost, and the mosquitoes are gone, but the gnats are with us until September, which is the most beautiful month of the year. The temperature is mild, ranging from 40 degrees above to 10 degrees below; walking is a pleasure, and the air invigorating. The daylight lasts for about sixteen hours, and when the moon appears the nights are almost as light as day.

"In October the frost comes permanently, and the river is frozen over. The logs of the houses have to be packed with moss, or the more expensive oakum, and the mercury declines from ten degrees above to fifty or sixty degrees below zero. The trails are then in good condition for traveling with dogs, but one has to take care of ears, nose, fingers, and toes, as they freeze very quickly—sometimes without their owner's knowledge. At this time (November), the days are dark and gloomy, and the lamps are lighted all day; but we now begin to look for the mail from home. Then comes dark, cold December, and we look forward to Christmas, and go into the woods to cut greens for decoration, and haul them to town, a distance of two miles. With temperature at 40 degrees below zero this is no child's play! Our church and hospital were beautifully decorated with festoons of greens and anchors, crosses, wreaths and stars. The children were very happy when Santa Claus came in, wrapped in furs and covered with snow.

"Then comes January and New Year's Day, and one looks forward to the longer days and the slow death of Jack Frost. It is a very cold month, but with the lengthening days the warmth of the sun is felt. In February the days are quite long, the trail fine, and a sleigh ride for the ladies, and a run for the men, give to all a good appetite.

"March is very pleasant—the sun is warm and the snow is fast gathering moisture; moccasins are things of the past, and one has to look out for dry feet. Up to this time, a suit of all-wool clothing—a sweater, fur hat, mittens, two pairs woolen stockings and moccasins form the outfit. When one takes a trip on the trail, a drill shirt with a hood of the same is worn outside the clothing to break the force of the wind. Food is any and everything that can be had. Our ambulance outfit consists of a sleigh with rope or canvas sides, high enough to prevent one from falling out. It has a good back for a head rest, and handles are fastened to the rear of the sleigh to guide it. From four to six dogs are the motive power, and a good robe and blankets complete the equipment.

The word being given that all is ready, a call to the dogs, and off we go on a good trot to the relief of the sick or frozen, all the way from a half mile to eighty miles; the longer journeys requiring us to take food for the men and dogs, camp and cooking utensils. We never travel alone, it is too dangerous; one might freeze to death or go through the ice.

"Our hospital is a one-story log building on the main road, facing the river. It is large, roomy, and well-lighted by three good-sized windows. We have seven beds now and room for two more. Miss Deane has her room at one end, and medicines are nicely arranged on shelves at the rear. We keep quite warm with a hot-air heater in the hospital. Wood costs from $10 to $15 per cord, and the price for cutting is seventy-five cents an hour, making it a heavy item of expense."—Spirit of Missions.

IT is a fortunate fact that gossip has come to be considered so ill-bred a habit as to be banished from polite usage in the parlors of the modern reception. As long as it was merely wrong, people were wont to indulge themselves in that, as in other sins, with vague and dim reference to some future day of repentance and reform. Not even the duello has been able to keep the custom in check in countries where that institution had vogue, and where gossip had always much to do with maintaining it. But now that it seems to be established that a woman of high breeding will not invite into her house for a second time a person once guilty of the indulgence there, a check has been put upon the habit that may do much toward its extinction.—Harper's Bazaar.

MORTAR ONCE USED

Cannot Bind Brick and Stone a Second Time.

In a recent article by Dr. David H. Reeder, Professor of Hygiene and Dietetics of the College of Medicine and Surgery, Chicago, he states: "A chemist may steep lime shell in a quantity of pure water so that a portion of the lime will be dissolved in the water. Let this water be taken into the stomach of the person to whom we desire to supply bone material. Will this lime now undergo a change such as will convert it into bone? No more than will mortar."

This is a good illustration of the reason for the failure to obtain results in rebuilding the body by administering certain minerals from the drug shop. Once the principles have been made in o lime, potash, etc., they cannot be re-arranged into the human economy readily, but these elements or minerals are needed in very delicate particles for the rebuilding of certain structure in the human body. We should obtain them from the grains, for in that way Nature presents them with the molecules so delicately divided that the human system takes them up.

This is true of Grape-Nuts, the famous food, made with the special intent of rebuilding the brain, solar plexus, and nerve centres of the human body, by offering the phosphate of potash in a natural way, which combines with albumen and does the work intended.

Grape-Nuts are delicious to the taste, made up in the form of small granules glistening with grape sugar, and form an ideal breakfast dish. Sold by all grocers at 15 cents per package.

"Woman's Work is Never Done."

The constant care causes sleeplessness, loss of appetite, extreme nervousness, and that tired feeling. But a wonderful change comes when Hood's Sarsaparilla is taken. It gives pure, rich blood, good appetite, steady nerves.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889, AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.

THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

SCHOOL IS OUT, NOW TO THE COUNTRY!

"Hints to Tourists," by the North-Western Line, gives detailed information of many places where a vacation may be enjoyably spent, and at slight cost. Copies free. Ticket Office, 193 Clark Street and Wells Street Station.

Runs Two Solid Vestibuled Trains Daily

DIAMOND SPECIAL
NIGHT TRAIN
DAYLIGHT SPECIAL
DAY TRAIN

between Chicago and St. Louis.

Free Reclining Chair Cars, Parlor-Café Cars, Pullman Buffet Open and Compartment Sleeping Cars. See that your ticket between Chicago and St. Louis reads via Illinois Central Railroad. It can be obtained of your local ticket agent.
A. H. HANSON, G. F. A., Ill. Cent. R. R., Chicago, Ill.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;

After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Dammell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lyckett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Subscribers should name not only the new address, but also the old.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

FOREIGN.—To subscribers in the Postal Union, the price is 12 shillings; to the clergy, 10 shillings.

EXCHANGE.—When payment is made by check, except on the banks in the great cities, ten cents must be added for exchange.

RECEIPTS.—No written receipt is needed; if desired, stamp must be sent. Change of label should indicate within two weeks the receipt of remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—A subscriber desiring to discontinue the paper, must remit the amount due for the time it has been sent.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marria Notices, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY IZOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XIII.

THE HOUSEHOLD BROWNIE

IT was kept a secret from Madge until Monday afternoon exactly, when Mollie came, flushed and enthusiastic and indignant, and all in a flutter generally. The very first thing she said was:

"Did Tony tell you?" and Tony, hearing it, groaned in spirit, and wondered if girls ever could keep secrets.

"Tell me," repeated Madge, raising her eyes from the stocking she was darning, "tell me what?"

Mollie hesitated a minute, wondering vaguely why Tony was shaking his head at her so vigorously behind his sister's back, and then she went on and told Madge of the break in the Sisterhood ranks, of how she had passed Virginia and Evelyn on the street and never so much as looked at them, and of how all the others had called on her to try and win her back.

Madge let her darning fall unheeded in her lap, as she listened with wide open eyes to the exciting narrative, but she never said a word until Mollie had wound up with a declaration never, never to speak to the horrid things again.

"You're the funniest girl I ever saw," Madge said solemnly.

"Why?"

"Oh, just because you are," returned Madge blandly; "here you say you've scolded and raised a big fuss because the other girls don't act like Christians, and won't take me into their club, and all that, and then you yourself wheel around and say a lot of mean things about them, and call them names—"

"What did I call them?" demanded Mollie indignantly.

"Horrid things," her companion said promptly, resuming her work, "and do you know, I think that you're most as bad as they are, even if you did do it for me. You fire all up and lose your temper over them not being good Christians, and then you're so busy fussing over them that you forget all about yourself. Don't you see?"

Mollie's face grew longer and graver. The scowl on her brow gave way to a little pucker of wrinkles over her nose, and she nodded her head ever so slightly.

"What could I do?" she asked, with a good show of spirit still. "I won't belong to a club that professes to be a Church club, and then acts like that. It isn't right. I know I lose my temper, but who wouldn't?"

Madge shook her head wisely.

"Two wrongs never made a right, mamma says," she replied, "and maybe they are right about not wanting me in, 'cause we are poor, you know, and I don't care specially one way or the other. But it's different with you. You ought to make up with them, and go back into the club, and just have a good time with the girls, and not flare up over every little thing. Don't you think so?"

Mollie looked up at the grave brown eyes gazing at her so steadily, and a sudden consciousness came over her of how brave and clear-sighted and true this little old-fashioned girl was, and with that thought came, too, the knowledge of the mistake she had made.

"I will speak to them," she said humbly, "and of course I think so when you put it that way, only I don't want to go back into the club."

So matters stood, and all Madge's preaching, on one hand, and the united persuasion of Nell, Laura, and Alice, on the other, could not induce Mollie to alter her determination one atom. She spoke to the other girls readily enough, though without a trace of the old free-hearted cordiality, and continued a frequent visitor at the little green house, and a regular companion of Madge on all occasions.

"That's it," Arthur said to the boys with a heavy sigh, when this sort of thing had been going on for a month, "that's Mollie all over. She dashes at any new thing like a Newfoundland at water, goes in up to her neck, splashes all around, forgets there's another blessed thing on earth for about a month, and then suddenly the balloon bursts, and she's hunting for a new one. That's a little mixed, but you know what I mean. She'll run Madge Ferrall to death, and then go back to the Tabbies, and Madge cango whale fishing in Black Creek for all she cares. Oh, I know her of old. She's true blue, of course, but she sheds her coat more times than our old cat, and Perkins keeps it up most all the year round"

The S. D. S., while not in quite as flourishing a condition since the rupture, still continued to meet at the big house on the bluff, but there were fewer candy pulls and popcorn rallies nowadays. A new spirit seemed to be at work among the girls, a very quiet, modest spirit, but one whose effect was none the less discernable for all that. In the first place, Eleanor had had a long, earnest conversation with Mr. Stanley, the rector of St. Luke's, and now, once in a while, two or three of the Sisterhood girls could be seen going about the little town with a few delicacies for some sick room, or some entertaining books, or odd little comforts for another home where such things were a treasured rarity. Not really deeds of charity? No. Merely little deeds of kindness wherever a stray opportunity presented a possible need, but it told the story, nevertheless, of the promptings of the new spirit; and Mollie, seeing it all, was glad and sorry all in one breath. Glad, so glad, that her hasty words had made the girls think of that other part to their club, that part which Eleanor had called the inward and spiritual grace, and yet, sorry in a way that she was not with them to help too.

But as she said to herself, the Ferralls were her mission now, and it was a labor of love. Somehow, too, she felt, half unconsciously, the influence of Madge on her own character. She felt firmer, quieter, more

½ lb. a Week

My baby is nearly 5 months old. She is gaining about a half pound a week since I have been giving her Mellin's Food. My first little girl, who was 3 years last December, was a Mellin's Food baby, and she is a healthy child; her flesh is very solid and many people have told me that "She looked like a Mellin's Food baby." But before using Mellin's Food she was a very sick child, nothing would stay on her stomach and she was gradually getting smaller, but after using Mellin's Food she at once began to gain flesh and never has been sick since. Mrs. Wm. H. Smith, 3809 Aspen Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Mellin's Food

A baby in good health SHOULD make a steady gain in weight. If the baby gets food that is suited to him and gets sufficient quantity, he WILL make a steady gain in weight. A child may get proper food and not enough of it or, as is often the case, the child gets a large quantity of food that is unsuitable and really gets little real nourishment, in which case there will be little or no gain in weight. Mellin's Food is suited to the infant's digestion and furnishes sufficient nourishment. Babies GROW on Mellin's Food.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

A COMBINATION SET OF THE

Prayer Book and Hymnal

Valued at $5, handsomely bound, and printed on India Paper, will be sent to anyone sending Two New Paid-in-advance subscriptions to The Living Church, plus 20 cents for carriage.

FREE

A Delightful Effervescent

beyond compare. Superior in all respects to any mineral water known. A refreshing drink that cures sick headache, constipation and disordered stomach in the most pleasant and effective way.

Pamphlets on application.

TARRANT & CO., CHEMISTS, NEW YORK.

evenly balanced, after a visit to the little house and seeing the "Household Brownie" doing her duty there, so simply, so cheerfully, with never a doubt or revolt, but always kind and willing to Tony, always gentle and tender with the fast failing mother. For there was a shadow stealing over the little home. One which Tony did not see as yet, but which Madge realized, and met with her ready, fearless trust in the Father who seeth all—careth for all.

So the days went by, and all the red and gold glory of the autumn had faded, and November came with a whirl of sharp winds and bleak, gray days. The little green house had never seemed so lonely and deserted and cheerless as now, with the trees all stripped of leaves, and the dreary marsh stretching out to the river beyond.

"Aren't you ever afraid way out here?" Mollie asked one day as she stood looking out of the window in the kitchen. "It's so kind of shivery and lonesome all around."

Madge laughed merrily.

"No indeedy," she replied, with a bright smile at the wan, sweet face watching her from the lounge. "We never feel afraid, do we, mumsie? What made you think of that, Mollie?"

"Just the way things look," Mollie answered carelessly, tapping on the window pane with her finger tips.

"Well, we don't bother our heads about things outside," said Madge, "we sing and read and talk and work and keep the band playing inside all the time, so that we don't have any time to be lonely or afraid, do we, mumsie?"

Mrs. Ferrall smiled back at her lovingly.

"No, dear, no, not with Tony and you," she answered softly "I am not lonely. And afraid? I am only afraid for you two, Madge darling."

It was very still in the plain little room then, and Mollie did not turn her head from the window, for she knew what Mrs. Ferrall meant, and she knew, too, that Madge was on her knees by the lounge, her arm clasped close around their agile form there as if to protect it from sadness, her eyes bright and tearless, but an ache in her heart that nothing could cure.

(To be continued.)

A Little Boy's Self-Sacrifice

WE will call him Jack Smith, because that was not his name, but he had a real name, because he was a real boy.

Of all the Christmas and birthday toys which he had received, that which delighted Jack's heart most, was the stuffed figure of a little black, wooly dog, with the reddest of red lips, and a red ribbon around his neck. "Wooly" was a good dog; he never bit, and he never disturbed the house by barking or snarling, and it cost absolutely nothing to feed him. The only fault to be found with him was, as it seemed to Jack, his stupid disobedience. He would not move in any direction whatsoever, even when Jack told him to. Still Jack loved him passionately.

One springtime came when a circular reached the house in Jack's mother's mail, asking for gifts of toys for the amusement of poor, sick little children in a seaside home. Jack thought of a number of toys which he was tired of, and was very willing to give them to the seaside home. But a special appeal was made for something to amuse a little crippled boy who was expected at the home, and Jack felt that he had heard a new call to self-sacrifice. He could not get rid of the thought that if Wooly was such a delight to him, it would also supremely delight the little cripple. But the very thought of giving up his dear Wooly was anguish. No, he could not do it. And for fear some one should think he could do it and not care much, he took Wooly to bed with him, and laid him beside the pillow, where he could touch him if he awoke during the night, and assure himself that it was still there. And then he could see Wooly as soon as he awoke in the morning.

Still, the thought that it would, somehow, be a kind act that would please God if he gave up Wooly to the crippled boy, grew on Jack until he could hardly bear to play with Wooly for thinking about the neglected opportunity.

And so one night Jack went to bed with Wooly hugged close to his breast, and his pillow was wet with his tears and sobs as he prayed to his Heavenly Father to help him to bear the loss of Wooly. Jack resolutely offered it to God, and made up his mind that Wooly was to be sent to the crippled boy who could not run about and climb trees and chase butterflies and pick flowers and cherries as he could.

It was a little thing, as money goes, perhaps. But it was a great thing as to character, and character is infinitely greater than money. Jack had won a famous victory.—The Church Militant.

The Ferry to Shadowtown

Sway to and fro in the twilight gray,
This is the ferry for Shadowtown;
It always sails at the end of day,
Just as the darkness closes down.

Rest, little head, on my shoulder, so!
A sleepy kiss is the only fare,
Drifting away from the window we go,
Baby and I in the rocking-chair.

See, where the fire-logs glow and spark
Glitter the lights of the Shadowland;
The raining drops on the window, hark!
Are ripples lapping upon its strand.

There, where the mirror is glancing dim,
A lake lies shimmering, cool and still;
Blossoms are waving above its brim—
Those over there on the window sill.

Rock slow, move slow, in the dusky light,
Silently lower the anchor down;
Dear little passenger, say "Good night!"
We've reached the harbor of Shadowtown.
Motherhood.

A BLESSING TO ANY HOME

Bound hand and foot to household drudgery, scrubbing and rubbing day in, day out. Women, why do you do it? Break away from the hard old-fashioned way of doing your cleaning with soap.

GOLD DUST

Washing Powder

has proven the emancipation of hundreds of thousands of other women. Why not yours? Let Gold Dust do more of the work, you do more of the play. You will be happier, healthier, save money and many an hour of worry. For greatest economy buy our large package.

The N. K. Fairbank Company

CHICAGO
NEW YORK

ST. LOUIS
BOSTON

has proven the emancipation of hundreds of thousands of other women. Why not yours? Let Gold Dust do more of the work, you do more of the play. You will be happier, healthier, save money and many an hour of worry. For greatest economy buy our large package.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1887.
THE E. W. YANDEZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES AND PEALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826 BELLS.
HAVE FURNISHED 35,000 CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER BELLS.
MENEELY & CO., PUREST, BEST, GENUINE, WEST-TROY, N.Y. BELL-METAL CHIMES, Etc. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.
Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

Please mention this paper.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH and CHANCEL FURNITURE
OF ALL KINDS
PHENIX FURNITURE CO., Eau Claire, Wis.

CHURCH ARCHITECT,
JOHN SUTCLIFFE,
218 La Salle Street, - Chicago.

Cox Sons & Vining,
70 Fifth Avenue, New York.
CHURCH VESTMENTS, Embroideries, and Fabrics.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.
R. G. GEISSLER, & Marble and Metal Work
56 West 8th St. (near 6th ave.) New York.

Gail Borden BEST INFANT FOOD.
Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

West Indies' Trade

THE fact that a reciprocity treaty intended to bring a portion of the British West Indies into closer commercial relations with the United States, has just been signed, and that others of that group of islands are suggesting similar arrangements, lends interest to a series of tables which the Treasury Bureau of Statistics will present in the forthcoming number of the Summary of Commerce and Finance. These show that the great semi-circle of islands which stretch from the southern coast of Florida to the eastern coast of Venezuela, numbering hundreds, having an area of nearly 100,000 square miles, and a population of 5,000,000, have an annual commerce of $150,000,000. While the events of the past year have brought the most important of these, Cuba and Puerto Rico, into closer relations with the United States, these events were quickly followed by suggestions for a closer relation on the part of others of the group, which naturally look to the United States as the nearest market in which to dispose of their products and from which to obtain their supplies.

In this great chain of islands, connecting continent with continent, Great Britain controls by far the largest number. The Bahamas, which stretch south-easterly from Florida almost to Puerto Rico, with twenty inhabited, and scores of uninhabited, islands, have been under British control since 1718, and at the close of the revolutionary war became the home of many families of English loyalists from the south of the United States. The Virgin group, just east of Puerto Rico, is partly under control of Great Britain. The long line of islands stretching southwardly from Puerto Rico to the north-east coast of South America, touching British Guiana on the mainland, are mostly under the control of the United Kingdom, while Jamaica and the Cayman Islands, lying south-west of Cuba, and British Honduras, on the adjacent mainland of Central America, are likewise a part of "Greater Britain." Thus the large proportion of the semi-circle of islands, swinging from the coast of Central America past the southern point of Florida to the north-eastern point of South America, omitting Cuba and Puerto Rico, are under British control.

The British colonies thus lying commercially adjacent to the United States at the south, including those upon the mainland of Central and South America, have an area of over 125,000 square miles, a population of nearly 2,000,000, and their purchases from abroad amount annually to nearly $40,000,000 in value, and their exports to about a like sum. Their productions are mostly sugar, tropical fruits, coffee, cacao, and fibers, of which the United States is a large importer, while their purchases are chiefly bread-stuffs, clothing, manufactured goods, mineral oils, coal, lumber, and other articles, of which we are large exporters. At present, our sales to them amount to about $12,000,000 per annum, or about 30 per cent. of their total purchases, while our imports from them amount to about $15,000,000 annually, or nearly 40 per cent. of their total exports.

While the abolition of slavery in the British West Indies in 1833, the French West Indies in 1848, Puerto Rico in 1873, and Cuba in 1886, followed by the development in Europe of beet sugar production and exportation, reduced the area devoted to sugar growing in the West Indies, it increased at the same time the variety of the tropical products which they have to offer in exchange for the food stuffs, clothing, and manufactures which they annually purchase from the temperate zone.

Oil Production

OVER five billion gallons of petroleum are now produced annually in the world. Of this amount two and one-half billions are produced in the United States, two and one-fourth billions in Russia, and the remainder is distributed among a dozen countries, Austria producing 87 million, Sumatra 72 million. Java 30 million, Canada 29 million, Roumania 24 million, India 15 million, Japan 8 million, Germany 7 million, Peru 3 million, and Italy about one million gallons. While the United States and Russia furnish the bulk of the world's petroleum, and stand almost abreast in the quantity of crude oil produced, the amount of refined illuminating oil supplied by the United States by far exceeds that furnished by Russia. A table just prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics shows the quantity of mineral oil produced by the various countries in 1897, the latest available year, also the quantity produced in the United States and Russia in each year since 1883. This statement shows that while the quantity of crude oil produced in the two great oil producing countries of the world, the United States and Russia, is nearly equal, the quantity of refined illuminating oil produced by the United States is more than double that produced by Russia. This is due to the fact that a given quantity of United States oil produces three-fourths of its bulk in refined illuminating oil, while the same quantity of Russian oil produces but about three-eighths of its bulk in refined illuminating oil. Sumatra, next to Russia, is the most formidable competitor of the United States, because of the rapid growth in its production of oil, the fact that its crude oils produce half their quantity in refined illuminating oil, and the further fact that they are much nearer to the Orient, the countries of which form an important part of the world's markets for this class of exportations. Up to the present time, however, the quantity of oil produced in Sumatra is small compared with that of the United States or Russia, its figures for 1897 being but 72,258,000 gallons against two billion, 543 million gallons for the United States. The United Kingdom is the largest consumer of mineral oils exported by the United States, our total exports to that country in the last fiscal year being 212 265 563 gallons.

CARMEL Keeps the Skin Soft and Smooth

SOAP

FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

A mission society at Haifa, Mt. Carmel, Palestine, make for their support and send to this country, CARMEL SOAP. It is made of the sweet olive oil so plentiful in that country and is an absolutely safe soap for toilet and nursery, at moderate price. Sold by druggists and grocers. Imported by A. Klipstein & Co., 122 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Your Skin's Sake

always have Wool Soap in your soap-tray. It's the skin's chaperon—it takes care of your skin, because it is positively pure, just clean, white, unadulterated soap—safe soap for the whole family, for baby and all the folks.

Swift and Company, Makers.
Chicago

RUBBER STAMPS.....
AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.
Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils, Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.
Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY. We are the largest Makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELLHART HARNESS & CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL
Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS, Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park New York.

THROUGH SLEEPERS TO BOSTON.
On Wabash Continental Limited, leaving Chicago 12:02 noon arriving Boston 5:50 P. M. next day. Also on Night Express leaving Chicago 11 P. M., arriving Boston 10:20 A. M. second day. Through sleeper to New York on both trains. Ticket Office, 97 Adams St. Telephone, Main 1619.

Besides benefiting the children, Mellin's Food is a blessing to the tired mother. Its preparation adds nothing to her household cares. It does not have to be cooked, but is simply dissolved in milk and water. A few minutes night and morning prepares baby's food for twenty-four hours.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE
demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

The Pioneer Limited.
To St. Paul and Minneapolis

CHICAGO MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY

The Only Perfect Train

Ticket Office 95 Adams St.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.

F. G. LOGAN
4 B'd Trade, Chicago.

MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.

Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

KINGSFORD'S OSWEGO STARCH

SILVER GLOSS
FOR THE LAUNDRY.

CORN STARCH
FOR THE TABLE.

The public can use with entire safety and satisfaction.

Best Line
to Denver

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

CALIFORNIA— LOW RATES

June 25th to July 8th, via the Chicago & North-Western Ry.

The Overland Limited

via the Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line leaves Chicago every day at 6:30 P. M., and takes you to California in 3 days.

The Pacific Express leaves Chicago every night at 10:30. No change of cars, choice of route returning, and long time limit on tickets. For particulars, ask your nearest ticket agent or address

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RY.

Principal Agencies:

NEW YORK BOSTON CHICAGO
461 Broadway 368 Washington St. 193 Clark St.

Lyrics of the The Living Church

A handsomely bound volume of poems which have appeared in THE LIVING CHURCH. A few hundred volumes were secured from the publishers at a very low figure, and although retailing at $1.50, we can offer a volume for 50 cents, plus 10 cents for carriage, in connection with a renewal of subscription for one year to The Living Church. As the plates were lost in the great fire which destroyed the publishing house of A. C. McClurg & Co., no new edition can be issued. Address, THE LIVING CHURCH, 55 Dearborn st., Chicago.

Occupations for Women

MISS ANNA MARSH, a cripple like Jennie Wren, raises goldfish just outside of New York for market. Her first year's income from this source was $50; last year it was $1,000, and the work is neither troublesome nor very expensive.

Miss Anna B. Smith, a graduate of Wellesley College, and a resident of Boston, has, according to The Washington Times, a mending factory at the Hub that earns for her a competence that she would be foolish to exchange for that of her neighbor, Gov. Wolcott. She mends porcelain and glass, and is now working under contract for a large department store of Boston, mending plaques, vases, statuettes, ornaments, in such skillful fashion that only the most practiced eye can discover that they have ever suffered accident.

HERB GROWING FOR SALE.—One way for women fond of gardening to earn a supply of spending money, is by raising herbs for druggists and market men; the latter will take most of them while green, a regular supply being delivered every second day. It is light work after the planting has been accomplished, and some of the roots being perennial, they do without replacing for several years. Lavender, sage, thyme, mint, and hoarhound are among the perennials. Sage and parsley are most commonly planted, but thyme, mint, hoarhound, marjoram, summer savory, and lavender are as easily raised and pay fully as well. When raising them for market men, make your arrangements with them early in the season, agreeing to furnish so much per week of the green herbs, in bulk or tied in bunches, as his business requires. The balance not used in this way can be dried, and the dried product can be readily sold to druggists. During the summer, parsley, marjoram, mint, sage and thyme are freely used in large markets, parsley, summer savory, and thyme being sent out with soup pieces, mint with lamb, and the sage is used for seasoning chopped meats. Leaves for decorating can also be sold to these men, swiss carrots and the variegated beet being especially valuable for such work. When drying the herbs, pick the young, tender shoots before the plants show signs of blossoming, a dry day being best for the work. They should be well shaken to remove the dirt, and then spread on papers to dry, the color being better if dried in a room where there is no sunlight and no currents of air. The mass should be turned every day, and will be dry in a few days; the herbs can then be put up in paper bags and hung in a dry place. It is well not to sell too early, as if it is offered before the bulk of the new crop is in the market, it will be called last year's.—Philadelphia Times.

FROM MISSOURI:—I am a subscriber, and have been in the habit of taking THE LIVING CHURCH since I have been in America—three years. It is the only weekly paper of its kind in America which can be strictly called a Church paper. May God prosper its work in the uplifting of the Catholic Faith and Church.

FOR HEADACHE

and weak digestion

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
has no equal.

Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"DIRT IN THE HOUSE BUILDS
THE HIGHWAY TO BEGGARY."
Be wise in time and use

SAPOLIO

SOUPS

OFTEN LACK RICHNESS
AND A DELICACY OF FLAVOR.
A FAULT EASILY REMEDIED BY USING

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

It has more Imitations
than any other brand
ever produced.

John Duncan's Sons, Ag'ts., New York.

'West Michigan Ry'

FAVORITE ROUTE TO

DELIGHTFUL MICHIGAN RESORTS

Bay View Petoskey Omena
Lake Harbor Neahawanta
Charlevoix-the-Bautiful
Ottawa Beach Harbor Springs

Cool Lake Michigan Breezes, freedom from dust and mosquitos—refreshing nights, etc., are some of the agreeable characteristics of these resorts. Send for illustrated folder issued by the General Passenger Department, C. & N. W. Ry, Grand Rapids, Mich.

THROUGH SLEEPING CARS FROM CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS TO PETOSKEY—BAY VIEW commencing June 19th and continuing until Sept. 25th (via Ill Cent. Ry from St. Louis). Your home agent can sell you through tickets at reduced rates.

Your Summer Outing.

Unite health, rest, pleasure and comfort on the handsome, luxurious

Steel Steamship MANITOU

Exclusively
for Passenger
Service.

First-Class
Only.
Tri-Weekly
Sailings.

Between Chicago, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Bay View, Mackinac Island, etc.

Steamers of our Lake Superior Division make weekly sailings between Chicago, Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette, Hancock, Duluth and intermediate points. Descriptive reading matter, giving particulars about the voyage, terms and reservations sent free.

JOS. BEROLZHEIM, G. P. A.,
Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Trans. Co.,
Rush and N. Water St., CHICAGO.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage

The Living Church

3005 Grand 1300 N
II A de France 1300 N

A Weekly Record of the News, the Work, and the Thought of the Church

The Rev. Henry Douglass Robinson, M.A.,
Warden of Racine College.

--Page 254

Educational

CONNECTICUT

CONNECTICUT, Hartford.

Woodside Seminary for Girls.

Re-opens September 27.
Address for circular.

MISS SARA J. SMITH, Principal.

COLORADO

COLORADO, MONTCLAIR, Suburb of Denver.

Jarvis Hall Military Academy

Has no superior. Number of students last year double that of preceding year. $950 per annum. Catalogue.

REV. H. KAY COLEMAN, A.M., Rector.

ILLINOIS

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address.

REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1889. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore Ill.

St. Alban's Academy.

Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports.

A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

St. Agatha's School, Springfield, Ill.

The Springfield Diocesan School for Girls. Opens its fall term Sept. 14th. Academic, Primary, and Kindergarten departments; Music, Art, Elocution, Physical Culture, carefully taught. Especial attention given to training girls for the home life. French spoken at table—taught by a Parisian. For catalogue, etc., apply to

MRS. FRUEN H. SEABROOK, Prin.

THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Send for illustrated catalogue to Joseph R. Harker, Ph. D., Pres.,

Jacksonville, Ill.

IOWA

DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Saint Katharine's Hall

A Diocesan Boarding and Day School for Girls. College preparation. Fall term opens Sept. 20th.

MISS MARY FRANCES BUFFINGTON, Principal.

MAINE

Saint Catharine's Hall.

Augusta, Maine.

The Diocesan School for Girls.

The instruction is of the highest grade, yet yearly expenses are only $350. Thoroughly new and modern appointments. Pleasant climate. General, college preparatory and musical courses. Address

The Rev. GEO. F. DEGEN.

MASSACHUSETTS

Our Church Music . . .

would be greatly improved if more organists and singers knew of the methods pursued at the

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Musical Director.

We will send to anyone interested our handsome illustrated pamphlet and all particulars that may be desired.

All particulars and Catalogue will be sent by FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

Educational

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall.

Episcopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re-opens, D. V., Sept. 23th, 1899. Apply to SISTER SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls.

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. Bishop WHIPPLE, Rector. Miss CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLIS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address

ST. MARY'S HALL, Faribault.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington.

Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

THE CASTLE,

Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y. A beautiful school. Advantages of N. Y. city. All departments. Endorsed by the Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. For illus. circular address I. Miss C. E. MASON, LL.M.

Training School for Nurses.

There are a few vacancies. Applicants must be over twenty-one; of sound health and good education. Apply to SUPERINTENDENT, St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, N. Y.

St. Mary's School.

Boarding and Day School for Girls.

Collegiate, Preparatory, and Primary Classes. College Preparation; Advantages of New York. Address

SISTER SUPERIOR, 6 and 8 East 4th St.

Riverview Academy

65th year.

Overlooks the Hudson. Magnificent and healthful in location, with exceptionally efficient instructors. Military discipline.

J. B. BISBEE, A.M., Prin., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

OHIO

Harcourt Place Seminary

A school of the highest class for girls. For catalogue and information, address

MRS. ADA I. AYER HILLS, Principal, Gambier, Ohio.

Kenyon Military Academy

A model school for boys, on a hill top 1,100 feet above sea level. For descriptive catalogue, address HILLS and WYANT, Regents, Gambier, Ohio.

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, O.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 25th.

PENNSYLVANIA

Pennsylvania College for Women.

This institution offers, at low expense, the efficiency of instruction and breadth of curriculum found in the leading women's colleges. Modern and ample equipment. Situation and grounds of extraordinary beauty and healthfulness.

Schools of Music and Art. All collegiate, general, and college preparatory courses, Gymnasium and large campus.

Catalogue and book of sixty views sent on request.

Miss R. J. DeVORE, President, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St. New York

THROUGH SLEEPERS TO BOSTON.

On Wabash Continental Limited, leaving Chicago 12:02 noon arriving Boston 5:50 P. M. next day. Also on Night Express leaving Chicago 11 P. M., arriving Boston 10:20 A. M. second day. Through sleeper to New York on both trains. Ticket Office, 97 Adams st. Telephone, Main 1619.

Educational

PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

St. Luke's School, Bustleton, Pa.

(near Philadelphia)

"A thorough and honest school, the kind of a school to which sensible parents desire to send their sons."—BISHOP WHITAKER. Grounds and situation are exceptionally beautiful and healthful. Individual instruction. Full equipment.

CHARLES H. SPROUT, Principal.

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH, WASHINGTON, PA.

BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral Morning and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalogue, write to Wm. W. SMITH, Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls.

The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many.

The school is first-class in every respect.

Bishop Hare makes it his home.

Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL, Sioux Falls, S. D.

VIRGINIA

Fauquier Institute for Young Ladies.

Warrenton, Va.

The thirty-ninth session begins Sept. 21st, '99. Situated in Piedmont region of Va., on Southern R. R., 55 miles from Washington. Number limited. For catalogue address

GEO. G. BUTLER, A.M., AND DAUGHTERS.

Episcopal High School of Virginia.

Near Alexandria.

For Boys. The 61st year opens Sept. 27th, 1899. Illustrated catalogue on application to

L. M. BLACKFORD, M.A., Principal.

WISCONSIN

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. I. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address,

THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes many boys." Graduates enter any university. Diploma admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address

REV. H. D. ROBINSON, Warden, Racine, Wis.

MISSOURI

SYNODICAL COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

For Young Ladies. Elegant Location. Faculty Specialists.

Special Courses Leading to degrees in Literature, Music, Art, Elocution. Prepares for Bryn Mawr and Wellesley. Write for catalogue.

T. P. WALTON, Pres't, Fulton, Mo.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

WHILE PRESENT CONDITIONS in Cuba give rise to widespread speculation as to whether or not the United States is pursuing any definite policy in the island, the fact remains that if one-half the plans of capitalists are ultimately put into execution, Cuba will blossom like a rose, and its vast natural resources will be developed to a remarkable degree. A great deal of dissatisfaction exists among the natives because they seem to have passed from control of one government into the hands of another, and are a long way from their ideal of independence, albeit they are freed from oppression. They are virtually under military control; Spanish laws, with some modifications, are in effect and enforced, and they have apparently no voice in the conduct of affairs.

— x —

IT IS EVEN SAID THAT FOREIGN CAPITALISTS are absorbing valuable property and franchises, and that American investors are discriminated against, this condition being due to precautions taken by those in control against a feeling on the part of some Cubans that the administration was being used for speculative purposes. If all financial plans matured, there would be little left of Cuba for Cubans when they eventually administer their own government. Capitalists have figured on almost every resource worth figuring on, mineral and vegetable, and in many cases options have been taken. Railroads and trolley lines have been projected with a prodigality which would require many millions of dollars to consummate. Even theatres and hotels are included. When many of these projects are finally incorporated, chances for the investment of $1 up will be afforded everybody.

— x —

LADIES OF THE W. C. T. U. IN CHICAGO have begun a campaign against advertisements which depend largely for their attractiveness on pictorial reproductions of the national flag. The present campaign is being particularly directed against advertisements of a brand of liquor, which are brazenly placed within a short distance of a large church edifice. Outdoor advertising became a public nuisance when billboard companies ceased to respect the feelings of the community by defacing scenery, and making thoroughfares mediums by which, through the use of vacant lots and dead walls, the public cannot get away from announcements of Blank's Nervine, etc. In cities where sentiment is thus outraged, and where prohibitory legislation cannot be secured, the organization of societies whose members agree to refrain from purchasing articles advertised in an objectionable manner, would likely be effective.

— x —

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IN THE State of Michigan has encountered an obstacle which, for the present at least, cannot be overcome. The Supreme Court has decided that municipal ownership of a street railway is not analogous to water works or lighting plants, and under the laws of the State is unconstitutional. The discussion comes at a time when Detroit was about ready to operate its street cars, and is a blow to the faction headed by Governor Pinckney, which has stoutly combatted "trusts, monopolies, and grasping corporations." The next step to be taken by municipal ownership partisans will likely be a move for a constitutional amendment which will permit their plans being put into execution.

— x —

VOTERS OF RHODE ISLAND HAVE decided they do not want a new constitution. The result is to continue in effect a somewhat antiquated form of State government. Under the proposed new constitution, Providence, with three-eighths of the entire population of the State, was to have had its representation increased from one-sixth to one-fourth in the Lower House, but its representation in the Senate was to remain one thirty-eighth. The new constitution proposed a property qualification which aroused antagonism, as it would have disenfranchised three-fifths of those now permitted to vote on municipal matters. Biennial sessions of the Legislature were proposed, also Providence was to be the only State capital. This latter provision was of course resisted en masse by the people of Newport.

— x —

IN EVERY LARGE MUNICIPALITY there are more or less frequent efforts toward securing reform legislation, but in too many cases much energy is thus directed which might better be expended in procuring the enforcement of existing laws. Chicago is a notable example. Foremost in movements looking to civic improvement, and having a well developed public sentiment favorable to industrial growth, the fact seems to be lost sight of that laws regulating public morals, or protecting the rights of those who believe in keeping the first day of the week after the manner of Christians, have become a dead letter, so far as their enforcement is concerned. Moral cancers under the name of "gardens" are permitted to flourish in flagrant violation of law, and on Sunday, scenes of debauchery are no uncommon sight. It is a standing reproach and disgrace to a Christian community that such a condition of things should exist.

— x —

THE WAY FOR FURTHER ADVANCEMENT of automobiles has been cleared by a legal decision in Illinois, which declares park commissioners have no right to prohibit the use of horseless vehicles in grounds or on streets set aside for pleasure. The court holds that commissioners can regulate the speed of such vehicles, but cannot prevent owners from taking them wherever they please, provided the safety of the public is not endangered. A move is being made in some cities to compel drivers of such vehicles to possess certificates of competency. Unless something be done in this direction, the time may come when the only alternative for pedestrians who wish to preserve their limbs will be to quit walking.

— x —

ACCORDING TO ADVICES FROM BERLIN, the Hessian Diet has decreed that bachelors shall pay an income tax 25 per cent. greater than married men. This is indeed a curious piece of legislation, and the effect is problematical. In the United States it would likely result in a large increase in the number of marriage fees, although, if as tariff agitators argue, luxuries only are taxed, it would be inferred that single blessedness is a luxury to be enjoyed only by young men with substantial incomes. This discrimination in favor of Hessian benedicts will, however, doubtless be welcomed, and the wisdom of Hessian legislators fully borne out when the census takers note that the marriage ratio has greatly increased.

— x —

IT IS ANNOUNCED THAT TEN REGIMENTS are to be recruited for active service in the Philippines, and this action will partially satisfy those who believe the work of pacification is being attempted by a force not sufficiently strong. If the claim be true that only the Tagals are resisting authority of the United States, and that Aguinaldo really represents but a comparatively small percentage of the population of the islands, a good bit of ground is swept from under those who are actively opposing the entire Philippine policy of the government. In considering the Philippine question, holding contrary opinion does not, as is asserted, imply that the individual is treasonable in giving aid and comfort to the enemy. But it is well to remember that having assumed sovereignty of the islands, the United States becomes responsible to foreign governments, and the paramount responsibility is to restore order as expeditiously as possible. Having accomplished this, the question of final disposition of the islands will then be in order, and free criticism and expression of views will not have a disheartening effect upon brave men who are fighting for what, in the present status at least, is their country's good.

— x —

IN THE TRANSVAAL A TEMPORARY lull seems to have followed a series of disturbing and exciting incidents. On the surface it appears that neither Great Britain, nor the Boers are inclined to grant concessions, and each seems to be awaiting a move by the other. England has virtually delivered an ultimatum, and President Kruger offers to submit all points of disagreement to arbitration. In the meantime both countries are making military preparations, but it is to be hoped the difficulty will end in a mere show of strength. The gist of the whole issue seems to be whether or not a foreign subject has any rights in the Transvaal. There can be but one answer to the question, and if Dutch obstinacy refuses a satisfactory answer, it will be the duty of England to convince the Boers of their error.

The News of the Church

A Protest Against Consecration of the Bishop of Boise

LEST there should be in some minds misapprehension as to our action in the proposed consecration of the Rev. J. B. Funsten, as the alleged Bishop of Boise, we desire to say in the first place that our action is based entirely upon our affection for him, and our love for the Church, and in justification of this claim, we desire to say that we voted twice during our last General Convention to make the Rev. Mr. Funsten the Missionary Bishop-elect of Boise; and we also submit the following copy of a private letter, which we addressed to the Rev. Mr. Funsten, as soon as we learned of his proposed consecration on the 13th of July:

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., BISHOP'S HOUSE,
July 6th, 1899.

REV. AND DEAR BROTHER.—In so far as your consecration is concerned, I heartily congratulate you, and shall welcome you as a bishop with right good will. My only difficulty was and is a legal and canonical one. You declined, and your letter so declining was received by the late Presiding Bishop, and passed with other official papers to our present venerable Presiding Bishop. He acted upon this official knowledge in his call for the House of Bishops to meet June 15th last. You also on your part, as I am informed, received from your attached parishioners a testimonial of gratitude to you for declining to leave them. In view of the established fact that you did decline, the contention is, that you cannot resume your relation to Boise as Bishop-elect without the consent of the other parties canonically involved in the transaction. It seems to me, dear brother, that you are, without intention of course, badly advised in this matter, and may experience in consequence serious trouble in the future.

Be assured of my most sincere regard for you personally, of which I mean this letter to be a proof. I anticipate in you a twin brother as it were of dear Bishop Burton, whom I truly love in the Lord.

Hoping that you may be rightly guided, and praying that God may bless you now and always, I remain with sincere fraternal affection.

Faithfully yours,
GEORGE F. SEYMOUR.

REV. J. B. FUNSTEN,
Portsmouth, Va.

With this preliminary statement we submit the following "brief," as the lawyers would call it, of the Rev. Mr. Funsten's case, with our protest against his consecration:

THE POINTS in re THE REV. MR. FUNSTEN

(1) Under date of March 8th, 1899, the Presiding Bishop called a meeting of the House of Bishops at Newport, R. I., June 15, 1899,

"To elect suitable persons to be bishops of the Church, etc. . . . in the missionary jurisdictions of Boise and Kyoto, vacant, the one by the declination of the Bishop-elect, and the other by the failure to elect, etc. . . ."

(2) Under date of April 4th, 1899, the Presiding Bishop writes as follows:

I am glad to accompany this notice with the statement that the Rev. Mr. Funsten, having asked permission to withdraw his declination as Bishop-elect of the missionary district of Boise, I have etc. . . . accepted the withdrawal of the declination, and am proceeding to take order for his consecration without delay.

(3) Under date of April 17th, 1899, the Presiding Bishop announced the postponement of the proposed consecration of the Rev. Mr. Funsten, and stated "that Bishop Williams had never acknowledged the letter of declination sent by the Rev. Mr. Funsten through his assessor, and had never accepted the declination. That by failing to take any new action in regard to the oversight of the jurisdiction, Bishop Williams had virtually treated the jurisdiction as still vacant; its condition not being affected by Mr. Funsten's election or declination."

It is to be observed that no acceptance of the declination in such case as the above is required. The only point to be made sure is the receipt, by the proper officer, of the declination. Of this receipt, we are assured, over and over again, by the statements of Bishop Clark, that he knew officially that the Rev. Mr. Funsten had declined. Nothing more whatsoever is necessary so far as the completion of the act of declining is concerned.

It is also to be particularly noted that Bishop Williams, at the time of the receipt of Mr. Funsten's declination, was in a dying condition, and did die a few days after, on the 7th of February, 1899. He was therefore unable to take any action whatsoever in the premises.

Having recited these facts, we submit that the case is summed up under the following heads:

(1) The House of Bishops and the House of Deputies, on last October, who have the custody of Boise as a ward under their guardianship, asked the Rev. Mr. Funsten to marry her spiritually as her Bishop.

(2) After due deliberation, the Rev. Mr. Funsten declined to contract the spiritual marriage by consecration, and thereby broke the engagement. And this declination on his part was officially acknowledged and acted upon by the present venerable Presiding Bishop.

(3) Now, this question is: Can the Rev. Mr. Funsten renew this engagement of his own volition, and accept his spiritual bride by consecration without the consent of Boise's guardians, who have her under their legal and canonical care? I answer without hesitation. No. And all to whom I have stated the case give the same answer.

There can be no doubt that the Rev. Mr. Funsten did decline. Does he wish, and the bishops who act with him wish, to escape the effect of the declination by technicalities of the most inadequate character? One cannot believe for a moment that such is the case.

We would not spend any time in discussing the case, did it not involve legal consequences which may be of a very serious and distressing nature in the future, and besides, because it establishes, as we humbly submit, a very unsatisfactory precedent.

The act of consecration will simply clothe the Rev. Mr. Funsten with the office of a bishop in the Church of God. It does not, and it cannot, give him jurisdiction. When he is consecrated, therefore, our dear brother will be a bishop, but he will not be, as many lawyers declare, the Bishop of Boise. In this contention, of course, we and the legal authorities whom we have consulted may be wrong, but it is the voice of prudence which advises, settle this legal question before you place our brother and the Church in a possible condition of extreme awkwardness, by hasty ordination and consecration.

When the Rev. Mr. Funsten assumes, in virtue of his consecration, to be the Missionary Bishop of Boise, suppose a clergyman disputes his claim, what do the canons say upon the subject? Suppose he, as the alleged Bishop of Boise, presumes to act in a legal capacity as a trustee or incorporator, and the lawyers dispute his title as such an officer in the eyes of the civil law, what do our statutes and jurists say upon the subject? We deplore, for our dear brother's sake, and the sake of the peace of the Church, what seems to us to be hasty and ill-advised action on the part of the authorities who have practical control in the premises, and we repeat our solemn and well-considered protest against this consecration as uncanonical, and calculated to work great mischief and injury to the Church.

GEORGE F. SEYMOUR,
Bishop of Springfield.

Springfield, Illinois, June 7th, 1899.

NOTE.—Bishop Clark requests correction of an error in his official communication in re Bishop of Boise, published in our issue of last week, viz., Judge Stiness was referred to as of the U.S. Court; it should read—of the R. I. Supreme Court.

—x—

The Board of Missions

THE following statement of the financial situation is earnestly commended to the attention of our readers.

The Constitution of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society recognizes that every member of the Church is a member of the Society, the Church having taken its stand upon this grand idea sixty-four years ago. For this reason our constituency is so great and so widespread, that it is obviously impossible that all who are included in it should ever be brought together to receive direct reports concerning the work carried on by the Society. They are represented once in three years in the Board of Missions by their bishops and their deputies to the General Convention, but the time that can be afforded for missionary matters during the usual three weeks' session is so limited that the full reports then presented never receive the attention they deserve. The membership is also represented month by month by the bishops, all of whom have seats in the Board of Managers, but even thus the people do not hear of the missionary situation.

It seems, therefore, fitting that something should be said before the close of each fiscal year by way of reporting upon the financial outlook, with the hope that it will reach the eyes of many who would otherwise have no information on the subject.

We write as to friends in interest, since nothing is plainer than that every baptized person is a missionary of Jesus Christ, and, it is therefore to be assumed, interested in the extension of the Church at home, and in the preaching of the Gospel to those who have it not, abroad. Indeed, these terms, at "home," and "abroad," as addressed respectively to those of the dominant race or to pagans, are, by reason of recent political changes, becoming very much confused; so many varieties of missions are there to those of other races at home, and so many who have not the Gospel are now included within the territory of the United States, while in almost all our foreign missions, there are those to be ministered to who come of a long line of Christian ancestors, whose spiritual interest no bishop can neglect.

The basis of our further remarks is the treasurer's report to the Board of Managers, from September 1st to June 1st. It is with profound thankfulness to Almighty God, and with the highest appreciation of the zeal of the Church, that we say at the outset that the contributions are more than $30,000 larger than those for the same term two years ago, and that (notwithstanding there was nothing to offset a single offering of $10,000 in the last fiscal year) there has been an increase of $1,392 over last year. This is indeed encouraging. Turning to the other side: In the first place, because of the expansion of our own domain, and the increase of the work before undertaken at home and abroad—the best evidence of God's blessing upon our poor efforts—the Society, by the Board's appropriation, is responsible for paying out a greater amount of money than in any previous year, a sum approximately reaching $600,000. From September 1st to June 1st (nine months), there was received from contributions a little more than one-half the amount appropriated. If this be increased by an amount equal to that received in the summer of last year, and no more, the contributions may be said, in round numbers, to be likely to cover two-thirds of the amount appropriated. This includes the amount applicable from interest and specific funds; and after applying the proceeds of those legacies received during the year, which, it was evident from the terms of the wills, the testators intended should be so used, it is safe to say that not less than $25,000 or $30,000 additional to usual expectations should be raised before September 1st, to enable the treasurer to close his accounts for the fiscal year without any arrearage.

We have endeavored to state the result without troubling the reader with the infinite details by which it is reached, and assuming the loyalty and interest, of which we have had so many evidences, of Churchmen and Churchwomen, we put forth this statement with the conviction that it makes its own appeal for that which is lacking.

JOSHUA KIMBER,
Associate Secretary.

Canada

Diocese of Ontario

Archbishop Lewis, of Ontario, has returned from England in improved health, and now intends to spend most of the year in Canada, as his physicians think he will be able to do so if he spends two or three of the winter months in the South. The Ontario synod was called for June 26th. The Archbishop held a Confirmation at Brockville, on the first Sunday after Trinity. The band of the 14th Battalion has given $25 toward the organ to be placed in St. George's, Kingston, now being restored after the fire.

Diocese of Algoma

The sessions of the Eastern conference which met at Sundridge lately, were very successful. Bishop Thornloe presided, and many matters of interest to the eastern part of the diocese were discussed. The Woman's Auxiliary, of St. Luke's pro-cathedral, Sault Ste. Marie, have voted a fourth of the amount made by their late sale of work, to the Bishop Sullivan Sustentation Fund.

Diocese of Rupert's Land

Archbishop Machray, the Primate, held an ordination in St. George's church, Winnipeg, on Whitsunday, when seven deacons and seven priests were ordained. Dean O'Meara presented the candidates; a number of the clergy of the diocese were present.

Commencements

St Margaret's School, Buffalo, N. Y.,

Closed its 15th year June 14th, with its annual Commencement office in Trinity church, the united choirs of Trinity and Ascension parishes rendering the musical portions of the service. Bishop Dudley, of Kentucky, delivered the address. Bishop Walker presented the diplomas to the 14 graduates. The class exercises were held in St. Margaret's Assembly Hall in the morning of the same day, when Dr. Matthew D. Mann presented the prizes, and Bishops Walker and Dudley spoke briefly. Four of the young ladies passed the entrance examination for Smith College this year. A reception was held in St. Margaret's in the evening, the Bishops, Miss Tuck, the principal, and the class of '99 receiving.

DeVeaux College

Founder's Day was celebrated on June 17th. The exercises opened with morning service in the chapel. The Rev. T. B. Berry delivered an address on "Consecration." The awarding of prizes and diplomas, and an exhibition drill on the college campus, followed, after which a collation was served to the students and visitors.

Under the able management of the Rev. Wm. S. Barrows, headmaster, DeVeaux is taking its rightful place among the educational institutions of the country.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

In addition to $625 now in hand, an individual subscription of $500 has just been made to the fund being raised for a parsonage at Winnetka.

St. Mark's, Evanston, has again become a beneficiary by the death of a parishioner, the will of Mrs. Burroughs providing the sum of $5,000, to be invested as a poor fund.

Church Growth in the West

As an indication it may be mentioned that of the 14 consecrations to the episcopate, in which Bishop McLaren has participated, from June 14, 1878, to the present, either as presiding or as co-consecrator, only one, that of Bishop Potter, has been in the East. The others have been Seymour to Springfield, Harris to Michigan, Worthington to Nebraska, Knight to Milwaukee, Grafton to Fond du Lac, Atwill to W. Missouri, Nicholson to Milwaukee, Barker to W. Colorado, White to Indiana, Williams to Marquette, Brown to Arkansas, Edsall to N. Dakota, and Morrison to Iowa. There were, moreover, several of these functions in the West, in which Bishop McLaren did not take part, in fact about 25.

The New St. Paul's, Kankakee

On the 5th, at Kankakee, a well attended parish meeting was held. The rector, Dean Phillips, introduced the Rev. Dr. Rushton as deputed to preside. After addresses, pledges to the amount of $5,500 were made towards the building of the new St. Paul's. It is confidently expected that these pledges will amount up to $8,000 within the week. On Monday the contract was to be let for a structure to cost, completed and furnished by Christmas, $24,000. Of this sum $12,000 has accrued from the sale of the old property.

Choir Outings

The St. Paul's choir are camping out, for the 7th or 8th year, at Diamond Lake, Mich.; that of Epiphany at Paw Paw, a few miles from St. Joseph, Mich., the Rev. John Henry and Mrs. Hopkins being with them.

Clerical Vacations

The Rev. W. J. Hawthorne has returned to Trinity, Wheaton, after three weeks' visit to Medina, Ohio. The Rev. E. A. Larrabee is still in the East. The Rev. F. DuMoulin left on the 5th, for a month's stay on the Massachusetts' Coast, where his father, the Canadian Bishop of Niagara, is summering. The Rev. W. C. Richardson went, on Saturday, with his family, to Devil's Lake, Wis. The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Stone left, on Sunday afternoon, for the East, sailing for Europe from New York on the 12th, and intending to remain in Switzerland till Sept. 1st. The Rev. J. M. Ericsson left on Monday, for a fortnight's stay in the Wisconsin Lake region. The Rev. Dr. Rushton started on Tuesday morning, with his son, for a four-days' wheeling tour northward, with Lake Delavan as the limit. The Rev. C. H. Bixby leaves on Monday for a visit to Traverse City, to be followed by a camping near Glen Haven, but about Aug. 10th will join the comparatively large party in the semi-Episcopal camp on Rowe Island, in the Lizard group, north shore of Lake Superior, and 100 miles from Sault Ste Marie.

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The new edifice of St. Paul's church, Chester, the Rev. J. H. McGuinness, in charge, will be consecrated by Bishop Potter, Aug. 5th.

St. Andrew's church, Harlem, the Rev. Geo. R. Van DeWater, D.D., rector, will omit services for about three weeks during the summer, while a new mosaic pavement is being laid in the chancel.

A clericus for Staten Island has just been organized, with the cordial approval of Bishop Potter. Archdeacon Johnson, of Christ church, New Brighton, is president, and the Rev. H. Newman Lawrence, of St. Simon's, Concord, is secretary. Regular meetings will commence in September.

Gifts to the Cathedral

The grandchildren of Mrs. Fordyce Barker have presented a pair of large and massive altar vases of brass for the crypt chapel, as a memorial of her. Mrs. F. D. Barker has also presented, in memory of her husband, a brass altar desk.

St. George's Sunday School

A newly-arranged special course in Church history, for summer work in the intermediate department of the Sunday school, has been begun. The theme, Sunday, July 2nd, was "Early missionaries—Ulphilas, Boniface, and St. Augustine." An effort is making to render this course of notable interest during the heated season.

Legacies for Endowment of Beds

St. Luke's Hospital has received a legacy of $5,000 for the endowment of a bed in memory of Dr. Fordyce Barker and Mrs. Fordyce Dwight Barker, by the will of the late Elizabeth Lee Barker. The Sheltering Arms Nursery has just received, by the will of the late Herman Casper Schwab, a legacy of $3,000 for the endowment of a bed. Mr. Schwab was for many years a member of the board of trustees.

Fire at the Church of the Intercession

The edifice of the church of the Intercession, the Rev. Lawrence H. Schwab, rector, has been seriously burned, destroying the organ, the chancel, and several handsome windows, and causing a loss of several thousand dollars. Efforts were successful in saving the nave, and through the energy and bravery of some of the parishioners, the altar and chancel hangings, the clergy vestments, altar vessels, and altar cross were rescued. Temporarily, services are being conducted in the chapel while repairs are proceeding on the ruined portion of the building.

Fresh Air Work

The Misses Potter, daughters of the late Orlando B. Potter, have opened their summer home for children, near Sing Sing, N. Y. They have had as their guests during the past week 25 little ones from this city. The next group will be the choir boys of Grace chapel. During their stay the boys will give a concert for the benefit of Sing Sing Hospital and charitable work at Grace chapel. Trinity church has opened its summer home for fresh air work on the seashore at Great River, N. Y., in charge of Sister Gertrude.

Church of the Archangel

The congregation, which, as already announced, is raising funds for the erection of a new church edifice, has left the hall in which it has been worshipping, and for the present will hold services in the quarters of the new rector, the Rev. Geo. Starkweather Pratt. An experiment is being tried during the warm weather of holding the sessions of the Sunday school in the open air. The parish now has 132 communicants and an income of about $2,000 a year. The neighborhood in which it is located has been carefully canvassed, with result that 3,000 families are found to be living within its boundaries, affording ample material for future substantial growth.

The Sisterhood of the Good Shepherd

Has closed its distinctive work at its own house, with Bishop Potter's approval. The Sisters will be associated with St. Faith's House, connected with the New York Training School for Deaconesses. The order has had a vigorous existence for 30 years, having been founded in 1869. Its work has included at different times St. Barnabas House of the City Mission Society; the House of the Good Shepherd for fresh air work, at Asbury Park, N. J.; Christ Hospital, Jersey City, N. J.; St. James' parish school, Wilmington, N. C.; Buttercup Cottage, at Germantown, Philadelphia; the Hospital of the Good Shepherd, Nashville, Tenn.; the Sister's house and school, and parochial visitation work in New York City.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

At the municipal celebration of Independence Day in Independence Square, Philadelphia, under the auspices of the Society of the War of 1812, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Coleman, Bishop of Delaware, and chaplain-general of the society, pronounced the invocation.

The Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children has just completed a large stone addition to its building, consisting of a dormitory, dining-rooms, and furnaces. These new buildings, costing $16,000, were erected through the generosity of three ladies who desire their names withheld.

Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia, with Holy Trinity memorial chapel, and the mission, Prince of Peace, will all hold regular services during the summer. Organist Kidder, of Grace church, Providence, will have charge of the music at Holy Trinity, beginning with September.

Church of the Holy Spirit, Philadelphia

Celebrated its ninth anniversary on Sunday, 2d inst., large congregations being in attendance both morning and evening. The Rev. Samuel H. Boyer who has been in charge of this "Snyder Avenue Mission" since its inception in 1890, preached an historical sermon in the morning. An elaborate musical programme was rendered at both services by the choir, under the direction of Herbert M. Boyer, organist and choirmaster; and at the evening service the choir was reinforced by the Sunday school children who joined in singing the national hymns and anthems. At this latter service a large number of sailors and marines from the League Island Navy Yard, attended in a body, presenting a fine appearance.

Parish House for All Saints', Norristown

On Saturday afternoon, 1st inst., Bishop Whitaker laid the corner-stone of the new parish house. The Rev. W. Herbert Burk, rector, was in charge of the services, assisted by several of the diocesan clergy and his father, the Rev. Jesse T. Burk, of New Jersey. After laying the stone according to the usual form, the Bishop delivered an address, in which he outlined the importance of a proper regard for family and social life, the relation of each life to that of the Church, and the part which the parish house shall enact in cementing this relationship. The proposed building has been fully described in THE LIVING CHURCH of March 11th and May 6th last.

Dr. T. S. Rumney's Golden Jubilee

The Rev. Dr. Theodore Sill Rumney, rector of St. Peter's church, Germantown, on Thursday, 18th inst., completed his 50th year in the ministry. He has invited his parishioners to unite with him in the Holy Eucharist on Sunday, 16th inst., and has asked them to remove entirely the debt still remaining on the church, which amounts to $1,008.06, towards which a friend has promised $250, leaving a balance of $758.06 to be raised.

A Memorial Window for Misses Chapman

Will shortly be placed in Emmanuel church, Holmesburg, Philadelphia, commemorating Miss Sarah B. Chapman and Miss Matilda B. Chapman who were connected with the early history of the parish, and well known in that section of the city.

Kansas

Frank Rosebrook Millsbaugh, D.D., Bishop

An Old Parish Revived

An old ruin of a church had been standing at Irving unused for nine years. The Bishop put a missionary in the field to see if something could not be found of the old days nearly a quarter of a century ago. The result is a renovated church, 10 or 12 communicants, and a subscription for a monthly service. At the service for reopening the church, seven were baptized and three confirmed. One of them was a childhood friend of the Bishop, whom he had not seen for 35 years. They were both baptized by the Rev. J. Lloyd Brock, the pioneer missionary, in the first wooden chapel at Faribault, Minn., and Bishop Millsbaugh's mother, still living at 80, was his godmother. It was a unique experience.

Central New York

F. D. Huntington, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Good Shepherd Training School for Nurses, connected with the hospital of that name in Syracuse, recently graduated a second class for the year, numbering five. The Bishop, as head of the trustees, presented the diplomas, after a few appropriate remarks.

The Rev. J. E. Ramsdell, minister-in-charge of Grace church, Utica, will take a vacation of a month, during which time the church walls will be decorated, and the chapel only used for services.

A Bishop-coadjutor

Apropos of the discussion regarding the appointment of a coadjutor for Bishop Huntington, and the probable selection of his son, the Rev. J. O. S. Huntington, O. H. C., for the position, the Bishop has written the following letter to a friend:

HADLEY, MASS., JUNE 21, 1899.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—You are right in your impression that it very rarely appears to me worth while to go to the public, in personal matters, with explanations, corrections, or apologies. But I am willing to oblige you, and in as few words as possible. If it affords anybody harmless amusement to put into print conjectures or speculations about my future course as to matters in which I have at present neither "purpose nor opinions," why should I object?

From the article or communication you show me, it would appear that some parties or persons feel a lively interest in the question who shall take up the duties of the episcopal office when God's providence calls me to lay them down. I have just told the diocese that the personal and physical conditions which, more than a year ago, made me apprehend that I must face that question myself, have disappeared. I can discover no reason why my mind, or that of my friends, should be occupied with it. We all have too much to do, to think of, and to care for, of a practical and pressing character. My advice, if called for, would be that, till such times as unforeseen events require action of such sort, be it one year hence or three, or half a dozen, we heed the familiar maxim of philosophy and religion, by "doing the duty that lies nearest us." Those who do not like my way of doing things must make the best of it and pray for me. Those who do, need not be anxious. If any brother has so little work on hand that he would like to be a bishop himself, he knows not what he wants.

There is an allusion to my family. Even out of what is not very delicate, if it is sufficiently preposterous, we can get some momentary entertainment. The coadjutorship is very seldom mentioned in my house, because it is very little thought of. If there were to be an election next week, I believe I should not be prepared to express a personal preference, and I do not know for what candidate, or what party, any child of mine, if a voter, would vote. As respects "politicians," the daily desire and petition of us all is that if they need it they may be civilized and Christianized.

Faithfully,

FREDERICK DAN HUNTINGTON.

South Carolina

Ellison Capers, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. T. D. Bratton has been elected rector of St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C., "the diocesan institution of the Carolinas," and will enter upon his duties about August 1st.

Bishop Caper's Appointments for July

9. John's, Wadmalaw, and Edisto Islands.
11. Ordination, Walterboro.
12. Consecration chapel, McPhersonville.
16. Marion.
23. Consecration church, Spartanburg.
27. Meeting trustees, Sewanee.

Memorials of Bishop Howe

St. Timothy's church, Columbia, has recently been enriched with two beautiful memorials to the late Bishop Howe—a polished brass almbason and credence table, gifts from two friends of the Bishop. This church devoted its Easter offering of $212 to cancelling the debt on its lot.

Milwaukee

Isaac Lea Nicholson, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. P. A. H. Brown, of St. John's church, Varick st., New York, has sent a gift of $50 for the new church of St. Bartholomew, Pewaukee, lately begun.

The Standing Committee of the diocese has given official consent to the consecration of the Rev. Joseph Marshall Francis, to the see of Indiana.

Holy Innocents' church, Racine, is being raised, renewed, and thoroughly recast, at an expense of $1,000. Of this amount, one-half has been already raised, and is in hand.

St. John's, Mauston, has purchased a rectory building, directly adjoining the church and guild hall, at a cost of $1,500.

Chapel to be Rebuilt at Summit Centre

The Rev. Marshall F. Montgomery, of Huron, S. D., is residing this summer at Summit, Waukesha Co., Wis., and has been licensed by the Bishop to officiate in that county. It is hoped to rebuild at Summit Centre the chapel not long since unfortunately destroyed by fire at Summit Corners.

Church Destroyed by Cyclone

St. Thomas' church, New Richmond, was totally destroyed by the terrible cyclone which recently devastated that section of the State. A great many of the Church people were killed and injured. The Rev. W. A. Howard, Jr., is the priest-in-charge, and will be glad of any help towards re-establishing this good work.

Recent Confirmations

Number last reported, 492. Fox Lake, 4; Beaver Dam, 6; St. Paul's, Milwaukee (special), 4; Oconomowoc, 14; Monroe, 4; cathedral, Milwaukee (special), 1; St. Alban's, Superior, 27; the Redeemer, Superior, 14; Cumberland, 2; Spooner, 8; Shell Lake, 1; total, 577.

Minnesota

Henry B. Whipple, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

U. N. Gilbert, D.D., LL.D., Bishop-coadjutor

Mr. Normington, for several years choir-master and organist at Gethsemane, Minneapolis, and for the past year connected with St. John's, St. Paul, has accepted a similar position in the cathedral in New Zealand, his former home.

Bishop Whipple's Official Acts

June 18th: Ordained to the priesthood, in Christ church, Red Wing, Philip Henry Linley; preached and celebrated the Holy Communion; delivered an address to the Sunday school. The Rev. Mr. Linley will have charge of St. Luke's church, Hastings. June 22nd: Preached at Sleepy Eye, and confirmed three persons. June 23d and 24th: Addressed the Indians at the Birch Coulee mission twice. June 25th: Ordained Henry Whipple St. Clair, a Sioux Indian, to the diaconate, at church of St. Cornelia, Birch Coulee. Held Baptism, confirmed six persons, and celebrated the Holy Communion. In the afternoon, held service at Beaver Falls. June 26: Preached and confirmed nine persons in church at Redwood Falls. June 27th: Preached and confirmed four persons in Calvary church, Waseca. Also preached at Northfield, and confirmed a large class presented by Mr. Ten Broeck. Preached and held Confirmation at Shattuck and at St. Mary's Hall.

Confirmations by Bishop Gilbert

On the 4th Sunday after Trinity, Bishop Gilbert confirmed an interesting class at St. Andrew's, South St. Paul, prepared by Mr. Geo. Dunlap, lay-reader. In the evening he confirmed a class of 10 at St. Philip's (colored) mission, the largest in the history of the parish, prepared by the Rev. Harvey Officer, priest-in-charge. Beginning with the first Sunday in August, Mr. Officer will assume the rectorship pro tem of St.

Paul's church, during the Rev. Dr. Wright's contemplated trip abroad. The vestry granted him a year's leave of absence.

Rev. Mr. Ten Broeck's Anniversaries

Sunday, June 25th, the rector of St. Mary's, the Rev. G. H. Ten Broeck, celebrated the anniversary of his ordination. It was also the anniversaries of both Mr. and Mrs. Ten Broeck's birthdays and wedding day. In the evening choral service was held, the offering going towards the choir fund. The church was beautifully decorated with roses and palms. The parishioners presented the rector and Mrs. Ten Broeck with a beautiful palm and jardiniere, in honor of the event.

Maryland

William Paret, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

Death of the Rev. J. P. Fugette

The Rev. J. Preston Fugette, an old and well-known clergyman of Baltimore, died June 17th. He was born in Washington in 1825, and educated for the ministry at the Virginia Theological Seminary near Alexandria, Va. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1854, and came immediately to Baltimore. After three years of ardent work he built the church of the Holy Innocents', Chase and Eden sts. During the Civil War he returned to Alexandria and took charge of Christ church. Thirteen years ago he retired from active work. The funeral took place June 31st, the Rev. E. B. Niver, rector of Christ church, officiating. Interment was made in Greenmount cemetery.

Archdeaconry of Annapolis

The spring meeting was held in Christ church, Calvert Co., June 19th and 20th. The journey was made by water, the Governor having placed the State steamer, "Gov. McLane," at the command of the archdeaconry. A missionary service was held Monday at Christ church, with addresses by the Rev. Messrs. Plummer and Niver. On Tuesday the business session began at 9 A. M. At 11 a recess was taken for a public service, the Rev. C. J. Curtis being the preacher. A bountiful lunch was served by the ladies of Christ parish, in the churchyard. At the afternoon session the topic, "What do our country parishes need?" was discussed by the Rev. Messrs. Galt and Gardner. Appropriations were ordered for the year, and apportionments fixed for nearly all the churches. A very hopeful spirit was shown in all the reports of the work of the country churches.

Western New York

Wm. D. Walker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

St. Paul's Church, Mayville

The Bishop made his visitation to St. Paul's and its dependent chapels, the Rev. G. W. S. Ayres, rector, on the 5th Sunday after Trinity. Accompanied by the rector, the Bishop celebrated the Holy Communion at 8 A. M. in the chapel of the Good Shepherd, Chautauqua, the Bishop remaining and preaching at 11 A. M. in the amphitheatre to a congregation of 1,500 persons. In the afternoon, the Bishop and rector drove to St. George's chapel, Hartfield, where Evening Prayer was said, the Bishop preaching and also addressing the Sunday School. In the evening, services were held in the parish church at Mayville. The Bishop preached, Holy Baptism was administered to three persons, and a class of eight was presented for Confirmation.

Western Michigan

George De Normandie Gillespie, D.D., Bishop

Departure of Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Wright

Before leaving Big Rapids for her home in Geneva, Ohio, the ladies of the 20th Century Club presented the wife of the Rev. Wm. Wright, their ex-president, with a beautiful gold watch. The ladies' guild also remembered Mrs. Wright with a substantial token. The rector, Chaplain Wright, has for nearly six years been in charge of St. Andrew's church.

New Mexico

John Mills Kendrick, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. John L. Gay, at the church of the Holy Faith, Santa Fe, N. Mex., will be 90 years old on the 21st of September next. He proposes to resign this mission at that date. His resignation will leave vacant our mission in this historic city. It is the oldest, and one of the most important, in New Mexico.

Sorrow has come to the Rev. Mayo Cabell Martin, rector of St. Clement's church, El Paso, Texas, in the death of his wife, Mrs. Laura Martin. She died May 31st, at the home of her parents, Nashville, Tenn.

The Seventh Annual Convocation

Met at St. John's church, Albuquerque, on Ascension Day. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Robert Renison. The Rev. Fred T. Bennett was elected secretary. There was a good attendance of the clergy, and a larger attendance of the laity than usual. The constitution was amended so that every clergyman actually performing clerical duty whether canonically resident or not, shall have a seat and a vote. The Bishop in his annual address gave an account of the work done during the last year, and described the situation. The territorial secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary made an encouraging report. Two measures were adopted looking to episcopal support: An annual assessment on communicants, and an appeal to individuals and congregations for contributions to the endowment of the episcopate, this fund to be held and invested by the "Trustees of the Property of the Protestant Episcopal Church in New Mexico," a duly organized corporation. Mr. R. J. Palen, of Santa Fe, was elected treasurer; the Rev. J. L. Gay and Mr. Frank S. Halty, delegates to the Missionary Council; the Rev. Fred T. Bennett, Mr. W. J. Johnson, and Mr. A. Galen Stockett, Auxiliary Board of Missions. The Bishop's appointments were: Standing Committee, the Rev. Messrs. M. Cabell Martin and Thomas D. Lewis; Messrs. L. B. Prince and Wyndham Kemp; territorial Secretary of Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. Florence M. John, El Paso, Tex. The report of the Committee on the State of the Church was adopted after a discussion in which all the members of convocation took part. We quote part of it: "We find cause for encouragement in the hopeful condition of the work throughout the district. Especially is this noticeable in the gain of presbyters; increase in the number of Baptisms and Confirmations; development in Sunday school work, and also in general offerings. In accordance with the recommendation contained in the Bishop's address, we trust that the larger missions will strive to increase their contributions to the salaries of the missionaries, so that existing missionary appropriations may be curtailed, for the extension of the work in other places. We would urge upon the clergy the importance of the work of the Woman's Auxiliary, and recommend the organization of branches wherever practicable. We note with pleasure, from the Bishop's address, the growing sentiment against public entertainments for the support of the Church."

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

St. Thomas' Church, Washington

The first service in the new church, the Rev. J. A. Aspinwall, rector, was held on the 4th Sunday after Trinity. During the next few months the regular Sunday services will be continued in the chapel, while the work in the new building is completed. An altar and reredos of stone or marble will be erected, for which a member of St. Thomas' has given $3,000. Other gifts are, $1,000 for a stone pulpit, $500 for a brass lectern, and $150 for Bible and Prayer Books. The new building had been in process of construction for five years, work going on as the funds were provided. In its outwardly completed state, it is by far the most beautiful and substantial church in the city, a fine example of the early type of Gothic architecture. It is constructed of gray granite; with buff sandstone trimmings; on the exterior the stone is rough-faced, while the interior walls, of the same stone, have a smooth finish. The only wood used is in the carved oak roof, the wainscoting, floors, and pews. A tower rises above the transepts—the church being cruciform—and is surmounted by a graceful spire. The principal doorway, on 18th st., has an arch of handsome design, and the gable is flanked by small towers. There is also an entrance on Madison st., through a beautiful porch. The long, narrow windows are filled with glass which harmonizes with the interior effect.

Arizona

John Mills Kendrick, D.D., Bishop

The Seventh Annual Convocation

Met at Trinity church, Phoenix, June 1st. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. D. U. Shearman who was also elected secretary. The attendance of the laity was larger than at any previous convocation. The constitution was amended so that every clergyman canonically connected with the district, or under appointment of the Bishop, engaged in Church work in the district at the time of the meeting of convocation, shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of the same. The Rev. E. A. Penick, for the committee appointed at the last meeting of convocation to consider the matter of procuring uniformity in the matter of reporting communicants, offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

That all communicants be reported who are residing within the cure for an indefinite period of time, provided that period be extended over a year.

Action was taken for the safe investment of the Episcopal Fund. The Protestant Episcopal Church Corporation of Arizona reported that all the Church property in the Territory had been conveyed to this corporation. The Bishop, in his annual address, reviewed the work of the year. Elections and appointments were as follows: Standing Committee, the Rev. Messrs. E. A. Penick and W. D. U. Shearman; Messrs. John F. Blandy and John J. Hawkins; treasurer, Mr. H. A. Morford; delegates to the Missionary Council, the Rev. E. A. Penick and Mr. Norman Lackland; Auxiliary Board of Missions, the Rev. W. D. U. Shearman and the Rev. Robert Renison; territorial secretary of Woman's Auxiliary, Miss Elizabeth W. Kendrick. The report of the Committee on the State of the Church was adopted, after a thorough consideration of the subject, in which all the members of the convocation participated. The report stated that there was much ground for encouragement and hopeful perseverance. "A slight falling away may appear in some of the results of the past year, but this is more than counterbalanced by a healthy growth in other directions, and the year has been one of real progress, for which we thank God and take courage. We observe that one of the most difficult problems which the Bishop has to face, is the supply of suitable men for missionary work in these districts; men of tact and talent and physical endurance, and, above all, men "full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom," who long for the salvation of souls, and who will preach in all earnestness and simplicity the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Your committee note with pleasure the organization of three new missions: namely, Kingman, Williams and Winslow, and the happy termination of a perplexing state of affairs by the consecration of St. Paul's church in the latter place. We earnestly hope that the Bishop may be able to find the right man for the missions along the Southern Pacific railway, who will step into the breach, and prove himself a good soldier of Jesus Christ. In conclusion, your committee strongly recommend an inculcation of distinctly Church teaching in harmony with our Book of Common Prayer, and the necessity of emphasizing Sunday school work with a view to this end."

Editorials and Contributions

ONE of the leading Presbyterian pastors of New York city, a man of ability and purity, has relinquished his charge, and the property has been sold to the Jews for a synagogue. He stated that a certain rabbi told him he could buy any one of fifteen or twenty churches if a satisfactory price were arranged. Dr. Chambers gave two reasons for his failure, and these reasons, no doubt, apply to the fifteen or twenty. The first reason was, that the kind of people to whom he ministered had mostly moved to other parts, and it was impossible to maintain a Presbyterian church without a Presbyterian constituency. To remain as a Presbyterian mission among the Jews, it would have to be endowed, but an endowment was not forthcoming. The second reason was the indifference of the people to religion. "The discussions of the Bible have had a mighty influence on the people. Their faith has been undermined until it has reached a state of indifference. Doubt has been raised as to the very structure of the Christian Faith. This has made the task of the minister tenfold greater."

WE have two remarks to make: 1. The Christian religion was founded without a Christian constituency, and yet it made or conquered one with amazing rapidity, and has established itself as a triumphant force, in spite of the most vigorous antagonism. There must be something wrong with any form of it which cannot live without a ready-made constituency. Is this one of the many malignant symptoms of the disease of separatism? If any body feels that it has a mission only to its own sort, the time has arrived to consider what reason it has for existing, or, better, for casting away its narrowness and getting back to the breadth and catholicity of the apostolic times; and this is counsel of wisdom not for the Presbyterian narrowness only, but also for the Baptist exclusiveness, and for the Methodist sect-spirit, and for all the shibboleths, not omitting our own Episcopal "scope of margin small." It is rather absurd to sing loud anthems to Catholicity when a few Jews can dechristianize a whole neighborhood. 2. We presume Dr. Chambers may have in mind the eminent scholarship which has fed so greedily upon its self-conceit that it has been more anxious to announce an unknown prophet of the Exile, or point out a doubtful origin of the fourth Gospel, than to let humble souls go on quietly finding God in the Inspired Word, to their great comfort and progress in character. There is a good deal of that kind of eminent scholarship abroad in the land, and it gets itself into pulpits and schools and colleges and seminaries and magazines, and like all other manias, it loses control of itself, and is quite ready to upset faith if it can only set up its own alleged erudition, and make all the agnostic groundlings stare. But these latter do more than stare; they pat these inflated critics on the back, and say: "Long live such liberality!"

WE are just now passing through a very bad spell of weather. Broadism, in the sense of the liberality just mentioned, darkens the sky, and makes the walking very damp. To your umbrellas, O Israel, for the drops are large. But the shower will soon pass; for the day is not far distant when the atheists, infidels, agnostics, and other religious ignoramuses who do the religious paragraphs in many of the papers, will tire of writing up all kinds of pugilists; and when that time comes there will be less reason for the little emasculates of the pulpit to blacken the eyes of Moses and see double when they look at Isaiah.

THE general belief has been that in Chicagomillionaires abounded to an extraordinary degree. Certainly the city, with a magnificent development of material interests almost unprecedented in the history of the world, gives the casual observer the impression of enormous wealth, and seems to justify the popular belief that there are more millionaires to the square mile in the central part of the city, than in any other city in the world. But it is amusing to discover how wrong the popular notions may sometimes be, and how far from the facts the current gossip! Under the new law of assessment for taxes, it has recently been discovered that there are but two persons in Chicago who possess more than one million in personal property, and these two are women. Are we to infer that this city is exceptionally advantageous to the gentler sex in their pursuit of wealth? Or does it become apparent that men, with all their getting, do not get to keep? Or, perhaps, we are to conclude that it is the custom of the men to hold in the name of their wives, horses, carriages, watches, clocks, sewing machines, gold and silver ware, diamonds and jewelry, actual money in possession, household goods, bonds and stocks of foreign corporations, and money loans.

THE Times-Herald is so uncharitable as to suggest another explanation, which takes the form of a question:

Is it credible that in all this great city there is not a solitary man who owns more personal property in taxable bonds, stocks, and money loans, than is acknowledged in the lowest of these honest schedules? If there is, and we cannot believe the evidence of our eyes, and doubt it, does not the inference bring us close to the conclusion of the hasty Psalmist, "All men are liars?" At least some of their personal property schedules would bear out that conclusion.

This is really a serious revelation of the state of morals among the rich in their relations to organized society. The worst of it is that God knows it all, and will bring these dishonest people to judgment. The next worst is, that every dollar taken from the schedules by false returns, must be paid by people not so able to pay. Equitable taxation demands honest schedules, and when all are honest, all will have less to pay in proportion.

THE launching and naming of a hospital ship in New York, recently, were picturesquely attended by a flight of doves or pigeons from the bow, liberated by the lady who at the same time named the vessel. It is a Japanese custom, we are told, and certainly is more seemly, and more soberly suggestive of good navigation and a safe return, than the pouring of champagne over the bow. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of staunch vessels have gone to the bottom from champagne, and other intoxicants, poured between the bows after sailing. The best use for all that sort of thing is to pour it outside, and we don't see why the W. C. T. U. should protest against it so vehemently.

BUT, why, oh! why, should Miss Dodge repeat the utterly inappropriate, offensive, and irreverent formula, "I christen thee," when she let the birds go and pronounced the name of the ship? She did well to omit the shocking travesty of baptizing a mass of wood and iron, but she did wrong in using the words which signify a sacramental act by which an immortal soul comes into a closer union with Almighty God. It is a profanation of the Name which is above every other name, and ought not to be tolerated in Christian communities. Yet there is scarcely a daily paper which has not some report of this thoughtless trifling with sacred things. It is offensive to good taste as well as religion. How long shall we have to endure it?

MRS. EDDY says: "Divine love is our only physician—never loses a case." Some of the coroner's juries seem to think differently.

— x —

The Rights of the Laity

THE Rev. Dr. Richey, of the General Seminary, one of the most eminent theologians still left among us, recently drew attention to what he called "the special glory of the Protestant Episcopal Church," that "the rights of the laity are grounded and protected by the Canons and the Book of Common Prayer just as much as the rights of the clergy." It would seem difficult to misinterpret this utterance. It is one of the rights of the laity that the services of the Prayer Book must be used according to the rubrics, and that nothing else may be substituted for them. Thus it is taken out of the power of any clergyman to mould the services so that they shall teach peculiar views of his own, or to ignore any of the articles of the Christian Faith. In the course of the Christian Year, all the great facts and doctrines of the Christian religion are emphasized and celebrated in harmonious relation to each other. In every service, in fact, the most essential things are constantly reiterated, such as the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, the Divinity of Christ, and the Incarnation. Those parts of the sacred Scriptures best suited for popular instruction are read and re-read. So it is that the Church provides a safe-guard against the unhappy possibility of an unfaithful priest. If his preaching is erroneous, the constant voice of the Church in her formularies of worship furnishes an antidote. Nothing else may lawfully be substituted for these services, and anything of an additional or supplementary character is subject to the approval of the constituted authorities of the Church.

BUT this is not all. The laity have also the right to demand that the pulpit utterances and public teachings of the clergy shall be in accord with the formularies of faith and worship, and this also is provided for so far as laws and canons can effect it. The declaration of conformity which every candidate must sign before ordination, has become tolerably familiar through recent discussions. It includes an acknowledgment that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are "the Word of God," and a solemn engagement to conform to the "doctrines and worship" of the Church. Besides this very explicit and solemn declaration, the way to Holy Orders is further fenced about by the necessity of presenting various certificates, the most important of which must testify that the candidate has not since his admission as such, "written, taught, or held, anything contrary to the doctrine or discipline of the Protestant Episcopal Church." Finally, at the most solemn moment of ordination, the candidate for the office of deacon is called upon to profess his unfeigned belief in "all the Canonical Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments," while the candidate for the priesthood must promise to be diligent "always so to minister the doctrine" as well as the sacraments and discipline of Christ, "as the Lord hath commanded, and as this Church hath received the same." He must also pledge himself, "with all faithful diligence, to banish and drive away from the Church all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word." Thus, from first to last, so far as human words can go, so far as the most explicit promises can provide security, the Church is protected from false teaching, and the rights of souls for whom Christ died to have a pure Gospel preached to them, are maintained and guarded. Furthermore, the Canons provide a method of arraigning and rejecting from the sacred ministry those who prove false to these vows, and the bishops in particular are set over the Church to watch as those who must give an account.

BUT now, in answer to Dr. Richey, comes a layman to whom it is perfectly clear that the laity need no protection. It is one of their rights, in fact, their main right, not to be protected. In Baptism they are pledged to accept the Apostles' Creed, only that and nothing more. Apparently this is taken to mean that nothing is obligatory upon a layman but the letter of that Creed. This was a solemn contract, and no authority can impose anything more. Every man is at liberty to interpret it as he pleases, to "flux it" with new meanings, regardless of history or of the authority of the Church. For the clergy of the Church, or for the Church herself, to attempt to impose any particular meaning upon the articles of this Creed, is mere impertinence. There are a hundred theological matters, says this gentleman, about which "no man has the right to compel our conclusions by pretending to speak the voice of the Church." He mentions a few of these, such as eternal damnation, verbal inspiration, inerrancy of the Scriptures, and the Real Presence. Another might have included the inspiration of the Scriptures, the doctrine of the Trinity, and the Divinity of our Lord. It is well-known that many Unitarians find no difficulty in accepting the Apostles' Creed. "Such is the liberty," we are told, "wherewith our Church, as well as Christ, hath made us free!" The writer upon whose deliverances we are commenting, compares the Church to "a large room." At this rate, it would truly seem to be as large as all out-of-doors.

IF we are to accept this position, the question naturally arises: Why are all these restrictions placed upon the clergy? Why are they required to give such strict account of their faith, and to obtain at every stage such explicit testimonials to their orthodoxy? They must sign a document which binds them to acknowledge the Holy Scriptures to be the Word of God, and engages them to conform to "the doctrines and worship of the Protestant Episcopal Church," and, as we have seen, they must answer to still more detailed requirements before they can receive the office of priests in the Church of God. What does all this signify, if it has no bearing upon the authority of their teaching? Can it be supposed that it is necessary for a priest to believe more than a layman in order to the salvation of his own soul? Again, why do we maintain theological seminaries, and compel our clergy to prepare themselves by a long and severe course of study for their future work, if this is not intended to supply them with the authoritative teaching of the Church, and if the laity of the Church are at liberty to turn a perfectly deaf ear to their deliverances?

IN fact, according to this view of things, the Prayer Book itself does not matter, except as a sentimental influence. However positive its statements may be, and even though such statements have to be taken upon the lips in the course of the services—as the Nicene Creed, at least on some occasions, in the Communion Office—they are not to be understood seriously. They are nothing more than religious exercises, expressed in archaic, we may say, poetical, forms. All that can be required of anybody as belief being the Apostles' Creed, understood according to each man's private judgment with which no one has any right to interfere, the office of teacher becomes entirely superfluous. Our layman does not balk at this. It is an axiom, he says, that "nothing can be deemed essential which the Church does not impose upon her laymen. An important corollary is wrapped up in that proposition. What is not essential for laymen to believe, is not necessary for clergymen to teach. What is not necessary for them to teach, is not essential for them to believe." Thus is swept away at once the teaching office of the Church, except so far as the Apostles' Creed fulfils that function—that Creed which neither Church nor priest has the right to interpret in such wise as to "compel the conclusions" of any individual.

THE fallacy which runs through all this, is the assumption that the baptismal pledge of belief in "all the Articles of the Christian Faith, as contained in the Apostles' Creed," excludes any authoritative explanation of that Creed, any development of its brief heads into the fullness of their meaning. Until these evil times no one ever doubted that that Creed was merely a summary of fundamental things, a list, as it were, of subjects so great, so profound, so far-reaching in their significance, that they must often call for the most careful and painstaking study to preserve from serious error him who desires to hold the truth of our holy religion. From time to time in the past, errors have arisen, and the Church has met them by explanations which she has embodied in the longer Creeds, in the doctrinal decisions of the great General Councils, and ultimately in her authorized offices of worship. As well might one imagine that when he has mastered the table of contents of a scientific book, he is sufficiently acquainted with the subject-matter, as to suppose that a knowledge of the words of the Apostles' Creed is all that is required of him in the way of divine knowledge. Already, in the address to the sponsors, it is assumed that there are "other things which a Christian ought to know and believe to his soul's health." Before he is confirmed he must be instructed in the catechism, which contains much more than the explicit statements of the baptismal Creed; and as a Christian and a Churchman, he must be a worshiper at the altars of the Church, and must take constantly upon his lips, or by his "amen" endorse, many statements which go far beyond those first elements of doctrine. The true Christian and loyal Churchman must go on from faith to faith. There can be no evasion here. The position maintained by this layman would indeed be short and easy, but it would inevitably end in religious chaos.

—X—

Is There Room in the Ministry?

BY THE REV. FRED'K S. JEWELL, D. D.

III.

NOW it must be apparent that no good end is subserved by this discussion, except as it helps point the way to the amelioration or the cure of the existing evil; and no such amelioration or cure is practicable except as the causes of the evil are discovered and rightly diagnosed. What, then, are these causes? There is, first, the absence of any unifying and controlling headship in the episcopate, and a consequent lack of consistency and harmony in diocesan modes and rulings. What is accepted in one diocese may be forbidden in another; men who are received as fit candidates for Orders in one diocese, may in another find their advancement estopped, without canonical warrant, by prelatical prejudice and absolutism; men, in fact, whose papers have been duly passed by the Standing Committee, and who have been recommended by the same, can be, and have been, held up, and denied ordination, because they came from certain ecclesiastically obnoxious quarters, or because "rumor had it" that they were Ritualists; and ministers of fair record for usefulness not only may be, but have been, compelled by episcopal antipathy and ill use, to abandon one diocese, and seek room in the ministry of another where there is less individualism and more law. It is not pleasant to have to speak thus, but certified facts are not lenient matters, and the existence of such diocesan arbitrariness and contrariety cannot but restrict the room in the ministry and work hardship to those against whom it closes the door of employment.

A second cause of the evil is to be found in our peculiar parochial independence, and consequent unwisdom with regard to filling vacant rectorates. The ways of parish authorities in finding and calling rectors are, as is well known, "past finding out," though they are by no means on that ground either Churchly or divine. Instead of being intelligently selected, and authoritatively sent, ministers are, and not infrequently on grounds of the merest chance, caprice, misinformation, and perhaps partisan scheming, chosen and called, to the contravention of the primitive use, the infringement of the episcopal prerogative, and to the complete inversion of the Church idea of proper rule and subordination. But where the bishop lacks the power to send, he is necessarily restricted in his opportunities to find room in the ministry for those seeking employment. It is and always must be impossible to put "the right man in the right place," or to put the worthiest man who is out of employ into any place at all, when the filling of vacancies is left to that thing of whims and chances, the popular parochial voice and will.

But it may be said that the fitter and wider room for the unemployed ministry is to be found in the missions of the Church, and that here the bishops are in full possession of the power to send. This, however, leads to the third, and much the largest, cause for the want of working room in the ministry. It must be apparent that as the Church is situated in the dioceses in which most of these missions are found, the bishops cannot send and maintain men as missionaries, without the necessary means. These means must come from those parishes which have been by the grace of God—not by their own wisdom and might, as too often seems to be the feeling—established in strength, wealth, appointments, and privileges. But unfortunately parochial autonomy and exclusiveness have gone far to set up the parish in the parochial mind as the ecclesiastical unit, as a sort of semi-independent institution whose affairs and interests are of quite the chief importance, those of the diocese and the Church at large being of a foreign sort, and only subject to an optional attention and concern. There is in the parochial atmosphere too much of the self-satisfaction of Nebuchadnezzar's, "Is not this the Babylon which I have built?"; too much of the gospel of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" No broad and generous outlook is taken, no enthusiasm is felt in behalf of the greater interests and enterprises of the Church, no true missionary spirit inspires the parochial life and effort. Hence, whatever is needed for the extension and establishment of missions is wholly a matter of convenient attention, surplus funds, and chance change. The consequence is weary pleading for offerings, mortified alms basons, languishing missions, and a mocking echo to the petition, "that it may please Thee to send forth laborers into Thy harvest." As long as this state of things continues, there will be, financially at least, many who fail to find room in the ministry.

As last of the causes to be considered, there are those who seem to think it is the lack of a proper self-sacrificing spirit among those who are seeking ministerial employment but can find no place, and who argue that they should solve the problem of room by going forth empty-handed and alone and making places for themselves. This sounds sufficiently grand and heroic, but it hath "a dying fall," a sort of grim, Pharaonic bricks-without-straw conclusion. True, no meed of Christian praise, no divine blessing, would be too great for those who under the necessary conditions—sworn celibacy, the life of a half solitary, self-subsistence by manual labor, without a chance for subsequent relief by translation to some parochial "fat pasture"—will thus adventure their lives in the "high places of the field." But has the Church a right to ask it of them? Can those who are situated in the midst of parochial ease and affluence ask it? This is to demand a devotion and a daring beyond even that of the missionary zeal and courage of apostolic times. True, those who then went everywhere preaching Jesus and Him crucified, went self-sacrificingly forth, "without purse and scrip," into the wildest regions, and made places for themselves. But this they could do with good heart and high resolve, because they went forth in the living consciousness that behind them was a Church correspondingly poor, tried, struggling, and with them enduring hardship for Christ's sake. But no such condition of things in the Church obtains now, and no such parallel now holds good between her and her missionaries. With her present strength and wealth, her personal luxuriousness and ecclesiastical splendor, she presents no such inspiring example of militant hardihood and self-sacrifice, and no such consoling thought of high companionship in suffering for the cause of Christ, to him who is to give up all and adventure everything for her and her Lord, in her ecclesiastical and spiritual wilds. With what consistency then can we lisp a syllable of surprise or complaint that, among those entering the ministry, and who are so often easily admitted on formal grounds, with small attention to the purity of their motives, the thoroughness of their religious convictions, and the spiritual singleness and elevation of their purposes, and among those who, already in the ministry, and seeking in vain for some open door of just priestly employment, see themselves subject to a cold demand for the exercise of a one-sided and unsupported self-sacrifice, there is wanting the spirit of missionary self-abnegation, and heroic, forlorn hope, devotion, and daring? The spirit of the forlorn hope is born of the spirit of the host which it sees behind it, toiling unweariedly in the trenches or stoutly fighting all along the extended line of battle.

Now it cannot but be seen that there is cause of complaint as to accessible and permanent room in the ministry, on the part of the unemployed, and it may also be said, on the part of many who are now employed, inasmuch as under the existing conditions they do not know how soon, from either parochial indifference or caprice, or from missionary impetuosity, they may come to be without place and prospects. Nor looking at the causes of the evil as here presented, and which do certainly here or there, in a greater or less degree, operate to produce and perpetuate it, can one fail to feel that "there is something rotten in Denmark," that there are gross defects in our system, and a grievous lack in our religious life, which call for both reproof and correction. If the former seem beyond our reach, we may at least seriously concern ourselves about the latter. There is need, in place of the one we have, of a suffrage like this in the Litany:

That it may please Thee to stir up the wills of Thy faithful people, that they, plentifully bringing forth the fruit of good works, may more abundantly send laborers into Thy vineyard.

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

— x —

To the Clergy

BY THE RT. REV. WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.
FROM HIS ANNUAL ADDRESS, 1899

ALLOW me to say a word of exhortation to the younger clergy: You who have been candidates under me well know that I will ordain no man who has made up his mind to work in Massachusetts. I insist that, if he enters here, he enters the ministry of the whole Church, ready and glad to go wherever throughout the world God may call him. If a man in the ministry sustains that note, he will receive the response that goes with a man of devotion.

Again, you enter the ministry with a clear knowledge that it is, or ought to be, a life of sacrifice; before entering you count the cost. Whether at the end of ten years you are getting more or less income than your college chum, now a doctor or a lawyer, is beside the question. You are probably getting less. The point is: Are you content to get less? Are you happy in the spiritual rewards of your work? Economy in little things, social isolation, the lack of congenial companionship, intellectual starvation—these commonplace conditions are what test the devotion and heroism of the ministry to-day; and some of these tests are as hard as martyrs' tortures, for they last longer.

I appreciate fully the worth of a good wife in the ministry (there are many such in Massachusetts), but I fail to see why, because a young man is a clergyman, he should, though he has only his deacon's stipend, marry at the time of his ordination. The Church makes no pledge at ordination that it will support a large family.

It is a distinct loss to a young man, or to the Church, when the first question to be answered is not: Where can I do the best work for the Church? but: Where can I do a work for the Church which will also enable me to support my family?

I know the narrow conditions under which some men in this diocese are living; I know the heroism and the silent endurance. I urge those who are enduring to take hope and courage, and to gain a new Baptism of devotion.

For a man of average ability and judgment, and of real devotion, there is large room in the ministry. There is the blessed privilege of bringing the Gospel of Christ to the people, of ministering to the deepest needs of men, upbuilding their character, gaining their confidence and affection, and leading them into higher realms of truth, hope, and faith.

— x —

"The Essence of Life is Divine!"

BY MARTHA A. KIDDER

Infinite mercy, exalting the spirits who suffer on earth,
Casts o'er the anguish of living the hope of a future new birth.
Onward we wander, not blindly, but seeing the Master's design;
Strength is made perfect in weakness,—the essence of Life is divine!
Brother is seeking for brother, to rescue from sorrow and sin;
Out of the heat of the battle the victor new glories may win—
Triumph o'er self, and devotion to suffer, yet never repine;
Strength is made perfect in weakness,—the essence of Life is divine!
Miracles still to the vision of faith are revealed by each day;
Flowers of hope and of patience unfading are found on our way;
Ask we not vainly of heaven to show to the people a sign;
Strength is made perfect in weakness,—the essence of Life is divine!
Humbled we turn to the future, away from the love that is slain;
Purified love is transfigured, and stronger than sorrow or pain;
Over the path of repentance the stars of eternity shine!
Strength is made perfect in weakness,—the essence of Life is divine!
Ever above us, around us, are hovering angels of light;
Visions of heaven in glory are dawning again on our sight;
Music celestial is thrilling the hearts that afflictions refine;
Strength is made perfect in weakness,—the essence of Life is divine!

The Presiding Bishop

FROM CONVENTION ADDRESS OF THE
RT. REV. EDWIN G. WEED, D. D.

I WANT to call your attention to Section 3 of Article I, which deals with the rule for the appointment of the Presiding Bishop. This section follows the old custom of making the senior bishop the Presiding Bishop, unless he shall resign his jurisdiction, or become disabled. It is not to be supposed that the duties of the Presiding Bishop are fully understood by the clergy or laity in general, and for this reason I mention the matter. The Church has become so large that it is impossible for an old man to attend to the duties. The House of Bishops has sought to relieve the Presiding Bishop by appointing an assessor who is really the recognized secretary of the Presiding Bishop. While this has materially helped to bring about a more orderly condition in the administration of the office, yet even this does not fully accomplish all that was expected, for the reason that it is impossible for the assessor to be at the side of the Presiding Bishop whenever he is needed. The work of the Presiding Bishop increases every day, so that the demand for a strong, robust man to fill the position has become almost imperative. A large organization like the American Church will not run without friction, unless the details of the management are carefully looked after. As you are aware, the consecration of the Rev. Mr. Funsten has been postponed, and it looks as though a snarl would have to be unraveled before a bishop can be consecrated for the diocese of Boise. In Bishop Williams we had an unusually good presiding officer, but we suffered from the infirmity of the Presiding Bishop before his day, and now we are in the midst of a most distressing condition which has its origin in the infirmities of the presiding officer of the Church. There is a provision in this new section, that in case the senior bishop, by reason of infirmity, shall become disabled, the next in seniority, by consecration, shall become Presiding Bishop. Suppose Bishop Clark should become disabled, the next in seniority is the Bishop of Minnesota. Bishop Whipple's health is so shattered, by the exposures of his early years, that he cannot live in his diocese the year round. The next is Bishop Wilmer, of Alabama. And then, who will decide the question of disability? We all make mistakes, and if the bishop says he is able, and in his right mind, how will the disability be determined? I hope you will take into consideration the disadvantages of the present system. If a better system should present itself to your minds, I trust your deputies will be instructed to propose an amendment.

— x —

Boston Correspondence

AFTER the diocesan convention there is always a lull in Church work. Nothing was interesting at the convention outside of the discussion on the canons of discipline, and this consumed the greater part of two days. The laity took a prominent part in the discussion. The court, in the trial of a clergyman for error in doctrine, will now be composed entirely of clergymen. For other causes, it will be a mixed court of clergy and laity.

One of the most impressive sights at this period of the year, is the annual service of the Girls' Friendly Society. There were 1,200 women and girls in the procession, which was beautified with banners, many of exquisite workmanship, and all contributing towards a scene long to be remembered, and expressive of the greater possibilities of womanhood in the Church. There is no society more popular than this, and the annual gathering is becoming more than ever an event in the diocese. Father Osborne preached an excellent sermon, from the 14th and 15th verses of Psalm XLV.

Following this in interest is the annual festival of Church choirs. These festivals increase in popularity every year. They were held this year in St. Paul's, Emmanuel, and the church of the Advent. The music was well rendered, and in many respects was an advance upon former years. The average person knows very little about the vast amount of work involved in preparing for these festivals, and the great results produced upon the boys themselves, who are not more than ten years of age. The guild has popularized Church music in Boston, and done much to overcome the prejudice of twenty-five years ago. There is, however, much to be done. The interest of the clergy and laity is necessary, and a stronger financial support would obviate the few difficulties that the guild is called upon to encounter.

The archdeaconry of Boston still retains the services of the Rev. Dr. Lindsay as archdeacon, while the Rev. S. G. Babcock takes the place of the Rev. E. W. Smith in the archdeaconry of New Bedford. There are no other changes in the archdeaconries. These have all proved their efficiency. The details which formerly consumed the time and energies of the Bishop, are now referred to the archdeacon, with gratifying results to all concerned. The noticeable increase of zeal in missionary work throughout the diocese indicates another feature of the important agency which the archdeaconries represent in their respective districts.

The Church, the organ of the Broad school, after an existence of three years has ceased to be. It was well edited, but it may be justly said it was never popular. Many of its articles were excellent, but did not fulfill the high aim of being a journal of American Churchmanship. This is said with the kindest of feelings, and in part indicates the waning influence of Broad Churchmanship. There was a time when it was extremely hopeful, but its very advocates are now the disinterested persons. No party lacks enthusiasm so greatly as this school of theological thought. It is an old censure, brought against it by an English follower in The Contemporary Review a few or more years ago. We thought so once, now we know it.

It is a gratifying sight to notice the ways and means taken by the City Board of Missions to make the poor enjoy a summer outing in some shape or other. Boys and girls, under an escort, will be taken weekly to the beaches, and the plans are so well arranged as to include every one in the churches. A Mother's Rest is provided at Crescent Beach, which is an excellent expedient to bring comfort and cheer to many a forlorn mother. Our city government this year has accepted, apparently, a lesson from our various charitable societies, and is providing iced water in various localities. Our mayor believes in all sorts of things for the municipality to do, and the charitable work of this city, carried on and endorsed by His Honor, is of such magnitude that the city is a good competitor of the Churches in this special way.

A falling off of candidates for the ministry is noticeable in this diocese. Five young men were graduates from the Cambridge Theological School this term. This is a small class, smaller than for many years past. The quality, however, is excellent. No better men are entering the ministry than those who enter through the diocese of Massachusetts. After considering this, our attention was drawn to an article in The Nineteenth Century for June, where this same subject is discussed. There are many things in it which are general, and do not apply to any special branch of the Church. There is, however, much truth in this remark: "The most devoted clergyman cannot live on air, and unless he has private means, his life in most cases will be a grinding struggle with poverty." Here is the rub. No longer are parents sending their sons into the ministry because they are not adapted to other professions. If this were ever true, it is not so now. This is an excellent change of sentiment, and everything must be done to maintain it. Five graduates from a seminary are better than twenty-five who are in a large degree convinced that the ministry is an easy berth, an environment of respectability, and "a sphere of sweetness and light." These feelings have died away, and in dying, the true mission of the ministry is appearing.

To say that pure, simon-pure, heathenism exists in Massachusetts would be shocking to our pride, if not a reproach to our commonwealth. Your correspondent found himself a short time ago in a locality, many miles from Boston, where heathenism exists. He found people separated from the usual advantages, living in a state of ignorance about God, and contaminated with evils in ways which might be pardoned in the Philippines, but not in the Bay State. There are a few remote places like this. It is the summer visitor into these parts who can be the most welcomed missionary, and with a kind manner, the hearts of the disobedient will be turned to the wisdom of a Christian conscience. The Prayer Book is a silent witness to all this, and to place one of these in the lowly homes will quicken the understanding of spiritual things. People are more willing to read than they get credit for, and in these remote places where even the daily newspaper is seldom seen, the existence of a Prayer Book will be the entering wedge to better things. The Prayer Book, while primarily standing for the highest type of divine worship, may be used to preach the Gospel where church and Bible are not. Experience makes evident that we must scatter more Prayer Books, and less milk-and-water tracts about the Church.

It is strange with what rapid growth Christian Science is marked in this city. There was a time when every one, more or less, was struck with its phenomenal success, and those who did yield to its teaching were numbered among those who have surprised their Christian friends. The reaction was bound to come, and signs of its development keep appearing every day. There is dissension in its ranks, and many of its theories appear differently to those who at first accepted them with kindness. The system has been studied to great advantage in this city, and it will only take a few more just criticisms to indicate the hollowness of its assumptions. It has done one good thing, in making the average mind think upon God. Indirectly, Christian Science has made very evident that "Ill blows the wind that profits nobody." BOSTONIAN.

— x —

Letters to the Editor

IS IT RUBRIC BREAKING?

To the Editor of The Living Church:

During the last two years I have been in many parts of the country, and, while a regular attendant at the services of the Church on "Sundays and other holy days or prayer days," I have witnessed but one Baptism at a public service of the Church, and in the place of the service appointed in the rubric of the office for Holy Baptism.

This may be a mere coincidence, or rather lack of coincidence, and perhaps it has been my misfortune not to be present at any given parish church when Baptism was there administered.

Perhaps. Turning to the rubric, I find it is mandatory as to the place in the service. "Must" is the word, "must be ready at the font immediately after the last Lesson at Morning Prayer, or immediately after the last Lesson at Evening Prayer." And here comes in a possible variant. The minister "by his discretion" may appoint—not a private administration, or a semi-public one, "when church is out," but whether the Baptism shall be—at Morning or Evening Prayer.

"Must." Much virtue in your must. And yet I have overheard, more than once, the expression: "Did you know there was to be Baptism after church?" And various indications have caused me to fear that in this matter there is rubric breaking, and rubric breaking is perilous.

"Of law," says the "judicious Hooker," in a sentence that is one of the glories of the English language, "of law there can no less than this be acknowledged, that her seat is the throne of God, her voice the harmony of the world."

Y. Y. K.

THE MARRIAGE LAW

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In looking over the list of clerical signatures to the "Declaration on the Subject of the Marriage Law of the Church," one cannot but feel gratification at the large number of the clergy who have taken this opportune stand in behalf of the supremacy of the Prayer Book over the Canons, as expressive of the mind of the Church on that burning question. But it has to be confessed that that gratification is sadly abated by the surprisingly small number of the signatory bishops, the total list including only eighteen.

Can we other than ask with deep concern: Why is this list so small? We naturally look, we are bound in all Churchly obedience to look, to our Rt. Rev. Fathers as the leaders of God's host and the foremost defenders of her chief standard of faith, order, and worship, the Book of Common Prayer. Are we to understand that nearly three fourths of their number demur to committing themselves to any decisive stand in behalf of the supremacy of the Prayer Book as determining the mind and law of the Church in relation to Christian marriage? If not, what is the explanation of the absence of their names from the list of signers to this important document?

It is difficult to understand what that explanation may be, unless it is that they are held back by the unsettled state of the much-mooted question as to what is really the New Testament law with regard to marriage and divorce. Now it may be conceded that there would be much weight in such a cause for inaction, if the expressed mind of the Church on the nature and force of Christian marriage were only to be found in the Canons. There are serious differences of opinion even among the learned as to the force of the inspired deliverances of the New Testament on the subject of marriage and divorce. That there would be, under the lax and licentious usages of the times, and the hardly less conflicting looseness of principle and practice among the denominations, the gravest difficulty in applying any one strict and uniform law, must also be confessed. If under these difficulties, we had no law for our guidance but that lodged in the Canons, we might well stand in pause with regard to any action which bore with definitive force on the Canons to be enacted.

But in the present instance, this is not the case at all. We have in "The Form of Solemnization of Matrimony" in the Prayer Book, a most explicit and decisive expression of the mind of the Church as to the nature and force of Christian marriage. It prescribes in exact form the conditions under which it may be contracted; the solemn vows which are to be taken; and the extent of their binding force; and declares God to be the only power which may lawfully dissolve the sacred compact. The Prayer Book is here, as in all its other provisions, the higher law of the Church. The Canons, in the matters which they concern, the conditions under which they can be enacted, and their easily shifting diversity, are manifestly inferior or subordinate to the Prayer Book.

Now the real case, and the one solely considered in the Declaration, is this: On the subject of marriage and divorce the Canons are in direct conflict with the Prayer Book. No such conflict can consist with the dignity and duty of the Church. A harmonious reconciliation between the two must be effected. To do this, one or the other, the Canons or the Prayer Book, must be altered. The Prayer Book is the higher law. After the maturest examination and most serious deliberation, we have pronounced the revision and alteration of the Prayer Book, for perhaps a century, "a closed question." Nothing of the kind is true of the Canons. It stands to reason then that the Canons must give way. To remove from our legislation this "conflict of laws," they should be altered and made accordant with the Prayer Book.

This is all that the Declaration sets forth and demands. Its reasonableness must be beyond dispute. How then can any loyal adherent to the Prayer Book hesitate to endorse it?

FRED'K S. JEWELL.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE

To the Editor of The Living Church:

I desire to call the attention of your readers to an article in The Homiletical Review for July, entitled "The Inspiration Question." It is by the Rev. J. B. Remensnyder of New York city. He is not a Churchman, but a more thoroughly Catholic (not in the Pickwickian sense) defense of the Holy Scripture; a more loyal exposition of what most of us have held was the teaching of the Church, and to which we have given the obedience of our minds, has not been written for a long time.

While it is a great satisfaction to know that outside the Church, defenders of the Bible are not wanting, it is humiliating to be obliged to acknowledge that the chief recent conspirator against God's Holy Word is in Holy Orders in that Church that calls herself the witness and keeper of Holy Writ.

Let me quote one of the many admirable passages of the article (p. 21):

"The very same argumentative process [analytical system] impeaches the absolute verity of our Lord Jesus Christ. The record of His Person and Word has had to undergo the same errant transmission as the Scriptures, and if this vitiates their original divine inerrancy, it equally vitiates His. An infallible Christ is just as difficult of proof as an infallible Bible. The revelation in the flesh was necessarily subjected to precisely the same defective historical conditions as the revelation in the Word. Inspiration alone gives us the record of both. It is then a logical impossibility for those who deny an originally perfect revelation of Scripture to hold to a perfect Christ, the supreme authority for the soul. And this is the rock on which their fallacious theory will be shattered in fragments."

Had the writer the opportunity to know what we know perfectly well in Massachusetts, he might have added: Whether its partisans are conscious of it or not, the denial of the essential divinity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ is the terminus ad quem of all Broad Churchism and Higher Criticism of Holy Scripture. "On a vague, loose theory of inspiration ungrounded in the Scriptures themselves," our author truly says, "anything that each one's caprice makes it, we have (in Bishop Ellicott's words) 'that strange conglomerate of myth, legend, fabrication, idealized narrative, falsified history, dramatized fable, and after-event prophecy to which modern critical analysis would reduce the most Holy Word of Almighty God.'"

J. A. MILLS.

Gloucester, Mass.

THAT "BUSINESS SIDE OF RELIGION"

To the Editor of The Living Church:

"Vestryman," in a recent issue of your paper, writes a strong letter from the average vestryman's point of view; viz., that in the administration of a parish there is really but one burden worth considering—the financial burden—and this the rector must bear, or if for any reason he does not, he is a privileged idler, and will eventually be forced to resign, or sink his manhood in the depths of his self-contempt.

The writer has been supposing for the last twenty years that the wise and rightful working of a parish involves the bearing of two burdens; the spiritual, which is the clergyman's, and the financial, which is the vestry's. He has been supposing all these years that the Church has clearly and emphatically set forth the vestry's duty to look after the finances of the parish with the very same good sense, and according to the same high business principles, that it uses in its own affairs, in order that the minister may take up and properly bear his burden, viz., the preaching of the Gospel and the care of souls. He has been supposing, too, that this division of labor was not only absolutely necessary, in view of what a live parish is and must be, but that it was a wise and helpful arrangement, giving to the vestry an interest in the welfare of the parish which they otherwise would not be apt to have, and encouraging the rector to do strongly and well his proper work, that to which he received the Spirit's inward call, and for which he was solemnly set apart and ordained.

That these suppositions picture the ideal, rather than the actual, relations of rector and people, the writer has, with some thousands of other rectors, plainly seen. He would be devoid of sight, hearing, and feeling if he had not. But to be, in effect, coolly assured that "these ideas are all really a mistake, don't you know," rather takes one's breath away. Nor is it very encouraging to be further assured that even the "average minister," if "earnest and sincere," is so marvelously endowed that he can easily bear these two heavy burdens of things temporal and things spiritual; nor does it help one to "face the facts" (whether an average minister, or a superlatively able one), to be carried on to the inevitable conclusion that if there is to be at any time or anywhere a privileged idler in the Lord's vineyard, it is the vestry, and not the rector.

RECTOR.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

The letter in your issue of July 1st, on the above subject, signed by "Vestryman," is worthy of consideration, because it is evidently written by a thoughtful and earnest man. The impression which the letter makes as a whole, however, is that the writer entertains a somewhat unfavorable opinion of the moral character of the clergy. Over against this impression is the distinct statement in the concluding paragraph that, "The writer is of the opinion that the churches are fair and honest, and their people are willing to meet their rector much more than half way, and that an earnest and sincere preacher of the Gospel, if only of average ability, has nothing to fear." If the minister, in addition to being of average ability as a preacher, has a good head for business, and knows how to manage his parish on its financial side, then he may be said to have nothing to fear. But has it not become something more than a proverb, that the clergy are not good financiers? And without this earthward side to their characters, the chances are vastly against their success.

The question may be asked in all candor: What is the fundamental point in parish life? Is it not that the parish must in some way meet its pecuniary obligations, and that the power to do this turns always upon the ability of the minister? It is not a question of his religious fervor, or of his sincerity, or even of his being able to preach good sermons, and edify his congregation. First, and middle, and last, he must know how to make the thing go! Failing here, no other qualification will count. This is the feature of the age, and emphatically the feature of American life. The old sweet tie of confidence and affection which bound priest and people together, and which was cemented by adversity and prosperity alike, has been displaced by a spirit which looks out shrewdly for a type of man so rare and so composite, that the chances are strongly against his ever being secured. Some such men there are, and here and there the mingling of their powers is such, thank God, that the spiritual part is in the ascendant. But the decisive test lies in the direction of command, and not in the direction of spirituality. The man who can put his parish in the front rank of the religious societies of the place, and run an even race, at least neck and neck, with the most brilliant of his pulpit competitors, this is the man who is in demand. Whatever the measure of his learning and spirituality may be, there must be mingled with these the earth and the clay and the iron, and perhaps the brass, that can face world and parish alike, and compel them to do his bidding. These are the qualifications that captivate us all. Count in the brass, too, and still we must admit that we are won, because it means power. But such men do not grow upon every bush, and they never will. In the meantime, the modest and retiring spirits must go to the wall, and take their places in the list of the non-parochial clergy. That list is a most suggestive, if not an ominous, one. It might be instructive, if there could be some method of securing their opinion upon the question, as to how they came to be non-parochial clergy. Permit me to give a hint on this subject.

It is to be borne in mind that the average parish, as a rule, is under the control of one man. Notwithstanding the Canon Law which places the temporal government of parishes under vestries, by a process that we all understand, some one mind becomes the central and leading force of the group, and the parish marches or halts, as he says. Of course if this one man has a large mind and a large heart and a large purse, the parish that is fortunate enough to possess him deserves the good name which "Vestryman" gives it. But if it is otherwise, if the man is opinionative and fond of power, and persistent in carrying out his own views, what chance has the clergyman to bring to bear any elevating influence? The cold principles that govern the shop and the mill and the store, will govern the parish, and the priest of God dashes himself in vain against such a despotism. Such a man has every advantage. He is on his own ground. There is no likelihood of his resigning or being turned out of office. At last the clergyman gives up the contest, and seeks work elsewhere. A series of such experiences is enough to quench devotion in the breast of an apostle, and the non-parochial list, by and by, has another accession. CLERGYMAN.

Personal Mention

The Rev. Edmund A. Angell has taken duty for July and August in St. John's parish, Stamford, Conn. His mail should be addressed Burlington Arcade, Stamford, Conn.

The Rev. J. Humphrey Barbour has received from Trinity College, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The Bishop of Albany has gone for the summer to North East Harbor, Me.

The Rev. W. M. Bottoms has taken summer charge of St. George's church, Hempstead, diocese of Long Island.

The Rev. F. M. Bacon has become associate rector of St. John's church, St. Cloud, Minn., in charge of Sauk Rapids and Royalton, and will reside at Sauk Rapids. Address accordingly.

The Rev. Lewis Brown sailed for the continent, July 9th, by the "Spaarsdam," and returns Sept. 4th, by the "City of Rome." He goes with a party of friends.

The Rev. C. D. Brown, having been given two months' vacation by the vestry of St. James' church, Port Gibson, Miss., will spend it in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia. His address will be Bedford City, Va.

The Rev. W. B. Coleman is taking his vacation a wheel, spending six weeks touring through Eastern States.

The Rev. E. Huntington Coley and family are spending a month's vacation at Westport, Conn.

The Rev. W. R. Callander has been appointed to the charge of the church of the Good Shepherd, Canajoharie, and Zion church, Fonda, diocese of Albany.

The Rev. Harry Cassil has been appointed archdeacon of Savannah, with charge of missionary work among colored people in the diocese of Georgia.

The Rev. E. N. Curry has accepted the rectorship of Christ church, Rouse's Point, and St. John's church, Champlain, diocese of Albany.

The Rev. Robert W. Forsyth, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, D. D., of Baltimore, and Mrs. Smith, sailed from Philadelphia, 8th Inst., per Belgium steamer, "Waesland," for Liverpool.

The Rev. Wm. Gardam will officiate at the church of All Angels, Shinnecock Hills, Southampton, L. I., July 23d, and will be in charge for the rest of July and the month of August.

The address of the Rev. J. Belton Haslam is now "The Clergy House," 222 Juneau ave., Milwaukee.

The Rev. G. Berkeley Griffith will enter upon his duties as assistant minister at Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, in September next.

The Rev. Samuel Hart, D. D., received the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law, at the late Commencement of Trinity College.

The Rev. John C. Jetter has been appointed curate of St. Thomas' church, Milwaukee.

The Rev. Prof. Jenks, of Nashotah, is spending his vacation in New Hampshire.

The address of Archdeacon Jenner, of the diocese of Fond du Lac, during July, will be Oswego, N. Y., care R. J. Oliphant & Co.

The Rev. Robert Philip Kreidler has accepted the charge of the church of the Epiphany, Ozone Park, N. Y.

The Rev. W. Poyntell Kemper has resigned his duties as precentor and choirmaster of All Saints' cathedral, Milwaukee.

The Rev. Charles H. Kues, of Evansville, Ind., becomes precentor and choirmaster at All Saints' cathedral, Milwaukee.

The Rev. J. J. Lanier has accepted the rectorship of St. Stephen's church, Milledgeville, with charge of the church of the Ascension, Sparta, Ga.

The Rev. Cameron Mann, D. D., and Dean C. Rowland Hill are rusticating together in the high Rocky Mountains of Western Colorado.

Bishop Millsbaugh will be at Grainwood, Pine Lake, Minn., until Sept. 1st.

The Rev. Oscar S. Michael has gone to Atlantic City, N. J., for the summer.

The Rev. Henry Harrison Oberly has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from his alma mater, Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.

Bishop Potter will rest for part of the summer in the Adirondack Mountains.

The address of the Rev. Dr. Riley for July and August will be Trinity rectory, Rock Island, Ill. For September, his address will be Catskill, N. Y.

The Rev. Joseph Sheerin has accepted the rectorship of St. Paul's church, Clay Center, with charge of St. George's church, Wakefield, Kas., and should be addressed accordingly.

The vestry of St. Mark's church, Mauch Chunk, Pa., has granted the rector, the Rev. Marcus Alden Tolman, a vacation of six months, in order to regain his health. Until Oct. 1st, his address will be No. 16 Surf ave., Ocean Grove, N. J.

The Rev. T. C. Tupper, D. D., has taken summer charge of Christ church, Savannah, Ga.

The Rev. Henry Tarrant has accepted the rectorship of St. John's church, Pine Meadow, Conn.

The Rev. Dr. J. Wright is to spend a year in travel in Europe, under special leave of absence.

The Rev. John C. S. Wells has not resigned the chaplaincy of Sing Sing prison, as recently announced.

The Rev. Andrew C. Wilson has been placed in temporary charge of Christ church, Fox Lake, Wis.

PENNSYLVANIA CLERGY.—Bishop Whitaker expects to sail for Europe about the close of July. The Rev. Llewellyn Caley has gone to Europe; during his absence, the Rev. W. S. Baer will be in charge of the parish. The following rectors will also pass the summer in Europe: The Rev. Dr. Wm. B. Hale, the Rev. Messrs. Roberts Coles, Wm. Price, and R. W. Forsyth; the Rev. Dr. T. A. Tidball. The Rev. H. F. Fuller will go to Nova Scotia. The Rev. H. M. G. Huff will go to Glassboro, N. J., and the White Mountains, at which latter locality the Rev. Dr. S. E. Appleton will spend his vacation. The New England States will have for guests: The Rev. Dudley D. Smith, the Rev. Dr. J. N. Blanchard, to Maine; the Rev. Prof. Groton, to Westerly, R. I., and the Rev. Dr. J. DeW. Perry. The Rev. Dr. W. W. Silvester will pass the summer at Eastern Point, Groton, Conn., in which State the Rev. R. H. Nelson will spend his vacation. The Rev. S. C. Hill will be at Newport, R. I.; the Rev. R. F. Innes, with his family and the crippled children from the Home of the Merciful Saviour, went about the middle of June to their summer home at Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J. The Rev. Dr. W. B. Bodine is at Elberon, N. J.; the Rev. Messrs. S. H. Boyer, Charles Logan, and F. McPetrich, will be at Atlantic City, N. J.; the Rev. C. S. Lyons will be at Ocean City, N. J.; the Rev. Dr. W. F. Paddock goes to Asbury Park, N. J., where also the Rev. S. L. Gilberson will be for a few weeks, proceeding thence to Allenhurst. The Rev. Dr. T. S. Rumney goes to "the seashore"; the Rev. W. H. Graff will visit Williamsport, Pa.; the Rev. G. Woolsey Hodge has been, since May 22d, at Meadowbrook, Montgomery Co., Pa. The Rev. Arnold H. Hord will spend his vacation in Maryland; the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins will go to Marion, Mass., in July, and will spend August at Rye Beach.

To Correspondents

C. H. S.—We know of no good authority for the statement that large numbers of Anglicans have been flocking to the Church of Rome since the "Letter of the Pope to the English People," four years ago. It is easy to make such assertions, and hard, in the absence of statistics, to refute them; but some idea of the truth may be arrived at when we ask for the names of persons of standing in society or in the Church. Very few are forthcoming. Among the clergy, the number of "verts" during the time specified has been exceedingly small. Ten or a dozen obscure priests, among 25,000 or 30,000, would signify nothing; and we do not know that there have been even that many.

Official

STANDING COMMITTEE OF DIOCESE OF ALABAMA. Met, for organization, in Trinity church, Mobile, July 6th. The Rev. Douglass C. Peabody, of Mobile, was elected president; Mr. W. K. P. Wilson, also of Mobile, was elected secretary. Consent was given for the consecration of the Rev. A. L. Williams, to be Bishop-coadjutor of Nebraska, and of the Rev. Joseph M. Francis, to be Bishop of the diocese of Indiana. Messrs. Edward E. Cobbs and Richard Hogue were recommended to the Bishop to be ordained deacons; and the Rev. Howard R. Walker, to be advanced to the priesthood. D. C. PEABODY.

Ordinations

On June 18th, in Christ church, Elizabeth, N. J., by permission of the Bishop of New Jersey, the Rev. E. Briggs Nash, curate of Christ church, and the Rev. Wayland W. Way, curate of All Angels' church, New York, were advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. George F. Seymour, D. D., Bishop of Springfield. The candidates were presented by the Rev. H. H. Oberly, D. D., rector of the parish, and the sermon was preached by the Bishop. The Rev. Messrs. H. H. Sleeper, Ph. D., H. H. P. Roche, and E. B. Smith united in the laying on of hands.

Died

FUGETTE.—Entered into rest, at his home in Baltimore, Md., June 17, 1899, the Rev. J. Preston Fugette.

HYDE.—At the residence of his father, Georgetown Heights, D. C., on July 4th, Thomas Hyde, Jr.

NELDEN.—On July 3d, at Stanhope, N. J., Sarah J., widow of the late Dr. C. R. Nelden, in the 54th year of her life.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses; missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the presbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

NEXT Ephphatha Sunday (Aug. 20th) rapidly approaches, with the usual reminder to parishes within the limits of the Mid-Western Deaf-Mute Mission, that offerings are needed to meet its expenses.

THE REV. A. W. MANN,
General Missionary, Gambier, Ohio.

Church and Parish

PEOPLES' WAFERS, 25 cents per hundred; priests' wafers, one cent each. The Sisters of All Saints, 801 N. Eutaw street, Baltimore, Md., also invite orders for ecclesiastical embroidery.

EXPERIENCED teacher desires position as tutor in school or family. Latin and English. Unexceptional Maryland references. Address TUTOR, 1200 McCulloch st., Baltimore, Md.

A BOSTON lady of European education and residence—an Episcopal clergyman's wife—is inviting a party of young people to spend nine months (from September) at her home in Paris, for study and the Exposition; $600. Applicants may address MRS. BLANK, care of Bishop Graves, Kearney, Neb.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, July, 1899

2. 5th Sunday after Trinity. Visitation B. V. M.	Green.
9. 6th Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
16. 7th Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
23. 8th Sunday after Trinity.	Green.
25. St. James, Apostle.	Red.
30. 9th Sunday after Trinity.	Green.

Crickets are the housewife's barometer, foretelling her when it will rain by their unusual chirping.

The Moon Ship

BY C. N. HALL

Amid a fleet of fleecy clouds,
The moon ship slowly drifts,
We may not know who man her shrouds,
We may not see what phantom crowds
Her white hull nightly lifts.

No bugle call her decks resound,
No pilot's hail is heard.
Across the dark abyss profound,
Eternity and space, around,
Her silent course is steered.

We only know that lone and far,
She traverses the night;
Beyond our wisdom's outer bar,
Where heaven's sparkling islands are,
She sails in silver light.

— x —

REV. HENRY DOUGLASS ROBINSON, whose portrait appears on our cover page, was born and baptized in Lowell, Mass. In 1878, the year before De Koven's death, he entered the fifth form in the grammar school of Racine College and received his classical training from the Rev. Dr. Gold, now warden of the Western Theological Seminary. In 1884 he graduated from the collegiate department, with the degree of B. A., proceeding to the master's degree three years later. After graduation he was appointed assistant rector of the preparatory department. A year later he accepted the instructorship of mathematics in the military academy at San Mateo, California. While engaged in this work he was ordained to the diaconate, Sept. 19, 1886, by the Rt. Rev. William Ingraham Kip, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of California, in Grace church, San Francisco. Nearly two years later he was advanced to the priesthood. In 1889 he became rector of the Racine College grammar school, which position he held until his election to the wardenship, June 6th, 1899.

— x —

THE executive committee of the Board of Managers, in sending the statement which we print in another column, speak words of praise for the efficient work done by the officers of the society during the past year, and add: "In the face of facts that present themselves to those who are fully informed as to the demands of the moment, there is plainly an absolute necessity for large and generous giving, not merely to avoid the disaster of indebtedness at the close of the year, but to secure the money with which the old work can be better done and the new work that presses can be undertaken."

— x —

MANY parishes are changing the date of their annual meeting from Easter Monday to January 1st. I wish that the financial pressure which bears in upon some parishes at Easter could be changed (if it must occur at all) to some other season of the year. It is hardly consistent with the highest spiritual result of Easter Day to have the climax reached in the payment of the debt for running expenses; nor does it add to the helpfulness of the latter part of Lent to have an exhortation to that end sounded and resounded from the chancel. The fact is, that under the old system of pews and rentals, there were business methods. Some may say that the system was not Christian; it was at least business-like. The free-church, or envelope, or pledge system, may be more Christian, but, unless it is energetically handled by the laity, it is not business-like. High principles call for high action, and it is doubtful if, in the adoption of a new system, the laity have risen as much in their practice as in their supposed principles.—Bishop Lawrence, Annual Address, 1899.

— x —

Pen-and-Ink-lings

CANON KNOX-LITTLE told a good story once at a Church Congress. He said he remembered a lych-gate in front of a beautiful church, which had been restored and made very nice. There was painted over the door, "This is the Gate of Heaven," and underneath was the large notice, "Go round the other way."

THE Psalmist said, "The heavens declare the glory of God." "But that," remarks The Congregationalist, "was before advertising by kiteflying became a science. To-day the heavens above Boston declare the glory of a certain kind of shoe for women. Not even the blue sky of June is safe from the ubiquitous bill-sticker."

BISHOP PERRY, of Iowa, once gave a summary of his investigation as to the faith of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. For the Episcopal Church the following are claimed: One signer from Massachusetts, Elbridge Gerry, afterward Vice-President of the United States; all but one, William Floyd, of the signers from New York; one signer from New Jersey, Francis Hopkinson, poet and jurist, and father of the author of "Hail Columbia;" all the signers from Pennsylvania but James Smith whose religious connection is not known with certainty, and one other possibly; all the signers from Delaware but one, Thos. McKean; all the signers from Maryland but one, Charles Carroll, of Carrollton; all from Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina; and all but one, Lyman Hall, from Georgia, making two-thirds of the whole number of signers.

THE following are some of the curious titles of old English books:

1. "A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay for God's Saints to Smell At."
2. "Biscuit Baked in the Oven of Charity, carefully conserved for the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit, and the sweet Swallows of Salvation."
3. "A Sigh of Sorrow for the Sinners of Zion breathed out of a Hole in the Wall of an Earthly Vessel known among men by the name of Samuel Fish" (a Quaker who had been imprisoned).
4. "Eggs of Charity Layed for the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled with the Water of Divine Love. Take ye out and eat."

5. "Seven Sobs of a Sorrowful Soul for Sin."

6. "The Spiritual Mustard-Pot to make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion."

Most of these were published in the time of Cromwell.—St. Nicholas.

THE following letter, written by Victor Hugo more than thirty years ago, reads, in the light of current events, almost as prophecy.

HATTEVILLE HOUSE, NOV. 24, 1867.

To the Revolutionary Committee of Puerto Rico:

The Republic of Puerto Rico has defended its liberty bravely. The Committee has given me this information, and I thank the gentlemen warmly. Spain must leave America! Such is the great aim; it is the grand duty for the Americans.

Cuba free, like San Domingo! I can only praise all this powerful effort.

The liberty of the world will be done only to the liberty of each nation. VICTOR HUGO.

IN reporting the presentation of a piece of furniture to a Philadelphia church recently, the statement was made that it was a "literary desk!"

AMONG the stories in "The Drawer" of Harper's Magazine, there is one regarding a boarding-house frequented by Theosophists, and where, consequently, the talk runs much on the peculiarities of their faith. The waiters are Dennis, an Irishman, and Elijah, a colored man. There is a man and his wife at this boarding-house who are very fond of nuts. They ask for them at breakfast, eat a good many, and make a good deal of litter, which the servants do not like. As Dennis was carrying off the debris, the other morning, he was heard to say to Elijah: "Sure, at their next re-incarnation, bedad, they'll be squirrels!"

INTERESTING details of the foreign mail service are given in Scribner's Magazine. From it we learn that in 1840 the foreign mail from England for the United States, carried on the "Great Western," consisted of two sacks of mail. As late as 1873, a steamer from Europe with twenty thousand letters on board was considered a record breaker. To-day, the Cunard steamers and other trans-Atlantic ships, carrying what is called a "full European mail," usually bring some two hundred thousand letters, and an average of three hundred sacks of newspapers and printed matter for New York City, not to mention the five hundred and odd sacks for Canada, Mexico, and trans-Pacific countries, and a few United States exchange offices, which are now taken direct to the trains, and not handled at the New York office.

"I HAVE never doubted Sampson's courage," writes a fellow officer, "since the first cruise I made with him. We were ward-room officers together. The first night aboard ship, when the hour arrived for turning in, there were several officers sitting around the ward-room table indulging in some innocent merriment. I was taught to say my prayers before going to bed at night, but I confess I lacked courage to kneel down in the presence of my shipmates and pray. It was warm weather, and our stateroom doors opened into the ward-room. Then it was that Sampson displayed the moral courage that forever afterwards impressed me. He is a God-fearing man, and he always says his prayers before turning in. When he was ready, he knelt by his berth and prayed. A stillness came over the ward-room immediately, and I concluded that if Sampson had the courage to say his prayers in the presence of his shipmates, I could do likewise; so I have never hesitated since."

AS THOU talkest at the fireside,—
With the little children by;
As thou prayest in the darkness,
When thy God is nigh;
With a speech as chaste and gentle
And such meanings as become
Ear of child or lips of Angel,
Speak—or be thou dumb!

—Henry Timrod.

—X—

Notes From "Eaglesnest"

III.

YES! There are troubles even in Arcadia. We came upon a brood of partridges in the woods this morning, and the poor mother was quite frantic with fright, and with apprehension for her young ones. The chicks could not fly, but they scurried away and hid among the leaves and bushes. Did the mother desert them? No, indeed! Her performance was pathetic as well as amusing. A human mother could scarcely have done so well to save her children, even at the peril of her life. With a stick I could have killed the old bird easily, as she fluttered and panted in the path, almost beating my feet with her wings; but I would almost as soon commit murder as to take the life of a mother bird in its agony of maternal heroism.

I am sure that the sight of this dumb show of fluttering hen and flying chicks did my heart good; awakened sympathy, kindled admiration, softened some spot that was getting hard by friction with the world, and set me to thinking about the uses of adversity. In this case it was the adversity of another, and a lower creature, that was useful to me. Then why may not my own adversity be useful to another, even to one of a higher order? We know that suffering, rightly endured, does chasten the one who bears it; and when it is borne for another, a thousand seeing it may be the better for it. The heroism of one man may thrill a continent and help the whole world bear its burden more bravely.

It never occurred to me, until I was thinking about the frightened partridge, that heroic suffering of the lower orders in creation may be helpful to those above them. I trust there is some truth in the conjecture. The blessed angels rejoice over the repenting sinner. Do they not also thrill with admiration at the great and good deeds of men; and while they do not themselves experience pain and sorrow, may they not, by sympathy with human suffering, be made stronger and more tender-hearted, and more noble? So it may be that the quiver of our pain vibrates from star to star, and there is a returning current of angelic sympathy that never ceases. I think we may bear pain better if we think of it so.

There is turmoil, too, as well as trouble, in our Arcadia sometimes. We had a thunderstorm last night which shook the earth and upset the reservoirs overhead. The roar of wind and rain and wave and thunder was terrific for a time. One flash of lightning crinkled all over the sky from west to east; the heavens seemed to be overspread with a vast net-work of electric fire. In our safe but slightly built "nest," we can enjoy the grandeur of storm as well as the beauty of calm. Our wide windows open to the east, south, and west, and there is only a thin board wall between us and the tempest. No plaster covers the open timber roof upon which pluvonian batteries play, and where we hear the beat of the unseen feet of wind and rain. It is almost as enjoyable as being in a storm at sea.

But peace to-day is written all over our little world. A wild duck was disporting himself in the water, near the shore, as I looked out this morning, and such a delightful time he was having! I was glad that my boy and his gun were not near. A comical little kingfisher was in his accustomed place, perched on a dry twig near the beach, watching for unwary fish. He darts like an arrow, splashes, rises, and is off with a minnow to break the fast of his birdlings, while we break our fast with delicate whitefish taken from deep water yesterday. After all, the peace of this troublesome world does not go far below the surface. Kingfisher and I must have fish for breakfast! C. W. L.

—X—

Unity in Worship

FROM The Outlook

WE do not believe that the attempt to secure a unity of Christendom, or even of Evangelical Protestantism, by means of definitions of doctrine has in it any promise of success. It never has succeeded, and it is not probable that it ever can. Unity is to be looked for, not in a common creed, but by the use of the same, or substantially the same, symbols in worship, and by co-operation in Christian work. There is much in the present condition of lay sentiment in our Churches which should lead to the adoption of the first method, though not to the exclusion of the second.

For there can be no question that there is a strong tendency toward a liturgy in the non-liturgical Churches. The over-emphasis on the sermon, the treatment of the worship as a "preliminary exercise," the disregard of taste, not to say of religious sentiment, in the selection of dogmatic hymns, the too frequent conversion of the long prayer into a thinly-disguised oration, the sometimes perfunctory reading of Scripture in a dry and unemotional manner, the sometimes substituting therefor of a homiletical sermon interwoven with the reading, have produced a reaction against the older Puritan forms in the modern Puritan Churches. This reaction is seen in more artistic meeting-houses; in better hymn books; in more reverent attitude during prayer; in more attention by pastors to the subject of extempore prayer; in some instances in an imitation, not generally very successful, of the chancel and the reading-desk of the Episcopal Church, and in the very gradual and very timid introduction into Puritan Churches of some very simple liturgical elements, such as the Lord's Prayer, responsive readings, and the congregational use of the Apostles' Creed. It is seen also in a decided tendency of the younger people toward the Episcopal Church. There is some difference of opinion how extensive this exodus is; but it is certain that those who are dissatisfied, be they few or many, tend not to the Quaker meeting-house, but to the Episcopal Church—that is, not to less liturgy, but to more. The non-liturgical pastors might well be moved, by the simple desire to retain their young people, to consider what legitimate methods can be taken to check this exodus. This is not, however, The Outlook's point of view; our object is simply to point out that this tendency in the non-liturgical Churches for an enrichment of the worship might be used for the purpose of promoting Church Unity.

It is now, unfortunately, working the other way. In the non-liturgical Churches which are beginning to use any fragment of a liturgy, there is absolutely no uniformity; what little semblance of uniformity once existed, is gone. Each minister creates his own liturgy—sometimes a new one every few weeks. Occasionally he has it printed on a card. Quite frequently he begins his service with the Doxology, which, until a few years ago, was used only to close the service, except in the Episcopal churches, where it was sung at the close of every hymn. Very probably this is followed with the Creed, as though the confession of our Christian faith should precede our confession of sin and our humble request for forgiveness. The Lord's Prayer closes the pastoral prayer, and so repeats in brief, and often better, form, all that the pastor has just been saying for his people. The congregation sit during the reading of the Psalter, while the minister stands; why should not the minister sit and the congregation stand? In short, there is but one thing generally apparent in this non-liturgical liturgy—namely, that all the elements in it have been borrowed from the Episcopal Church, but so arranged as to deceive both the minister and the people into the impression that it is not at all Episcopal. As a result, in that one exercise in which habit is all-important—the exercise of public worship—no habit is possible; the exercise is not alike in any two churches; and the stranger is distracted throughout his worship by wondering what, in this before unheard-of order of exercises, is going to come next. Our simple proposition is that the non-liturgical Churches shall frankly confess to themselves that the Episcopal Church has an admirable liturgy, and adopt it in its simpler form, with such modifications as may fit it to Puritan habits of thought and feeling.

For the Episcopal liturgy is not a manufacture. It is not the product of a single mind, a single soul, or a single epoch. It does not embody the fashion of the hour. It is the expression of the devotional life of centuries; it speaks the experience, not of Episcopalians, nor of Americans, nor of the nineteenth century, but of humanity. Doubtless it is in some details archaic, not only in form of expression, but in experiences expressed. To those accustomed to the freer expression of the non-liturgical Churches, its omission of all extempore prayer will inevitably seem a capital defect. If the Episcopalian, wonted to it, may well hesitate to make any attempt to modify, by modernizing it, the non-Episcopalian may well hesitate to accept it without modification. But he may at least profitably accept it as a model in forming a liturgy or semi-liturgy for his own use.

For its order is the natural order of spiritual development in an hour of public worship, in which the worshiper seeks to pass by successive steps from the secular to the spiritual mood. He begins with confession of unworthiness and prayer for forgiveness;

it is assured him by the minister, speaking with authority; he joins with his companions in the expression of those universal wants of humanity which the Master has summarized for us all in the prayer He gave to His disciples; and in a responsive reading from the Psalter, in which all can join who know how to read. He is now prepared, by that sympathetic fellowship in worship which is more eloquent than any eloquence, to listen to instruction; and the Scripture lessons are read, intermingled with psalms of praise. He came to church, perhaps, with little faith; but if he has really and heartily joined in the outward expressions of the service thus far, he is ready, if he ever will be, to reaffirm that faith, not in philosophical definitions of doctrine, but in the great facts of historic and spiritual Christianity—the Life and Death of Christ, the presence of the Spirit of God in the world, the forgiveness of sins, the fellowship of Christ's followers, and personal immortality; and to follow it with more specific and fuller expression of his wants to God in prayer than has been expressed by either the General Confession or the Lord's Prayer.

We do not believe that any non-liturgical minister, seeking to introduce a liturgy into his service, can do better than follow the spiritual order of the Book of Common Prayer—and the writer of this article is not an Episcopalian.

— x —

Book Reviews and Notices

Thoughts on the Present Position of Protestantism. By Adolf Harnack. Translated by Thos. Bailey Saunders. London: Adam and Charles Black. New York: The Macmillan Company.

Professor Harnack here discourses on the signs of degeneration in Protestantism, and from a sort of pedestal delivers warnings to his co-religionists. It is German Protestantism, of course, which he has before him. He does not like the look of things. The sum of it is that, as he views them, the Protestant Churches are becoming "Catholicized." The Catholic conception of "the Church," for instance, as an objective and historical institution, is taking the place of the pure Protestant conception of the Church as consisting of those everywhere who have faith, "the invisible Church," as the old Calvinists used to call it. This is attended by an insistence upon the Creed as unalterable, notwithstanding the fact that "every man is" still "left to take up what inner attitude he will towards its separate articles." Besides this, Professor Harnack sees another tendency "absolutely opposed to the old idea of Protestantism." He and his friends find themselves in the midst of "a liturgical Catholicizing" of the Churches. Worship is being bound to fixed formularies and ceremonials, and "sanctity" is being attributed to things used in divine service, and its forms and seasons. The ministry is being elevated in a very suspicious fashion. A better side of the matter, in his judgment, is the growth of all manner of institutions and organs through which "religion" mingles itself with secular affairs, and the Churches undertake to alleviate human misery and distress. But the crucial thing is that all this, good and bad, goes to build up a Catholic idea of the Church, and the principles which underlie the Protestant life are on the point of disappearing. The new idea is a fascinating one. It has already attracted the majority, but it is nothing more or less than a temptation; "for it is an end of Protestantism, of the Gospel, of truth" (!). But the idea is one which in its fullness is impossible of attainment, for Catholicism has certain things which Protestantism (according to Prof. Harnack) never can have. One of these things is saintliness. Here "in this devout and world-shunning piety of Catholicism, there lies an immense religious impulse, something that corrects the complex and worldly character of the Church. This we do not possess." Protestantism can never compete with Catholicism on its own ground. It can never be anything but a feeble imitation. Prof. Harnack does not assert it in so many words, but we think he makes it perfectly clear that Protestantism, as he conceives it, is fundamentally destructive, so far as any outward and fixed elements in religion are concerned. The essence of the Gospel is "the Fatherhood of God, and the forgiveness of sins," and the moral law, which is "self-evident." He talks, it is true, of the necessity of a creed and of theology, but it is a new creed and a new theology, and therefore destitute of authority. But repeated reading of the final chapter, in which we are led to look for some positive statement of the things in Protestantism upon which the mind and soul can lay hold, leaves us in uncertainty. It is like an impressionist picture, in which much is left to the imagination. We are not in the least reminded of the Epistles of St. Paul, or even of the writings of St. John, and the suspicion arises that those writers belong to the category of Catholicism.

The Corruption of the Priesthood in the Early Church and in the Church of England. By the Rev. W. Sanday, D. D., LL.D., Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. New York: Longmans, Green & Co. Pp. 128. Price, $1.

Dr. Sanday is recognized as a sound scholar and a man of high character. Every book from his pen is sure to be read with interest and received with respect. This volume contains four sermons, their subjects being as follows: "The Unity of the Church," "The Origin of the Ministry," "Sacerdotalism" and "The Present Situation." The first two of these cover ground which has been gone over already by Canon Moberly and Dr. Hart, and upon which those writers have given us material of greater value than Dr. Sanday has to present. His treatment of these themes is to us somewhat disappointing. In the two later sermons, however, his highest qualities come into play. His treatment of the vexed questions involved is a very fair-minded and temperate one, and ought to be widely read. He is undoubtedly right in attributing much of the present agitation in England to the influence of that most unjust book, "The Secret History of the Oxford Movement," and in his estimate of its value. He has given us in a few words the gist of the whole matter: "Every great movement is sure to have a fringe of extravagance round it, which must be set down to the general frailty of human nature, and must not necessarily condemn the movement with which it is associated."

The Short Line War. By Merwin Webster. New York and London: The Macmillan Company. Price, $1.50.

This is a novel written in newspaper style, and reading very much as if compiled from the reporter's telegrams to the newspapers; but it is "chock" full of life, and when you begin it, you do not feel like putting it down. It is all about a railroad war. There are "excursions and alarms" on every page. Sometimes one side gains a point, then the other, and your brain whirls in the rapid changes from M. T. R. R. to C. S. C. R. R. Then there is an undercurrent of love. Montague loves Capulet, but they do not die of daggers and cold poison in a tomb, but come out bright and happy in a last chapter, which brought the tears to the eyes of the writer, an old and hardened novel reader. We will hear more of Mr. Merwin Webster.

Meditations on the Old Testament for Every Day in the Year. By B. W. Randolph, Canon of Ely, and Principal of the Theological College. New York: Longmans, Green and Co. Pp. 371. Price, $1.50.

An excellent book for family use. Canon Randolph has already enriched our theological literature by several excellent books, designed especially for the clergy. This volume is calculated to be of especial use to the laity, and meets a crying need. The devotional reading of God's Word is a practice which greatly needs to be revived. There is, alas! comparatively little of it nowadays. The author outlines a meditation upon some passage chosen from the Old Testament lesson in the Prayer Book calendar for each day in the year. He treats Holy Scripture as the daily food for the soul, and his object is to help us to assimilate and digest this spiritual sustenance. The meditations are just such as our people need to make, and are calculated to nourish and develop the devotional life. They are marked by a high degree of sanctified common-sense, and never degenerate into sickly sentiment. We warmly recommend them to everyone who wishes to make some systematic devotional use of the Bible. The practice of devout meditation is a necessity, if a high standard of spiritual life is to be maintained.

Why Men Do Not Go to Church. By Cortland Myers. New York: Funk & Wagnalls Company. Price, 60 cts.

The writer deals with this question under four heads: Introduction; "The Faults of the Church," "The Faults of Men," "The Faults of Society." There are some good suggestions in the book, but the subject is a difficult one to handle in so small a space. Mr. Myers has attempted a partial solution of the problem, and his book is a useful contribution to its discussion, which shows no present signs of a satisfactory conclusion.

My Young Man. By the Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D.D. A Series of Addresses to Young Men. New York: Funk & Wagnalls Company.

In these addresses the writer treats of the young man and his varied relationships to the people and occupations that surround him. There is a good deal of sound, practical common-sense in the book, and placed in the hands of thoughtful young men, it would have, doubtless, a good effect upon them. There is an utter absence of cant, and the presence of an earnest, deep interest in their welfare. The book deserves a large sale as a contribution to the literature of a subject of infinite importance to us all.

Irish Life and Character. By Michael MacDonagh. Second edition. New York: Thomas Whittaker. 1899. Pp. 382. Price, $1.75.

It is a full book, a wonderful gathering of all things Irish of the Irish, not many of which, we think, have been told before, or, if so, then never so well as herein. After looking through it, our own countenance reflects an expression found in a part of the author's preface: "The face of Ireland as seen in these pages is always puckered with a smile."

The Daughters of Babylon. By Wilson Barrett and Robert Hichens. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company. Price, $1.50.

A longish novel by the well-known author of "The Sign of the Cross," and a helper. There are, as the French say, longueurs in it, but there is much spirited writing, especially the auction of the two Jewish slaves. The theme is an unusual one, the life of the Hebrews in captivity in Babylon. The authors have well studied their Ebers and kindred writers, and the stately Babylonian life is well pictured.

The Nineteen Letters of Ben Uziel. By Samson Raphael Hirsch. Translated by Bernard Drachman, Ph.D. New York: Funk & Wagnalls Company. Price, $1.

These letters are supposed to have been written by a rabbi to a young friend who is anxious to know the true meaning of Jewish worship, ceremony, and teaching. The rabbi explains these important matters in a simple, yet dignified and persuasive manner. The letters will doubtless do much to strengthen the Jewish hold on their religion. To Christians, the book is interesting, though of course it does not touch the question of Christianity at all. It simply ignores the New Testament. Still, the reader and student of Jewish thought will learn much from a perusal of it.

Books Received

Under this head will be announced all books received up to the week of publication. Further notice will be made of such books as the editor may select to review.

JAMES POTT & CO., New York

A. R. MOWBRAY & CO., Oxford and London

Workers Together with God: A Series of Papers on Some of the Church's Works by Some of the Church's Workers. Edited by Nathaniel Keymer, M.A. Third edition. $1.75.

HARPER & BROS.

Reminiscences of the Santiago Campaign. By Capt. John Bigelow, U. S. A. $1.25.

The Sixth Sense and Other Stories. By Margaret Sutton Briscoe. Illustrated. $1.25.

That Fortune. By Charles Dudley Warner. $1.50.

Puerto Rico. By William Dinwiddie. Illustrated. $2.50.

An Ode to Girlhood and Other Poems. By Alice Archer Sewall. $1.25.

Lady Louisa Stuart. Edited by Hon. James Home. $2.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY, Chicago

Christ our Creditor. By H. L. Rigby. 50c.

The Making of a Man. By J. W. Lee. $1.25.

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE Y. M. C. A.

"Personal Work." By S. M. Sayford. 75c.

JAMES POTT & CO.

The Parallel Psalter. $1. Interleaved, $1.50.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY

Pablo the Priest. By S. Baring-Gould. 50c.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

The Book of Job. With Introduction and Notes by C. S. Gibson, D. D. $1.25.

Naturalism and Agnosticism. By James Ward, Sc. D. Two vols. $4.

Pamphlets Received

The Teachings of Jesus in the Modern World. By Felix Adler. Philadelphia: S. Burns Weston, publisher.

The Bishop's Address to the Twenty-eighth Class of St. Agnes' School, Albany, N. Y.

The Church Club of the Diocese of Connecticut.

An Anglican Study in Christian Symbolism. By Miss Elizabeth Clifford Neff.

Address of Congratulation to the Rt. Rev. John Franklin Spalding, S. T. D., on his having attained the Twenty-fifth Year of his Episcopate.

The Foundation of Apostles and Prophets. By the Rev. John Williams, M. A.

Annual Reports of St. Mary's Orphanage, Providence, R. I.

Address of the Bishop of Long Island to the Thirty-third Convention.

Periodicals

A remarkable series of photographs showing Biblical texts inscribed on mansions, houses, steeples, and other places, will be found in the July Quiver. There is also an interesting account of Ada Negri, the peasant girl poet of Italy, some good short stories and serials, two or three short sermons or addresses, and a description of a royal visit to the children of criminals.

With the July issue, The International Magazine, edited by Mr. A. T. H. Brower, 358 Dearborn st., Chicago, enters its seventh volume. This is the first illustrated monthly of general circulation in Chicago which has survived so long, we believe, and none has better deserved to survive and succeed. The courses of instruction in Spanish and French, and the chapter of comments on current words, are unique and valuable. The magazine happily combines instruction with entertainment.

Every one cannot go to charming scenes of out door life for his vacation, but those who can, and those who cannot, will alike be interested in the exquisite pictures The New England Magazine provides for us of lovely places in town and country. In the July issue we have descriptions by pen and pencil and camera, of Rochester, Mass., with its picturesque homes, and of Lake Champlain and its beautiful surroundings. An interesting discussion of "The Religion of Rudyard Kipling," appears in this number of the magazine.

In the July St. Nicholas is the report of the Committee of Award in the competition for prizes in the department of Books and Reading; five thousand lists were received. The magazine opens with "Robert Sallette," a ballad of the Revolution, by Laura E. Richards, and the frontispiece is a fancy picture of the hero. "With the 'Rough Riders,' by Henry La Motte, is the surgeon's account of the doings of a famous regiment. It stops with the beginning of the Riders' debarkation in Cuba, but is to be continued. The beautiful and extraordinary possibilities of soap-bubbles are revealed in a fully illustrated description of what a bubble-blower has actually done. There are many verses in this number, several short stories, and new chapters of the four serials.

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews for July, John Barrett, former United States minister to Siam, and qualified by personal knowledge to discuss the Philippine situation, contributes a summary of his impressions after all these months of experience and observation. "Rosa Bonheur and Her Work," is the subject of an article by Ernest Knauff. Reproductions are given of several of the famous French animal painter's works now owned in this country. Pierre de Coubertin writes on "Modern History and Historians in France." Mr. H. Foster Bain, of the Iowa Geological Survey, treats of the growing use of brick pavement in the smaller cities of the Middle West. Ramon Reyes Lala, a native of Manila, describes the gold deposits of the Philippines, and the methods employed in working them.

Professor William Cunningham, of Cambridge, England, opens the July Atlantic with a valuable paper on "English Imperialism." Horace Howard Furness, the distinguished Shakespearean scholar, contributes a study of "Much Ado about Nothing." Jacob A. Riis continues his Tenement House studies, with a paper on "Curing the Blight," showing the improved conditions that have resulted from sustained and intelligent effort. Charles Johnston discusses "The True American Spirit in Literature," analyzing and comparing the work of Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Cable, Miss Wilkins, and others, and comes to the conclusion that the effect of our surroundings upon our literature is to give it power and intense light, but meagre coloring and a total lack of atmosphere. Mark H. Liddell treats "The Right Approach to English Literature"; we must look for the special human interest which conditioned the thinking of the time. Prince Kropotkin's Autobiography, the Lanier-Taylor Letters, Miss Johnston's vivid new story, "To Have and to Hold," are all continued.

The July Century has a large amount of original fiction by ten living story-writers, and contains also articles on seven of the world's most famous makers of fiction, two only of whom are living. In most cases they are new material concerning the writers mentioned. Two hitherto unpublished portraits of Sir Walter Scott, accompanied by a sketch of the artist who made them, are followed by a detailed and authentic account of the romancer's unhappy love affair. Mrs. James T. Fields tells of a visit to George Eliot, and quotes unpublished letters from the famous novelist. "Stevenson in Samoa" contains reminiscences from the story-teller's step-daughter and secretary. "The Making of 'Robinson Crusoe'" gives the true story of Alexander Selkirk and his sojourn on Juan Fernandez, and clears De Foe of the charge of having stolen his literary material from the original Robinson Crusoe. Victor Hugo as an artist is the subject of a paper by Le Coq de Lautreppe, in which are reproduced several of the poet's hasty sketches and more elaborate designs.

Good Housekeeping for July contains the opening paper of its series on "Home Science," by Mrs. Burton Smith. The subject treated in this number, "Domestic Architecture," is well presented, and gives promise for the articles which are to follow. Another valuable series begins in the same number, entitled "The Best Way," by Hester M. Poole. This deals with practical methods of doing all manner of things about the house, and will be found of much value and interest. [George D. Chamberlain, publisher, Springfield, Mass.]

Opinions of the Press

The International Magazine

SPELLING REFORM.—In our opinion the people have no more use for the new-fangled reforms in spelling than they have for a revised Bible. The fact of the matter is that the difficulties and inconsistencies in English spelling force every child to undergo a degree of mental discipline which is not experienced by children of any other nationality. Perhaps this early training prepares the foundation for those qualities of determination and bull-doggedness which are generally admitted to characterize the Anglo-Saxon race. It is easier to pull down and reform than it is to see what the far-reaching effects may be.

The Providence Journal

DIVORCE AND IMMORALITY.—Marriage is becoming more and more a mere matter of passion, the consequences of which can be escaped by a strictly legal process. The old sense of responsibility which is not experienced by children, husbands and wives change partners with unscrupulous effrontery. If the evil continues to increase, virtue will be soon a mockery, and family honor an evanescent dream. It is perhaps easier to point out the evil than to suggest the remedy. Legislation will do something; but before we get that we must have an awakened national conscience, a more potent realization of the danger that threatens us. Here is a solemn duty placed upon the Church. If holy matrimony is a sacrament, or even if we say that it is only a rite, it surely should not be "entered into unadvisedly or lightly," nor should the vows pledged before the altar be broken at the whim of either man or woman, or for any cause but the gravest. The Roman Church refuses, except in rare cases, to remarry divorced persons; the Episcopal Church admits to holy matrimony only the innocent person in a divorce for adultery. It might be well if at the next General Convention of the latter body even this exception were barred, as a large number of Churchmen believe it ought to be. Certainly the other religious bodies cannot afford to be more lax than the Catholic Communions. All religious questions apart, however, it is a matter of plain morality. It is as true now as it ever was, that righteousness exalts a nation, and sin is a reproach to any people. And no cause of immorality is more potent than the divorce laws of this country.

The Outlook

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.—Ex-Senator Edmunds, at the Lake Mohonk Conference, said that with all the cases of international arbitration—and the United States has itself been a party to more than forty—never but once had any nation failed to comply with the decree of the arbitrators, and pay the sum awarded against it. Three important forces would operate to make voluntary arbitration practically compulsory; the industrial forces of society, which are habitually opposed to war, and which would be still more opposed to war when declared against the decree of an impartial tribunal; the commercial forces of society, which are at one with the industrial forces in this respect; and the sense of national honor, which among civilized nations is great enough to make well-nigh impossible refusal to comply with the decree of a court to whose arbitrament the nation has submitted its controversy. The only serious difficulty which we see in the way of the American plan is that it requires nine sovereign nations to agree in the constitution of the court. We should fear that it would be difficult to secure the agreement of so many. If, however, that agreement should not be secured, it is quite conceivable that a court may be constituted by a smaller number of sovereigns. The proposal certainly marks great progress in international sentiment within the last three years, for three years ago in many quarters it was considered wholly impracticable to secure the agreement of even the two Anglo-Saxon nations in one permanent court of arbitration. It is now considered not impracticable to ask the co-operation of nine nationalities, of different races, and with different legal systems, in such a court.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

CHAPTER XXI.

THE travelers, guided by Red Wing, kept steadily to the northward, making their tedious and painful way through the rough forest on foot. Nightfall found them on the slope of a low mountain, from whose shaggy sides granite boulders cropped out here and there. At its base ran a full-flooded creek, and here they pitched their tent and formed a camp. The Indian kindled a fire, and its leaping light cast awful shadows on the hills, which might easily be taken for lurking foes. Glad to gather around it in the chill spring night, the party ate a frugal meal, and waited with ever-increasing apprehension for Alan.

At last, just as the moon rose, Red Wing suddenly said: "My white brother comes," and as Mr. Underhill, doubtful, shook his head, the Indian distorted his visage with his usual unearthly grin. "The father will believe when he hears the son's voice," he said. Waiting no further confirmation, Mr. Underhill stepped forward in the direction indicated, and George bounded at his side. When they returned to the fire Alan came with them, leading his horse. Even in the dusk it could be seen that he was worn and jaded, and his dress dishevelled. He told his tale in answer to the eager inquiries poured upon him.

"I was too late," he said, "to bring warning to those who lay in the path of the scourge. Would God I had been too late to see what mine eyes have witnessed!" as he concluded. "But our people died not unavenged. With guns in hand, at last we drove the murderers up the valley, and at every shot some howling savage fell." A sound from the further side of the fire attracted attention. Red Wing's eyes were gleaming with a fierce light, and his face leered with even more than its usual hideousness.

A little later, the fire out, Mr. Underhill and the Indian mounted guard. Red Wing, wrapped in his blanket, sat in surly silence before the fire, his only sign of life being an occasional listening movement of the head. The hush of the little valley was intense, save for the soft running of the brook, until the morning wind woke bird and beast to life. Then the mysterious light of dawn breathed on the rounded mountain peaks, and their grim shadows surrendered to the breaking of another day. Mr. Underhill's strange vigil was over, and he stepped within the tent to arouse Alan. When he returned to build up the fire, he found the Indian gone.

A piece of smooth bark was bound to the nearest tree. On it a few words had been scrawled with a charred stick. This was the message: "The young pale-face has shot down my people. Let him then look to his own."

It was readily to be understood that Red Wing had resented the tone of Alan's narration on the preceding night, and had deserted the travelers on the very outset of their journey. The only wonder was that he had not attempted bloody reprisals on the unsuspecting party.

Alan declared it impossible that he should abandon the others, thus without a guide, until they had crossed the last portage to the lakes, and accordingly he had his will.

At Sir William's former fishing camp on the Sacandaga, one canoe was found, and a raft was hastily constructed to add to the slender means of transportation. It now became necessary to sacrifice many of the comforts brought thus far on the journey. Alan's horse, too, was turned adrift to make his way as best he might, back to settlements.

Down the wild and lawless little river the party steered their way, making but slow progress in the heavily laden condition of their transports. The novel experience of passing by day through this beautiful water overhung by sweeping forest branches, and camping by night amid the sweet odors of balsams and budding vines, was pleasant enough at first. Then the journey grew more irksome, the country colder and more desolate, provisions scarcer, and alarms from wild beasts more frequent. At the portage from the Hudson to Lake George came belated snow and frost, followed by days of rain, when it seemed as if the flood gates of heaven were opened, and the only thought was for shelter. At last on the shore of Lake George, Mr. Underhill sprained a wrist and ankle in leaping from the boat to the high bank, and as a consequence the party, under Philo's manipulation of the canoe, were capsized in the treacherous lake. Rescue was quickly made, and from that time the journey prospered, but new and different trouble was at hand.

Margaret, whether as the result of the wetting, or of the long fatigue and exposure, suddenly sickened, and a heavy cold developed rapidly into lung fever. The simple remedies at hand and the tenderest nursing alike failing to help the sufferer, a strenuous effort was made to push on toward civilization. But as Margaret grew worse day by day, it became necessary to form a permanent camp on shore. Then their plight was indeed a desperate one, for provisions were almost exhausted, and the nearest point of supply still distant.

"You must leave me," said Margaret, with her quick, struggling breath. "It will be but a few days for me, and you must not all perish."

"I have just sent George and Alan for stores and medicines. They will soon return with what is needful, please God," replied the priest tenderly, "but to leave you, my daughter, is impossible."

Three days passed, the foragers had not returned, and the sad hearts by the lakeside counted every hour. It was plain that Margaret was sinking. She lay quiet now, save for the labored breath, distressing to hear. Her sharpened features were already touched by the mysterious shadow which settles but once on any human face, and her pallid hands moved restlessly.

Evelyn at sunset on the third day came outside for the twentieth time to scan the swelling waters of the lake. There was no sign of anything afloat in all the reddening stretch of water. Sick at heart, she returned to the tent to take her place by Margaret's couch of fragrant boughs. It was growing dusk within, and the young girl could see little change in the outlines of the fair, pale face. Tenderly she stroked back the shining hair from the cold forehead, then laid her lips passionately to the soft curls she had twined about her fingers.

"Sister," she whispered, "for you have been more to me than sister, you are better now?"

ROYAL Baking Powder

Made from pure
cream of tartar.

Safeguards the food
against alum.

Alum baking powders are the greatest
menacers to health of the present day.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

"Aye, better," replied Margaret in a faint, hoarse whisper, "but not so well as I shall be soon. Evelyn, dearest, our time together is growing short. You have made it very happy, and the stranger has been blessed among you. Now I would know if you—are—happy?"

"Happy, Margaret, when you are ill—so ill? But you will soon be better, and Alan will be here, this very night, perhaps, with help."

"Evelyn, 'tis of him I would know. Art happy in his love?"

"Ah, Margaret, forbear to talk of that."

"Nay, to know it is my happiness. Tell it me in my last hour, dear heart."

"Yes, oh yes, but—"

Margaret tried again to speak. She could not, but the light that spread over her wan face was sufficient answer. Evelyn sank to her knees, sobbing, and Margaret's chill hand found its way to the warm, young cheek.

Mrs. Underhill came in, bringing nourishment and a lighted candle. But Margaret could not take the one, and the other caused no flicker of her eyelids. Only once did she stir, and that was when Mr. Underhill read the last prayers, and then her lips moved without sound. Again, at a sudden rising of the wind among the trees, a quiver of expectation passed across her face. After that all was intensely still save for the lapping of water on the shore, or the occasional shriek of a hooting owl or bark of far-off wolf.

As the night wore to the dawn, the gray shadow on Margaret's face deepened, and when the first rays of morning light struggled through the forest, her soul had broken forth from its tenement of clay.

It was only an hour later that Alan re-

"Little Strokes Fell Great Oaks."

The giants of the forest must yield at last to the continual blows of the woodsman. When the human blood has become clogged and impure the little drops of Hood's Sarsaparilla, properly taken, will fell the oak of bad blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

turned with the smile of hope upon his lips, the smile which Margaret had confessed she longed to see again. He brought with him food and many comforts, and even medical aid. Too late, and yet Margaret lay as though touched by the passing of a peace ineffable.

The remainder of the journey was made by the exiled family without delay or hindrance, and Alan was soon able to return to his other duty in the valley. Plenty of work was cut out there for all, for Brant and Butler were swarming over the summer fields, and the ill-named chief, Corn-planter, was reaping with fire the harvests which the dead owners would never need. The dilatory general to whom Sullivan had left his work, followed in such leisurely fashion as made it too late to save the desolated settlements. The raiders burned their way to the river, and such patriots as lived to grasp a torch, in turn applied it to the dwellings of their Tory neighbors. The ruin of the fair valley seemed now complete. Underhill and McKaye each did what he could, the former with his own company, and the latter as lieutenant-colonel of a regiment, but it was a year of desperate, heart-sickening service, which brought no honor nor reward. But the last invasion of the valley was indeed at hand, and it was at the end of the second summer after the going away of the Underhills, that Alan wrote to Evelyn:

Sir John is again on the war path, but with Colonel Willett in command of our forces, and with the spirit which prevails among our troops, we have good hope to drive him hence, to return no more.

There is one, however, who, I doubt, may not be the same man in the coming Action which we all expect. And 'tis through sore blunder of mine owne for I have been overmuch in haste to tell McKaye the joyful news that my claim on your deare Love hath been sanctioned by my parents. Such change in mortal man I never saw as in his face. It must be that he still had harbored Hope, thinking my matter had come to no issue. He hath no spirit since, and who knows so well how to grieve for him as I? And yet what untold happiness to be thought worthy by mine owne deare ones of such precious Trust!

It was but the next day after the sending of this letter that Sir John Johnson, with the strongest force he had yet wielded, again hurled his bands toward the Mohawk. Then retreating from the river, where there was little of life or property left to garner, he made directly for the old Hall at Johnston. It was here, almost on his own threshold, that the patriots met him.

The Tories were posted on the slightly rising ground which lay between the west bank of the favoring creek and the baronial house. Willett, having detached a part of his command to take a circuitous path through the woods and fall upon the enemy from the rear, himself assailed the front. McKaye, too, advanced on the double quick, charging with his columns in support of his leader. But Johnson's subordinate had had well intrenched himself behind a hedge fence which ran eastward from the Hall, and when his level line of fire struck the foremost rank of McKaye's men, they broke and fell backward in disorder. Shaming the men by his own example, McKaye again led the charge. But though the assault was made bravely, the troops, riddled by the raking fire, and confused by the shouts of the Indians, again fell back, line upon line, in great confusion.

It was indeed a forlorn hope. McKaye seemed totally unable to inspirit his men

Why Most People Eat this Bread.

Pillsbury's Best Flour is the favorite with the two largest classes of buyers--those who want the best at any price and those who want the most for their money. A barrel of Pillsbury's Best will make not only better bread, but also more loaves than will a barrel of other flour.

PILLSBURY-WASHBURN FLOUR MILLS CO., LTD., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
MAKERS OF PILLSBURY'S VITOS.

with his own courage. The retreat became a wild flight, in which Willett's troops joined. In vain their leader cursed and threatened. The force before them was too strong, the advantage of position all on the other side, and the rout continued. The retreating troops had crossed the creek, gained the ground on the other side, and fled onward to the stone church before their enraged officers could bring them to a stand. The enemy who had leaped from their own intrenchments were in full pursuit, and the battle closed around the church in a hand to hand conflict.

It already seemed inevitable that Willett's command should be cut to pieces, when the flanking party—with which Underhill had gone—was seen emerging from the woods to the northward. "Forward! Forward! Charge! Double-quick!" ran along their line. The men, with wild yells worthy of their savage foes, rushed to the charge, clattering up the slope of the clearing in a cloud of their own dust. The impulse of this new onset was too strong for the invaders who found themselves thus hemmed in between two foes, with no opportunity for their usual savage tactics.

The fortune of the day was now with Willett, but he bethought himself of a field-piece abandoned near the Hall, and called for volunteers who should recover it. McKaye was the first man to offer himself for this work, and though subordinate to another, he fought desperately, almost recklessly, in the bloody miniature battle which raged around the old cannon. The prize was won at length, but just as the patriots were bearing the gun away in triumph, a whistling ball found its mark in McKaye's side, and the brave soldier fell.

It was after sunset, and the enemy, baffled and beaten, had fled to the woods, when Alan found his friend in the old wooden church west of the new structure. Here McKaye was stretched upon one of the decaying benches, his face turned upward to the evening light, and almost a smile relaxing his calmly set features. Gently lifting the blood-stained hand which pressed upon the breast, Alan found that it rested upon a small volume, which, had it been but an inch or two higher up might have saved a noble life. The book was an English Prayer Book. Had Evelyn given it? Did it hold some treasured violets?

Underhill could not look. He thought of his own written words, "He hath no spirit since. I doubt if he be the same man in the coming action."

(To be continued.)

Never Saw a Cow

A COLLOQUY OF THE EAST SIDE

"THERE'S a woman in town," said Mrs. Coogan, looking up from her washtubs, "what ain't known to them there societies as tells you how to clean your sink so's your kids wont get the fever. She ain't, so far as I hearn, on the side of them as wants to vote. She aint never once told me yet, and I'se seed her all of six times, as how I could make a penny do for a dime. She says she ain't practical—Lord bless her!"

"She says, says she: 'I'm what they call indiscriminating.'"

"On the day when she says them words she was standing here by that there place, what you and me calls a window. Under it two kids, mine and another, was playing."

"Jennie's awful stuck up," says one of 'em.

"Why fer?" says t'other.

"Cause she's seed things'—

"Humph, that ain't nothin'—so've I."

"What you seen?"

"What? Seen arrest of a fightin' drunk, less nor an hour ago, seen'—

"No—no. I mean t'other kind of things. She's seen grass, grass, lots of it, an' flowers, an' an'—"

"Humph, don't believe it! Where?"

"An' she's seed a cow, a cow, an' patted it—"

"She's foolin'—"

"She's tole me 'bout it—"

"So can I, a beast with two horns, four legs an' a tail, wot don't talk'—"

"Well, all on a sudden the woman standing by that there window grows white as these clothes 'll be when I gets through washing them."

"Have a glass of water, honey," says I.

"No, no," says she, "'taint that. Who are those children?" she says kinder sharp like.

"Why," says I, looking through the hole there, 'one of 'em's mine, t'other's drunken Mike's.'"

"How old be they?" says she.

"My girl's five, the boy's six."

"Are there many more like 'em?" she asks.

"Many more," says I, wonderin' if she was daft.

"I mean many more that have never seen a cow, nor grass," says she. "Many more that are hiding like those two in a dark alley to get out of the scorching sun," says she.

"Now, that's what struck that woman, what didn't have nothing to say to me about my garbage pan as something terrible."

"Well," says I, kinder shame-faced. "I aint seed a cow myself in fifteen years. And as for grass—well, there aint no scraps of it nearer here nor eight blocks, on the left hand side to the middle of the street."

"God!" says the woman, "it's terrible. I ain't rich," says she, "but in this here weather somethin' must be done to get the tenment kids into the country."

"How many of them is there," says she, "that aint never seen grass?"

"To calc'late closely," says I, "I guess there's a couple of thousand."

"And then she dropped all of a heap on that there chair."

"It may be indiscriminate charity," says she, "but them kids have got to get out! I'll take 'em in relays," says she, "the best I know how."

"My kid and drunken Mike's, they went, of course, on the first layout"

"Before they went my Mamie was forever asking embarrassing questions."

"What's a cow really like, ma?" she'd say.

"And she'd want to know its color and such. And then she got to talking about chickens, and I says, 'Never mind, child, they're fourteen cents a pound.' And she says, 'Real ones, I mean. I'm going to see real ones, with feathers—with feathers,' she'd say in her sleep, till she'd like to wake all the rest of us."

"Then she'd say, 'What kind of flowers will I see?' And it was more embarrassing when she got back, for I'd said roses on a guess, and, bless you, she seen all the other kind and not a rose."

"Well, my kid she talks about that there trip and nothing else."

"Outside she plays it, somehow. She calls it 'the country game.' She makes believe there's shade there under that old spoke stuck in the ground. She pretends it's a tree, and she finds some green calico somewheres what she's made into leaves. Look at 'em tacked up there. And that there puddle's their lake. Aint children queer?"

"She plays the new game with drunken Mike's kid and some of the others that went along, for that there woman said, 'I aint discriminating,' and she took all she could pile into the car without a question as to their pedigree. There was the milkman's kid next to the swillman's."

"Well, I know all about that trip as if I'd been there."

"Not a word says the kids when they gets there. They just stands and looks at the grass. There's miles of it, and there's flowers scattered on it."

"Go scamper oh it," says the woman. 'It's yours for all day, and pick all the flowers you want,' says she; 'they're yours, too'."

"But she can't get most of the kids to stir, and when she's getting unhappy over it one of 'em whispers, 'Coppers.'"

"Oh, there aint none here," says the woman, like to cry. And then whatever the kids don't do would fill a newspaper."

"When I'm expecting my kid back I gets out two of these here pans to hold the flowers she'd bring home, and—well, she's a queer kid. She brought one,"

"Ma," says she, "I couldn't pick 'em an' spoil 'em. I tried two, an' they spoilt. This one's spoilt a little, but its the only one," says she, "an' the rest's all right."

"That night when the kid's goin' to her corner in the room where we all sleeps, the whole kit and crew of us, she says, 'Ma,' says she, 'why can't we have 'em all the time—the trees, an' the cows? Ma, why can't we? An' the sun's cool there! Ma, why can't we have that sun here?"

"An' I says, says I, 'Well, honey, who-sover's to blame, 'taint the fault of the woman who took you to the country. 'Taint her fault, honey, though the societies says she's just ruining us with her indiscriminate charity. 'Taint her fault.'"

"Yer bet yer life 'taint, says the kid. And in her sleep she says, over an' over, 'The rest of the flowers is all right—'cept one—only one.'"—New York Journal.

Trial Package Free!

If any reader, suffering from rheumatism, will write to me, I will send them free of cost a trial Package of a simple and harmless remedy which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 40 years' standing. This is an honest remedy that you can test before you part with your money. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 203 Sumnerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

The Tale of One City.

Of 40 prominent dentists of Hartford, Conn., all but five have endorsed the

Prophylactic Tooth Brush

SOLD ONLY IN A YELLOW BOX—for your protection. Carved handle and face to fit the mouth. Bristles in irregular tufts—cleans between the teeth. Hole in handle and hook to hold it. These mean much to cleanly persons—the only ones who like our brush. Adults' 35c. Children's (2 sizes) 25c. By mail or at dealers'. Send for our free booklet, "Tooth Truths." FLORENCE MFG CO., 25 Pine St., Florence, Mass.

$15.00 Serge Suits

Cool, Clerical, Comfortable

The suit we now offer at $15.00 is of very unusual value.

We are only able to do so through a peculiar happening. A mill manufactured a large quantity of Black Serge; it could not sell it to its regular trade, for the reason that Blue Serges only are ordinarily in demand.

As we have the outlet for Black Serge to our clerical trade, the mill offered the entire quantity to us at a price quite below value.

We took it [double our ordinary needs], knowing we could speedily sell it all at such an unusual figure.

Delivered free any place, when money accompanies order.

E. J. B. Young & Co.

908 Walnut Street, Philadelphia
245 Broadway, New York.

An American Edition Now Ready.

The Teachers' Prayer Book

Adapted to the use of the Church in the United States.

By the Rt. Rev. ALFRED BARRY, D.D., D.C.L.,
Canon of Windsor, and Assistant Bishop of London.

With an Introduction by
The Rt. Rev. HENRY C. POTTER, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L.,
Bishop of New York.

18mo. Cloth. Red Edges. Price, $1.00
Net; by Mail, $1.10.

"This work is very well done, and is calculated to be of great use to both teachers and scholars."—Living Church.

"The whole is a marvel of convenience and utility."—The Churchman.

"The notes on the Epistles, the Gospels, and the Psalms are peculiarly excellent."—Church Standard.

E. & J. B. Young & Co., 7 & 9 W. 18th St., N. Y.

FURNITURE Of All Kinds

FOR CHURCH AND CHANCEL.

Write for our new catalogue.

Special designs and prices made on application.

Correspondence solicited.

PHOENIX FURNITURE CO.,
Eau Claire, Wis.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. Jas. C. Pond, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY ISOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XIV.

ON THE BAY SHORE ROAD

IT was the day before Thanksgiving, and the girls of St. Dorothy were very busy preparing baskets of good things for those whose comfort they cared for. There had no lack of donations to the good cause. Mrs. Edsall opened her stores of jellies and preserves freely, and Mr. Hardy gave Virginia an order on the market in town for all the turkeys and chickens she wanted, while the more substantial and everyday necessities, potatoes and staples, and so on, were there in abundance.

The day was cold and sunless, with sure prospect of a heavy snowstorm coming on. Most of the baskets had been delivered to their destinations by means of Lad and Lassie and the trap, but a few more remained, and Nell said it was not necessary to have the horses just for so few baskets; that the girls could carry them all right. There were only the five charter members present, as it happened. The rest had finished their share of the good work and gone home. As they stood chatting over the last load, Mrs. Hardy glanced out of the window anxiously.

"Indeed, I don't believe you ought to go out, daughter," she said, seriously. "There is certainly a storm coming up, and Nell says it is a long distance to the little old lady's."

"Over a mile, Virgine," Eleanor added, as she slipped on her warm kid mittens, "and its way down on the Bay Shore road."

But Virginia only laughed, as she dropped a hasty kiss on her mother's white hair.

"As if I were going to help up to the last minute and then miss even the fun of seeing their faces when they see the baskets," she was wrapping her fur cloak closer around her, said, "Unless, of course, the girls mind walking a little slower, why, I mean to go."

Eleanor, too, looked anxious, but she gave Virginia the support of her arm, and waved her hand reassuringly to Mrs. Hardy when they left her on the veranda.

It did not seem such a long distance after all, walking from the bluff to town, with everyone laughing and talking, and the consciousness of doing good making them happy. All of the baskets were left with bright words of good cheer, until only one remained, the largest of all. It was for a little old maid of sixty, who lived all by herself on the opposite side of the river.

"No one will ever think of going to see her," Alice had said, when they were making out the list of those who were to be helped. So the daintiest basket of all was made up for Miss Keturah Pugsley. Mrs. Hardy had sent a plump turkey ready roasted, and a can of cooked cranberries, and there was a delicious fresh chocolate cake, and some pineapple preserves, and a pound of the finest tea, and other things besides.

"I am afraid it will be dark before we get back," Nell said, but Virginia overruled all objections in her gay, willful way, and laughed at her for an old, fussy grandmother; so she won the day, and they crossed the river and walked far down the Bay Shore road, until at last the little white cottage was reached.

"Hope she won't be scared out of her wits over the surprise party," Laura chuckled, when they went softly around to the kitchen door, and she added, in an undertone to Alice who was next her, "I wish that Mollie were here to see the fun, too; don't you?"

Alice nodded. There was no time to answer, for Eleanor had tapped on the door, and they all waited breathlessly for a response. Silence for a moment, and then, instead of the slow, faltering step of old Miss Pugsley, there came the sound of a firm, quick footfall across the floor, and the door was flung open by no less a personage than Mollie Gray herself.

"Why, the idea!" murmured Evelyn in her surprised, lady-like way; but the others looked silent and sheepish. Mollie was the first to recover herself.

"Hello, girls," she said, "have you come to see Miss Pugsley? How nice of you!"

"Yes," Nell replied, "just a little Thanksgiving surprise party we planned," but the rest did not speak, so taken by surprise were they themselves. Then they all trooped after Mollie into the little house, and in the sitting room a second surprise awaited them.

There sat Miss Pugsley in her deep-seated wicker rocking chair, her feet warming cozily on a hassock before the plump Dutch stove, and beside her sat Madge Ferrall. Both glanced up at the doorway full of eager, rosy faces, in a startled way, and when Madge recognized them as the S. D. S. girls, she rose impulsively, as though to leave them in possession of the field, but Mollie was too quick for her.

"Only some of the girls come to see you, Miss Pugsley," she said cheerily, crossing to the gentle old lady's side; then, with her hand laid affectionately around Madge's shoulder, she added, "and girls, I think you all know Madge Ferrall, Tony's sister."

Laura and Alice nodded with an answering smile. Eleanor bowed gravely, an anxious look on her sweet, calm face; and as for the other two, not the wildest flight of imagination could construe the blank, far-away look on their faces to any acknowledgment of the introduction. In fact, at that precise moment Virginia suddenly remembered something in the basket which must be attended to at once, so Evelyn accompanied her to the kitchen, and Mollie fired up at once over the slight to her friend.

"Hadn't we better go?" Madge whispered, as the two stood in a shadowy corner and watched the gay group that clustered about Miss Pugsley's chair.

"Indeed, we'd better do no such thing," retorted Mollie. "I'm going to stay until the last gun's fired, or know the reason why!"

When Mollie put her foot down, as Dave

Prevents Colic

Colic in infants is generally the result of improper food; with proper food the baby does not have colic. Mellin's Food prevents colic because it furnishes proper food and does not produce indigestion. Mellin's Food with fresh cow's milk is like mother's milk and is a good substitute therefor.

Mellin's Food

When our little boy was about 5 months old, he became very ill and could retain no food whatever. We tried a number of prepared foods as well as a diet of sterilized milk, but his stomach rejected all and he became a miserable looking child, just bones covered with a parchment-like skin. He was literally starving to death. He suffered cruelly from colic and we had quite resigned ourselves to losing him, feeling it almost a happy relief to the poor little fellow. The use of Mellin's Food by a neighbor's recommendation worked miracles. He retained it and as we followed the directions of your pamphlet religiously we were more delighted each day. Since that time he has not had a day's serious illness. Mrs. Albert Shields, Chester Hill, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

"West Michigan Ry"

FAVORITE ROUTE TO

DELIGHTFUL MICHIGAN RESORTS

Bay View Petoskey Omena
Lake Harbor Neahawanta
Charlevoix-the-Beautiful
Ottawa Beach Harbor Springs

Cool Lake Michigan Breezes, freedom from dust and mosquitos--refreshing nights, etc., are some of the agreeable characteristics of these resorts. Send for illustrated folder issued by the General Passenger Department, C. & N. W. R'y, Grand Rapids, Mich.

THROUGH SLEEPING CARS FROM CHICAGO and ST. LOUIS TO PETOSKEY-BAY VIEW commencing June 19th and continuing until Sept. 25th (via Ill. Cent. R'y from St. Louis). Your home agent can sell you through tickets at reduced rates.

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.
FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

Lea & Perrins' Sauce

The Original and Genuine Worcestershire.
Known the world over. Take no substitute.

Pearline

Leaves no dirt behind

said, there was no chance for anyone else, so the two stayed, while the S. D. S. girls bustled about unpacking the good things to eat and lavishing attentions on Miss Pugsley. But in spite of the roast turkey and pineapple, in spite of Virginia's smiles and radiant promises, it was little Madge whom the old lady called for at the last to come and see that everything was all right for the night, and to give her a farewell kiss.

"How well Miss Pugsley knows that girl," Evelyn said thoughtfully to Mollie, as they stood outside the door waiting for Madge.

"Well, I should say she did," replied Mollie, proudly. "Madge comes over every day after Tony is home to look after her mother, and she fixes up the place for Miss Pugsley, and reads to her, and Tony always splits her wood for her and carries it into the house. Guess she does know her."

"The idea," said Evelyn, and Nell added: "How nice of them, and it is such a long way over, too."

"Oh, no, it isn't," Mollie answered. "They just come over the railroad bridge. There's a little footpath between the tracks, you know."

"Ugh! I'd be afraid of trains," murmured little Alice, with a shiver.

"Your father was not a brakeman," Virginia said coolly, and Mollie wanted to box her ears; but Madge's appearance put an end to the conversation, and they all walked down the road in silence.

The ground was dry and frozen, but already a few stray snowflakes had begun to flutter down from the heavy, gray sky, and the daylight was fast fading.

"Wasn't it fun?" Laura said, as she danced on ahead of Evelyn and Virginia, "and what a lovely time she'll have tomorrow!"

"I don't think it was nearly as nice as we had planned," Virginia replied slowly; "some way, it seemed as though the other two spoiled our surprise, and as if they had done more for her than if we had given her a thousand turkeys. I'm sorry I came."

"We must hurry," Eleanor's clear voice said from the rear, "or we will be out in a storm sure, and it would be a serious matter down here on the bay shore at night."

"Nonsense—" Virginia began, but Mollie's words made her pause. She and Madge had stopped at the railroad crossing, and were ready to start down the tracks towards the bridge.

"Why don't you come with us, Nell?" she asked. "It's perfectly safe, and you'll be over the river in five minutes, instead of going way down to the red bridge."

"Oh, don't, Nellie," pleaded Laura and Alice, but Evelyn and Virginia laughed at their fears, and started ahead of all, arm in arm until they reached the bridge, where they had to go in single-file, Indian fashion.

The bridge was a long narrow one, barely accommodating the two tracks, and between them a planking about two feet wide had been laid as a footpath.

"See how easy it is?" Mollie said to Eleanor when they were half way across, and the latter nodded. She was too busy looking after Alice and Laura to talk. All at once a shrill whistle sounded on the still air, and all the girls stopped short, holding their breaths to catch the direction of the sound as it died away.

(To be continued)

How Grandpa Boiled Eggs

"IT is half-past eleven," said grandpa, "and the mason will not have the chimney ready before three o'clock."

"Then I suppose we must go along with a cold lunch," said grandma.

"Well," said grandpa after a moment, "Perhaps I can boil some eggs. I will try it."

"But isn't it too windy to make a fire out of doors?" asked grandma.

"I shall not need a fire," said grandpa.

"That sounds like a joke," said Edith.

"No Joke at all," said grandpa, "Come out and see. And bring the eggs," he added, "and a can with a tight cover."

When, a few moments after, grandma and Edith went out in the back yard, grandpa was putting some fresh lime into an old pail.

He took the can of eggs they brought and filled it nearly full of cold water. Then, fitting the lid on carefully, he set it in a hollow place he had made in the lime. Edith watched him curiously.

"Will the lime burn?" she asked. "Shall I bring the matches?"

"You forget," said grandpa. "I was not to use any fire. We'll start it with cold water."

"Now I know you're joking."

"Wait a moment," said grandpa, "and you'll see."

He poured in the water and put a board over the pail.

"Oh!" cried Edith, when in a very short time it began to bubble and steam as if a hot fire were burning under the pail. And "Oh!" she cried a great deal louder when a white creamy mass came pouring over the top and down the sides of the pail.

It did not last long. In six minutes the bubbling had almost stopped. So grandpa took a long iron dipper and gently lifted out the can, all coated with lime.

He rinsed it off, then opened it and took out the nice, white eggs, and when they broke them at lunch, they found them cooked just exactly right.—Canadian Churchman.

FROM MASSACHUSETTS: "We are all grateful, very grateful, for the noble stand you are taking in defense of Apostolic Orders and the principles of the Catholic Faith."

INSTINCT.

Taste is Frequently a Valuable Guide in Selecting Food.

A little child's taste is often a reliable guide to palatable and desirable food, and it is worth one's while to observe how the little folks take to Grape-Nuts, the famous new food made by the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich.

They eat it freely without addition of sugar, for it has the peculiar, mild, but satisfying sweet of grape-sugar, and the natural taste, either of child or adult, recognizes at once a food that will agree with, and richly nourish, the system.

They are generally unable to explain why, but instinct seems to tell the unerring truth when Grape-Nuts are tasted, and a few days' use will show strength and health as the result of food that not only has the delicious flavor, but is made of those parts of the food supply furnished by the Creator that tend to easy absorption by the system.

The name of SWIFT on hams, bacon, lard, beef extract, butterine, means purity in product, cleanliness in manufacture, care in handling, U. S. Government inspection, and guaranteed by an annual business of over one hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

Swift and Company, Chicago

THIS CHURCH is now being built of STONE, and will cost, completely FURNISHED, less than $5000.

WE CAN DO AS WELL FOR YOU, SHALL WE?

JOHN BUTCLIFFE,
CHURCH ARCHITECT,
218 La Salle St.
CHICAGO.

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows
Ecclesiastical Furnishings
American Mosaic Glass Windows
Church Decorations

CARYL COLEMAN President 3-5-7 W 29th Street
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice-President NEW YORK

Trinity Church Embroidery School CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes, maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.

MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT,
Trinity Parish House, 101 28th St.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH. Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.
Church Furnishers and Decorators.
70 Fifth Avenue. New York City.

Cox Sons & Vining.

70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS, Embroideries, and Fabrics.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.
R. G. GEISSLER, X Marble and Metal Work.
58 West 8th St. (near 6th ave.) New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill

Finance and Commerce

Dunn & Co. report failures in the United States, for the second quarter of the year, the smallest for the like period in twenty-five years. Bank clearings the last week show a gain over the same week last year of 39.5 per cent. These two items indicate, as well as anything, the present prosperous condition of business throughout the country. In fact there are very few complaints from any quarter. The only dissatisfaction is among laborers who feel they are not sharing in the general prosperity of their employers, and a few strikes are on, and more are threatened. These conditions usually follow a business revival, and are probably now due. So far, they have assumed active form only in isolated cases, and the great transportation interests, with their numberless employees, have not felt the pressure of demand for increased wages. It is not unlikely to come. The merging of many separate producers into one, which has been done to a great degree in many lines of trade, has thrown some out of employment. This naturally creates a dissatisfied class, and the sentiment against trusts is undoubtedly growing, and will receive aid and comfort from both political parties in the next campaign. These are conditions that are likely to affect the future. Now, business is moving along swimmingly. In the iron trade there is yet no abatement in the firm tendency of prices, but it can be seen that the production capacity is gaining on the demands for future, and will ere long probably run ahead of it, an authority stating it, "but the new orders accumulated do not equal the output of the works."

Prices continue strong for woolen goods. The market for raw cotton has advanced slightly, mainly on account of speculative buying in some in the south-west. In manufactured goods there is no pressure to sell. Production capacity in the south is increasing, and its competition with New England mills is severe.

Wheat has fluctuated within narrow limits, but the tendency of prices has been slightly downward. Receipts at primary markets are somewhat less, but still large, while foreign demand is by no means large, and stocks are accumulating at a time of the year when they should be decreasing. The European visible decreased sharply last week, however, which shows that supplies from Russia and the southern hemisphere are being depleted.

The key to prices is still the north-west spring wheat crop, and the next fortnight will be the crucial period. In the states of Minnesota and the two Dakotas, which practically produce the crop, the conditions are not wholly favorable. The crop is two to three weeks late, and very rank in growth. The best authorities say it can only mature well with good dry weather. It will stand neither heat nor moisture. The stock market has had a sharp rally, under good leadership, and a general outside speculative buying. Gold has gone out less freely, and at the moment the price of exchange continues below the shipping point.

Exports in Detail

A study of the details of exports from the United States during the fiscal year just ended, shows that every part of the world has evinced an increased desire for American products. Europe is the only part of the world which has failed to increase the amount of money paid to us for our products, and this is solely due to the plentiful supply of breadstuffs in that part of the world in 1899 as compared with 1898, and the consequent decrease in price paid per bushel, thus making a slight reduction in our cash receipts from that part of the world. To Asia, to Africa, to South America, to Mexico, to Canada, and to the Hawaiian Islands and Oceanica, our sales have increased in quantity and value as compared with the phenomenal year 1898, the only grand division from which our receipts have been smaller this year than last being Europe, and even there the reduction is confined to the four countries, United Kingdom, France, Belgium, and Spain, and, as already indicated, is due to the fact that a large home supply of breadstuffs has reduced their payments to us for this class of our products.

To British North America the exports in the fiscal year 1899 will be in round numbers, $90,000,000, as against $85,000,000 last year; to Mexico, the exports will be about $25,000,000, as against $21,205,000 last year; to Cuba, the exports will be about $18,000,000, against $8,260,000 last year; to Puerto Rico, the total will be $2,500,000, against $1,500,000 in 1898, and to the entire West Indies group the total exports of the year will be $35,000,000 in round numbers, against $26,438,000 last year. South America, to which our sales in the past have not shown as rapid an increase as those to other parts of the world, show a slight gain in 1899, and will reach a total of over $35,000,000, against $33,821,000 last year. To Asia, the exports of the year will be about $47,000,000, as against $44,844,000 last year, China showing an increase of over 35 per cent., and Hongkong about an equal increase, while Japan, which purchased enormous quantities of raw cotton and various manufactured goods from us last year, has somewhat decreased her purchases in these lines, so that the total to Japan during the year will show a reduction of over $3,000,000, compared with 1898, but an increase of $3,000,000, compared with 1897. Oceanica shows remarkable gains, the total for the year being likely to exceed $30,000,000, against $21,991,000 last year, and to Africa the exports of the year are in excess of those of any preceding year.

Loss of Appetite.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Strengthens the stomach and creates a good appetite for food.
Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

A Fine Cuisine,

BATHS, MEDICAL TREATMENT, and REST at The Penoyer, Kenosha, Wis. Booklet free.

ROUND WORLD, ORIENT. CRUISE, etc.—Party leaves Oct. 17, round world; Feb. 1, grand $400 Mediterranean cruise, the cheapest and most attractive trip leaving the U.S. next year. F. C. CLARK, 111 Broadway, New York City.

CHURCH BELLS CHIMES and PEALS
Best quality on earth. Get our price.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1837.
THE E. W. YANDUZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A.
Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only.
FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc.
ALSO CHIMES AND PEALS.
Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826. BELLS.
HAVE FURNISHED 35,000 Bells.
CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER.
MENEELY & CO. PUREST BEST GENUINE
WEST-TROY, N.Y. BELL-METAL
CHIMES, Etc. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,
CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.
Troy, N. Y., and New York City.
Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

FOR PUDDINGS, CUSTARDS, BLANC MANGE, ETC.

NO OTHER EQUALS IT IN PURITY AND DELICACY.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889, AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD.
THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY.
We are the largest Makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELIHART HARNESS & CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS,

Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park New York.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

Aids digestion, clears the head, and increases energy. At all druggists. 50c. and $1.

REMEMBER!

HIRES Rootbeer

is a Temperance Drink.

SCHOOL IS OUT, NOW TO THE COUNTRY!

"Hints to Tourists," by the North-Western Line, gives detailed information of many places where a vacation may be enjoyably spent, and at slight cost. Copies free. Ticket Office, 193 Clark Street and Wells Street Station.

Young mothers should send to the Mellin's Food Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy of "The Care and Feeding of Infants," free of charge.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;

After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Damrell & Upham's, 283 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lycett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Subscribers should name not only the new address, but also the old.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marria Notices, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.
F. G. LOGAN
MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.
4 B'd Trade, Chicago.
Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

"What you want when you want it"

Libby's Luncheons

Delicious, delightful, delectable meat dainties—always all ready—no fire, no bother—all you have to do is to serve—for home, for picnics, for everywhere.

Veal Loaf Ox Tongue (whole)

Potted Ham, Beef and Tongue

Wafer Sliced
Smoked Beef

Deviled Ham Brisket Beef

Put up in convenient sized key-opening cans.

Drop Postal for Pork and Beans

We'll send you free a sample can of Libby's Home-Baked Pork and Beans, the kind which taste even better than those mother used to bake, and our book, "How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

Best Line to Denver

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

Your Summer Outing.

Unite health, rest, pleasure and comfort on the handsome, luxurious

Steel Steamship MANITOU

Exclusively
for Passenger
Service.

First-Class
Only.
Tri-Weekly
Sailings.

Between Chicago, Charlevoix, Potoskey, Harbor Springs, Bay View, Mackinac Island, etc.

Steamers of our Lake Superior Division make weekly sailings between Chicago, Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette, Hancock, Duluth and intermediate points. Descriptive reading matter, giving particulars about the voyage, terms and reservations sent free.

JOS. BEROLZHEIM, G. P. A.,
Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Trans. Co.,
Rush and N. Water St., CHICAGO.

... Bind Your Copies of.

THE LIVING CHURCH

By special arrangement we are able to supply the Emerson Binder, cloth, neatly lettered in gold, to our subscribers at the moderate cost of 75 cents. Address all orders to

The Living Church,

Helpful Hints

CURE FOR INSOMNIA.—Insomnia is a self-inflicted curse through the violation of nature's laws. The cause may be over-anxiety, planning for the morrow, thinking and worrying over the yesterdays and to days, but no opiate can remove the cause, even though it may bring sleep. If the cause is merely mental overwork, it may be quickly removed by relieving the brain of the excess of blood. Physical exercise is a panacea for about every ailment which human flesh is heir to. Therefore, stand erect, and rise slowly from the heels; descend slowly. Do this from forty to fifty times until you feel the congestion in the muscles of the leg. Almost instant relief follows, and sleep is soon induced. For those who are averse to a little work, I would recommend instead a bowl of very-hot milk (without so much as a wafer) immediately before retiring. The hotter the milk the better for the purpose. This will prove a better sleep producer than all the opiates known to medical science. It brings about an increased activity of the blood-vessels of the stomach, causing slight temporary congestion, which relieves the blood vessels of the brain. The hot milk is also quite-strengthening to the stomach.—Ladies' Home Journal.

NECESSITY OF COVER DURING SLEEP.—The object is simply this: Nature takes the time when one is lying down to give the heart a rest, and that organ, consequently, makes ten strokes less a minute than when one is in an upright posture. Multiplying that by sixty minutes, it is six hundred strokes. Therefore, in eight hours spent in lying down the heart is saved nearly five-thousand strokes, and as the heart pumps six ounces of blood with each stroke, it lifts thirty thousand ounces less of blood in a night of eight hours spent in bed than when one is in an upright position. As the blood flows so much more slowly through the veins while one is lying down, one must supply, then, with extra coverings, the warmth usually furnished by circulation.—Popular Science News.

It is well known that the nerves are directly affected by cigarette smoking—doubtless more so than by the ordinary cigar or the super-fragrant pipe. But it may not be generally understood that nerves of the teeth are actually killed by this indulgence. It appears from the testimony of a Brooklyn dentist that this is the case, and that young men are not the only sufferers. In at least one instance he discovered in the course of his professional service that a young lady of high character, one of his personal acquaintances, had entirely killed the nerves of some of her teeth in this manner. Commenting upon the frequency with which dead nerves were found in the teeth of young men, he said: "The result itself has been apparent to me and to all dentists for a long time, but the cause has been a mystery until very recently. For years the nerves of teeth in every other way perfect, have been found dead. A careful examination of a dead nerve found in an unexposed tooth, recently revealed the fact that it had been poisoned by nicotine, and thereby the mystery referred to was solved. Nicotine poisoning from cigarette smoking is killing the nerves in the teeth of smokers. It is a most serious state of affairs, although most people will not understand. They think a dead tooth is as good as a live one. They will find their mistake some day.—Good Housekeeping.

FROM MICHIGAN:—"THE LIVING CHURCH has grown to be one of the necessities of life in this family."

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"THE MORE YOU SAY, THE LESS PEOPLE REMEMBER."
One word with you

SAPOLIO

DELICIOUS IN COFFEE TEA & Chocolate

GAIL BORDEN

Send for BABIES

A Book for Mothers.

EAGLE BRAND

CONDENSED MILK

Borden's Condensed Milk Co., N. Y.

SUMMER IN COLORADO

Extremely low rates June 25th to July 11th, to Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, and Glenwood Springs.

The Colorado Special One night to Denver.

Leaves Chicago ten A. M. every day. Arrives Denver 2:55 P. M. next day, and Colorado Springs same evening.

The Pacific Express leaves Chicago daily 10:30 P. M.

For particulars, apply to your nearest ticket agent, or address

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RY.

Principal Agencies:

NEW YORK BOSTON CHICAGO
461 Broadway 368 Washington St. 193 Clark St.

Somatose A perfect food for the invalid, the dyspeptic, or the baby. Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City.

RUBBER STAMPS.....

AND SOLID RUBBER TYPE.

Hand Stamps, Self-Inkers, Numberers, Stencils, Daters, Check Perforators, Etc., Etc.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

Alfred Mfg. Works, - Chicago.

A Combination Set of the Prayer Book and Hymnal, valued at $5.00, handsomely bound and printed on India Paper, will be sent free to anyone sending two new paid-in-advance subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH, plus 20 cents for carriage.

The Living Church

A black and white portrait of a man with a mustache, wearing a dark suit and white shirt. A yellow label with the text 'H. A. de P.' is visible in the top right corner.

tol, Va., in which field he served two years. After this he spent some time traveling in Europe, and on Dec. 1, 1884, took charge of Christ church, Richmond. In 1886 he married Miss Ida Vivian Pratt, daughter of Wm. Carter Pratt, of Caroline county. In the fall of 1890, Bishop Whittle appointed him diocesan evangelist in charge of forty counties in Southwest and South Virginia. He continued in this work till 1892, when he went to Trinity church, Portsmouth. Of his work there it is needless to speak. The results attained have been all that could have been expected. He was consecrated Bishop of Boise July 13, 1899.

"The School that Makes Manly Boys."

While maintaining a high intellectual standard, its beautiful campus of ninety acres also affords opportunity for all manly sports. Here is the cricket field with games in progress :

Graduates enter any university.
For information address

Rev. H. D. ROBINSON, Warden, Racine, Wis.

Educational

CONNECTICUT

Greenwich-on-Sound, Conn.

A select boarding and day school for girls. Re-opens Oct. 2, 1899. Send for catalogue.

THE MISSES CORVINE, Principals.

The Episcopal Academy,

Cheshire, Conn.

The 106th year will begin Tuesday, Sept. 12th, 1899. A Preparatory School of the highest order for College or for business. ERI DAVIDSON WOODBURY, M.A. Principal.

COLORADO

COLORADO, MONTCLAIR, Suburb of Denver.

Jarvis Hall Military Academy

Has no superior. Number of students last year double that of preceding year. $350 per annum. Catalogue. REV. H. KAY COLEMAN, A.M., Rector.

ILLINOIS

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in Its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address, REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1899. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

St. Alban's Academy.

Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports. A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

St. Agatha's School, Springfield, Ill.

The Springfield Diocesan School for Girls. Opens its fall term Sept. 14th. Academic, Primary, and Kindergarten department; Music, Art, Elocution, Physical Culture, carefully taught. Especial attention given to training girls for the home life. French spoken at table—taught by a Parisian. For catalogue, etc., apply to MRS. PHOEBE H. SEABROOK, Prin.

Bunker Hill Military Academy,

BUNKER HILL, ILL.

Prepares for Colleges, Scientific Schools, and business. Cultivates right methods of study, good habits, manliness. Personal care. No better Home or School at any price for any boy. Refers to Bishops Seymour and Tuttle. Opens September 11th. Write to Rev. S. L. Stiver, A.M., B.D.

Results Tell.

Success is best shown by results. The school has doubled in 3 years. Students prepared at the Illinois Woman's College take honors at the larger colleges and universities. The school has also a fine record for health. Send for illustrated catalogue to Jos. R. Harker, Ph.D., Pres., Jacksonville, - Illinois.

IOWA

DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Saint Katharine's Hall

A Diocesan Boarding and Day School for Girls. College preparation. Fall term opens Sept. 20th. MISS MARY FRANCIS BUFFINGTON, Principal.

MAINE

St. Catharine's Hall,

Augusta, Maine.

The diocesan school for girls. Thoroughly new and modern appointments. Pleasant climate. General, college preparatory, and musical courses. Lowest prices consistent with superior educational facilities. For catalogue, address

The Rev. GEO. F. DEGEN.

MASSACHUSETTS

Bradford Academy.

Founded 1803. For the higher education of young women. Classical and Scientific course of study, also Preparatory and Optional. Year begins Sept. 20th, 1899. Miss Ida C. Allen, Principal, Bradford, Mass.

Rogers Hall School,

For Girls. Certificate admits to College. Apply to Mrs. E. P. UNDERHILL, Lowell, Mass.

VOICE FIND THE BEST SCHOOL OF ORATORY
S. S. Curry, Leland Powers. Ten teachers. Cat. free. School of Expression, Copley Sq., Boston. Copy of Expression, a new Review and list of Books for stamp.
? Why did 6 universities in a week apply to Dr. Curry for teachers? Because the School of EXPRESSION leads all Schools of Oratory.

Educational

MASSACHUSETTS - Continued

The Cambridge School for Girls.

A select school with successful system of home boarding. Send for School Manual. MR. ARTHUR GILMAN, Director, 36 Concord Avenue, Cambridge, Mass.

MICHIGAN

University School of Music,

Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Albert A. Stanley, A.M., Director. Unusual Advantages from connection with the University of Michigan. For Calendar and detailed information, address the Secretary

MARYLAND

Edgeworth Boarding and Day

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. Re-opens Sept. 28, 1899. 37th year. Miss H. P. LEEBYRE, Principal. Miss E. D. HUNTLEY, Associate Principal. 122 and 124 W. Franklin St. Baltimore, Md.

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall.

Episcopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re-opens, D. V., Sept. 13th, 1899. Apply to SISTER SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls.

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIPPLE, Rector. Miss CAROLINE WRIGHT ELLIS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address ST. MARY'S HALL, Fairbault.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Phillips Exeter Academy.

The 117th year begins Sept. 13, 1899. Eighty scholarships awarded to students of high standing. Six important buildings added since 1885. For Catalogue and Illustrated Supplement, address

HARLAN P. AMEN, Principal, Exeter, N. H.

NEW YORK - STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

THE CASTLE,

Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

A beautiful school. Advantages of N. Y. city. All departments. Endorsed by the Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. For list, circular address 11 Miss C. E. MASON, LL.M.

St. Mary's School,

Boarding and Day School for Girls.

Collegiate, Preparatory, and Primary Classes. College Preparation; Advantages of New York. Address SISTER SUPERIOR, 6 and 8 East 4th St.

Riverview Academy

65th year.

Overlooks the Hudson. Magnificent and healthful in location, with exceptionally efficient instructors. Military discipline. J. B. BISBEE, A.M., Prin., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

OHIO

Harcourt Place Seminary

A school of the highest class for girls. For catalogue and information, address

MRS. ADA I. AYER HILLS, Principal, Gambier, Ohio.

Kenyon Military Academy

A model school for boys, on a hill top 1,100 feet above sea level. For descriptive catalogue, address HILLS and WYANT, Regents, Gambier, Ohio.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, Ohio.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

GLENDALÉ COLLEGE,

A good home school for the training of Girls. Primary, Preparatory and Collegiate Departments. Music, Art and Elocution are prominent in the work of the College. Address Rev. L. D. POTTER, D. D., GLENDALÉ, OHIO.

CHANCEL CHANGES

Correspondence solicited as to proposed change or re-decoration to Chancel or Church Interior.

Designs should be prepared and accepted in advance of the summer vacations.

Send for photographs of recent important work.

J. & R. Lamb, 59 Carmine St. New York

Educational

PENNSYLVANIA - Continued

St. Luke's School
Bustleton, Pa.
near Philadelphia
Instruction careful and individual. No boy prepared by us for College examination has ever failed to pass. Buildings attractive, homelike, and perfectly sanitary. Grounds comprise a campus of seven acres, and beautiful shaded lawn. Swimming, canoeing and skating. Healthfulness remarkable. No one connected with the school has failed to improve in health.
"The sort of a school to which sensible people desire to send their sons."—Bishop Whitaker.
CHARLES H. STROUT, A.M., Principal.

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH, WASHINGTON, PA.
BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral Morning and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalogue, write to Wm. W. SMITH Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.

PENNSYLVANIA MILITARY COLLEGE
Chester, Pa.
38th Year begins Sept. 13.
"A Military School of the highest order."—U. S. WAR DEPT.
Civil Engineering, Chemistry, Arts. Thorough Preparatory Courses. Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry.
Catalogues of Col. C. E. HYATT, President.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls.

The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many. The school is first-class in every respect. Bishop Hare makes it his home.

Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL, Sioux Falls, S. D.

VIRGINIA

Fauquier Institute for Young Ladies.

Warrenton, Va.

The thirty-ninth session begins Sept. 21st, '99. Situated in Piedmont region of Va., on Southern R. R., 35 miles from Washington. Number limited. For catalogue address GEO. G. BUTLER, A.M., AND DAUGHTERS.

Episcopal High School of Virginia.

Near Alexandria.

For Boys. The 61st year opens Sept. 27th, 1899. Illustrated catalogue on application to L. M. BLACKFORD, M.A., Principal.

WISCONSIN

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. J. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address, THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

MISSOURI

SYNODICAL COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

For Young Ladies. Elegant Location. Faculty Specialists.

Special Courses leading to degrees in Literature, Music, Art, Elocution. Prepares for Bryn Mawr and Wellesley. Write for catalogue. T. F. WALTON, Pres't, Fulton, Mo.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

A DECISION HAS BEEN HANDED down by Judge Truax, of the New York Supreme Court, having an important bearing on strikes. The decision declares that an effort on the part of a labor organization to prevent others from pursuing their trade or vocation is a conspiracy, and therefore unlawful. The case arose from an action brought by one association of steam-fitters to restrain other associations from interfering with the performance of work, and owing to the importance of principles involved, will likely be taken to the Court of Appeals, the highest judicial body of the State. Although the decision of Judge Truax applies only to associations, the question of an individual not being involved in the case, the essential principles are the same. Consequently the ruling could be applied to strikes in the event of organized labor attempting to prevent the operation of manufacturing plants or other industries by the employment of non-union men. Should the decision be sustained by the higher court, the power of unions would be limited and less effective.

— x —

WHEN ALL HOPE OF SAVING THE American liner, "City of Paris," stranded on Manacle rocks, had been practically abandoned, three small tugs to the astonishment of everybody concerned, suddenly and easily pulled the great steamship into deep water. The owners, after exhausting the resources of prominent wrecking agencies, abandoned the vessel to the underwriters, and it was by them handed over to salvors. By blasting rocks under the bow and weighting the stem, the release of the vessel was accomplished. As the "Paris" cost something over $2,000,000, the result will be a good profit for the salvors. Captain Watkins, of the "Paris," candidly acknowledges that an error in his reckoning was responsible for the stranding. As the scene of the wreck is a most dangerous vicinity, calm weather alone prevented a terrible disaster. It is a fact that in routes of great liners, safety is to a certain extent sacrificed to speed, and constantly recurring accidents emphasize the necessity for action which will render the safety of passengers paramount.

— x —

THAT THE UNITED STATES HAS already accomplished a great deal toward the regeneration of Cuba, so far as healthful conditions in the island are concerned, is shown by the fact that there is less terror of yellow fever which each season heretofore has caused great loss of life. It is true the disease exists at the present time, but to nowise the extent that would have been the case had precautionary measures not been taken; cleanliness was not considered a virtue, and fever germs flourished in consequence. One of the first duties under the military regime was to scour unhealthy and pest-breeding places, and the result is already apparent. Prevention of the fever in Cuba will, in a great measure, protect cities of the South from the scourge.

ACCORDING TO THE REPORT OF the British consul at Barcelona, Spain has, in the loss of her colonies, suffered in little else than "honor." Under the terms of the treaty, Spain has the same entry rights in the Antilles and Philippines as the United States, and therefore will not lose commercially to the extent which otherwise would be the case. As the inhabitants of the islands speak Spanish and Catalan, Spanish manufacturers, with a thorough knowledge of requirements which years of intercourse have enabled them to acquire, will not be at a disadvantage, and will also have the advantage of cheap labor with which the United States cannot compete.

— x —

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS HAVE found material for columns of matter in the extension of courtesies by Emperor William, of Germany, to boys aboard the French government naval training ship. The fact that some of the officers and boys were entertained aboard the royal yacht, is taken by observers heavy with diplomatic saturation, as an attempt on the part of the Kaiser to undermine Russian influence, and added importance to the incident is given by President Loubet in sending a letter of acknowledgment to Emperor William, in which the latter is given assurances of the most distinguished consideration. The whole matter may perhaps be taken as a straw indicating a desire on the part of both countries to bury their differences, and let bygones be bygones.

— x —

ALTHOUGH PERFECTION IN AUTOMOBILE construction has probably not been attained, it is sufficiently advanced to render horseless vehicles thoroughly practical and useful. A test harder than ever before given, and which will amply demonstrate the durability of the machines under most severe conditions, is now being made in a trip from New York to San Francisco. The journey began last week, and the distance by road will not be far short of 4,000 miles. In France, where the construction and use of automobiles is further advanced than in this country, the greatest distance recorded in a single run is one thousand kilometers, or six hundred and twenty-one miles, and over roadways equivalent to American park boulevards. The machine will be put to its mettle when mountainous country is reached.

— x —

WAR AGAINST POLYGAMY HAS broken out anew in Utah. This time the charge has been brought against Angus M. Cannon, president of the Mormon Church, and it is thought evidence sufficient to procure conviction can be produced. The difficulty in Utah is to get positive evidence of the practice of polygamy, and as the State courts are more or less under the domination of the Mormon Church, convictions are hard to obtain. In the present instance, the birth of a son to a polygamous wife of President

Cannon; and the filing of a certificate of birth, are the main points of the prosecution. Cannon has before served a term in the penitentiary, his conviction being secured under the Edmunds' Law. The election of Brigham H. Roberts to a seat in Congress has brought about a renewal of the agitation. Although there is a law in Utah forbidding polygamy, there is evident reason to believe it is not universally regarded.

— x —

IT IS PROBABLE THAT IN NO ONE year other than the present have colleges been so prolific in conferring degrees. The reason is likely owing to past and present military and naval activity. Different degrees of bravery or distinction have been recognized by different degrees honorary. If there be a military or naval officer who cannot add an abbreviation to his name, it is pretty safe to assume his career has not afforded him an opportunity to earn recognition. It is stated that President McKinley can, with perfect propriety, write LL.D. in the rear of his name thirteen times.

— x —

THE REPORTED ARRIVAL AT SEATTLE, last week, of a steamer having a ton of gold dust aboard, coupled with glowing accounts from the gold region, indicate that the richness of the Klondike exists elsewhere than in the imagination of enthusiastic prospectors. The most optimistic account is that there are twenty millions in dust awaiting shipment. It is, in the main, echoes of success that come from the country. Occasional reports of disaster and starvation incurred in the search for gold, are heard, but not much publicity is given those who return without riches but glad to have passed through perils and escaped alive. It is stories of rich strikes that furnish the best material for newspaper correspondents. Apparently authentic statements are in effect that nearly all promising claims are located, and while, for years, the Klondike will be a great gold producer, it will require abundant capital to secure wealth in any considerable amount.

— x —

THROUGH THE OPENING OF THE seaport of Ekaterininsk, on the coast of Lapland, Russia obtains for the first time a seaport on the Atlantic Ocean, which is open all the year round, and is of great strategic importance. The work of preparation and construction of powerful fortifications has been accomplished quietly, newspapers having been forbidden to make any mention whatsoever. Heretofore Russia has maintained a fleet on the Baltic sea which was practically useless half the year, and which, in the event of hostilities with a maritime power, could be easily shut in. The construction of the new port has entailed the building of 600 miles of railroad, forming a connecting link with lines to St. Petersburg. The defences of Ekaterininsk are said to be as effective as those of Kronstadt, the most powerful naval stronghold in the world.

The News of the Church

Consecration of the Rev. Mr. Funsten

On Thursday, July 13th, the Rev. James Bowen Funsten was consecrated to the bishopric in Trinity church, Portsmouth, Va., of which he was the rector. Promptly at 11 o'clock, the bishops and priests, the latter numbering about 30, and the Bishop-elect marched from the parish house in their vestments, and entered the church through the lower door. Bishop Whittle, the presiding Bishop, was followed by Bishops Peterkin, of West Virginia; Waitaker, of Pennsylvania; Randolph, of Southern Virginia; Gibson, of Virginia; Paret, of Maryland, and Penick.

The service opened with the processional hymn, "O Zion, haste, thy mission high fulfilling." Morning Prayer was read by the Rev. Robert Gatewood, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Angus Crawford, D. D., Robert Jett, Carl E. Grammer, D. D., and Z. S. Farland. Bishop Paret, of Maryland, preached a strong sermon, from the second chapter of the first Epistle to the Thessalonians. At the conclusion, the elected Bishop, vested with his rochet, was presented by Bishops Peterkin, of West Virginia, and Whitaker, of Pennsylvania, to the presiding Bishop, Whittle. The testimonials of the candidate for consecration, together with the commission issued for that service by Bishop Clarke, were read, and the candidate gave the required promise of conformity to the doctrine, discipline, and worship of the Church. Then followed the litany and prayers, after which the questions by the presiding Bishop. The Bishop-elect was then vested in the rest of the episcopal habit, and kneeling, the Veni Creator Spiritus was said over him, followed by the imposition of hands by presiding Bishop Whittle, and the co-consecrators, Bishops Randolph, Paret, Talbot, Cheshire, Penick, and Gibson. After the presentation of the Holy Bible, Holy Communion was celebrated. While luncheon was being served in the parish house, Bishop Funsten was warmly congratulated by those present.

Bishop Funsten preached his farewell sermon at Trinity church, Portsmouth, Sunday, July 16th. He was to leave for his missionary jurisdiction, Boise, this week, so as to be in the field by August 1st. His family will leave Virginia for the West in October.

The Church Abroad

Dr. Maurice Fitzgerald Day, who has been Bishop of Cashel and Waterford for 28 years, has just resigned his bishopric. The Bishop, who has entered on his 84th year, was the first prelate raised to the episcopate after the disestablishment of the Irish Church. He has been for more than half a century one of the first pulpit orators in Ireland.

Death of Bishop Tozer

The death is announced of the Rt. Rev. Dr. W. G. Tozer, formerly Bishop successively of Zanzibar, Jamaica, and Honduras. The deceased prelate, who has survived his two successors in Central Africa, Bishops Steere and Smythies, succeeded in 1863 the martyred Bishop Mackenzie. His first act was to transfer the headquarters of the bishopric to Zanzibar, where he began the movement which will, ere long, we trust, end in the complete abolition of slavery. The cathedral church, standing in the old slave market of Zanzibar, is a fitting symbol of this great work. In 1873, suffering from the effects of cholera and a hurricane, Bishop Tozer was fain to abandon his mission, and since then has worked as Bishop of Jamaica and Honduras, and has done parish duty in England, but always under disabilities due to the African climate.

Consecration of Bishops

On the Feast of St. Peter, three bishops for the work of the Church in distant parts, were consecrated in St. Paul's cathedral. They were: The Rev. Henry Whitehead, as Bishop of Madras; the Rev. George Lanchester King, as Bishop of Madagascar; and the Rev. William George Peel, as Bishop of Mombasa. The Archbishop of Canterbury officiated. An unusually large number of bishops took part in the solemn rite of laying on of hands, including the Bishops of Durham, Winchester, Lincoln, Wakefield, Salisbury, Rochester, and Stepney, the Archbishop of the West Indies, the Bishop of Sierra Leone, and Bishops Johnson (late of Calcutta), Royston, Milne, Hornby, and Kestall-Cornish.

Commencements

St. Mary's Hall, Faribault, Minn.

The Commencement, June 13th, was preceded by a delightful musical on Monday evening. The choral chapel service on Tuesday was led by Bishop Gilbert. Bishop Whipple presided, and gave the medals and diplomas after his address. After the principal's reception, the alumnae met, with the Bishops as honored guests.

St. Katharine's Hall, Davenport, Iowa

The 15th annual Commencement took place June 13th. On the Sunday previous, Bishop Morrison preached the baccalaureate sermon at the cathedral, a large congregation being present. On Tuesday the graduation exercises were held in the assembly room of the school building. A very fine programme of vocal and instrumental music was given by the pupils of the school. Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, made a very striking address on "The modern social conscience." She spoke of the great thirst of the day for knowledge of the people; of realism in art and literature. She declared that all labor can be humanized and moralized, and that men and women of to-day are answering for themselves the question, "Shall we live merely as good citizens, or shall we live the broader life that uplifts our fellow-men?" "The test, not of our morality, but of our moral enterprise, will come in the treatment we give the poor, the poorest among us; those whose lives are hard and ungracious and unlovely, and without hope or anything of the good things of earth; those who are overworked and stunted in development, and dwarfed in mental and moral qualities, and without the advantages to be what they might be if they were cared for. The question with most of us to-day, in some form or other, is, 'What shall we do regarding these people? Shall we live lives that please us, or shall we refuse to be pent within such narrow limits, and live the larger and broader life that comes from paying heed to our social conscience?'" Six graduates received diplomas. St. Katharine's has enjoyed a year of great prosperity, and the outlook for the coming year is most encouraging. Miss Rice who has for so many years been principal of the school, and under whose able administration it has attained so high a reputation throughout the West, retires from the principalship, to the great regret of the trustees and of all who are interested in the school. She will be succeeded by Miss Mary Francis Buffington, a graduate of Vassar, and a woman who has had varied and successful experience in school work. Miss Buffington has been at the school and working with Miss Rice since January, and has already won the confidence and affection of the girls, and indeed of all who are interested in the prosperity of St. Katharine's.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

The Rev. Charles B. Ragbir is in this country, bearing credentials from Archdeacon Trotter, of Trinidad, B. W. I., and hoping to arouse interest in the work of the Church in that diocese among the Indian immigrants who come from Calcutta. He will be glad to speak on the subject in Chicago during the first two weeks in October.

The mission of All Angels, Berwyn, no less than the community itself, both of which he helped to build up, suffers loss in the sudden death last Sunday morning, of Mr. Perkins, for many years a resident there, and a native of Plymouth, Devon, England.

On Sunday, the 9th, there was blessed a solid silver Communion set, costing $100, and subscribed for by all the communicants, to take the place of the vessels stolen a couple of months ago from the church of the Redeemer, Maywood.

The church of the Atonement, Edgewater, is soon to have a rectory, a valuable lot near the church having been secured. The vestry have recently added $300 to the salary of the Rev. J. M. D. Davidson.

Holy Trinity Mission, Chicago

On the fifth Sunday after Trinity the Bishop made his visitation of Holy Trinity mission, confirming a class of 15 presented by the Rev. H. C. Kinney, who has labored patiently for over 15 years in this Stock Yards district, with the visible result of gathering a large congregation of young people. The adults, most of them workers in the large packing houses, are often compelled by the hard service of the world, to give up all seven days of the week to the earning of material food for their large families. In the afternoon the Bishop was accompanied by the Rev. Dr. Brown, who is in charge of St. John's, Lockport, to that distant suburb for another Confirmation.

Visit of Bishop Morrison

Bishop Morrison, of Iowa, on Sunday morning, preached in the church of the Epiphany to a large congregation, and confirmed for the Bishop of Chicago, at the Douglas Park mission, a class of 13, presented by the Rev. F. F. Beckerman who has charge there in connection with the parish of the Good Shepherd, Lawndale. A considerable portion of Monday was passed socially by Dr. Morrison at the Church Club, with those of his old clerical friends who are still in the city. He returned on Tuesday to his diocese, in which he will spend the summer.

Consecration of Rev. A. L. Williams

The consecration of the Bishop-coadjutor of Nebraska is now fixed for St. Luke's Day, Oct. 18th. Michaelmas Day being found inconvenient. The chief consecrator will be the Bishop of Nebraska. The Bishop of Chicago will be the preacher, and Bishops Edsall and Morrison will present the Bishop-elect. Other Bishops expected to be present in the cathedral, Omaha, on the occasion, are: Atwill, of West Missouri; Barker, of Olympia; Gilbert, of Minnesota; Millsbaugh, of Kansas; Nicholson, of Milwaukee; Seymour, of Springfield, and Spalding, of Colorado, who ordained Mr. Williams.

Choir Outings

St. James' choir had a most enjoyable outing, from the 3d to the 13th, at Bang's Lake, Ill.; that of Epiphany returned last week from their ten days' camping at Paw-paw Lake, Mich.; St. Andrew's returned from the Beulah Hotel on Lake Beulah, Monday morning; the choirs of Grace church, and of St. Luke's, Evanston, are still in separate camps at Lake Delavan.

All Saints', Ravenswood

Plans have been submitted and approved for its immediate enlargement. They provide for a considerable addition to the chancel, giving space for the choir stalls, and so increasing the seating capacity of the nave for a large choir room, and for a sacristy.

Movements of the Clergy

The Rev. Dr. Clinton Locke is spending the summer at his cottage, Lockhaven, at Wequetonsing, on Little Traverse Bay, having left the city early in June. Dr. Gold, of the Seminary, is at Bishopthorpe, Lima, Ind. Dr. A. W. Little left, a fortnight ago, for Castine, Maine, his duty at St. Mark's, Evanston, being taken up to the middle of August by the Rev. F. W. Keator. The Rev. C. E. Bowles returned a short time ago, from a fortnight in Northern Wisconsin. The Rev. E. M. Thompson spent the last of his five weeks' vacation with St. James' choir at Lake Beulah. The Rev. Dr. Rushton returned from the North on Saturday morning, took most of the Grace church services on Sunday, in the absence of the rector and his assistant, and went again on Monday to the Lake Delavan camp of the Rev. D. F. Smith's Evanston choir. The choir of St. Peter's went to Rock Lake on Monday morning, where they will be joined by the rector, who, after a week in camp, will return to complete his month on the Massachusetts Coast. The Rev. A. T. Perkins, chaplain at St. Luke's Hospital, returns this week from a visit East of nearly three weeks. The Rev. B. F. Matrau will remain till the middle of September at Newton, Mass., where he is taking light duty for the Rev. Dr. Shinn, of Grace church. The Rev. C. H. Bixby left on Tuesday morning, by rail, for a week at Traverse City, Mich., with an old parishioner of his at St. Paul's; thence he goes into camp at Glen Haven till Aug. 9th. The Rev. John A. Carr left on Wednesday, for Montreal, whence he sails by the Dominion Line on Saturday morning, for a two months' visit to his aged mother at their old home in Scotland.

Good Work Done by Rev. Harold Morse

At the church of the Mediator, Morgan Park, the Sunday school has recently quadrupled in attendance under the vigorous superintendence of the Rev. Harold Morse, whose work among the young was so thoroughly appreciated when he was assisting at Trinity church, as is evidenced in the receipt this month by him and Mrs. Morse, of two elegant pieces of furniture, with a very affectionately-worded address, from the officers and teachers of Trinity's two schools, and of another appropriate present from the members of the Young Men's Club. The address concluded with these words: "It will be our earnest prayer that you will find in your new field of labor as many true and faithful friends as you have left behind in Trinity parish, and in the Sunday schools. Heb. xi: 24-26."

New York

Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The New York local assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew met at St. Joseph's church, Queens, N. Y., July 15th, in joint session with the Long Island local assembly.

St. Thomas' Church, New York City

It is expected to have the work on the cloisters finished by autumn. The rector, the Rev. John W. Brown, D. D., who for two months past has been visiting his daughter in England, is expected home during the current week.

Memorial of Mrs. M. E. Boulton

To Calvary church, the Rev. J. Lewis Parks, D.D., rector, the Boulton family has given $5,000 as a memorial of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Boulton. The sum is to be kept intact, and the interest used, from time to time, for the expenses of the parish.

Morgan Memorial Parish House

At St. George's church, considerable additions are being made to the Morgan memorial parish house, at an expense of about $30,000, in order to provide increased facilities for the work of the parochial organizations. A new story will be built, above the present top floor, increasing the height of the already tall edifice.

A Church Bell Stolen

The bell presented to St. James' church, Fordham, several years ago, by the Ven. Archdeacon Tiffany, D.D., and valued at about $300 has been stolen. It had been removed to the churchyard for repairs, and was left there over night. The next morning it was missing. Two men have been arrested and held in $1,000 bail each for trial, on the testimony of several witnesses. The bell, which was of bronze, is understood to have been melted down and sold by the criminals for the price of old metal.

Rev. R. W. Kenyon Admitted to the Bar

The late rector of the church of the Archangel, the Rev. Ralph Wood Kenyon, has completed a course of law in the law department of the University of the City of New York, and has been admitted to the bar. He is about to open an office for law practice, but announces that he will continue to officiate as a priest, as opportunity for such duty offers.

Visit of Dean Stubbs, of England

It is announced that the Very Rev. C. W. Stubbs, D. D., dean of the cathedral of Ely, England, has accepted an arrangement to deliver a hundred lectures in America, during the coming season, beginning in the middle of October. The dean's subjects will be, "Shakespeare as a religious teacher," "James Russell Lowell," "Poetry and life," "Milton and the Puritans," "Shelley," "Charles Kingsley and Christian socialism," "Frederick Maurice," "Florence Nightingale," and a course of three illustrated lectures on Ely Cathedral.

The Tea Saloons

The Church Army is so encouraged by the results already accomplished by their "Tea Saloon No. 1," in New York, that they have undertaken a new venture, to be known as "Church Army Tea Saloon No. 2," which was opened July 10th, on Young's pier, Atlantic City, N. J., where thousands of people from this and other cities congregate during the warm season. Friends of the tea movement have fitted up the temperance bar at large expense, with handsome mahogany woodwork, and plate-glass mirrors. The tea bar in New York now has larger patronage than any of the liquor saloons around it. Expert tea makers, mixers, and bartenders, are kept busy, and large quantities of the tea in various combinations are taken away in cans for family use.

New Hospital Building

Drawings and plans for the new hospital building which, as already announced in the columns of THE LIVING CHURCH, is to be built by the munificence of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, for the Lying-in-Hospital, were submitted to the building department of the city July 11th, by the architect, Mr. Robert H. Robertson. The design provides for a magnificent brick, terra cotta, and limestone structure that is a departure in appearance from the usual style of hospital architecture. It is to be nine stories in height, and is to have a steel frame, making it thoroughly fireproof. The building will occupy the west side of 2d ave., from 17th to 18th sts., with a frontage on the avenue of 184 ft., and running back 82 ft. on 17th, and 165 ft. on 18th st. The main entrance will be on the avenue. The architect estimates the cost as exceeding $300,000, all of which Mr. Morgan is to defray. Part of the site of the new structure was formerly occupied by the mansion of the late Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State under President Grant, and in which a number of historical events of that period took place. A marble tablet bearing the street and avenue names will be taken from this older building, and placed in the new, as a memorial of the historic site.

Pennsylvania

Ozi William Whitaker, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

For the remainder of the summer the services at old St. Paul's church, Philadelphia, will be in charge of the Rev. Thomas J. Taylor, of the City Mission.

The Boys' Brigade

Of Grace church chapel, West Philadelphia, started on the 13th inst. on their annual camping-out excursion. They go this year to the shady banks of the Brandywine, to remain there about 10 days.

The Rev. G. DeW. Dowling Married

At high noon, on Tuesday, 11th inst., in Grace church, Nyack, N. Y., Miss Sarah Adele Neill was married to the Rev. Gasherie DeWitt Dowling. The Rev. Franklin Babbitt, the rector, officiated. Mr. Dowling who was recently ordained to the diaconate, will reside in Germantown, where he has a curacy.

Some Statistics of the Diocese

In addition to the statistics printed in THE LIVING CHURCH of May 13th last, the following may prove of interest: Whole number of clergy, 275; lay-readers licensed, 60; Baptisms (including 581 adults), 4,019; confirmed, 2,580; communicants, present number, 48,289; marriages, 990; burials, 2,819; Sunday schools and Bible classes—teachers, 3,224, scholars, 49,649; other school teachers, 98, scholars, 1,397

A Memorial Service

In the village of Crescentville, a suburb of Philadelphia, on Saturday afternoon, 8th inst., a handsome marble monument was dedicated to the memory of the private soldiers of that locality who served during the Civil War. The first address was made by the Rev. Linus P. Bissell, rector of Trinity church, Oxford. On Sunday afternoon, 9th inst., in Trinity chapel, Crescentville, a memorial service was held, attended by a delegation of Grand Army men, and an address was made by Major Reed. The Rev. Mr. Powell conducted the regular evening service (the chapel being in the parish of Trinity, Oxford), and preached an appropriate sermon.

Death of the Rev. E. G. Nock

The Rev. Edwin Gaines Nock, assistant minister of old Christ church, Philadelphia, entered into life eternal on the 12th inst., at his residence in Glassboro, N. J., after a brief illness of appendicitis. He was born about 41 years ago, and was a graduate of the General Theological Seminary in New York city. In 1873, he was ordered deacon by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Odenheimer, Bishop of New Jersey, and a year later was advanced to the priesthood, having served his diaconate at St. Thomas' church, Glassboro, N. J.; subsequently, and until 1884, he was its rector. From that date he was rector of Christ church, Adrian, Mich., for four years, when he returned to the East, and accepted an appointment as rector's assistant at old Christ church, Philadelphia, continuing in that position until the spring of 1896. A few months ago he resumed active work once more, and was connected with that parish at the time of his decease.

Long Island

Abram N. Littlejohn, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The church of the Incarnation, Brooklyn, the Rev. J. G. Bacchus, rector, will be closed during August, for repairs and decorations on the church and chapel.

Christ church, Bedford avenue, the Rev. Jas. H. Darlington, rector, will be open during the entire summer. The services are conducted by the assistant, the Rev. C. E. Cragg, but the rector frequently returns from the country to officiate on Sunday mornings.

The Queens and Nassau Clericus met recently at Rockville Centre, as the guests of the Rev. D. E. Nies, when the Rev. Wharton McMullin read a paper, entitled "Sermons versus calling."

Church of the Good Shepherd, Brooklyn

By the annual report, it is shown that there has been raised for all purposes in the parish during the year, the sum of $15,568.73, the total balance on hand in the treasuries of all departments of the church being $1,112.49. This exceeds any report in its history by more than $2,000. The church will remain open during the entire summer, but there will be morning service only, at which different clergymen will officiate during the absence of the rector, the Rev. Andrew Underhill.

Semi-Centennial of Rev. Dr. Samuel Cox

The Very Rev. Samuel Cox, D. D., dean of the cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, celebrated on Wednesday, July 5th, the semi-centennial of his admission to Holy Orders. He was ordained July 5th, 1849, in St. James' church, Philadelphia. During his ministry of 50 years, Dr. Cox has spent about one year in travel, and for three months was incapacitated by illness. For the remainder of the period he has been actively engaged in the work of the ministry. He began his ministry as rector of Christ church, Manhasset, and has been rector successively of the church of the Ascension, Philadelphia; St. Paul's church, Cincinnati, Ohio; Grace church, Bordentown, N. J., and lastly, at St. James' church, Newtown, where he remained 20 years. After six months spent in foreign travel, he was appointed archdeacon of Queens Co., and soon after, the dean of the cathedral. Dr. Cox's vacation of six weeks this summer will be spent with Mrs. Cox in an excursion to Alaska and the Yellowstone Park.

Washington

Henry Yates Satterlee, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

All Sunday, and many week-day, services are continued during the summer in the Washington churches. At the church of the Epiphany, the regular morning and afternoon Sunday schools are closed, but a summer Sunday school is held at 10 o'clock, which the members of both remaining in the city are urged to attend.

Christ Church, Georgetown

The choir has been enjoying a ten days' excursion to Middleburg, Va.; 20 boys and a number of ladies and gentlemen, formed the party. On Sunday, in the little church at Alden, the choir rendered a choral service, which attracted a larger congregation than the building could hold. A concert was given during the week for the benefit of the church at Middleburg. St. John's choir is also absent on its annual visit to Piney Point.

Guild of St. Barnabas

The new home was informally opened on the evening of July 13th. The chaplain, the Rev. Alfred Harding, conducted a short service, and spoke a few words of congratulation on the auspicious beginning of this new work. The house secured is a very suitable and comfortable one for the purpose, and the rent for six months has been pledged by a friend.

Ohio

Wm. Andrew Leonard, D.D., Bishop

St. Andrew's Brotherhood

The local assembly had its June meeting in the guild room of St. Paul's church, Toledo, J. E. Heeth presiding. The rector, the Rev. W. C. Hopkins, conducted the devotions. The Sons of St. Paul, a juvenile society, attended, and the singing was hearty. The president talked on the junior branch of the Brotherhood, and was followed in the discussion by the Rev. Messrs. Alsop, Leflingwell and R. Heber Hoskin, and Messrs. Corvel and Thompson, of Grace church. After the business meeting there was music from the choir, and refreshments served by the St. Paul's Willing Workers, and then a general social.

Pittsburgh

Cortlandt Whitehead, D.D., Bishop

During the months of April, May, and June, the chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew have been attending in turn the Monday evening services at the Rescue mission on Third ave., in charge of the Church Army. Among those participating were Ascension, Calvary, Good Shepherd, St. John's, and Trinity, of Pittsburgh; Christ, Emmanuel, and All Saints, Allegheny; Nativity, Crafton; Incarnation, Knoxville, and Epiphany, Bellevue. In nearly every case the rector of the church named accompanied the Brotherhood men, and made the principal address of the evening.

Diocesan Statistics

The Journal of the 34th annual convention has been issued. We glean the following from the report of the Committee on the State of the Church: Clergy in diocese, 80; parishes in diocese, 71; mission stations, 57; communicants 14,774; Confirmations, 952; Baptisms, 1,185; marriages, 269; burials, 606; Sunday school teachers, 840, pupils, 8,392; parochial contributions, $274,152.83, diocesan, $18,609.34, extra-diocesan, $26,802.74, total, $319,564.95; value of Church property, $2,747,015.83.

Woman's Auxilliary

The number of boxes sent out during the year was 45, estimated value, $3,505.93; money contributed, $5,952.78; total, $9,458.71. In addition to these amounts was the contribution to the United Offering of October, 1898, aggregating $1,414.28, so that the women's contributions through the Auxilliary were almost $11,000.

Massachusetts

William Lawrence, D.D., Bishop

The Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, of Williamstown, has recovered his health, and has resumed the charge of his parish. The missions at Blackington and Braytonville have been placed in charge of an assistant minister.

Following an early custom of the church, two priests from St. John the Evangelist, Boston, together with the vested choir and trumpeters, marched through the streets at the West End in solemn procession a few Sundays ago. When a pause was made, the crowd was addressed by Fr. Converse, with an invitation to the vesper service. This will be often repeated during the summer, and has made a deep impression in the neighborhood.

All Saints' Church, Chelmsford

A memorial organ has recently been given by Mr. F. F. Ayer, of New York. It is by James Cole, of Boston, and has two manuals and 16 stops.

Durrell Memorial Pulpit

In St. Thomas' church, Somerville, the new pulpit, which is part of the memorial to the late Rev. George W. Durrell, for many years the rector of the church, has been placed in position. It is of black walnut, with six panels, all hand carved, and is about eight feet high. The lumber was donated by George E. Baxter, and Robert Lawrence, for the past 20 years a parishioner, made the pulpit without cost and also gave a liberal amount of money towards the memorial fund. It is proposed to have in the centre panel an oval cross and crown, and underneath this is to be a silver plate bearing the inscription, "In memory of George Wells Durrell."

Death of the Rev. Dr. I. S. Hartley

The Rev. Dr. Isaac S. Hartley, rector of St. James' church, Great Barrington, died July 3d. He was born in New York city, Sept. 26, 1830, and was educated in the University of New York city and Andover Theological Seminary. After serving many years as a Presbyterian minister, he was ordained to the ministry of the Church in 1859, and in February, 1891, became rector of St. James'.

Anniversary at All Saints', Worcester

All Saints' church made much of the 21st anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Society, June 13th. Upon the same day met in the church the archdeaconry of Worcester. Morning Prayer was said by the rector at 9, followed by a celebration of the Holy Communion at 10:30, when Bishop Lawrence preached. Luncheon was served at the residence of the Hon. Edward L. Davis. The regular business session of the archdeaconry was held in the parish library. The chief topic of interest was the work among the Swedes. At 3 p. m., the anniversary service was held, when addresses were made by the Bishop of the diocese and the Rev. Drs. Huntington and Vinton. The afternoon tea was served afterwards in the Sunday school room, by the Woman's Missionary Society. The festival service took place in the evening, when the choirs of St. Matthew's, St. John's, and St. Mark's united with All Saints'. It was fully choral, and was conducted by the Rev. H. S. Longley. The Rev. Dr. Huntington preached the sermon. At the conclusion of the service, many of the old parishioners remained to greet their former rector, Dr. Huntington, in the chapel. It was a very happy occasion, and brought together a large number of Church people.

Virginia

Francis M. Whittle, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
Robert A. Gibson, D.D., Bishop-Coadjutor

The vestry have sold old St. James' church, Leesburg, which is one of the old Virginia brick edifices, to be torn down, the furniture, pews, etc., not being included in the sale.

Bishop Penick has resigned the rectorship of St. Mark's church, Richmond, and accepted a call to the charge of Christ church, Fairmount, West Va., the resignation to take effect Aug. 15th. An effort was made on the part of the vestry to induce the Bishop to remain, but he felt there was a greater field for work at Fairmount than in Richmond. The Church there has about 100 communicants but there are 4,000 workmen employed about the oil wells, and the city is rapidly growing.

P. E. Education Society

The trustees held their 77th annual meeting at the Theological Seminary, Alexandria, on June 20th, Bishop Whittle presiding. The secretary, reports 40 young men aided during the year, 30 at the seminary, and ten at college; $7,800 has been expended, and $7,355.06 contributed by churches and individuals. During the summer months the contributions are usually small, and as the society has run short this year to the extent of $1,055, there is naturally an uneasiness as to the fall payments.

Albany

William Crosswell Doane, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Joint Commission on Marginal Readings of the Scripture, of the General Convention, began its sessions in the parish house of Bethesda church, Saratoga Springs, July 5th, and has just brought them to a close. There were in attendance, Bishops Dudley, of Kentucky; Gailor, of Tennessee; Davies, of Michigan; Niles, of New Hampshire, and Hall, of Vermont; the Ven. Archdeacons Carey, of Saratoga, and Binney, of Middletown, Conn.; the Rev. Prof. C. W. E. Body, D.D., D.C.L., of the General Theological Seminary, New York, and the Rev. Messrs. Geo. H. Sterling, of South Bethlehem, Pa., and Thomas J. Packard, of Rockville, Md.

Southern Ohio

Thomas A. Jaggard, D.D., Bishop
Boyd Vincent, D.D., Bishop Coadjutor

A Memorial Window for Mrs. Trimble

A magnificent chancel window has been placed in St. Mary's church, Hillsboro, by Mr. Ebenezer Buckingham, of Chicago, a brother of the late Mrs. Wm. H. Trimble, and her two nephews, the Rev. George B. Beecher and Mr. E. B. Converse, "in memory of Martha Buckingham Trimble and her sons, William, Clarence, Allen, and Ebenezer." The subject is the Ascension. The window is rich in color, and the drawing fine and realistic. A border of rare flowers surrounds the window, and a wreath of laurel with the names of Mrs. Trimble and her sons. At the top of the border is I. H. S., and a jeweled crown. The Saviour is looking down in holy benediction as He ascends from the clouds.

New Church for St. Paul's, Greenville

A debt of $434.33 which has been owing on the rectory, has been paid, and steps are now being taken looking towards the building of a new church, to cost not less than $5,000. The present church building is located near the railroad tracks, and is also greatly in need of repairs. The amount of $3,000 in money and subscriptions has been secured toward the erection of the new church.

Church of Our Saviour, Mechanicsburg

A lot costing $500 has been purchased, and a rectory costing $1,500 will soon be erected thereon. Mrs. Sarah Guy has given a handsome brass ewer for the font, in memory of her sister, Mrs. Percy Moore. Miss Alice Guy has presented a beautiful brass altar book rest, in memory also of Mrs. Moore.

St. Paul's Church, Columbus

The Men's Club has obtained subscriptions to the amount of $1,500, which will be used at once in repairing the church building, enlarging the guild room, and adding an infant class-room and a kitchen.

New Jersey

John Scarborough, D.D., Bishop

The first joint service of the recently united parishes of the church of the Redeemer and the church of the Holy Cross, Plainfield, was held in the latter edifice, Sunday, July 2nd, under the rectorship of the Rev. W. Montgomery Downey, who officiated for a crowded congregation.

Oklahoma and Indian Territory

Francis Key Brooke, D.D., Missionary Bishop
Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indian Mission

On Trinity Sunday, the choir of Indian children at the Whirlwind Station, the Rev. D. A. Sanford, priest in-charge, appeared for the first time in vestments. The Indian Hope Association, of Philadelphia, had provided cassocks and cottas for the boys, and white capes with black skirts for the girls. The processional was "Onward, Christian Soldiers," followed by "Nearer My God to Thee" in Cheyenne. Holy Communion was celebrated, five full-blood Cheyennes, beside the Indian deacon, receiving the Blessed Sacrament. In the evening, the Bonum Est was sung in Cheyenne, in addition to hymns in both languages. The ten Indian children (six boys and four girls) sang well and looked well in their new vestments, much to the gratification of their parents and other Indian people. It may be remembered that the parents and grandparents of these same children were, a generation ago, among those wild, savage tribes that were such a terror to white settlers. The contrast is marked between the scenes of former days and what may be seen now—a congregation of Indian people met for the worship of God, and for instruction in His Word, the Indian children clad in seemly vestments of the Church as they sing praise to Almighty God.

Indiana

A majority of the Standing Committees have given canonical consent to the consecration of the Rev. Joseph M. Francis, the Bishop elect. The 30th consent was received just one month (30 days) after the day in which the testimonials were sent out. Throughout the diocese there is great and cordial satisfaction with the election of Mr. Francis.

Southern Florida

Wm. Crane Gray, D.D., Bishop

On Sunday morning the Bishop visited St. Andrew's church, Tampa, and confirmed a class of seven, in which were a Presbyterian, Lutheran, Methodist, Baptist, and Romanist. In the evening, he visited St. James' mission (colored) and confirmed nine. The service was choral, rendered in beautiful form by a vested choir of 30 voices.

Progress in the District

The Journal has just been published, and the various reports give evidence of a very satisfactory growth. The report shows that there are 81 parishes and missions, 32 clergymen, and 5,354 baptized persons. There was a gain in communicants over last year of 163; there were 406 Baptisms; 151 Confirmations; 174 marriages, and 162 burials. The value of the Church property is $202,145, with an indebtedness of $4,376, and the total contributions were $20,368 36. The daily journal kept by the Bishop shows the vast amount of travel and work which devolves upon a missionary bishop. Every mission and parish is visited at least once each year, and some many times. The Bishop reports four new churches consecrated, and a number now being erected.

Minnesota

Henry B. Whipple, D.D., LL.D., Bishop
M. N. Gilbert, D.D., LL.D., Bishop-coadjutor
The Sheltering Arms, Minneapolis

Has received a donation of $250 from Mr. Thomas Irvine, of St. Paul, and $500 from Mrs. E. C. Whitney, of Canada. Funds are greatly needed to put the building in proper repair.

Daughters of the King

The diocesan assembly held their meeting in Christ church, Red Wing. The Rev. H. A. Chouinard delivered the address. Mrs. Krouse, of Minneapolis, was elected president and delegate to the national convention at Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Weitzel, of Minneapolis, was elected secretary.

Open Air Church Services

The Rev. W. C. Pope, rector of the Good Shepherd, St. Paul, has begun a series of open air services and preaching on one of the leading thoroughfares every Monday evening during the summer months, on similar lines to those he conducted last year.

Connecticut

Chauncey B. Brewster, D.D., Bishop

Trinity College, Hartford

Prof. Stanley Simonds, of Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., has been elected to succeed the Rev. Prof. Hart, D. D., D. C. L., at Trinity College. Prof. Simonds is a graduate of Harvard University, and took the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Johns Hopkins University. He subsequently studied at Christ church college, Oxford, and the University of Bonn. He will take up his new duties in September.

Spokane

Lemuel Henry Wells, D.D., Missionary Bishop

The Seventh Annual Convocation

Held in All Saints' cathedral, Spokane, June 20-21st. After divine service, and his annual address, the Bishop called the convocation to order. In the absence of the Rev. J. Neilson Barry, the Rev. H. Norwood Bowne was appointed secretary. Reports from the various parishes and missions were very encouraging. It proved to be the most interesting convocation since the organization of the jurisdiction. The meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was especially interesting. The Rev. J. Neilson Barry was re-elected secretary and registrar.

Nebraska

George Worthington, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop

The press dispatches concerning the "Cash K Fund" of Omaha have brought to Dean Campbell Fair, the almoner, such numerous applications from all over the country that he wishes it understood that the "Cash K" benevolence is limited to Omaha. The anonymous donation sent to Dean Fair last year was $2,000; this year the amount is very considerably larger.

Results of the Bishop's Episcopate

The Rev. A. L. Williams having accepted his election as Bishop-coadjutor, the active working of this diocese will, in the near future, pass into his hands. The fourteen years of Bishop Worthington's episcopate show increased facilities for aggressive work as the result of his wisdom and energy in Church extension. No less than 41 churches have been built within the bounds of the present diocese. Of the 12 churches now in Omaha, only two existed when his episcopate began. In addition to these are three new buildings which will be completed within a few months. Between the time of his consecration and the separation of the jurisdiction of the Platte from the present diocese, there were seven churches built within that territory, making a total of 51 churches erected since his consecration; 11 of these are large stone or brick churches, and, with the exception of four parish churches, they were all, with hardly an exception, ready for consecration at the time of their completion—a fact due to Bishop Worthington's plan of offering a certain amount towards each building, with the stipulation that his donation would only be paid when it should extinguish all debt upon building and ground. Of these 51 churches, four are no longer in existence, one having been destroyed by a cyclone, and, as in the case of a second, replaced by a larger edifice; and two, built in unfavorable localities, removed elsewhere; but these are fully compensated for by the fact that four old churches have been practically rebuilt and enlarged. During the same period, 16 rectories and parish houses, and two guild halls, have been built, and two old churches fitted up as guild halls. More favorable sites than it was possible to secure upon first taking possession of the field have been obtained, and the churches moved accordingly. These additions to the plant of the diocese in 14 years and a half, represent a value of from $450,000 to $500,000, while the additions to Brownell Hall increase this amount by nearly $150,000. This material growth has been met with a corresponding growth in spiritual matters, as evidenced by the large number of Baptisms and Confirmations. The spiritual life of the diocese was never better than at the present time.

Southern Virginia

Alfred M. Randolph, D.D., LL.D., Bishop

The Standing Committee has given consent to the consecration of the Rev. Arthur L. Williams as coadjutor of the diocese of Nebraska.

Newark

Thomas Alfred Starkey, D.D., Bishop

Death of the Rev. J. A. Nock

The Rev. Joseph Albert Nock died in Jersey City, July 9th. He was born in Ramapo, N. Y., in 1839; graduated from St. Stephen's College, Annandale, and received the diaconate in 1865, and the priesthood soon after. For several years previous to 1894, he was rector of St. Matthew's church, Jersey City, retiring from all active duty at that time, on account of illhealth. He leaves a widow and one son, the Rev. Albert Jay Nock, rector of St. James' memorial church, Titusville, Pa. The funeral services were held July 10th, and were conducted by the Rev. Wm. P. Brush. A brother of the deceased priest, the Rev. E. Gaines Nock, curate of Christ church, Philadelphia, died July 12th, at Glassboro, N. J.

North Carolina

Joseph Blount Cheshire, Jr., D.D., Bishop

St. Philip's Church, Durham

Has just observed the first anniversary of the rectorship of the Rev. Sidney S. Bost. He expresses his gratification at the progress of the Church work, and the harmony in which it is carried on. During the year there has been a net gain of nine per cent. in the communicant list, which numbers 200. This church was organized as a mission in 1881, with 12 members.

Olympia

Wm. Morris Barker, D.D., Bishop

10th Anniversary of the Rev. B. O. Baker

June 18th, the Rev. Brookes O. Baker, of St. Paul's church, Port Townsend, during the course of the service referred appropriately to the fact that the day marked the beginning of his 10th year as rector of the church. The number of communicants has increased more than four times, 95 persons having been confirmed, and 275 baptized. There have been 75 marriages, 113 burials, and the Holy Communion has been celebrated nearly 1,100 times.

North Dakota

Samuel C. Edsall, D.D., Bishop

St. Paul's Church, Grand Forks

Mr. James F. Elton and Mr. Albert A. Addison, sons of esteemed parishioners, both active workers in the parish, and young men of great promise, have applied to Bishop Edsall to become postulants for Holy Orders.

Editorials and Contributions

THE old maxim that "The Bible, and the Bible only, is the religion of Protestants," is sharing the fate of many another half-truth. Half-truths are the most perishable of errors. Their initial velocity is astounding, they flash, flame, and soar; but their zenith is soon reached, and with waning coruscations they descend to darkness and oblivion. The very minds which rejoiced in their pristine brilliance, now despise their darkening trail. We have before us a letter from one who has a high position in Eastern literary circles but has never bowed the knee to the Baal of the ultra-criticism, nor been eager to deliver the old Faith over into the cruel custody of "broad" invertebrates. He writes: "In this part of the country the Bible is no longer authority with any body of Christians. Men make their own creeds, or rejoice in not having any." Such is the honest opinion of one who, as justly as any man in America, is entitled to respect for his knowledge of drifts and tendencies.

WE do not think we exaggerate the situation when we insist that the once popular half-truth of Protestantism has done quite as much to discredit the Bible as the conceits and vagaries of self-sufficient criticism. It was once personally dangerous for a man to call in question the first, as it is now getting to be so to call in question the second. Now none so poor as do reverence to the pitiful half-truth of the Bible as the sole basis of religion, and in the reaction from it, multitudes are throwing their Bibles away. Perhaps it may inspire us with some comfort to hope that a like fate may ere long await the destructive criticism which is now making kindling wood of the faith of many. Half-truths and whole errors are alike mortal, and in due time will writhe in pain and die amid their worshippers. But God have mercy on the men who have destroyed the faith of others, and led so many of the youth of the Church to look askance at the truths which have been the source of all the blessings they enjoy! It is time for believers to arouse themselves, forget small differences, and band together to fight these insurgent Aguinaldos of Rationalism.

THE resignation of the pastor of Calvary Presbyterian church, Harlem, and the decision of the trustees to sell the property and dissolve the organization, are commented on in Presbyterian circles in New York as events of no ordinary significance. They are regarded as practical indications of the decline of Presbyterianism in the great metropolis, and this decline is traced to the influx of liberalism. Dr. Chambers says, that if ministers may no longer preach an inspired Bible, their authority is gone. There is no longer any need of ministers. They are lecturers and interesting speakers, nothing more. "Men," he says, "have come to think and speak disrespectfully of the Bible. They don't see the need of going to church as they used to." Dr. Atterbury, of the Park Avenue church, who is set down as belonging to the radical wing, nevertheless bewails the present condition of things. "Presbyterianism in New York," he says, "is passing through sad experiences." It is not to triumph over our fellow-Christians that we refer to these things, but for the warning that is in them. It is supposed that to give up "theology," and become liberal, that is, loose and indefinite in matters of belief, will fill churches and give the old denominations a new lease of life. The case of Presbyterianism in New York does not bear this out. It would be well for us to profit by the experiences of our neighbors.

A SPEECH of Lord Rosebery's, at the opening of a parish room at Epsom, draws out some sarcastic and, we must say, well-deserved comments from The Church Times. His lordship took occasion to make some remarks of the usual description on the present condition of things in the religious world. It was better, he said, to engage in practical works of brotherly love than to contend for points of ceremonial. The inference, of course, was that the ritualists neglect such works. He then proceeded to enlarge on the utility of a parish shelter at Epsom, "where the races bring inevitably in their train vagabonds who represent the failure and hopelessness of destitution." The significance of this is seen when we remember that Lord Rosebery himself is one of the chief promoters of these races which so "inevitably" tend to increase the misery and degradation of his fellow creatures. The position is like that of the saloon-keeper commiserating the wretchedness of his victims. As The Church Times remarks, there is surely something Pecksniffian in a principal promoter of "the noble sport" lecturing on St. Paul and the Church's duty.

MR. Richard Bagot, an English Roman Catholic, has recently published an article in which he declares his conviction that England will never become Roman Catholic. He gives four reasons for this: an invincible repugnance to compulsory confession; traditional hostility to the papal domination; the miserable condition of Ireland, and the robust Protestantism of the bulk of the nation. No doubt other reasons might be added, but they will fall easily under one of these four heads. Not only does Mr. Bagot not believe that England will ever become Romanized, but he combats Cardinal Vaughan's sanguine boast that Rome is making rapid headway. He does not believe she is making any headway at all. "Far from progressing, Roman Catholicism in England," he avers, "has for several years been stationary, if not losing ground." It is certain that for a long time no notable conversions to Romanism have taken place. The only names of men generally known are those of Rivington and Maturin. Of eminent laymen, there are almost none. The fact is that the Vatican decrees have formed almost an insurmountable barrier. Mr. Bagot thinks it a mistake to imagine that the Ritualists give the Roman Communion any vantage ground. In fact, it was among the old Tractarians, before Ritualism was thought of, that the English Church suffered important losses. We have seen, now and then, in Roman newspapers, lists of names of converts in which dates are not given, but those who are familiar with the matter, observe at once that the majority go back forty or fifty years.

Lessons in Religious Liberty

RECENT reports from England indicate that the conqueror of the Soudan, Lord Kitchener, has been so good as to withdraw his prohibition against missionaries of the Church of England coming into the region in which he is now supreme. The attitude of these English governors towards Christianity affords matter of curious study. The Christian religion, as all history shows, is the most powerful promoter of an enlightened civilization the world has ever seen. It might be supposed that from motives of the highest policy, if nothing else, such a governor would do all in his power to encourage the coming of Christian missionaries at the earliest possible moment. A fair consideration of the history of English rule in India and the policy of hampering the work of the clergy and obstructing the progress of Christianity, might suffice to teach better lessons. When we take into account the atrocious character of the Mohammedan rule in the Soudan, the argument in favor of introducing more enlightened influences is immeasurably strengthened. But, on the contrary, the Sirdar, while excluding the religion of his own people, has been collecting Christian money for the endowment of what will be, to all intents and purposes, a Mohammedan college at Khartoum. The "sacred law" of the Koran—a law which sanctions that very slave trade, the iniquities of which formed one of the strongest reasons for the conquest—has been deliberately re-established. These measures, so well calculated to inspire the Arabs with the idea that their religion is the one most respected by their conquerors, having been carried through, the Sirdar withdraws his prohibition, and virtually says to the Christian missionaries that they are at liberty to try what they can do as teachers of a religion distinctly opposed to that which the English government has seen fit to make the religion of the State. Christianity is thus stripped of whatever prestige might have been given to it if it had appeared to the people from the beginning as the religion to which their conquerors were devoted, and which they would foster to the utmost of their ability. This may be none the worse for Christianity, but that it augurs well for the English government of the province is open to grave doubt. That the English should do nothing to promote that religion to which they profess to be devotedly attached, is calculated not simply to increase the contempt of the Moslems for Christianity, but to arouse the suspicion that their rulers are conscious of a certain weakness. This is inevitable in such cases in dealing with inferior races or barbarians. One can only look on with wonder to see an old mistake again repeated.

BUT this is not the whole of the story. It is a mistake to suppose that the Soudan has, through all these centuries, ever been exclusively Moslem. A well-informed writer in The Contemporary Review throws light on this subject. He gives an interesting history of the region extending from the confines of Egypt on the south to Abyssinia, from the introduction of Christianity in the fourth century to the present time. The story derives additional force from the fact that, favorable as it is to the influence of Christian rule, it is compiled almost entirely from Moslem writers. Two prosperous Christian kingdoms flourished there for many centuries. The Church acknowledged the primacy of the Patriarch of Alexandria, and its bishops were consecrated by him. Moslem historians and travelers were lost in astonishment at the prosperity and the enlightenment of these kingdoms, and the magnanimity of their rulers. There was an age-long conflict with the Mohammedan rulers of Egypt, and from the twelfth century onward, the latter gradually encroached upon the Soudan. Little by little the country was subjugated, the churches, which numbered many hundred, were destroyed, and the Christian inhabitants put to the sword. The upper kingdom maintained its existence till the beginning of the sixteenth century. Still, though conquered, Christianity never entirely died out. In the seventeenth century, one hundred and fifty churches were still in existence. In 1886 there were seven churches in the diocese of Khartoum, but in that year the bishop was expelled, and succeeded in escaping with a band of nuns to Cairo. He was an old man, and has since died. A single priest left behind at Khartoum, maintained the rites of religion as best he could. He was obliged to disguise himself as a salt merchant and minister to the remnants of the Christian flock in secret. Then came the day of deliverance in the establishment of the English rule, but the unfortunate Christians soon found that it had no meaning for them. The Sirdar being absent in England collecting money for his Moslem college, his representative has ignored all appeals for the restoration of the sites on which their churches stood. Even repeated supplications to allow their new bishop to proceed to Khartoum have been treated with contempt. This is the latest chapter in the history of a Christian Church which endured through centuries of ruthless Mohammedan persecution. It was reserved for the Christian English to add the finishing touch. Such is the present attitude of Christian England towards the Christian religion in Upper Egypt. And all this is in the name of an enlightened liberality!

ANOTHER instance of this amazing species of liberality comes to us from India. This time it is not from a "Sirdar," or viceroy, but from a prince of the Church! "One of the first acts of the new Metropolitan of India," says The Church Times, "has been to write to the Bishops of India and Ceylon, suggesting that special services should be held in connection with the Queen's birthday, and adding the hope that other religious bodies, 'whether Christian or non-Christian,' would unite with the Church on this occasion." A Christian bishop recommending his pagan neighbors to assemble in their temples, and fulfill the accustomed rites of thanksgiving to their various gods! What idea can such a man have of the Christian religion? Imagine him as a missionary. He may argue: "Your gods are without understanding," or they are "devils and no gods"—if St. Paul is to be followed—to which they would naturally reply: "But on a certain occasion you desired us to pray to them."

IT appears that the Bishop of Colombo found himself unable to respond to the request of the Metropolitan. He and his diocesan committee registered a protest against action which was "intended to imply unity with non-Christian systems in religious worship, or prayer," and proceeded to denounce the "idolatrous rites" and "supposed deities" of the pagans, as "dishonoring to God." Everything which happens in the Empire comes back to the English Parliament, a body which, just now, is more than usually earnest in matters of religion. Thus, while it is hard to understand what Parliament has to do with the acts of bishops in conducting their work among the people of a heathen country, we cannot be surprised to hear that it was proposed to ask a formal question touching these affairs. It might easily be imagined that the "Church," as well as the "Nonconformist" conscience, might incite some member, with more zeal than discretion, no doubt, to request to be informed why a Christian bishop permits himself to use language which implies that paganism and its rites are capable of unity in worship with the Christian Church. But, in fact, the question it was proposed to ask was one intended to express indignation at the illiberality of the Bishop of Colombo! How the question was received and answered we are not yet informed. But it is a curious fact that it seemed to emanate from the same faction which has of late been so keen to suppress "idolatry and 'superstition' in the Church of England, in the interests of a pure Protestantism.

— x —

The Ethics of Ordination

FROM BISHOP HUNTINGTON'S CONVENTION ADDRESS, 1899

IN the whole history of religions, even of the Christian religion, it may be doubted whether the errors and injuries pertaining to questions ecclesiastical and theological have not been as disastrous in their nature as those pertaining to morality. The relations between these are intimate and complicated. But if we take only the qualities of integrity and veracity, the deviations will be found to be almost as subtle and seductive in the region of dogma and devotion as in ordinary practical life. There is not a disputed doctrine in religious controversy of so much real importance to the kingdom and righteousness of Christ as truthfulness. There is not a point of ritual so vital to Christian character as honest dealing with it, by speech or by symbol.

Attention may well be directed just now to this aspect of Church discipline. I ask you, therefore, to consider the ethics of ordination.

One of a thousand men seeks a commission or warrant in our ministry. Assume that he has the common qualifications required. Where the solemnity is made as impressive as it can be, he is asked by the bishop whether he believes that he is called of God, and he solemnly answers: "I think so." Under the canonical provisions, the law being conformed to, with particular engagements spoken and written, he is publicly ordained, and he is so certified. The entire transaction is indisputably of the nature of a contract. It must be construed, as all legal contracts are construed in courts of civil law, by the terms specified, understood in one and the same sense by both the contracting parties; i. e., by the mind and will of the man ordained fairly expressed on the one hand, and the mind and purpose of the Church ordaining, acting through the bishop, as explicitly uttered on the other. It is strange, and it is unfortunate, that, in most secular discussions of the subject, this contract-character of the transaction has been so rarely held in view. On both sides the transaction as a whole is voluntary. No citizen can claim ordination as a right. No bishop can claim a man in his diocese for the ministry. Among the numberless useful and honorable callings in the wide world, this man decides that, while nine hundred and ninety-nine go into other employments, with their various opportunities, risks, duties, he will be a clergyman if he can. There is not the least constraint or outward obligation upon him, nor is the Church in the least obligated to make a clergyman of him. What the Church gains in the contract is a workman in her service, pledged from the outset and afterwards to the specified objects for which the Church exists in her doctrine, her discipline, and her worship, a benefit she realizes only as the other contracting party continues faithful in these particulars, not according to his own ideas, notions, views, or opinions on religious matters, but as the matters are stated in the Ordinal, in the Book of Common Prayer, and the Canons. Whatever powers, privileges, immunities, opportunities, or honors may be had in his life by being an ordained minister in the Protestant Episcopal Church, he gets by the ordination, and he can get them in no other way. To have sought and obtained orders, therefore, while holding beliefs which were not held, but were discredited, by the consenting authorities ordaining, and which would have stopped his ordination if he had been known to hold them, would have been fraudulent, and the contract would, of course, be void.

In a case supposed, at a subsequent time, owing to altered phases of faith on account of new studies, or fickleness, or interesting intellectual ventures, this minister finds that he is out of agreement with what he believed, and was understood to believe, when he took his orders and pledged himself to mind them. It is not necessary for the present purpose to enter at all into the causes of that shifting of views, or the comparative correctness of the opinions cast aside, or adopted. The confessed change itself, in its relation to his pledge, is the fact to be dealt with. And here is just where confusion, misjudgment, public scandal, false accusation, and bitter offence come in. The simplicity of the man's soul is apt to be damaged, and character suffers.

What ought to be done? One of two things may be rightly done. Proof being brought that there is teaching inconsistent with the standards, Creeds, Prayer Book, and legislation of the Church, the honor of the Church may be vindicated by a judicial procedure; and this cannot be complained of by anybody as a breach of kindness or courtesy or goodwill or liberality, because truth is greater and more sacred than personal or popular sentiments.

Another way for this minister in doubt is to acquaint the bishop who ordained him, or some ecclesiastical authority, with the convictions on which he has reason to believe that his mind has deviated from what was the mutually understood meaning of his ordination vows, or in respect to what he reasonably supposes any considerable number of persons in the Church believe him to have so deviated, and to ask for an unprejudiced investigation of his mind as to the doctrines in question.

To a large degree, public agitation and discussion of this subject are undoubtedly due to prevalent ideas as to the nature and limits of liberty. By many strong minds, absolute liberty has been pronounced one of the two or three characteristic distinctions and glories of mankind, along with reason and will. Within the modern period, it has wrought marvels, organized revolutions and insurrections, explorations and colonies. The passion has died down in an age of prosperity, and flamed up again in a reign of tyranny. An Apostle extols a "liberty in Christ," speaking of a particular form of freedom in such terms that his pupils have sometimes interpreted them as allowing them to take liberty with the authority of Christ Himself. Certain qualities and conditions of this American Republic, we all know, have engendered a national enthusiasm for independence such as would not have been manifest if the national existence had begun peaceably, with a shipwreck, a commercial emigration, or a swarming of population. It is pre-eminently the American poet of emancipation who predicts that God will "take the sun out of the sky," "ere freedom out of man." Nevertheless, whenever wisdom and experience shall have learned and taught what freedom is for, what its objects and benefits are, what its just and necessary limitations must be, how it must be adjusted and proportioned with other powers and privileges in order that it may be beneficent or even safe at all, then a better judgment than now will prevail in several departments of thought and life, in philosophy and in institutions. Religion and common-sense will be affected by the depth and width of this reform.

For example, a boundless diffusion of a popular sentiment that liberty is the foremost good and glory of the earth, and that there cannot be too much of it anywhere; that restrictions upon it are an impertinence or a despotism everywhere; that authority is not only inconvenient but insufferable, and that "Thou shalt not" must be expunged not only from the Decalogue, but from all civil and ecclesiastical statute books as well—these ideas will not only inevitably undermine all organized Christianity, but will disorganize society itself, and put government at an end.

On the contrary, however, some obedience in the Church and in the ministry appears to have been inseparable from the faith, order, and power of the Christian ages, and has survived to this day. At the cost of inestimable labor and endurance, the form of this ministry has been established and has been kept essentially as it still is. Ancient and abiding, its objects, explicitly avowed from the first, are as well known as the institution itself. Persons of certain specified qualifications, tested by open and definite examinations, are admitted into a share in its privileges. Every step is taken by published rules. If the candidate is refused admission to Orders, or if after admission he is disciplined or deposed by a process which the law demands, how can the rejection or deposition be denounced or sneered at with such terms as tyranny, bigotry, or intolerance? Might it not reasonably be supposed that a fair-minded, law-respecting community would rather approve the enforcement of law in the common interest of justice and honesty, quite irrespective of the religious opinions involved? Might not common-sense inquire of the party rejected, or ejected, why he did not stay out with the nine hundred and ninety-nine, or why, having come mistakingly in, and discovering his alien position, he did not go quietly and contentedly out? One might imagine that, even apart from the moral sense, the business world and the newspaper world would think it for their interest not to admire lawlessness, or to applaud the covenant-breaker.

—X—

Bishop Tuttle on the Missionary Council

IN such a gathering together from Oregon and Florida, from Maine and Texas, from California and Virginia, there is an emphasizing of two precious thoughts: 1. That this Prayer Book Church of ours is American all through and through, and wants in the combined strength and flexibility of her national organization, to go wherever the flag goes, to proffer, in American loyalty, American spirit, and American heartiness, the sacred treasures which she holds in trust for the needy souls of men. 2. That however in a sense, a diocese may be complete in itself, it still is only one of many, and that the one is of very narrow make-up if it takes not in the many; and that it cannot live its own right life, nor grow its own best growth, but by thinking, hoping, aiming, working lovingly, with the many. Diocesan selfishness is as bad as parish selfishness; parish selfishness is as bad as individual selfishness, and individual selfishness is so bad an enemy to Christ's cause and Christ's love that no other can be named worse.

God help us, in the nation, in the Church, in the diocese, in the parish, in the home, in the heart, to forswear selfishness. So we can best please the Saviour, and best follow Him, putting our poor steps quite into His very footprints. So we may make the world a little the happier and the better in our swiftly passing days. So a little bit of tender sadness may come into it when we go out of it. If we could know that, it would touch our hearts with a sweet gratefulness.

"Look up and not down." There is faith.

"Look forward and not back." There is hope.

"Look out and not in." There is charity love, missions. "And lend a hand."

—X—

Letters to the Editor

"THE MARRIAGE WAS PERFORMED"

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In so correct a journal as THE LIVING CHURCH, we read, in the news columns, that a marriage was "performed" by the Rev. Mr. So-and-So. Is the word "perform" a proper one to use in connection with the ceremony of marriage? We say Holy Orders were administered, Holy Baptism was administered or celebrated, the Holy Communion was celebrated, etc. The word "perform," in connection with any of these, would sound strange and irreverent. The expression had its inception with those who deny the sacramental nature of the marriage rite, and should be relegated to them by Churchmen universally.

Markdale, Ontario.

"Perform" is a Prayer Book use as applied to the conducting of services; but certainly is not to be preferred in the case above noted. "Solennized" is the special term used for Holy Matrimony, in the Office, yet is seldom used elsewhere.—Ed. L. C.]

SUITABLE MODELS FOR CHURCHES

To the Editor of The Living Church:

A paragraph in your paper, several weeks since, as to certain characteristics of a rural church of our Communion then consecrated, attracted my attention. It was constructed of "pasture stones," and, if my memory is not at fault, its design was adapted from the New England farm house, or at least a former type thereof. The "pasture stones," being the formation of nature, seemed to convey much that was good, but the source of the design suggested a paradox upon the structures that should be employed for God's worship.

A lady, since visiting the locality, has kindly supplied me with a photograph of it. It is a "curb roof" treatment, that embodied in local farm houses of past generations and recently popular for the modern barn. Leaving out defective orientation, and the garish use of the Latin cross in window ornamentation, I am impelled to ask why such a building should form the design for a church? An old tent, a threshing floor, or an upper room, are not inappropriate when better accommodations are lacking. Cannot the authorities set over us guide vestries by suggestions or advice when the true uses of a church are to be considered? It is said almost every church in a western diocese has both a deep choir and rood-screen. The reason can be understood. There are architects who would not, either, fall back upon a shire court house for a model.

G. W. K.

New York, July 6, 1899.

CHURCH TEACHING

To the Editor of The Living Church:

It is with great satisfaction that I see the subject of Sunday school work so frequently brought before the people; let us hope with good results to both pupil and teacher.

As a Sunday school worker I have observed many defects in methods; among them, that one hour's instruction (?) on Sunday morning (not by trained or chosen teachers, but often by any one who could be induced to sit there and hear a lesson) is all the religious advantages God's little children receive during the entire seven days. Often this teaching is of a very superficial character, and without any spirituality at all; limited to the simple reading of a lesson the children had never heard before, and then asking questions on it.

I am aware that most of this is due to an utter lack of co-operation on the part of parents, who, though helping their children patiently through secular lessons, and compelling their attendance at school, will relegate the future soul development and the foundations for the future religious structure, to the one hour at Sunday school, without even inquiring into the nature of such instruction. Could not this evil be greatly obviated by the regular attendance upon teachers' meetings, where teachers themselves might learn how to teach.

Under such training does the child gain a complete knowledge of the doctrine and teaching of the Church? Does the tender soul receive everything necessary to its development into Christlikeness, into abounding faith, and deep reverence for the sanctuary, and all holy things, into an intense, personal love of God? Does it, in short, prepare the child for Confirmation and the Holy Communion?

When the children graduate, as it were, from the highest class, why is there no Bible class to hold and interest them? I have seen many a fine boy and girl come Sunday after Sunday in this case, and finding nothing to do, drop away at last to spend the morning hours where no holy influence reaches.

When such are finally brought to Confirmation, and the minister does not fully instruct them in regard to the spiritual significance of the rite, and the sacrament following, what becomes of the uncertain young soul left to itself? It wanders upon the dark mountains, where sooner or later, if not brought back, the wolves must find it.

I once saw a young girl of nineteen weeping and trembling in the churchyard before service on the day of her Confirmation, and on asking her what was the matter, she replied that she was so frightened because she was going to be confirmed, and had no idea what it all meant. I asked if she had not attended the Confirmation class, and she replied yes, but was only told to memorize her catechism. She went to the Confirmation, but I never saw her at Communion. Another instance once came to my notice where children were only taught to memorize their catechism. It was of a young miss of sixteen who came to the Communion. She gazed about at the people, and on kneeling before the sacred altar was watching over her shoulder those who were awaiting their turn, also watching each person who received the sacred elements. The child was innocent; she had not been instructed.

Is it not the blessed privilege, as well as duty, of every minister of God to teach his people in all those things? Is it not the blessed privilege of bishops to teach the ministers under them?

Souls, trembling at the place where two roads meet, and harried with divers temptations, do not care to hear about the Higher Criticism. Their minds should be led away from such things, to contemplate the exceeding riches of the love of Christ and the beauty of holiness.

I was in the Church for twenty years and more before I knew of the Real Presence of our Saviour in the Holy Communion. Since then it has a most blessed and awe-inspiring and heart-warming significance. All these years I have missed this beatitude, this meeting with Him in the Communion. Why do our priests withhold the vital things of life from us?

Christ's sermon on the mount teaches and deals only with vital questions.

Alexandria, La.

ADA G. CHENEY.

THE ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE

To the Editor of The Living Church:

The clergy are asked to join an Actors' "Church" Alliance, of which one of our Bishops is president, and a Unitarian minister is vice-president, whilst several Jewish rabbis are enrolled members. Can such an alliance be designated a "Church" alliance? The English Church and Stage Guild is composed exclusively of members of the Anglican Church. D. D.

Personal Mention

The Rev. J. H. Appleton has taken summer charge of St. Paul's church, Brooklyn, Greater New York. The Rev. T. D. Bratton will move to St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C., on July 17th.

The Rev. Frederick Burgess received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity at the recent Commencement of Brown University.

The Rev. Canon Bywater and family are spending the month of July in the Rocky Mountains. Address, Manitou, Colo.

Bishop Whitehead has appointed the Rev. John W. Burras, lately of the diocese of Central Pennsylvania, to the charge of St. George's church, Pittsburgh, and St. Timothy's Mission, Esplan, Pa. Mr. Burras entered upon his work in both places on the first Sunday in July.

The Rev. J. Thompson Carpenter has taken summer charge of Gloria Dei church, Philadelphia.

The Rev. Wm. Sheafe Chase has taken summer charge of Trinity church, Cottage City, Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

The Rev. Frederick I. Collins has taken summer charge of the church of the Messiah, Providence, R.I.

The Rev. G. Herbert Dennison is passing a fortnight's vacation at Atlantic City, N. J.

The Rev. P. Gavan Duffy sailed for Europe on the S. S. "New York," July 12th.

The Rev. H. M. Dumbell has gone for the summer to the Adirondack Mountains.

The Rev. E. P. Green has resigned the rectorship of Grace church, Plymouth, and the church of the Advent, Williamston, N. C., to go into effect Sept. 12th.

The Rev. Stephen H. Granberry sailed for Europe July 4th.

The Rev. A. E. George has gone for two months to Nansett Beach, North Eastham, Mass.

The Rev. Chas. W. Homer has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from the University of Pennsylvania.

The Rev. David Howard has resigned the charge of Grace church chapel, West Philadelphia, Pa., to take effect August 1st.

The Rev. D. D. Hetter has entered upon his work as curate of St. Paul's, Peoria, Ill. He will have especial charge of St. Stephen's mission. Address, 1908 S. Adams st., Peoria, Ill.

The Ven. Archdeacon George C. Hall has just received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from St. John's College, Annapolis, Md.

The Rev. Joseph F. Jowitt should now be addressed St. John's church, Stillwater, N. Y., having resigned from his previous charge of Trinity church, Schaghticoke, N. Y.

The Rev. James Le B. Johnson will take his vacation at his cottage at Elizabethtown, in the Adirondack Mountains.

Bishop Littlejohn, of Long Island, sailed on the North German Lloyd steamship "Bremen," for Germany, on July 13th.

The Rev. Clarence H. Lake has changed his address from Black Hall, Conn., to Baker City, Ore., having accepted work there, beginning with June 1st.

The Rev. Emil Montanas has been transferred to the diocese of Michigan, and is now rector of St. John's parish, Saginaw.

The Rev. J. S. Moody, archdeacon of West Missouri, is spending July and August with his family at Green Mountain Falls, El Paso Co., Colo.

The address of the Rev. Armand DeRosset Meares is No. 11 Melrose av., Hyattsville, Prince George Co., Md. (Diocese of Washington) P. O. Box 95.

The Rev. Albert A. Morrison, Ph. D., is to pass his vacation at Brielle, N. J.

The Rev. Wm. D. Morgan is in summer charge of Christ church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Rev. Landou R. Mason will sail for England some time in July.

The Rev. Wm. Prall, D. D., Ph. D., has gone for the summer months to his cottage at Dark Harbor, Islesboro, coast of Maine.

The Rev. Lindsay Parker, Ph. D., will spend the summer at his country house, "Shore Acres," in New Brunswick, Can.

The Rev. Edward M. Parrott has temporary charge of the church of the Mediator, Kingsbridge, New York city, during the absence of the rector.

The Rev. Samuel Borden Smith, of Irvington, N. J., has accepted the rectorship of the church of the Holy Trinity, Swanton, Vt.

The Rev. Summerfield E. Snively, M. D., has gone to his cottage at Watch Hill, R. I., for the season.

The Rev. Wm. Short has sailed for England.

The Rev. Sumner U. Shearman received at the late Commencement of Brown University, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The Rev. C. Ernest Smith, D. D., sailed for England, July 8th.

The Rev. Thomas J. Taylor has summer charge of St. Paul's church, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Rev. R. R. Upjohn will be in charge of St. John's, Bayonne, N. J., during the summer months. He should be addressed at 296 Clinton st., Brooklyn, New York City.

The Rev. Wm. Morrow Washington, Ph. D., has entered upon the charge of Calvary church, Ashland, Ky., with adjoining missions.

Ordinations

On the 6th Sunday after Trinity, in the church of the Crucifixion, Philadelphia, Bishop Whitaker admitted Joseph E. Tucker to the sacred Order of Deacons. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Henry L. Phillips, rector of the church, and the sermon was preached by the Ven. C. T. Brady, archdeacon of the diocese.

At St. Paul's church, Spring Hill, Ala., on Friday, July 7th, the Rt. Rev. R. H. Wilmer, D. D., advanced to the sacred Order of the Priesthood, Gardiner Leigh Tucker, M. A., John Coleman Horton, M. A., and Howard Rutherford Walker. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Gardiner C. Tucker, dean, and the candidates were presented by the Rev. Joseph L. Tucker, D. D., respectively the father and uncle of the Rev. G. L. Tucker. The Rev. Douglas C. Peabody read Morning Prayer and assisted in the laying on of hands.

In St. Paul's cathedral, Cincinnati, Ohio, on Sunday, July 2d, Bishop Vincent advanced the following clergymen to the priesthood: The Rev. John Howard Melish, of the Associate Mission; the Rev. Ralph P. Smith, assistant, Trinity church, Columbus; the Rev. Lawrence Idleman, church of the Good Shepherd, Norwood; the Rev. Charles F. Chapman, church of the Atonement (Riverside), Cincinnati; the Rev. Frank Vinton Baer, church of the Good Shepherd, Mechanicsburg; the Rev. David Arnold Schaefer, Trinity church, Hamilton. The presenters were the Rev. Messrs. Alexis W. Stein, John Haight, R. R. Graham, Julius W. Atwood, and A. C. McCabe, Ph. S. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Julius W. Atwood.

In Christ church, Springfield, O., on Sunday, July 9th, Bishop Vincent ordained to the diaconate: Messrs. George Bundy, Z. B. T. Phillips, and Albert N. Slayton. The presenters were the Rev. A. C. McCabe and the Rev. H. M. Denslow, of Indiana. The Rev. Mr. Bundy will be placed in charge of St. Andrew's mission for colored people in Cincinnati; the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips will become precentor of St. Paul's cathedral, and the Rev. Albert N. Slayton, assistant at Trinity church, Columbus, succeeding the Rev. Ralph P. Smith who has accepted the rectorship of St. Phillip's church, Cincinnati, and who will enter upon charge of the same on Sept. 1st. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. W. Steel, of Philadelphia.

Died

HARTLEY—Suddenly, July 3d, at Great Barrington, Mass., the Rev. Isaac S. Hartley.

KNIGHT—At Panama, May 26th last, of yellow fever, Herbert Knight, eldest son of the late Bishop of Milwaukee.

LAMB—On Saturday, July 8, 1899, William, youngest son of Maria D. W. and the late Edward Lamb, of Brooklyn. Funeral services Monday evening, July 10th, at East Orange, N. J. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

"Safe home at last!"

Where evening shadows never fall.

Where Thou, eternal Light of Light.

Art Lord of all!"

NOCK—In Jersey City, N. J., on Sunday, July 9, 1899, the Rev. Joseph Albert Nock.

NOCK—Entered into rest on the morning of July 12th, at his residence, Glassborough, N. J., the Rev. E. Gaines Nock, assistant at old Christ church, Philadelphia.

"Grant unto him, O Lord, eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon him."

Appeals

(Legal title [for use in making wills]: THE DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Domestic missions in seventeen missionary districts and forty-one home dioceses: missions among the colored people; missions among the Indians; foreign missions in China, Japan, Africa, Greece, and Haiti; support of the clergyman of this Church appointed to counsel and guide the p. esbyters and readers in Mexico.

Provision must be made for the salaries and traveling expenses of twenty-four bishops, and stipends of 1,700 missionary workers, besides the support of schools, orphanages, and hospitals. Contributions are, moreover, asked specifically for the salaries of workers and support of schools in Mexico. One thousand dollars per month is the estimate of such expenses.

Remittances should be made to MR. GEORGE C. THOMAS, treasurer, 281 Fourth ave., New York. At present, please address communications to the REV. JOSHUA KIMBER, associate secretary.

Spirit of Missions, official monthly magazine, $1 a year.

THE church at New Richmond, Wis. (St. Thomas' church), was totally destroyed in the tornado which nearly wiped out that town, on June 12th. Nothing whatever remains, excepting a hole in the ground, and a mass of wreckage about it. Altar, vestments, seats, and everything, hopelessly gone. Nor was there any tornado insurance. We ask for help to rebuild, and begin our work anew. Money can be sent to the missionary-in-charge, the Rev. W. A. HOWARD, JR., Star Prairie, Wis. (P. O.), or to the BISHOP OF MILWAUKEE, Milwaukee, Wis., who has been on the ground, has seen the awful destruction, and who will guarantee this appeal.

Church and Parish

PEOPLES' WAFERS, 25 cents per hundred; priests' wafers, one cent each, The Sisters of All Saints, 801 N. Eutaw street, Baltimore, Md., also invite orders for ecclesiastical embroidery.

A CHURCHWOMAN, nurse would like position to care for invalid or infant, in city or country. Address, "W," care THE LIVING CHURCH.

WANTED—A curate, tutor, or lay-reader, to teach young boy and assist in mission work. Small stipend, but comfortable home and interesting field. Address, RECTOR, Marysville, Kansas.

WANTED.—A position as governess for small children, or companion, by an educated and refined young Churchwoman. References, full and satisfactory, furnished. Address, CLIO L. LEE, Manor, Travis Co., Texas.

The Editor's Table

Kalendar, July, 1899

- | | |
|---|--------|
| 2. 5th Sunday after Trinity. Visitation
B. V. M. | Green. |
| 9. 6th Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |
| 16. 7th Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |
| 23. 8th Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |
| 25. ST. JAMES, Apostle. | Red. |
| 30. 9th Sunday after Trinity. | Green. |

"If de sun git up berry early, and go to bed before he git up, it's a sign it rains before soon."—(Negro) Signal Service Notes.

Pen-and-Ink-Jings

DR. TALMAGE, in The Interior, claims that he is not an egotist nor a sensationalist. To the question, "How do you fill your pews Sunday night?" he replies: First, by preaching the most powerful evangelistic sermon that his brain can produce. Second, by having plenty of light. "Religious gloom always means religious stupidity." Third, by having the right kind of music, and that is, "congregational singing worth going a mile to hear." "I have always felt," he says, "that the people came, not so much to hear me preach, as to hear my people sing." Of course there is a good leader and a good choir, but he insists upon having absolute control and direction of the leader, the choir, and the music.

THE dispatches announce that the government of Egypt intends to prohibit intoxicating liquors in the Soudan. Mohammedanism made this a prohibition district long ago.

MANY admirers of the Arctic explorer, Nansen, will be interested to know that he has bought a large group of farms lying on the borders of Telemarken and along the banks of the Sorkje River, in Southern Norway, and has become a Norwegian squire. With these lands he purchased for his private residence a summer hotel, and at the same time acquired the right to hunt and fish in the Numedal district for twenty-five years to come.

SUCH movements as the one so well described in the following extract from The Congregationalist, do much to upset and counterbalance the theories of Prof. Markham, in his poem, "The Man with the Hoe:"

The newest of the educational establishments of Oxford has for its object the furtherance of the education of the working classes. Ruskin Hall has been founded by two American admirers of the master—Mr. Walter Vrooman, of St. Louis, Mo., and Mr. Charles A. Beard. The idea is to make it possible for workmen of every degree to spend at least one year at Oxford, to put within their reach opportunities of sharing, in high branches of education, leisure to pursue such studies as interest them, and a sojourn among elevating and beautiful surroundings. Then they may use what they have acquired as they will, but it is hoped that many will go back to their trade, and that the general tendency of the movement will be to leaven the working classes of England with men who will bring to their daily work wider minds and artistic perception. When the time at Oxford is over, the men will be expected to supplement such education as they have acquired there by attendance at university extension lectures. For men of simple tastes, board, lodging, and washing can be provided for ten shillings per week. No alcoholic liquors are permitted on the premises. A sympathizer with the movement has made a donation of one hundred scholarships of £6 per annum. Some employers have given men special leave of absence, and offered to keep their places for them.

IN April last Dr. James Martineau celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday. A writer in the London Daily Chronicle says: "The once erect form is now bent with age, the fine head of dark hair is gray and white; the splendid memory is no longer clear and keen as in days of yore, but the lines of deep thought are still visible on his noble brow; the winsome smile is still there, and though the eyes have lost something of their wondrous lustre, the spirit within is bright and trustful as ever."

THE centenary of the birth of Honore de Balzac was celebrated in May. The copyright on the works of the great novelist will expire in 1900. Preparations are already begun by Paris publishers for large editions of his works.

THE increase in postoffice receipts, says The Youth's Companion, will this year be sensationally large, according to the present estimates of the department in Washington. In some branches of the service receipts are twenty-five per cent. greater than they were a year ago. In the last fifteen years the postoffice business of the country has doubled in volume. This indicates not only our direct growth in population, but the increase in the number and size of our newspapers and other publications, as well as a great growth in the habit of letter writing.

JOHANN STRAUSS whose death in Vienna occurred early in June, "was" according to the Boston Transcript, "above everything else a composer both for the classes and the masses." "Unlike many composers of popular music, he was admired by the illuminati of the musical world, no less a light than Wagner writing of him: 'A single Strauss waltz surpasses as much in grace, delicacy, and real musical conception, most of the laboriously composed foreign productions, as the Vienna St. Stephen steeple rears itself above the hollow pillars of a Paris boulevard.'" On an autograph fan belonging to Mme. Strauss, beneath one or two bars of "The Beautiful Blue Danube," is this inscription: "Unfortunately not by me. Johannes Brahms."

THE New York Tribune tells the following story: The pastor of a church in Chicago, on leaving his study, which is in the rear of the church, one day last week saw a little girl friend of his talking to a stranger. "What was that man saying to you, Madge?" he asked, as he came up to her. "Oh," said she, "he just wanted to know if Dr. C — wasn't the preacher of this church." "And what did you tell him?" asked the pastor. The girl drew herself up with an air of great pride. "I told him," she answered with dignity, "that you was the present incumbent."

THE Church in China, a bi-monthly magazine published by our missionaries in Shanghai, has the following: Not long since, an English captain on one of the Yang-tsz River steamers attempted to seize the baggage of a ticketless native passenger in payment of his fare. The man burst into tears as one of the ship's officers threatened to take away from him a little covered basket, which was all the baggage he possessed, and piteously cried: "Oh! do not take that; that is my grandfather, and I am taking him home to bury him. Have mercy upon me! Have mercy upon me! And I will raise the money somehow, but do not take my grandfather!" "Your grandfather, eh! Ah! good joke that," roared the captain, and shouts of laughter went up from the foreign officers and passengers. "Take off the cover of that basket quick, before you go overboard." The man obeyed the order, and to the horror of the bystanders, uncovered the crumbling fragments of a human skeleton. It was his grandfather's mortal frame literally and truly! His body had first been coffined for a long while, and then the bones were gathered and put into a jar for transshipment to the ancestral tomb: the jar had given place to a basket, and here they were! The skipper heaved a sigh. "Give the poor wretch a free ticket," he said, "and tell him to bury his grandfather in peace."

— X —

Notes From "Eaglesnest"

IV.

FISHING is reputed to be a most peaceful pastime, but how does it strike the fish! It is like the case of the early bird that gets the worm, but how is it with the worm? I am inclined to think, however, that fish have no feeling, and that in the taking of fish-life there is no pain or repulsion. The finest sensibilities need not be disturbed by the "taking off" of piscatory captives. Some of the Apostles were fishermen, with the net, and many of the gentlest of our human kind have been fond of angling. I have good episcopal authority for the theory that the feeling experienced by fish on being taken from the water is that of exhilaration. The breathing of the air produces an ecstasy, as when we inhale "laughing gas." This is shown by the excited motions which follow the transference from aqueous to aerial environment. It may be true that fish do not breathe at all in the air, as they have no lungs, but they are immersed in air, and somehow feel the influence of it. At any rate, that is the opinion of my Bishop, and he ought to know.

But, as the boy said when he was reproved for fishing on Sunday, "Who is catching any fish?" I have long since given up baiting the hook and twirling the spoon in these waters; but just now my neighbor, Mrs. Clark, sends me a thirteen-pound lake trout, caught by deep-water trolling in sight of my door! And this is only her second summer here. Over at Elk Rapids, in June, there is fine bass fishing, and further inland, in the small streams, brook trout can be had by those who are willing to work hard and risk their lines and lives among the snags.

Fifteen years ago a small party of us caught two hundred and fifty brook trout one day in Rapid River, but it would be hard to get one half that number now. We staked our tent, I remember, on the site of an old logging camp, and the mosquitoes were terrific. The utmost vigilance could not keep them out of the tent. We needed no rising bell to awaken us at dawn. During the daylight, as well as the dark, their attacks were vicious and incessant, and in spite of the dopes and antidotes that were freely applied to exposed surfaces, we were almost as speckled as the trout we caught. "Joe Minnie" was our guide, a clever half-breed, a kind-hearted and jolly old soul (may he rest in peace!); it would be telling tales out of school to say how many of the catch came in on the end of his own line. I shall never forget how we laughed and laughed around the camp fire, as Joe, in his queer French and English, told us his bear story and acted it out so cleverly. I have forgotten the story, or I might help out with it what I fear is a rather dull letter.

I would amend the old saw about catching the hare before you cook him; as to trout, cook them, and cook them properly, as soon as you catch them. No one ever cooked them, I firmly believe, as Joe Minnie did. The process was simple, but the results were indescribably felicitous. The speckled beauties (I intended not to say "speckled beauties," but let it go this once!) should be placed in the skillet on edge, as they swim; not laid down flat and dried on both sides, but packed like sardines, one against the other, until the hot pan is full, quite full, so they are closely pressed together. Not too much fat, nor too little; not too hot a fire, but hot enough; not too much salt, but just the right sprinkling; a steady hand, a discriminating eye, a decisive act at the exact instant when the right shade of brown is secured on the under side, and the whole mass is turned, reversed like a griddle-cake, to be cooked on the other side. In the serving, gently divide the cake according to the number of guests. Ah! you may have heard "songs without words"—now you taste them! You will never order brook trout at a restaurant or hotel after this. Let the memory of Joe Minnie's unapproachable achievement live on, undimmed and undisturbed by taste of kitchen-flavored fish.

C. W. L.

—X—

A Great Sermon in Two Words

AN OLD CRUISER'S REMINISCENCES

IT was in the early fifties, during a cruise on the west coast of Africa. Another calm and quiet Sunday at sea. Hours of thoughtful contemplation on imaginary home conditions, more than four thousand miles away; abroad on the wide expanse of waters, and, for the time, wholly absent-minded. Hark! the boatswain's whistle. "Here, there; fore and aft! All you men who wish to do so, go below, and join in prayer for Jack Powell." Poor Jack Powell! I was one of the company who went below and joined the assembly around his cot.

There are times when the cords of sailors' hearts let loose all their proverbial, but misjudged, "hardness." Of this, nothing could be more convincing than the tears which bedimmed every eye at the thrill felt when "Peace to this ship and to all that dwell therein," struck home in the unutterable "amen" of every one of Jack Powell's comrades there assembled.

The service for the Visitation of the Sick, and especially the prayers for the very sick, "when there appeareth small hopes of recovery," as provided in our Prayer Book, as ordinarily rendered by a clergyman, with which most persons are more or less familiar, are singularly impressive for their admirable adaptation; but to feel their impressiveness, be cut off from the sacred services of the Church and her official administration, be deprived for months and years of the sound of sacred words, but cherished in your memory, and whispered in the closet, then at the boatswain's call join an assembly at the cot-side of a dying sailor, and "Peace be to this ship and to all that dwell therein," even though uttered by a layman, will strike with a force which reflects the mind to the Prince of Peace, and impresses the heart with a quality to feel that there is a reality in words which only requires a realization of the occasion which gives them utterance.

Jack Powell had been a favorite in the ship's company from the time we had sailed from New York, nearly two years before. He had been severely ill for several weeks, while on the way up towards the naval station at the Cape du Verde Islands, from the coast of Guinea, and for the last week he was unable to make his wants known by speech. In a ship's company of several hundred persons, there are always some turbulent spirits, some skeptical minds, and, sometimes, openly declared infidels, ever ready to express their contempt for religion. Our company on this occasion was no exception. And when the word was passed for all who wished, to go below to prayers for Jack Powell, "I bet nobody goes," was spoken with a snarl loud enough to be heard and located by all who were in the vicinity of the open ward-room hatch. But it was an admonition in the reverse order. Everybody went that could be spared, for the time being, from his station. Even the Commodore (for ours was the flagship) had his chair brought and seated himself by the main hatch, in plain sight and hearing of the service by the sick man's cot.

As before intimated, our would-be parson was a layman—the doctor who had carefully watched the progress of the illness of the favorite seaman, for whom all felt sympathy. Powell's condition, before he lost the power of speech, had been intimated to him by the doctor, but he manifested a disinclination to converse on what appeared to be the most probable and not long-deferred result of his illness. Several of his comrades, of whom there were constantly some around his cot while he was speechless, had talked of his case as if he could not comprehend their words, and the doctor had cautioned them about this, because, he suggested, Powell might be in possession of his hearing and mental faculties, though unable to speak.

When all were assembled for prayers, the doctor approached the sick man's cot, and said: "Powell, I have already told you of your condition; that I thought it very doubtful whether you would ever be any better. I think you are now near unto death. You have heard me caution your messmates while you have been unable to speak in reply to their remarks; and you have heard the boatswain's call, which has assembled your shipmates around you; and, though you are unable to reply to my words, I think you may be able to understand them; and, as you can move your eyes, you can signify your will whether we shall pray for you or not. If yes, turn your eyes to the right; if no, to the left. Powell, shall we pray for you?"

"Yes, sir," was the quick reply, and loud enough to be heard by every one present, and up the hatchway to those who sat around. It was the most impressive and the greatest sermon I have ever heard.

Jack Powell died about two hours afterwards. "Yes, sir," were the only words he uttered during the last week of his life. In the afternoon of the same day his body was committed to the deep, with the Prayer Book service for the burial of the dead at sea. The funeral was only less impressive than the service at the bedside of the dying seaman.

It is within the knowledge of the writer that the commodore and two other officers of the ship who subsequently became communicants in the Church, soon after the end of the cruise, attributed their first profound conviction to that end to the influence of Jack Powell's sermon. Moreover, the influence was widespread and lasting on the ship's company, as evinced by their better attendance on, and participation in, the Church service, from that time on to the end of the cruise.

A. N. B.

—X—

Book Reviews and Notices

Church Lesson Books. By the Rev. J. A. Regester, S. T. D. New York: James Pott & Co. Price, 15 cts. each.

This is a series of four lesson books for Sunday schools. Dr. Regester has, in our judgment, done much to solve the question of intelligent instruction for the children of the Church, without being too diffuse, yet avoiding the charge of lack of interest. The four volumes embrace the Catechism, the Creed, the Church Year, and the Sacraments. In the first of these, the catechism is given with an explanation of words and phrases, a feature that commends this volume to us very highly. The words explained are printed in heavy type, and, as the author says, the explanations are simple enough for every child to understand. With this book in hand, any one with ordinary powers of winning children's affection and attention, can teach the catechism. The other volumes are arranged in the form of a reading lesson on the subject, followed by questions whose numbers correspond with similar numbers in the lesson. By this means the pupil can readily learn the answer and understand its meaning. One great objection we have to all other books and plans for Sunday school teaching, is that the Catechism, the Church Year, the Faith, and Sacraments, are treated as if of no consequence, while some one's exegesis of a portion of Scripture is magnified. Let our children be taught in the Church's way and by the Church's catechism, and then whether they know who Joshua or Ruth was will be of minor importance, so far as their loyalty to the Church is concerned. We commend Dr. Regester's system as simple, inexpensive, and, best of all, Churchly.

George Muller of Bristol, and His Witness to a Prayer-Hearing God. By Arthur T. Pierson. New York: The Baker & Taylor Company. Illustrated. Price, $1.50.

There are surely few people interested in philanthropy who have not at some time or other heard of the remarkable life of George Muller, the founder of the Bristol Orphanage. This book traces his career and work from his childhood to his death. The remarkable answers to prayer, as illustrated in the erection and sustenance of the orphanage, are sufficient to convince the most unbelieving skeptic. Mr. Muller's life is portrayed with the love and devotion of an earnest friend. That there should come such a change between the boyhood of Muller, which was wild and unbriiled in its wilfulness, and the self-sacrifice and piety of his manhood, is but an illustration of what the history of Christianity has witnessed again and again. God often chooses as the vessels in which to convey His blessings to man, the very lives that appear at first the least worthy. In the case of George Muller the marvels of prayer are exhibited. With this as his daily weapon, he brought from God blessings on his work which seem to read like fairy tales. Such a life does more to convince the world of the truth of Christianity than can be measured by the mind of man. The book is well worth the study of any one. It is well printed and beautifully illustrated.

The Century Magazine. Vol. LVII. Nov., 1898-April, 1899; 960 pages. Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.75; gilt top, $3; half Russia, $4.

The names of Sampson, Shafter, Sigsbee, Hobson, Greene, etc., are a guarantee of first-hand accounts of the chief events of the West Indian and Philippine campaigns. "Lowell's Impressions of Spain" deal with a period when peace prevailed even in Cuba; while military prowess is celebrated in Prof. Wheeler's notable series of historical studies, of which Alexander the Great is the theme. James Bryce, writing on England's colonial experiments, presents the observations of one who is not only a student of the art of government, but also an experienced parliamentarian, cabinet officer, and traveler. Equally "expert," in their several ways, and of equal popular interest, are Walter Wellman's account of the beginning of his expedition, "On the way to the North Pole"; Paul L. Ford's "Many-Sided Franklin"; John C. Van Dyke's "Old English Masters," accompanying Cole's engravings, and Charles Henry Hart on "Gilbert Stuart's Portraits of Women," with engravings by Henry Wolf. Among the serials are Mr. Crawford's "Via Crucis," and Mr. Stockton's fantastic tale, "The Vizier"; and among the many admirable illustrations, the first in order is Miss Beaux's frontispiece portrait of Dr. Weir Mitchell.

This Church and Realm. Some Difficulties of the Day Examined. By the Rev. C. E. Brooke, M. A. London: Rivington's. Price, 1s. 6d.

Last Lent Mr. Brooke delivered a series of lectures in his church, St. John the Divine, Kensington, London. They attracted such wide attention that he has consented to publish them in book form, under the title, "This Church and Realm." The subjects of the lectures will at once suggest their importance. They are: I. Canonical Obedience and Church Courts; II. The Ornaments Rubric; III. The Eastward Position; IV. Vestments; V. Incense; VI. Reservation. Mr. Brooke in a clear, logical manner gives the legal aspect of these questions, and brings to bear on them a great deal of careful research into the history of the Church since the Reformation period. The book should be in the hands of every one who desires to know the Church's law and practice on these subjects.

In Memory of the Rev. Thomas McKee Brown, M. A., Pastor, Teacher, Priest. Sermons, etc., Together with Brief Biographical Notes, Letters, and Resolutions. Published by request. New York: E. & J. B. Young & Co. 1899.

We are very glad this little book has been published as a timely remembrance of the priest and the man whom so many held in high reverence and esteem. The sermons preached in connection with his obsequies, and the notes descriptive of the latter, are welcomed by Fr. Brown's friends. The little volume is illustrated by excellent views of both the old and the new St. Mary's—both the result of the faithful life work of the consecrated, devoted priest who has passed within the veil. Let the supplication he so often made for others be offered for him:

"Eternal rest grant him, O Lord,
And light perpetual shine upon him."

A Dictionary of the Bible, Dealing with its Language, Literature, and Contents, including the Biblical Theology. Edited by James Hastings, M. A., Ph. D., with the Assistance of John A. Selbie, M. A. Vol. II. Feign-Kinsman. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. Imperial Octavo. Pp. 870. Price, cloth, $6.

The appearance of the second volume of this notable work within about a year of the publication of the first, is creditable both to editors and publishers. The fullness, comprehensiveness, and scholarly character of the work need not again be emphasized. It is more than a dictionary, it is an encyclopedia. One need not depend upon it for his theology, for in that field it cannot be expected to be either consistent or Catholic. It is for vast and valuable information in a wide range of research that we commend it. While it defers too much to modern "critical" views, it is moderately conservative in the most important matters relating to faith and interpretation.

Diet in Illness and Convalescence. By Alice Worthington Winthrop. Illustrated. New York: Harper & Brothers. Price, $1.50.

"Diet in Illness and Convalescence" is founded on "Diet for the Sick," published by Messrs. Harper & Brothers in 1885. As that admirable book is out of print, and as there is none which exactly fills its place, Mrs. Winthrop has incorporated its essential portions in a work which shall include also the later ideas on the science and practice of dietetics. The plan upon which the book is edited is clear, and the subjects follow each other in their natural order; the more important divisions being "Diet in Different Diseases," "Receipts for the Sick and Convalescent," subdivided with "Drinks," and "Foods"; "Bills of Fare for Convalescents," and an appendix, containing extracts from standard works on important health topics (Influence of Alcoholic Liquors), is added. The additional illustrations are by Miss Millicent Johnson.

"The Conception of the Priesthood in the Early Church and in the Church of England," is the correct title of the book by the Rev. W. Sanday, D. D., LL.D., reviewed in our columns last week.

The great biographical edition of Harper's Thackeray has been completed by the appearance of the thirteenth volume. It is a great work, well done. Mrs. Ritchie has brought the author home to our hearts, and given him a place in the family circle. Without a formal biography (in deference to the great author's wish) she has given us many sided views of him—snap shots, but full of truth and life. She was his companion and literary helper, and no one so well as she could give the world a glimpse of his life, habits, and character. All lovers of Thackeray will be grateful to his daughter and to the publishers for this monumental edition of his works.

Periodicals

Harper's Round Table helps us to an outing, even if we have to stay at home. The July issue takes us canoeing and camping and tramping and riding on a rail, and we cool off with a game of base ball among the Arctic whalers. "The Battle of the Apprentices," is a true story of a naval encounter which has never before been written upon. The boys of the captain's gig, from several English merchantmen, met and vanquished with oars and boat hooks a mob of angry watermen in whale boats in the harbor of Iquique, Chile, in 1888. The story is well told, and has a spirited illustration.

Good Housekeeping is conducted "in the interests of the higher life of the household," and at the same time we may add, is "none too good for human nature's daily food." We do well to associate "good housekeeping" with good things to eat, but it means much more. Good health, pleasant surroundings, domestic economies of all kinds, are intelligently discussed in this family magazine. It is both entertaining and helpful. In the current number we have a good Fourth of July story, by Maria Allen Kimball; "Women Who Have Made the World Better," by Mary Sargent Hopkins; "Vacationing in the Rockies," by Annie Curd; "Fashions and Fabrics," "The Best Way," "Advice to Housewives," etc. The series on "Home Science," beginning with Domestic Architecture, by Mrs. Barton Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's Club, promises to be of exceptional interest and value.

Opinions of the Press

La Patria (translated)

CUBA LIBRE.—If any shadow of doubt could remain as to the absolutely imperious necessity of the expulsion of the old Spanish regime in order that Cuba might have true liberty and progress, it must vanish when one analyzes the series of phenomena developed before our sight day by day. We are eliminating traditional impediments, and getting rid of the apparently impassable obstacles which four centuries of evil training in political administration had thrown in our path. In these days of fruitful, though silent, work, we learn of the most radical reforms when they are published in The Official Gazette, without being preceded by a magnificent conglomeration of oratory and colored fire. An order of six lines, with a very short preamble, will represent some bold and beneficent measure. One might say that for us a thin sheet of paper separates the mediæval world from the nineteenth century, and oftentimes the writing is not indispensable to enable us to pass from darkness to light.

The Angelus.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT.—The New York clergy who are generally sound in the Faith, though their loyalty is not so conspicuous as the noisy attacks of Broad Churchmen on the Faith, are not going to let the matter drop. Soon after the sacrilege of May 14, about 40 clergy, representing large city parishes, men of High, Moderate, and Low Church types, had an earnest conference. The discussion, which was quite general, was to the effect that it was felt that the American Church was sound at heart in its belief that the Bible was the Word of God, but that the advancement of Dr. Briggs to the priesthood had laid the Church open to the accusation that it was tolerant of unbelief in the Bible, and that it had paved the way for the admission of heretics to the ministry of the Church, and that something had to be done to vindicate the Church's faith in the Bible, and to keep false teachers out of the priesthood. It was urged that the clergy and laity must get together, lay aside all minor differences, and take their stand upon the foundation principles of the Christian religion, faith in the Bible, the Incarnation and the Trinity, and earnestly contend against the encroachment of Broad Church teaching in the American Church. The first step was taken in the appointment of a committee to consider and report at a future meeting the wisest course to pursue, the idea of those present seeming to be that a Church-defence society should be formed, to include both clergy and laity, and to circulate literature on the fundamental principles of the Christian religion, as it is held by the Catholic Church. The feeling in favor of some such course was general, but the suggestions as to detail were many and various. A number of speakers said that prominent laymen in their parishes felt deeply the slur which, they said, had been cast upon the Church of not holding faith in the Bible as essential, and that they were pressed by these laymen not to permit the Church to stand accused of not believing in Holy Scripture. It was said that this feeling is deep and widespread among representative laymen in New York, in parishes of all types of Churchmanship, and a disposition to act vigorously was manifested by those present.

The discontent with the present administration of affairs in the diocese of New York will show itself at the meeting of the convention of the diocese, on the last Wednesday in September. The convention will then elect a Standing Committee, and it is understood that an effort will be made to retire from that committee all the members except the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, George Macculloch Miller, and George Zabriskie. The matter has been informally discussed by about forty of the priests of the diocese, and they have agreed to oppose the re-election of the Rev. Drs. Thomas R. Harris, Octavius Applegate, and J. S. Shipman, and S. Nicholas Kane, and Herman C. von Post. Their action will be calculated as a rebuke to the Standing Committee for passing the papers of Dr. Briggs, and thus permitting his ordination as a priest.

The Household

The Queen's Glebe

BY FREDERICA EDMUNDS

(All rights reserved)

XXII.

IT was the spring of the year 1783. The broad waters of Lake Ontario were rioting in the sunshine, scattering their gold with spendthrift hands as though confident in the promise of the summer days to come. Far overhead, spreading their white wings against the sky, flocks of wild geese were sailing northward, sure harbingers of longer days and warmer skies. Up and down the lake, as far as eye could see, the heavily-wooded shore was beginning to put on the tender greenness which comes so late in these latitudes, and is doubly precious to the eyes which have yearned for it through the long, ice-bound winter.

Along this northern coast, and into the chain of lesser lakes called the Bay of Quinte a party of voyagers had made their way in one of the clumsy batteaux used for such navigation. Two or three trappers there were, making their way up from Montreal, where they had exchanged their pelts for gold, one or two soldiers returning to far-off frontier posts, and one who might have been taken for a traveling missionary, though the character of face and dress was somewhat belied by a military bearing. This priest-soldier spoke little more than the silent Indians who poled the boat, but, in spite of the continual talk of the others, his eye took in every curve of the shore, every change in the timbered country beyond.

"See," said one of the Indians, breaking his long silence by the English speech peculiar to the Iroquois, "there are the northern settlements of my people, the Mohawks."

"And none too soon," replied one of the traders. "Two hundred miles of this lake coasting is dull business when one is impatient for the woods. I can not breathe aright until I am in the forest again."

"My breath is not difficult when 'tis scented with the good French liqueurs of Montreal, or drawn in the presence of her pretty maids," said another.

"Are these settlements, then, from the Mohawk Valley of New York?" asked a third. "'Tis a region we French knew well in the Indian wars. 'Tis said it hath suffered much of late."

"Aye, it hath suffered," replied Alan Underhill, the soldier-priest who had spoken little. "The fair shores of the Mohawk are stripped as a vine when the vintage is done." He was fastening his cloak as he spoke, and his eyes seemed to count the flattening waves which lay between him and the shore.

"But those who have had their way in this matter, and can count the most of scalps? Surely, there are some victorious to whom the spoils belong?" asked a soldier whose persistence might have showed him half a Scot.

"Yes," replied Underhill; "since the peace hath been signed there are those who have heart to sow again the fields, and our women are busy at the spinning of the woolen and the flax, but it will be long years before the valley shall see the old prosperity which it hath sold to buy a dearer liberty." He made ready, as he spoke, to leap from the boat, which was being pushed in to the shore.

"Good," exclaimed the Frenchman; "I like thy spirit, comrade, and I lick not the hand of King George more than thyself." But Underhill had already sprung to land, and the answer passed unheeded.

Through the forest clearing, guided by one of the Indians, Alan struck out on foot for his father's plantation at New Johnstown. Past the thrifty settlement of five hundred houses or so, past the little wooden church where Mr. Underhill now preached in Mohawk and administered from the vessels once in use at Fort Hunter the Holy Elements to his reunited flock, he hurried. Then the well-tilled acres of the priest's plantation came in sight, and Alan hastened on as though his feet were winged.

A few days later a young man and woman were walking by the tossing waters of the lake. A serene sky stretched overhead, though light-whipped cirrhus clouds somewhat screened the sunshine which lapped the beach above the water-mark, as the incoming tide, below.

"Evelyn," said Alan, looking into the sweet face, more thoughtful and more wistful than of old, "tell me now, for I can wait no longer, is there any reason why our marriage should not be immediate? Remember, dear one, I have served as long as Jacob for his Rachel."

"Aye, but Leah was his first reward," and a sparkle of the old playfulness came back into the girl's face. Then she added, with a ring of sorrow, "Your Leah lies by Champlain's waters, Alan, for I know she was yours in heart."

Alan was silent a minute. There were many memories to be choked back. Then he said: "You will not keep me waiting longer, my Rachel?"

Evelyn stretched out her hand with the old childish gesture, and put it within his. "It is yours when you will," she said simply.

"Thank God!" was all she heard of Alan's whispered reply, but his hand tightened upon hers with a quite painful pressure as he drew her closer.

Presently he said: "Evelyn, 'tis a great comfort that my mother knew our happiness and rejoiced in it. Do you think that she pined for the valley home; that the exile was the hastening of her death?"

"I know not; she was always uncomplaining, but the persecution there, the hardships and privations here, must all have had their weight. But above all, I believe, the disappointment that Griffith failed to return caused her to give up heart."

"We must not judge him," said Alan, presently, though his voice was stern. "Griffith was made of less rugged stuff than we others."

"Aye," said Evelyn, with a somewhat bitter emphasis, then she asked: "How did he look, Alan? You said he was present at your ordination in Edinburgh?"

"He looked well, and well-favored as ever, but sorrow hath left some traces, and no doubt conscience sometimes has its sting. There was one other I saw whom you will readily recall, Captain Dalton."

"Indeed, the brave captain who ran away from his last tryst with us! I knew not on which side of the water he was to be found!"

"Nor I, and yet it eased my mind to see him. 'Twas at the last encounter with Sir

ROYAL Baking Powder

Made from pure
cream of tartar.

Safeguards the food
against alum.

Alum baking powders are the greatest
menacers to health of the present day.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

John's bravos that I, myself, wounded a young officer in the attack at the church. I noted even then his dashing appearance and long, flowing black hair. When the conflict was over and the enemy withdrawn, I found him on the ground, still breathing. 'Let me remove you to camp,' I entreated, 'I insure you kind treatment.' 'Never, with such a black rebel as you; I will perish here,' was his reply. Later, I saw such a scalp with long black hair in the possession of an Oneida Indian, and knew his fate. A fear long haunted me that the officer was Captain Dalton." Evelyn shuddered.

"Tell me of our friends in the valley," she said. "What of Juvrouw Myndert?"

"Ah, know you that she has a lover?"

"Who, then, is the happy junker?"

"'Tis no junker, but the new domine at Caughnawaga chapel who, report saith, has already lost three wives. To see him and Katrina together reminds one of nothing but a pair of well-filled partridges. 'Tis said the domine is a rare hand at courting."

"Out on such a Bluebeard! And how fares Dame Cairnewas and her 'Sandy'?"

"The former, well; to speak of the latter is to tell another tragic tale."

"I must hear it, Alan."

"'Twas when Rensselaer was following Sir John's retreat—the same summer that you left the valley. McKaye and I were in a fever that he made such slow work of it. At the Fort Hunter ford he stopped, quite dismayed, by the force of forty men he found there. We implored him to give us leave for the attack. 'I like not these rifts,' he said; 'tis unwise to risk what you know not.' He was assured that every man in his command knew the place, and for very shame he yielded. The paltry force was soon driven away from the ford, and then the baggage wagons served for a fine bridge in the shal-

"A Gentle Wind of Western Birth"

Tells no sweeter story to humanity than the announcement that the health-giver and health-bringer, Hood's Sarsaparilla, tells of the birth of an era of good health. It is the one reliable specific for the cure of all blood, stomach and liver troubles.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

low water. Sir John, seeing our commander had hardened his shell for a real battle, put himself in good position, protected by the bend you must remember, while Brant's Indians took to their usual hiding in the woods—ah, Evelyn, the details of such a field are not for you. 'Twas hardly fought, but we won the day, and our boys gave decent burial to the dead. One poor fellow we found, head downwards, across the tree-stump where a Seneca's knife had cast him. 'Tausend duayvill!' cried Dirck Myndert, at my side, 'tis Sandy himself, and he's choking,' for the blood spurted from his mouth as we raised him. 'No,' gurgled poor Cairnewas, in ghastly mockery of Dirck's speech, 'tis not joking at all, but it's maybe dead earnest,' and then his poor mangled body lurched forward, and he was dead indeed."

It required some moments to soothe Evelyn's agitated horror after this tale, and then Alan asked abruptly: "But, dear one, tell me, am I free from the old pledge to work in the Mohawk Valley? Our people are here now, and my duty to my father is here."

Evelyn responded according to Alan's wish, but Mr. Underhill refused to accept the sacrifice.

"Nay, Alan," he said, "I am sufficient for the wants of my red children here, and as I go up and down among them, from the St. Lawrence to the Niagara, I am happy in my work. A wanderer such as I must dispense with the sweet offices of womanly love, and George, thank God! has grown to be my right hand, and will be both son and daughter to me. The persecuted and down-trodden Church in the valley hath greater need of thee."

Mr. Underhill indeed seemed quite content with his work, though he was perhaps inclined to dwell on the darkest side of the dark experience which had whitened his hair before his time. With the Johnsons he held no intercourse whatever, but until the day of his death his own loyalty never faltered, and he considered that the Church had suffered in her separation from the English State.

The wedding of Alan and Evelyn took place in June in the little Mohawk chapel, which was crowded with devout and curious onlookers, both white and red. Grief and gladness were mingled on that summer wedding day as were the lights and shadows which flecked the nodding fields. But as the sun rode still in his blue heaven above, so deep and abiding peace brooded even in the hearts whose saddest memories no lapse of years nor future joy could ever quite efface.

And then the hour of embarkation came, the hour which was to bear away the two made one, into that far shining stretch where sky and billows met.

The last good-byes were said bravely, the last words floated across a widening reach of water, while the hands stretched backward in farewell were lengthened by the falling shadows until they almost touched those others on the shore. Mr. Underhill and George were left standing on the beach, but Love and Youth in the boat passed out into a wider world.

[THE END.]

FROM SOUTH DAKOTA.—"We like THE LIVING CHURCH very much indeed, and do not know how we should get along without it. We have no church here, and the paper has to take the place of the church so far as is possible."

MAKES CLEANING EASY

"Many hands make light work," and so does Gold Dust Washing Powder. If you are not in a position to employ "many hands" in your house-work, you will be both pleased and astonished to see how much you can do with one pair of willing hands by using

GOLD DUST Washing Powder

With it you can do your cleaning easier, quicker, cheaper and better than with soap or any other cleanser. Try it and be convinced. For greatest economy buy our large package.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

CHICAGO

ST. LOUIS

NEW YORK

BOSTON

A Plucky Crew

THE story of the narrow escape of the bark Hesper, of this city, in a hurricane, and the pluck and skill of the captain and crew in sailing her to Kiao-Chau, China, is now told fully for the first time.

During the storm the Hesper became waterlogged. All the provisions were spoiled, and the deckload shifting, gave the vessel a list to port that took her main sail under water. The cabins were flooded, and Captain Sodergren and his wife had to live in a tent made out of a spare sail, and rigged up on the deckload of lumber. When the opportunity came, the Captain and his wife would not leave the ship, and the crew manfully stayed by them, so for a whole month they lived as best they could, and sailed the waterlogged hulk 1,450 miles in to safety.

Nineteen days after the disaster, when the transport "Pennsylvania" showed up, the sailors would have deserted the Hesper in a body had Mrs. Sodergren accepted a proffered passage to Nagasaki; but she positively refused to leave her husband and he would not leave his vessel, so all hands stayed by the bark. The officers of the "Pennsylvania" say it was one of the bravest and pluckiest acts they ever saw performed on the ocean. There was a vessel practically a wreck and unseaworthy—another storm would assuredly have sent her to the bottom—yet the captain would not give up the ship, the wife would not leave her husband, and the crew would not desert the woman.—San Francisco Call.

AT a military bazaar an officer thought he fancied a certain article exposed for sale at one of the stalls, and he was certain he fancied the lady who presided at the stall. He remarked, therefore, that he thought that particular article very pretty. The lady said:

"Yes, it is very pretty. My mother sent it."

"Ah, really," pursued the officer, determined to discover the name of the owner of the eyes that had bewitched him—"really, let me see—I think I have met your mother. Her name is—"

"The Queen of England," answered the lady.

The officer did not wait for the fancied article.—Spare Moments.

The Living Church

C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Proprietor.

Publication Office, 55 Dearborn Street, Chicago.
$2.00 a Year, if Paid in Advance;
After, 60 Days, $2.50.

(TO THE CLERGY, $1.50.)

Entered in the Chicago Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Single Copies, Five Cents, on sale at the New York Church Book Stores of James Pott & Co., E. & J. B. Young & Co., Thomas Whittaker, E. P. Dutton & Co., and Crothers & Korth. In Chicago, at A. C. McClurg's. In Philadelphia, at John J. McVey's, 39 N. 13th st., and Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., 103 S. 15th st. In Boston, at Damrell & Upham's, 233 Washington st. In Baltimore, at E. Allen Lyckett's, 9 E. Lexington st. In Brooklyn, at F. H. Johnson's, 15 Flatbush ave. In Washington, D. C., at W. H. Morrison's Son, 1326 F. st., N. W.

REMITTANCES.—Should be by check, postal or express order. Currency is sent at sender's risk.

ADVERTISING RATES.—Twenty-five cents a line, agate measure (14 lines to the inch), without specified position. Notices of Deaths free. Marriages, Notices, one dollar; Obituary Notices, Resolutions, Appeals, and similar matter, three cents a word, prepaid. Liberal discounts for continued insertions. No advertisement will be counted less than five lines.

THE CAMBRIDGE SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, Cambridge, Mass.

The school is now in its eleventh year. Mr. Arthur Gilman, the director, after eighteen years of service, resigned his position as regent of Radcliffe College to give his entire attention to the Cambridge School. The aim is to fit the studies to the peculiar wants of every individual girl, along the broadest lines. For this purpose, the teachers are numerous and the classes small. The Cambridge School Club recently gave two exhibitions, one by the art classes, the other by the physics and chemistry department. The work in the former was excellently done; the latter attracted much interest. On one table was arranged the work of the younger class, girls of eleven and twelve, who had been etching on glass, making starch from potatoes, dyeing various fabrics, and manufacturing their own salt. On the other tables was the work of the older girls in photography, the making of soap, baking powder, and essences, and in the testing of candy for impurities, the testing of soap for the proportion of fats, and the testing of dyes.

THE CHESHIRE ACADEMY (Episcopal Academy of Connecticut)

The Cheshire Academy is one of the oldest Church schools in the country, having been founded by Bishop Seabury in 1794. The location is elevated and healthful, water pure, surroundings attractive, plant large enough for the number of pupils taken—that number not too large to allow personal attention to the boys—teachers all men of experience, and each a specialist in his own line of work. The different courses of study prepare boys for college in either the academic or scientific departments, and its graduates are admitted to several of the best colleges, on the certificate of the principal, without examination. The school is largely patronized by the clergy of the diocese, and is warmly endorsed by the Bishop.

INDIGESTION.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Reaches forms of indigestion that no other medicine seems to touch. Genuine bears name Horsford's on wrapper.

Children's Hour

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's hour.

The Girls of St. Dorothy

BY ISOLA L. FORRESTER

(All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER XV.

A BRAKEMAN'S DAUGHTER

"IT'S the 5:10 for Allegan," Mollie said, when all was silent again, "just leaving the station in town."

"But what shall we do," Eleanor asked, trying to keep her voice steady, so as not to frighten the two little ones.

"Step over on the right track," Madge said quietly. "It will pass you all right then."

Something in her gentle, steadfast tone inspired confidence in the girls, and without a word they stepped from the foot path to the right hand track and waited. Not a word was spoken, save by Virginia who said, half laughing, half in earnest, with her keen glance fixed on the clouds of smoke rising between the station and the bridge.

"I wonder if the bridge will tremble more than we will."

They could see the shining disk of the headlight, far, far off, when suddenly its whistle was answered by another from the bay shore, and this time even Mollie's face whitened, as the danger of their position flashed upon her.

"Run back," cried Madge, "back to the shore. We can get there if we hurry," and catching Alice's hand, she set the example.

Nell followed with Laura, and Mollie was just behind Evelyn. There was no time for tears or screaming. All eyes were on the narrow perspective of the bridge showing dimly ahead, all ears strained to catch the rumble of the trains, and they started to run as they had never run before, when a low, sharp cry made Mollie who was last, stop and turn.

It was Virginia. In the excitement her lameness had been forgotten, and now, she stood a helpless, wavering figure on the foot path, her fur cloak fallen from her shoulders, and her hands pressed against her breast as she stared at the coming headlight just in sight.

"Madge! Madge!" shouted Mollie with all her might. She knew how readily that brave little heart would respond, and as she ran back to Virginia's side she felt the bridge tremble and shudder beneath her.

"Go back," Virginia cried imploringly, when she saw who it was, "never mind me, Mollie. Go back, quick."

"Not much," Mollie gasped as she reached her side, "we can carry you."

"No, we can't," Madge said hurriedly, as she came up with them, "there isn't time." She gave one glance at the bay shore where the second train was rounding the last curve, and then laid her hand on Virginia's arm. "Lie down," she said, "full length on the planking, and shut your eyes."

There was no time to question or argue, and Virginia was dizzy and faint already.

"Lie still now," continued Madge, tucking her skirts around her closely, so that they should not catch in the wheels. "You and I, Mollie, next."

Her voice was quiet and resolute as if all three were safe in the little green house, and when the two trains flashed on the bridge, none of the many passengers they bore knew of the frail human lives lying there on the planking just out of reach of the wheels. The bridge framework throbbed and shook beneath them. There was a deafening roar and rumble, so terrible as it passed them with the dazzling lights and the great black shapes speeding by like devouring monsters, that Mollie thought they were going to die anyway, and she closed her eyes with a queer thought of what Dave and Art. would say, and a feeling that death was not hard after all when it came so swiftly. And then before the thought had passed from her mind, the peril was over, the bridge had ceased to tremble, and when she raised her head Madge was sitting up, her head bent over Virginia.

"She has fainted," she said. "Lift her head on my lap, Mollie."

Mollie pulled off her mittens, and lifting the fair, pretty head tenderly, laid it in Madge's lap.

"Now call the others," Madge said. "I will stay here with her."

"Oh, Madge, I can't leave you," Mollie exclaimed, looking down at the prostrate, silent form, and then at the grave, white little face above it. "What if—"

"There aren't any more trains," Madge interrupted shortly. "We will be all right. Hurry!"

It must have been her fancy, Mollie thought as she turned away, but she imagined she saw a look of pain on Madge's face. The snow was falling faster every minute now, and her head was reeling with the sound of the whirling wheels, but she pressed on bravely.

When Mollie's cry for Madge rang out, Eleanor thought it was to see if she were safe. No thought of the truth crossed her mind at all. There was only the longing to save the two little ones who clung to her, and Evelyn, light and fleet of foot, was too far ahead to hear. It was only when the end of the bridge was reached, and the four girls leaned back against the earth embankment at the side of the track, panting for breath, but safe, that Nell missed the others.

"Evelyn," she cried, "where's Virgine?"

Evelyn gave a frightened glance back at the bridge. The Allegan train from Ottawa was already upon it, and the rumble of the south-bound express sounded on the ground.

"There!" she exclaimed, pointing to the bridge, her face pale and scared. "They are back there."

Eleanor dropped the children's hands and tried to reach the track, with a wild notion of signalling the express; but even as she started, it dashed around the curve, passed them, and was on the bridge.

"Mollie! Mollie!" screamed Laura frantically, but the rest sank on their knees and hid their faces. It seemed to Nell in that horrible moment as though she could hear the agonized shrieks of the girls above the roar of the trains, and almost catch the sound

The Baby?

Does he seem happy and contented and does he gain a little in weight each month? If not, write to us for a sample of Mellin's Food, mix it with some good fresh milk and see how much the baby will like it. Babies grow strong on

Mellin's Food

At the time my baby was 5 weeks old he was almost starved to death, and had actually fallen off and weighed less than when born and was crying almost all the time. His picture taken at 5 months shows the wonderful results of Mellin's Food, he then weighed 21 pounds and took the prize at the baby show. He has never been sick a day in his life, has cut all his front teeth and two jaw teeth and has never showed signs of pain or trouble with them. Frank F. Finks, Waco, Tex.

Send us a postal for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company
Boston, Mass.

Best Line
to Denver

Burlington
Route

Comfortable, wide-vestibuled trains leave daily from both Chicago and St. Louis. The European plan Dining Car Service is a special feature of excellence on this line.

"The Burlington's Number One" from Chicago is only one night on the road and carries a Pullman Buffet Smoking Car.

CHURCH ARCHITECT,
JOHN SUTCLIFFE,
218 La Salle Street, - Chicago.

CARMEL SOAP

An absolutely pure olive oil soap.
FOR NURSERY, TOILET AND BATH.

Always Specify

the gentle-acting and faultless Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient. There is no remedy so good, so reliable, so appetizing, or so effective for constipation, sick headache, or that "out of sorts" feeling arising from a disordered stomach.

"It invariably gives satisfaction."

TARRANT & CO., Chemists, New York.

At druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

as the wheels crushed out their lives, and then—it was over, and they were alone in the dusk and softly falling snow.

"Come, come quick," Eleanor said, rising unsteadily, "we must find them." Her voice sounded so hard and queer that it stilled the children's weeping, and with white, frightened faces they followed her. The snow was so thick now that it cast a blur over everything, but Eleanor started unhesitatingly along the bridge.

"Wasn't Madge Ferrall with them, too?" she asked suddenly, and Evelyn nodded, not trusting herself to speak.

"Mollie said she was brave," Nell began, and then the tears rushed to her eyes, and she stumbled blindly, a sob choking her voice at the name of Mollie—wilful, true-hearted, fiery Mollie.

"Oh, Evelyn, Evelyn, what shall we do?" she faltered. "Think of what we shall find there—what shall we—"

She paused abruptly, for Laura had bounded past her to meet a form emerging from the mingled haze of snow and smoke and twilight, a strange form that stumbled and hesitated, and then pressed on.

"Mollie, Mollie, darling Mollie," Laura cried, clasping her arms about the form, and at the glad, joyous welcome, Mollie's strength seemed to return.

"Yes, yes, we're all right," she said, in answer to the half-uttered words on Nell's lips. "Madge is yonder with Virgine. She fainted. Come and help us."

"All right!" Nell could hardly realize the blessed truth. No awful death, no ghastly discovery, all safe! She followed Mollie as if in a dream. It was all so unreal, their being out there in the loneliness and darkness. Even the terrible tragedy that had threatened three lives a minute before, now seemed part of the dream, in the peaceful silence that reigned. But the reality forced itself upon her when they reached the spot where Madge sat with Virginia's form beside her.

"She isn't hurt," Tony's sister said, reassuringly. "If Mollie and Nell can lift her, and carry her across the bridge, you can take her to our house."

"Oh, of course we can lift her," Mollie returned. "Just raise her head from your lap, Madge."

"I can't," Madge said in a low tone, "my arm is hurt."

Mollie gave a quick exclamation of surprise, and with tender hands raised Virginia's head from the little heroine's lap.

"Hurt?" she echoed, "hurt? And here you stayed all alone with Virgine, O Madge, Madge."

"We can take Virgine," Nell said; "you help Madge."

The sober-faced procession started on its way, Eleanor and Evelyn carrying Virginia, with what help Alice and Laura could give, while Mollie brought up the rear, supporting Madge, pale-faced, but without a tear in her big eyes, although one arm hung loosely and helplessly at her side.

"I think, Mollie," she said, as they neared the end of the bridge and the light from the window of the little green house came in view, "some one ought to go ahead to tell them, Tony and mamma. She might think it was me, you know, they were bringing home; she's been nervous since they brought papa home that way," and Mollie sent the word on to Laura who sped ahead to break the news and smooth the way.

(To be continued.)

A Gentle Horse Breaker

NEXT to Alexander the Great, who in his youth subdued Bucephalus, perhaps the most famous of all horse-breakers was John Rarey, the Ohioan, who died at the age of thirty-eight, after having amassed a fortune by his skill.

With the awakening of his mental energies, the boy realized that there was something wrong in the prevalent method of breaking horses. His childish soul recoiled at the cuffs and blows with which drivers were wont to subdue their animals. Throughout his school days the subject of his compositions was "Man's Best Friend—the Noble Horse."

The turning point in his boyhood came on his twelfth birthday. His father, now an extensive dealer in horses, presented to him an unbroken pony which the lad proceeded to train after his own ideas. Little attention was paid to his maneuvers with the pony until neighbors began to flock to the farm to see the animal's almost human antics. The boy had trained the pony until there seemed to be nothing beyond the quadruped's intelligence. But while family and neighbors applauded, the result was attributed to the pony's abnormal cleverness, rather than to the boy's skill in training.

His success with the pony encouraged him to undertake the education of his neighbors' untrained horses. Gradually he found himself master of a prosperous and attractive business. For miles around his boyhood home, pupils sought instruction in his method of training. All this came about while he was still in his teens. In stature he was a medium-sized youth with a well-proportioned figure, wiry and active rather than muscular. His complexion was almost effeminately fair. His hair was flaxen, his eyes large and gray. In manners and speech, as boy and man, he was always a gentleman. When not engaged in conquering a fractious horse, his fair face had the kindly repose of a poet's. Observation in the animal world early convinced him that the horse had intellectual endowment in harmony with man's. He soon learned that his greatest successes were the result of kind treatment, firmness, and perseverance. Colts, however wild, he observed, allowed cows, sheep, and other domestic animals to associate with them unmolested. Young Rarey cultivated a close friendship with the wildest colts, and his kindly advances were never repulsed. Not unfrequently, they gave demonstration of positive delight. —St. Nicholas.

COOK CAN'T SPOIL.

Grape-Nuts Need No Cooking, and the Flavor is Assured.

People want food that has a palatable, toothsome taste, and one that will recall a pleasant taste whenever the name is mentioned. That feature is a strong one in Grape-Nuts, the new breakfast food made by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

No cooking is required, hence the taste is not dependent upon the cook, but is just what the makers intended it to be.

It is often served cold and dry, with a bit of rich cream in part of the saucer.

If one wants a hot dish, a little hot milk can be poured over some Grape-Nuts, and there you are, a most fetching dish, furnishing the high nutritive value of grape-sugar.

Grape-Nuts sold by grocers.

Soap Safety

Wool Soap is safe because it is pure, clean, white, and made for skin-use.

Swift and Company, Makers, Chicago

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS EXPOSITION, 1889, AND THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION AWARD. THE MOST PERFECT OF PENS.

Up and down, far and wide, over this continent and in every quarter of this planet, our "BLYMYER" CHURCH BELL is lifting up its sweet voice and our reputation. The "Blymyer" courts the consideration of the seeker after volume supplementing surpassing sweetness.

The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Please mention this paper.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Established 1827.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY Established 1827. THE E. W. YANDUZEN CO., Cincinnati, O., U.S.A. Bells made of Pure Copper and Tin only. FOR CHURCHES, COURT HOUSES, SCHOOLS, etc. ALSO CHIMES AND PEALS. Makers of the Largest Bell in America.

FAVORABLY KNOWN SINCE 1826. BELLS HAVE FURNISHED 35,000 CHURCH, SCHOOL & OTHER. PUREST BEST. MENEELY & CO. GENUINE WEST-TROY, N.Y. BELL-METAL CHIMES, ETC. CATALOGUE & PRICES FREE.

MENEELY BELL CO.,

CLINTON H. MENEELY, General Manager.

Troy, N. Y., and New York City.

Manufacture a Superior Quality of Bells.

A "HOMELIKE" ATMOSPHERE

prevails at The Pennoyer Sanitarium, Kenosha, Wis. Send for booklet.

Pettijohn's BREAKFAST FOOD

Gail Borden BEST INFANT FOOD. Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

CARRIAGE BUYERS CAN SAVE MONEY. We are the largest Makers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling direct to consumer. ELLHART HARNESS & CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Elkhart, Ind.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL

Odorless. Tasteless. Pure.

Send for circular. Schieffelin & Co., New York

FOR CHOICEST NEW FLOWERS, Vegetables, and Fruits (Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and trees), apply (catalogue free) to JOHN LEWIS CHILDS Floral Park New York.

Finance and Commerce

BANK clearings show the exchanges of the country last week to have been nearly 61 per cent larger than last year, and 75 per cent greater than 1892. Outside of New York they were 87 per cent larger than 1898. Returns of railroad earnings for June show large gains on every hand. Failures are reported by R.G. Dunn & Co., "the smallest ever known."

Shipments of boots and shoes are also the largest on record for the season. Quite a speculation has appeared in wool, and sales for two weeks were 22 million pounds, or almost equal to 1897, when buyers were anticipating new import duties. Cotton is steady in price for raw material. The government gives the condition of the growing crop July 1st, 87 as against 91 last year, and we have had reports of floods in Texas since, but speculative buying is so far poor. Demand for manufactured cotton is good. Exports of cotton for June were slightly more than last year. Unprecedented activity in the iron trade continues, and stocks are reduced to barely current needs. Production is rapidly expanding, and a period of accumulating supplies is doubtless near at hand. Several threatened strikes have been amicably adjusted, the demand of the laborers for higher wages being granted. In the copper market exports are still restricted, and the tendency is toward lower prices.

Wheat is still dull and the price is dragging. Receipts at primary markets are very heavy, and the buying for export is poor, resulting in increased visible stocks at a period when they are ordinarily decreasing. The government report for July 1st indicates a crop of 522 million bushels, with reserves in farmers' hands of 65 millions. Corn has ruled rather firm. Receipts at primary markets have been large but are decreasing, but demand, both foreign and domestic, is good, and stocks are decreasing. The government indicates a crop of about two billion bushels. Interior stocks are small. Provisions have been active and strong, scoring a fairly sharp advance in price. Receipts of hogs are large, but the demand is unprecedented, and the market has had the support of strong speculative buying by packers and dealers who generally look for still higher prices.

For the month of June the figures for our national foreign trade show an excess of exports over imports of 35 million dollars, against 43 million last year, and for twelve months the excess of exports was 530 millions, against 615 in 1898.

In financial circles the tendency is toward higher interest rates. The legal reserves in the New York banks got down to five million dollars. Last week there was an increase, but it was at the cost of a considerable contraction in loans. The expanding business of the country requires money, and interest rates are sharply advanced abroad. The Bank of England rate has been advanced to $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and the rate of exchange is again dangerously near the export line. Stocks in Wall st. have been advanced sharply under good bull leadership, and a general country buying.

Chinese Currency

THE recent reports which indicate that the Chinese coins known as "cash" are disappearing because of their appreciating value, and that silver coins are to fill the vacancy thus created in the currency of China, lends special interest to a statement recently prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics regarding the currency of China. The money of China, it says, is uncertain as to quantity and quality. No accurate estimate has been made of the amount of money in circulation in the empire, while no accurate statement can be made to-day of what its value will be to-morrow. Based upon silver, its value fluctuates with the changes in the market price of silver. The copper "cash," valued at about one-tenth of a cent, is the actual circulating medium, while the tael is the nominal standard for larger sums, it being merely a given weight of silver, and not a coin. Actual silver circulates in two forms, the "dollar" and the "sycee." The dollar was originally the Mexican dollar, and became a popular and generally accepted form of currency wherever obtained. So convenient was it, that large quantities were imported for use as currency. More recently, however, mints for the coinage of dollars purporting to be of weight and fineness equal to Mexican dollars, have been established, not by the central government, but by the authorities of the various provinces, and the result is that the rivalry between these provincial mints has reduced the weight and fineness of the "dollars" which they issue, until the provincial silver "dollars" are looked upon with distrust. Additional mints, however, are being established, the machinery for them being from the United States. Some half dozen of the cities of China now have their mints for the coinage of "dollars," and work is in progress upon local mints in other cities, so that by the end of the present year, according to a recent issue of The North China Daily News, at least ten different kinds of silver coins purporting to be "dollars" will be upon the market. In addition to this uncertainty, may be pointed out the fact that the "tael" differs in various cities and provinces, the weight of silver recognized as a "tael" being greater at some points than at others. Even the "sycee," which is an actual quantity of silver cast in the form of a shoe, with the weight written upon it in Chinese characters, is somewhat uncertain as to its value, both by reason of the constant fluctuation in the price of the silver which it contains and the uncertainty as to the fineness of the silver utilized.

All efforts to learn the exact fineness of the standard silver used in the "sycee" have been unsuccessful, though the estimates put the rate at ninety-seven one-hundredths, which is considerably in excess of the American coin, which is ninety one-hundredths fine. The "sycee" is merely an indefinite quantity cast in the form of a woman's shoe, its actual weight being determined by agents or officers appointed by the merchants to weigh the "sycees," accuracy and integrity on their part being insured by actual physical decapitation of those who are found dishonest. Even the "cash," a copper and zinc coin about the size of our 25 cent piece, having a square hole in the centre for convenience in stringing quantities of them together, varies greatly, both in fineness and weight, in some cases 1,000 of them being equal to a "dollar," while in others nearly 2,000 are required to equal a "dollar." Gold coin is practically unknown in China, no coins of this metal being made at the mints; and gold coins of other countries have seldom, if ever, circulated, though the value of the metal is fully recognized, and gold, whether in coin or bulk, proves a medium of exchange upon determination of its weight and fineness when occasion requires.

Irritable Stomachs

make irritable people. A food that is nourishing and that does not cloy the appetite is

Somatose

Somatose is a Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative. It contains the nourishing elements of meat. Prepared for invalids and dyspeptics and those needing nourishment and a restored appetite. May be taken in water, milk, tea, coffee, etc.

At druggists' in 2-oz., $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{2}$ and 1 lb. tins.

Pamphlets mailed by Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., 40 Stone St., New York City, selling agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

"West Michigan Ry"

FAVORITE ROUTE TO

DELIGHTFUL MICHIGAN RESORTS

Bay View Petoskey Omena
Lake Harbor Neahawanta
Charlevoix-the-Beautiful
Ottawa Beach Harbor Springs

Cool Lake Michigan Breezes, freedom from dust and mosquitos—refreshing nights, etc., are some of the agreeable characteristics of these resorts. Send for illustrated folder issued by the General Passenger Department, C. & W.M. R'y, Grand Rapids, Mich.

THROUGH SLEEPING CARS FROM
CHICAGO and ST. LOUIS TO PETOSKEY—BAY VIEW

commencing June 19th and continuing until Sept. 25th (via Ill. Cent. R'y from St. Louis). Your home agent can sell you through tickets at reduced rates.

SPECIAL LOW RATES TO PITTSBURG AND BOSTON

Via Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y. One fare for the round trip from Chicago. Return limit Aug. 31st. Pittsburg tickets on sale Aug. 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th. Boston tickets, Aug. 11th and 12th. Further information may be had by addressing F. M. BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago; A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland, or by calling at City Ticket Office, 180 Clark st.

THROUGH SLEEPERS TO BOSTON.

On Wabash Continental Limited, leaving Chicago 12:02 noon, arriving Boston 5:50 P. M. next day. Also on Night Express leaving Chicago 11 P. M., arriving Boston 10:20 A. M. second day. Through sleeper to New York on both trains. Ticket Office, 97 Adams st. Telephone, Main 1619.

THE LAKE SHORE LIMITED TO BOSTON

All of the luxuries and conveniences of this famous train are at the disposal of Boston and New England passengers without extra charge. Write for Book of Trains and other printed matter of interest to representatives named below: F. M. BYRON, G. W. A., Chicago; A. J. SMITH, G. P. A., Cleveland, or call at City Ticket Office, 180 Clark st., Chicago.

The Pioneer Limited.
To St. Paul and Minneapolis

CHICAGO MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY

The Only Perfect Train

Ticket Office 95 Adams St.

Branch Investment and Banking Office,
115 Monroe-st., near Dearborn.

F. G. LOGAN

4 B'd Trade, Chicago.

MEMBER
New York and Chicago
Stock Exchanges and
Chicago Bd. of Trade.

Bonds, Stocks,
Provisions,
Grain.

PROGRESSIVE, PUSHING PEOPLE

demand up-to-date railroad train service. Two fast trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, via Wisconsin Central Lines, for Milwaukee, Chicago, and Eastern and Southern points, elegantly equipped with Sleeping, Dining, Cafe, and Parlor Cars. Ask your nearest ticket agent for further information. JAS. C. POND, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

As a child grows faster than a man, so the proportion of building materials in the child's food should be greater. Mellin's Food is rich in the elements requisite to form new tissues for growing bodies. The child fed on Mellin's Food does not outgrow his strength, and while he grows fast, his flesh grows firm and his strength is maintained.

KINGSFORD'S OSWEGO SILVER GLOSS STARCH For The Laundry

Your Summer Outing.

Unite health, rest, pleasure and comfort on the handsome, luxurious

Steel Steamship MANITOU

Exclusively
for Passenger
Service.

First-Class
Only.
Tri-Weekly
Sailings.

Between Chicago, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Bay View, Mackinac Island, etc. Steamers of our Lake Superior Division make weekly sailings between Chicago, Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette, Hancock, Duluth and intermediate points. Descriptive reading matter, giving particulars about the voyage, terms and reservations sent free. JOS. BEROLZHEIM, G. P. A., Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Trans. Co., Rush and N. Water St., CHICAGO.

QUICKEST TRAIN ACROSS THE CONTINENT

Cool, comfortable traveling, surrounded by every luxury.

The Overland Limited

via the Chicago, Union Pacific and North-western Line, leaves Chicago 6:30 P. M. every day in the year, and reaches California in 3 days.

The Pacific Express leaves Chicago every day at 10:30 P. M. Very low rates to California June 25th to July 8th. Stop-overs; choice of routes. For particulars, ask your nearest ticket agent, or address

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RY.

Principal Agencies:

NEW YORK BOSTON CHICAGO
461 Broadway 368 Washington St. 193 Clark St.

EXCURSION TO BOSTON VIA THE WABASH

$19 Round Trip from Chicago

The Wabash Road will sell excursion tickets Aug. 11 and 12, at one fare for the round trip from Chicago. Are you interested? Send a postal card to the undersigned, for maps, time tables, and full particulars. F. A. PALMER, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., Wabash Railroad, 97 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

FISH OF ALL KINDS, NO MATTER HOW PREPARED IS MADE PERFECTLY DELICIOUS BY THE USE OF

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

BEWARE OF MANUFACTURERS WHO ATTEMPT TO SELL A WORTHLESS IMITATION. SEE SIGNATURE.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AGTS., NEW YORK.

How to Pack Cut Flowers

IN the first place, cardboard boxes should not be used on any account. Wooden boxes are slightly heavier, but the extra postage is well laid out in the certainty that the parcel will not be crushed in transit, as so often happens to cardboard boxes. The boxes should not be more than five inches in depth, except in the case of those employed for large flowers, such as lilies, when they may be a trifle deeper. From two and one-half inches to four inches is the most useful depth. Shallow boxes suitable for this purpose can usually be obtained from any grocer for a trifling sum. The box, before the flowers are put in, should be lined with a sheet of cotton-wool, and a sheet of tissue-paper above, taking care that it fits nicely into the corners and round the sides. Then the box is ready for the flowers, which should be placed row after row until there is a layer of flowers, fitting one into the other, all over the bottom of the box. A great mistake is commonly made in putting more than one layer in a box, and in crowding the flowers one on the top of the other. This is quite fatal, and if packed in this manner, they can never travel well. The rows must be as close together as possible; the flower-heads of each row should lie on the stems of the row immediately preceding it, so that when the box is finished only flowers are to be seen, and none of the stems are visible. Tight packing is much to be recommended; the parcels are roughly handled, and unless they are closely packed, the flowers will shift to one end of the box.

The flowers having been carefully arranged, another sheet of tissue paper should be placed over them, and enough cotton-wool to fill up any space that may be left. One layer of wool is generally enough. If the box has a loose cover, a nail should be put on each end, to prevent the corner of the lid slipping in on the flowers and crushing them. There is one point to be particularly observed. No flowers ought to be packed immediately they are gathered, but they should be placed in water some hours beforehand. The reason of this is that the flowers may have time to suck up sufficient water to last during the journey, that they may not flag so quickly. For the same reason, in hot weather flowers last much better if gathered in the early morning, after the cool of the night dews. In the summer-time, if needed for sending away, they should be cut the night before, and placed in soup plates or jars in some cool, dark room or cellar.

It is not generally known that maidenhair and other delicate ferns can be made to last for some days by immersing the fronds completely in water for about twelve hours before using them. Again, poppies, which are generally short lived, may be relied on to last for a reasonable length of time if the stems are slit down one side with a pen-knife. This may be a useful hint for those who are fond of these charming and fashionable flowers.—K. M. D. in The Queen.

Church GLASS AND DECORATING CO

English Stained Glass Windows

Made by John Hardman & Co., London and Birmingham.

American Mosaic Glass Windows

CARYL COLEMAN President 3-5-7 W 29th Street
RUSSELL STURGIS FOOT Vice President NEW YORK

Trinity Church Embroidery School CHICAGO, ILL.

Cassocks, surplices, albs, chasubles, amices, copes, maniples, stoles, hoods. Altar hangings, Communion linen for church or parish use, dossals, antependia, banners, etc. Designing and stamping. Highest excellence. Estimates given. A certain percentage of all income devoted to missions.

MRS. KATE O. GRAVES, SUPERINTENDENT,
Trinity Parish House, 101 26th St.

ST. AGNES' GUILD,

Calvary church, Chicago, solicits orders for Eucharistic Vestments, Cassocks, Cottes, Girdles, Altar Hangings, and Linens, Choir Vestments, Fringe for Stoles, etc.
Address, Rev. Wm. B. HAMILTON, Rector,
933 Park Ave., Chicago.

EVERYTHING FOR THE CHURCH.
Memorials. Supplies.

The Cox Sons & Buckley Co.
Church Furnishers and Decorators.
70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Cox Sons & Vining.

70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS, Embroideries, and Fabrics.

Church WINDOWS, FURNITURE.

R. G. GEISSLER, Marble and Metal Work.
56 West 8th St. (near 6th ave.) New York.

LUMINOUS PRISM CO., Successors to
GEO. E. ANDROVETTE & CO.
STAINED GLASS
27-29 South Clinton Street, - - - Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH and CHANCEL FURNITURE
OF ALL KINDS
PHENIX FURNITURE CO., Eau Claire, Wis.

LARKIN SOAPS

OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN

THE LIVING CHURCH March 25th.

"IT IS IGNORANCE THAT WASTES EFFORT."

Trained servants use

SAPOLIO

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
Send for a beautiful booklet free. It tells how to obtain, free, the famous Larkin premiums worth $10.00 each.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.

The Living Church

Laudate Dominum!

BY MARGARET WINSLOW PEARSON

O, let the earth be joyful, and give praise unto the Lord!

Let all creation—Man and Nature—strike the self-same chord,

Till, like the sound of mighty waters, and the tempest's song of strength,

It shall ever grow in volume, and shall span the heaven's length,

To reach our Lord in glory, Who bends low in love to hear

The hopes and aspirations of the nations to Him dear.

O, praise Him for His goodness, for His love, and for His truth—

For crowned wisdom of old age, and strong warm blood of youth.

O, praise Him for the beauties and the glories everywhere—

For rushing rivers, solemn seas, and lands so wide and fair.

O, praise Him for the springtide with its promises of love,

And its wondrous resurrection—proof that we shall dwell above.

O, praise Him, tender blossoms, as you star the meadow broad,

Each tiny bud a tribute to the wisdom of its God.

O, praise Him, gentle breezes, making ripples of the grass;

The slender blades have felt your breath as silently you pass.

O praise Him, deep-toned thunder, as amid the clouds you crash!

O, praise Him, forked lightning as out from heaven you flash!

O, mighty, restless ocean, as you rush to meet the shore,

Sing to the music of your waves His praise forevermore.

O, sing to Him, cathedral—matchless beauty in repose!

Carv'd and sculptur'd, tier'd with arches, till thy slender spires arose

To grace the blue horizon, and to glorify the earth, That has ever seemed the nobler since the first day of thy birth.

O, sing not to the skies alone, but to the Christian race,

Who, looking on thy grandeur, shall despise desire base,

And long like thee to soar above where all is bright and pure,

Where things of beauty never die, but always shall endure.

O, reach forever upward; make me nobler, more divine!

This, this, thy message evermore: "O Lord, the praise be Thine!

Whenever in thy vast dim heart sweet music softly swells,

Until it fills each recess with a mellow sound that dwells

Upon each warrior's carved tomb, upon each column gray,

And lingers o'er the altar, till it faintly dies away;

When pealing forth upon the air with clear, triumphant sounds,

Till thou, O great cathedral, art too narrow for its bounds—

Then with the thrilling music comes the dream of other years,

A vision of the early Church, and all her hopes and fears,

A time when men unflinching faced death by fire and sword,

And meeting death, could still sing on their praises to the Lord.

Those days have passed, but still our Lord lists to the humblest prayer.

O, praise Him, little children, with your hearts so brave to dare!

O, praise Him, when you gaze at night with wonder-widened eyes

At twinkling stars—God's flowers of night that blossom in the skies;

O, praise Him, when your rosy mouths have kissed some treasure gay,

And baby hands have plucked in joy the first rare buds of May.

O, sing to Him, fair maidens, with your golden dreams so bright!

Each coming moment seems to bring some sweet and fresh delight.

Upon the fragrant summer air let clear young voices ring!

In joy and truest gladness chant praises to your King!

O praise Him, all who lose the way and struggle with the night,

Emerging from the darkness purer, greater, for the light.

'Tis His dear love that brings you back into the guarded fold;

At your return the angels sing their praises manifold.

O sorrow, hiding your bright face beneath a mask so grim

That not until the future shall we find the hope within—

Let all who know you praise Him, for you ever come in love,

A blessing in disguise sent down by Him who dwells above;

For ever to the saddest life there comes an angel bright,

To drive away the shadows dark with soft and radiant light.

Praise Him, O king and ruler, from your trembling heights of fame!

Prince and beggar, bow in worship at the mention of His name!

O praise Him, every pilgrim along life's checkered way!

O praise Him when the shadowy eve shall close life's little day!

O praise Him for the love He bears to this our fatherland,

And pray that He may keep us always in the hollow of His hand.

O glorify and praise Him until the last Grand Day,

When mortals' praise will mingle with the angels' mighty sway

Of heavenly voices—O melodious song sublime!

Our homage here is but the dawn before the sun's full time.

Educational

CONNECTICUT

The Episcopal Academy,
Cheshire, Conn.

The 106th year will begin Tuesday, Sept. 12th, 1899. A Preparatory School of the highest order for College or for business. ERI DAVIDSON WOODBURY, M.A. Principal.

Woodside Seminary for Girls

Reopens September 27. Terms, $700. Advanced course; also college preparation. Scholarships. MISS SARA J. SMITH, Principal, Hartford, CONNECTICUT.

COLORADO

Jarvis Hall Military Academy

Montclair, Suburb of Denver, Colorado.

Has no superior. Number of students last year double that of preceding year. $350 per annum. Catalogue. REV. H. KAY COLEMAN, A.M., Rector.

ILLINOIS

St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill.

Now in its Thirty-first Year.

Prominent families in many States, during a quarter of a century, have been patrons of this institution. Students are received at any time when there is a vacancy. Escort is furnished from Chicago without charge. Address. REV. C. W. LEFFINGWELL, Rector.

Waterman Hall, Sycamore, Ill.

THE CHICAGO DIOCESAN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Opened September 18th, 1889. Bishop McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., President of the Board of Trustees. Board and tuition, $300 per school year. Address the Rev. B. F. FLEETWOOD, S.T.D., Rector, Sycamore, Ill.

St. Alban's Academy,

Knoxville, Ill.

A Classical and Military Boarding School for Boys of all ages. Gymnastic training and athletic sports. A. H. NOYES, Headmaster.

St. Agatha's School, Springfield, Ill.

The Springfield Diocesan School for Girls. Opens its fall term Sept. 14th. Academic, Primary, and Kindergarten departments; Music, Art, Elocution, Physical Culture, carefully taught. Especial attention given to training girls for the home life. French spoken at table—taught by a Parisian. For catalogue, etc., apply to MRS. PHOEBE H. SEABROOK, Prin.

Bunker Hill Military Academy,

BUNKER HILL, ILL.

Prepares for Colleges, Scientific Schools, and business. Cultivates right methods of study, good habits, manliness. Personal care. No better Home or School at any price for any boy. Refers to Bishops Seymour and Tuttle. Opens September 11th. Write to Rev. S. L. Stiver, A.M., B.D.

THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Jacksonville, Ill.

Send for illustrated catalogue to Joseph R. Harker, Ph. D., Pres.

INDIANA

Thowe Military School, Lima, Indiana.

Prepares thoroughly for College, Scientific Schools, or Business. Best advantages at moderate expense. Manual Training (elective). A parent says: "Your careful personal training makes boys thoroughly reliable and industrious." Fine Athletic Field and beautiful lakes. Illustrations, catalogue, sent. REV. J. H. MCKENZIE, Rector.

IOWA

Saint Katharine's Hall

Davenport, Iowa.

A Diocesan Boarding and Day School for Girls. College preparation. Fall term opens Sept. 20th. MISS MARY FRANCES BUFFINGTON, Principal.

MARYLAND

Edgeworth Boarding and Day

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. Re-opens Sept. 25, 1899. 37th year. Mrs. H. P. LEFEBVRE, Principal. MISS E. D. HUNTLEY, Associate Principal. 122 and 124 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.

MISSOURI

Bishop Robertson Hall,

Episcopal. Estab. 1874. Boarding and Day School for Girls. Re-opens, D. V., Sept. 13th, 1899. Apply to SISTER SUPERIOR, 1607-17 South Compton Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Educational

MASSACHUSETTS

Though "New England" in name, it is national in reputation—yes, international, for it has been the

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

that has proved the fallacy of the necessity for foreign study to make a finished musician or elocutionist.

GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Musical Director.

All particulars and Catalogue will be sent by FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

The Cambridge School for Girls.

A select school with successful system of home boarding. Send for School Manual. Mr. ARTHUR GILMAN, Director, 36 Concord Avenue, Cambridge, Mass.

MAINE

Saint Catharine's Hall.

Augusta, Maine.

The Diocesan School for Girls.

The instruction is of the highest grade, yet yearly expenses are only $350. Thoroughly new and modern appointments. Pleasant climate. General, college preparatory and musical courses. Address The Rev. GEO. F. DEGEN.

MINNESOTA

St. Mary's Hall, Diocesan School for Girls.

In the healthful climate of Minnesota. BISHOP WHIPPLE, Rector. MISS CAROLINE WRIGHT BELLS, Principal. Special advantages in Music and Art. Fine Gymnasium. Certificate admits to Wellesley. Terms, $350 per year. For catalogue, address ST. MARY'S HALL, Faribault.

NEW YORK—STATE

Keble School for Girls, Syracuse, N. Y.

Under the supervision of Bishop Huntington. Twenty-ninth school year begins Thursday, September 14, 1899.

Apply to Miss MARY J. JACKSON.

Miss C. E. Mason's School for Girls

THE CASTLE, FARRINGTON-on-Hudson, N. Y. A beautiful school. Advantages of N. Y. city. All departments. Endorsed by the Rt. Rev. H. C. Potter, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. For this circular address I. Miss C. E. MASON, LL.M.

St. Mary's School,

Boarding and Day School for Girls.

Collegiate, Preparatory, and Primary Classes. College Preparation; Advantages of New York. Address SISTER SUPERIOR, 6 and 8 East 4th St., New York City.

Riverview Academy 64th year.

Overlooks the Hudson. Magnificent and healthful in location, with exceptionally efficient instructors. Military discipline. J. B. BISBEE, A.M., Principal. Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Educational

OHIO

Harcourt Place Seminary

A school of the highest class for girls. For catalogue and information, address

MRS. ADA I. AYER HILLS, Principal, Gambier, Ohio.

Kenyon Military Academy

A model school for boys, on a hill top 1,100 feet above sea level. For descriptive catalogue, address HILLS and WYANT, Regents, Gambier, Ohio.

Miss Phelps' Classical School for Girls.

151 E. Broad St., Columbus, Ohio.

Preparation for all colleges. Special studies and courses of college study. Special advantages in Music and Art. Gymnasium. Fall term begins September 28th.

PENNSYLVANIA

St. Luke's School Bustleton, Pa. (near Philadelphia)

No boy prepared by us for college examination has ever been rejected. A home school; number limited. Remarkably healthful situation. Campus of seven acres. Canoeing, swimming, skating, gymnasium. For illustrated catalogue address, CHARLES H. STROUT, Principal.

Trinity Hall, DIOCESE OF PITTSBURGH, WASHINGTON, PA.

BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, preparing them for college or business. Healthful, refined, and elevating surroundings. Personal attention given to each boy's mental, physical, and moral development. Daily choral Morning and Evening Prayer (shortened service) in the school chapel. Terms, $500. For catalogue, write to WM. W. SMITH, Esq., rector, Washington, Pa.

PENNSYLVANIA MILITARY COLLEGE

Chester, Pa.

38th Year begins Sept. 13

"A Military School of the highest order."—U. S. WAR DEPT. Civil Engineering, Chemistry, Arts. Thorough Preparatory Courses. Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry. Catalogues of Col. C. E. HYATT, President.

SOUTH DAKOTA

All Saints' School, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Five of the great railroad systems of the country run trains into Sioux Falls.

The high, dry air of South Dakota has proved very beneficial to many.

The school is first class in every respect.

Bishop Hare makes it his home.

Address ALL SAINTS' SCHOOL, Sioux Falls, S. D.

VIRGINIA

Fauquier Institute for Young Ladies.

Warrenton, Va.

The thirty-ninth session begins Sept. 21st, '99. Situated in Piedmont region of Va., on Southern R. R., 53 miles from Washington. Number limited. For catalogue address GEO. G. BUTLER, A.M., AND DAUGHTERS.

Episcopal High School of Virginia.

Near Alexandria.

For Boys. The 61st year opens Sept. 27th, 1899. Illustrated catalogue on application to L. M. BLACKFORD, M.A., Principal.

WISCONSIN

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.

A school for girls, under the care of the Sisters of St. Mary. The twenty-ninth year begins September 21, 1899. References: Rt. Rev. J. L. Nicholson, D.D., Milwaukee; Rt. Rev. W. E. McLaren, D.D., Chicago; Rt. Rev. Geo. F. Seymour, S.T.D., Springfield; David B. Lyman, Esq., Chicago; W. D. Kerfoot, Esq., Chicago. Address, THE SISTER SUPERIOR.

Grafton Hall,

The Ideal School for Young Ladies. Academic and collegiate courses. Music, Art, Elocution, and Needlework departments. German, French, Latin, and Greek, as well as the usual English branches. Location healthful and delightful. Students over twelve years of age received. Fall term begins Sept. 26th, 1899. For particulars, etc., address the Rev. B. TALBOT ROGERS, B.D., Warden, Fond du Lac, Wis.

Racine College Grammar School.

"The school that makes many boys." Graduates enter any university. Diplomas admits to Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin. Address REV. H. D. ROBINSON, Warden, Racine, Wis.

MISSOURI

SYNODICAL COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

For Young Ladies. Elegant Location. Faculty Specialists.

Special Courses leading to degrees in Literature, Music, Art, Elocution. Prepares for Bryn Mawr and Wellesley. Write for catalogue. T. P. WALTON, Pres't, Fulton, Mo.

The Living Church

Rev. Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Editor and Proprietor

Notes of the World's Progress

THE RESIGNATION OF SECRETARY Alger so long deferred, has greatly relieved the tension of the political and military situation. One can easily sympathize with his determination not to resign under fire, but it became day by day more evident that to yield to this determination meant simply to prolong indefinitely his tenure of office. For the fire would not cease, nor did it slacken. The country had become thoroughly convinced that a change of head, if not of heart, was necessary in the War Office, and the press, in its unremitting attacks, was but expressing the opinion of the people of, at least, the incompetency of the secretary. From the time of the "round robin" issued by the officers in the Santiago campaign, to the "round robin" of the Manila correspondents, the mutterings have been both loud and deep. It became at last no longer a question of politics, but an element of national preservation. Hardly ever has a man holding high office in this country met so universal condemnation as to both morals and methods. To such far-reaching criticism even the "man of iron" at last must yield.

— x —

SOME OF THE CAUSES OF THIS WIDESPREAD distrust are not obscure nor far to seek. Between the army in the field and the people left at home, the bond of relationship and sympathy furnishes a system of wireless telegraphy which is wondrously effective. What Tommy Atkins feels and thinks may be crudely and roughly expressed, but it goes very far towards forming, or at least moulding, public opinion. And when he tells what he thinks of malarial camps and putrid rations and shoddy clothing and pestilential transports, the people begin to ask where the responsibility for these conditions should be placed. In this case, wherever the line of investigation was taken up, it led ultimately to the War Office, not traceable always to the Secretary, but generally to some official in close and intimate relations with the Secretary. The investigation of the "embalmed beef" charge was the beginning of the end. Though this resulted in a technical victory for Secretary Alger, the victory was so costly as to be equivalent to defeat, and in fact brought on his overthrow. The sacrifice of Gen. Egan was generally understood to be the desperate endeavor to lighten a sinking ship, and since that event the public has waited with more or less of patience for the result now at last attained.

— x —

IT IS AN ENCOURAGING SYMPTOM in the financial world that the promoter of trusts has begun to find greater difficulty in pursuing his profession. Capital, especially that of the real investor, is becoming more cautious, and is questioning more earnestly whether or no the prevailing price of water be justifiable. And the speculator, who depends ultimately on the real investor for his own profits, seems to have taken the alarm. Consequently for these, new stock has become strangely heavy, and the promoter has begun to tread more cautiously. Recently, several of these trusts have been compelled, on finding that stocks issued on, say, a hundred million basis, were unsalable, to reduce the issue to seventy-five or even fifty million, and even then to fail in finding purchasers. It is barely possible that the trust madness may thus heal or regulate itself. Some years ago England was the favorite market for this class of stocks, but after being bitten several times, John Bull declined to have anything further to do with this kind of trap, and lately the market has been closed. It is to be hoped that our own people will learn as well their lesson. But "something for nothing" is still our national ignis fatuus.

— x —

AT THE TIME OF WRITING, THE street car strikes are still going on in Brooklyn and in Cleveland, and apparently are as far from settlement as ever. In fact, as is usually the case, the dispositions of the opposing parties in these contests are becoming so embittered as the war goes on, that the danger increases that the fight may degenerate through lawlessness into anarchy. There is danger also that these disturbances are but symptoms of a more general unrest. It is certain that there is among laborers an increasing discontent. It is felt, whether justly or unjustly we do not feel competent to decide, that capital has not been ready enough to share with labor in the unexampled prosperity of the past year, that it has waited, and is waiting, until it shall be compelled to restore the scale of wages which prevailed before the late depression; that in the meantime it is monopolizing all the profits. The relations between the employer and the employe, never cordial to the extent of unselfishness, are daily becoming more strained.

— x —

STILL ANOTHER FAILURE IN THE line of communistic endeavor may be recorded. The property of the Ruskin Colony, at Ruskin, Tenn., is advertised for sale, the colony abandoned, and its members scattered. This scheme was originated some years ago by an organization of the disciples of John Ruskin, not disciples in art so much as in socialistic theories and practice, and now it has gone the way of its predecessors. Communism with religious enthusiasm as a mainspring has some chance of success—until the spring weakens—but communism with only socialistic theory for its basis is foredoomed to rapid disaster. Man at his best is a selfish animal, and pre-millennial conditions militate strongly against his reform from this selfishness. To love our neighbor as ourself is indeed the ideal of the perfect life, but when you attempt to reduce that ideal to corporate practice, the lazy man, the loafer, and the fraud are apt to interfere with the financial standing of the corporation. It is best to confine to individual action, for the present at least, this standard of the higher life.

ALTHOUGH ENGLAND HAS SERVED formal notice upon France that the time has arrived for the final settlement of the long standing dispute concerning the rights of the Newfoundland fishermen, still no one need infer that the two nations are on the verge of war. Not even the gathering of a large naval force in the neighborhood would warrant this immediate conclusion. The agitation would seem rather to be a diplomatic move from which no speedy issue is expected. A closed question is a diplomat's abhorrence, inasmuch as it is no longer available in the discussion of offsets. So long as a grievance exists it may be very valuable to stave off any claim which the other nation may make, and thus may be made to stand for much more than its real value. The worth of the Newfoundland fisheries is about equal to the present value of the Alaskan seal industry, which last the United States nevertheless have found convenient to use in the game of diplomatic bluff.

— x —

REPORTS SCANTY AND OCCASIONAL as they have been from the beginning, would fail to justify the opinion that the Peace Conference at the Hague will achieve any desirable result, or perhaps any respectable failure. It was from the start, foredoomed. However desirable the end proposed might be, the source from which the proposal came was an insuperable obstacle to its attainment. There is something ludicrously incongruous in the idea of the Power which is the most completely armed of all, proposing to others less equipped the mutual disarmament of their forces. Thus all should be equal, and the lion and the lamb should lie down together. It reminds one rather of the ancient partnership between the lion and the wolf, or was it the fox? At any rate it now appears that no nation is willing to play fox or wolf to Russia's lion. To change again the zoological figure there is among English-speaking peoples, a distrust, dating perhaps back to the Crimea, of "the bear that walks like a man."

— x —

WHEN THE CONFERENCE MET IT very soon became evident that it was in no sense a love feast. Delegates from different nations were as wide apart in their thoughts and desires as they were in their languages. Each had his own scheme, and each apparently had a plentiful lack of interest in that of his neighbor. What the United States wanted, was England's abhorrence, and vice versa. What France desired, Germany loathed, and so on. There does not appear thus far any subject on which complete and cordial agreement has been reached, and the conference at present seems to be a complete fiasco. There is no immediate prospect that it will do much toward solving the appalling problem of the age. Expenditures for warlike purposes continued on the present sale, will bankrupt every European nation, but no one dares to retrench for fear of being swallowed by his neighbor. And there you have it, and it is going to stay with you.

The News of the Church

The Church Abroad

Brotherhood of St. Andrew

The annual conference of the Brotherhood in England was held at Birmingham, on Saturday, June 17th. Among those present were the Rt. Hon. Earl Nelson, vice-president; G. A. King, Hon. Treas.; Captain Malony, R.E., John Tenant, and Hubert Carleton, Gen. Secretary, besides some 60 or 70 delegates representing chapters from all parts of the country; other national Brotherhoods were also represented, the Archbishop of the West Indies and the Rev. C. H. Coles representing the West Indian Brotherhood, and the Rev. E. V. Stevenson, of Toronto, the Canadian Brotherhood. The day began with the celebration of the Holy Communion in St. Martin's, the parish church, at 8 A.M., the celebrant being the Rev. A. J. Robinson, the rector of Birmingham. At the breakfast which followed, the Archbishop of the West Indies addressed the delegates. The Rt. Hon. Earl Nelson, vice-president (a new president not having been elected since the death of Mr. G. A. Spottiswoode, the late president), delivered an address on some aspects of the work. In the afternoon the delegates listened to addresses pertaining to the practical working of the chapters in the parishes. Mr. S. F. Hughes, Exeter College, Oxford, spoke on the devotions of the chapter, its Bible class, and its corporate union; other speakers included E. J. H. Lanham, St. Mary's chapter, Southampton, and the Rev. E. V. Stevenson. Between the afternoon and evening conferences, a Quiet Hour was spent in St. Martin's church; Rev. M. B. Furze, Jr., dean, Trinity College, Oxford, gave two devotional addresses on personal service, with silent prayer between. At the evening conference, Mr. W. F. Robinson, New College, Oxford, read a paper by Mr. Harold Cutting, Hon. Secretary for the London diocese, dealing with the subject of organizing local unions of chapters—there are already four such unions in England. The Gen. Secretary then gave an address on "The training of the Brotherhood man." The conference although a quiet, almost informal meeting together, was a great success, and was indicative of the steady and sure progress which this movement is now making in the Church of England.

Missions in Prisons and Workhouses

The eight days' Missions which have been conducted by the special missionaries of the Church Army in the prisons of England and Wales during the last two years, have proved so successful that the council resolved last month to offer to the 500 Boards of Guardians throughout the country, the services of these missionaries for similar Missions in the workhouses, the entire cost, as in the case of the prisons, being borne by the Army. It has already been arranged to hold these services at more than 100 workhouses, and the council of the society are hoping for great things from this new branch of their work.

Gifts to St. Paul's Cathedral

Two massive candelabra will shortly be placed in position at the entrance to the nave of St. Paul's cathedral. One of the bronze pieces is the gift of Mr. Douglas Murray, in memory of his father, a prebendary of the cathedral, and the other has been presented by the members of the decoration committee. The subject matter has been taken from the first chapter of Genesis, the underlying motive being Benedicite, omnia opera. At the angles of the base, the white, yellow, and black races of mankind are represented by three figures. On the sides of the base, in low relief, are represented "Sin"—Eve eating the forbidden fruit; "The Punishment"—Adam's mortality implied by his labor; and "The Atonement"—Christ's Crucifixion. Beasts and birds occupy positions beneath the earth which is covered with flowers and girdled by the sea. The firmament is represented by a fiery column, around which angels are moving. Above are archangels who support the rose, from which springs the cross, surrounded by stems for the lamps. The candelabra are mounted on massive slabs of Irish fossil.

Church Work in the Philippines

THE Brotherhood of St. Andrew has just had its first mail advices from the party sent to Manila in April for work among the soldiers of the United States army in the Philippines. Mr. John Howe Peyton, the leader of the party, writes of a conference of clergy and representatives of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, held in Manila, May 31st. There were present the Rev. Chas. C. Pierce, D. D., chaplain in the regular army; the Rev. David L. Fleming, chaplain of the 1st Colorado Vols.; the Rev. J. L. Smiley, and the Rev. Hugh Nethercott; Messrs John Howe Peyton, W. H. J. Wilson, and George A. Kauffman. Chaplain Pierce was chosen chairman, and the Rev. Mr. Nethercott, secretary. After the Brotherhood party had presented its credentials from the ecclesiastical and civil authorities in the United States, Mr. Peyton explained that he and his party had been sent to the Philippines for the purpose of rendering spiritual assistance to such soldiers as were not under the care of chaplains, and at the same time to endeavor to carry the Church and her teachings to the people of the islands. Chaplain Pierce described the work that he had undertaken among the English-speaking and native residents of the city. A plan of campaign for the future was then outlined. In accordance with this, Mr. Pierce, Mr. Nethercott, and Mr. Wilson will remain in Manila, and continue to develop the work of our Church among the soldiers, English-speaking residents, and natives. The Rev. Mr. Smiley will go into the field with the soldiers, and have charge of the large service tent brought by the party from San Francisco. Chaplain Fleming who is about to return with his regiment to the United States, placed at Mr. Smiley's disposal a small service tent given him by the army committee of the Brotherhood in San Francisco. Mr. Peyton will spend his time between Manila and other points, endeavoring, in addition to work among the soldiers, to ascertain what opportunities may exist for regular mission work under the direction of the Church authorities in the United States.

A large house has been rented in Manila just across the street from the principal barracks. The upstairs rooms will be used as Church headquarters, while the lower floor will be used for a chapel. On account of the high prices of all supplies, it has been impossible to equip the chapel in as Churchly a fashion as might be desired. It has been necessary, for instance, to construct an altar by breaking up old packing boxes and using the planks. There will be daily Morning Prayer in the chapel, with celebrations of the Holy Communion on Sundays in both Spanish and English; Morning Prayer in English, particularly for the English and American residents, and an evening service especially for the soldiers. Thus the "Anglo-American Mission of the Holy Trinity" begins its work in Manila.

The dispensary which Chaplain Pierce opened some months ago has been moved to the mission house, in order that all Church work may be concentrated as closely as possible.

A Church building fund has been established, and aid is urgently asked from Church people in the United States. The American clerical and lay workers will have the co operation of a number of the leading gentlemen of the congregation, as a provisional missionary committee, in carrying on the mission work.

Mr. Peyton writes that he has found between 1,800 and 2,000 sick soldiers in the city. Much work will accordingly be done in the soldiers' hospitals. "We all feel buoyant with hope," says Mr. Peyton in conclusion, "and certain that our coming here was by Divine appointment. I wish that we could have a force of workers somewhat commensurate with the demands of the situation. There is an enormous field, giving every promise of a rich harvest for the Church."

Information concerning this work may be obtained from, and contributions towards its maintenance may be made to, John P. Faure, Treasurer, Brotherhood of St. Andrew, 281 Fourth ave., New York.

Trinity College Commencement

THE Commencement exercises of Trinity College opened with prayers, in Christ church, Hartford, on Wednesday, June 28th, after which the procession, consisting of the faculty, students, alumni, and invited guests, proceeded in the rain to Parson's Theatre. Beside the President on the stage, was Bishop Brewster. After the orations were delivered, and before conferring the degrees, President Smith announced the award of the Holland prizes scholarships, which have an income of about $600 each, to the students attaining during the past year, the highest standing in their respective classes: In the class of 1900, to Simon Lewis Tomlinson, of Hartford; in the class of 1901, to Francis Raymond Sturtevant, of Hartford; and in the class of 1902, to Anson Theodore McCook, of Hartford.

The honorary degrees conferred were as follows: Master of Arts, Jeremiah Mervin Allen, Hartford; Doctor of Laws, B. Lawton Wiggins, M. A., vice-chancellor of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Doctor of Canon Law, the Rev. Samuel Hart, of the class of 1886, late professor of the Latin language and literature; Doctor of Divinity, Rev. Henry Harrison Oberly of the class of 1885, rector of Christ church, Elizabeth, N. J.; Rev. John Humphrey Barbour, of the class of 1873, professor of the literature and interpretation of the New Testament in the Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn.

The large dining room of the United States Hotel was filled at the annual dinner of the Alumni Association. An orchestra furnished music. President Smith, who has completed 16 years of service as president of the college, was called to respond to the toast, "Trinity College," and the loving cup was passed around. After saying that the college had completed 75 years of work, he gave the history of the loving cup, the gift of a member of the class of '31. He said the college has lost Professor Hart and has gained Professor Babbitt. It has also gained $30,000 from the will of its friends, a new department of electricity, and a new building.

The Rev. Dr. Webb spoke for "The Church," and said that Trinity was the best Church college. W. H. Gage, of '96, responded for "Our country," having served in the war with Spain in the Michigan Naval Reserves. He described the conveying of six hundred marines under the command of Col. Huntington, Trinity, '64, the force which made such a record in the first of the work. Reference was made to the record of Lieut. Clarke Churchman. Dr. T. Gardner Littell, of Delaware, the third of whose sons was graduated this year, responded to the toast, "Our sister colleges." He said that he knew of but one college, and that was Trinity. It was the place where an all-round education was taught. The Rev. Dr. Buckley, of Waterbury, spoke to the toast of "Dr. Samuel Hart." He spoke of his earnest work for the college and its students. The loss of Dr. Hart was one of the greatest losses the college has sustained since he first knew it. Other toasts followed.

At 12:30 P.M. the previous day, came the ceremony of breaking ground for the new natural history building, to be built in line with Jarvis Laboratory and the south end of the college building. The president offered prayer, then took a spade, and after a few words of explanation nation in regard to the building, said: "In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, the Holy and Undivided Trinity, I begin this work". After a short responsive service, the doxology was sung, and the president pronounced the benediction. The building as to ground dimensions, is to be about 100 feet square.

The service of the unveiling of a tablet, erected by his classmates, in memory of Clark Churchman, '93, second lieutenant 12th infantry, U.S.A., who died for his country at El Caney, Cuba, July 2, 1898, took place at 4 P. M. Dr. Hart conducted the entire service, with the exception of the reading of the lesson and the delivery of the address, which were done by Professor. F. S. Luther. The ceremony of unveiling the tablet was performed by the Rev. George H. Wilson, '93, of Southington, representing Lieut. Churchman's mother who was present at the exercises. The service was very beautiful. The tablet was placed on the wall fronting the entrance to the chapel.

Chicago

Wm. Edward McLaren, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop

The cathedral choir is taking its annual outing at Bang's Lake.

The Rev. A. T. Perkins who intended returning to his work at St. Luke's Hospital last week, has been detained in the East by indisposition.

The Rev. Percival McIntire, rector of the church of the Redeemer, Hyde Park, has gone to Arverne-by-the-Sea, Long Island, for his summer vacation. Mr. Henry T. Chace, lay-reader of this parish, will say the services in the absence of the rector.

Services in the church of the Holy Communion, Maywood, during the absence of the Rev. J. A. Carr, mentioned in our last issue, are being taken by Mr. Albertson, who has been officiating as a lay-reader for 20 years; a priest will administer the Eucharist at least once a month.

A very handsome tablet is being placed in the church of the Redeemer, South Park, to the memory of the late Rev. F. B. Dunham, under whom the mission was founded 10 years ago, who built the spacious parish house, and died four years ago, the first rector of the parish.

Relief of Aged and Infirm Clergy

